Thus I took it upon my own shoulders and on my responsibility that from the time after 1942 and 1943 the German religious communities abroad got their contributions from me; that German priests, Protestant and Catholic, still were able to travel to their congresses and organizations abroad; that the parochial schools and religious hospitals should not be dissolved, but that under the great difficulties of securing foreign exchange continued to exist under my direction. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Are we to understand from what you are now telling us that the utmost religious freedom existed during the war?

A. I was just about to describe, your Honor, that in the field of cultural ties with foreign countries I secured these connections for those religious institutions.

Q. Well, I asked you a question... you didn't answer it. Do I understand from what you have been telling us that because of your efforts there existed in Germany during the war, religious freedom?

A. No, I did not say that. I said I tried to maintain this principle, at least abroad.

Q. You tried to maintain it abroad? What did you have to do with that abroad. We took care of that abroad.

A. For example, according to the demand of Bormann I should have refused my contribution to the German communities abroad.

Q. It would have been very interesting if you had done something of worrying about this freedom abroad; in fact, that seems to have been the difficulty --- Germany was too much interested in what was taking place in other countries.

A.- I thought that if I maintained the ties between the German church and the foreign church, that then I have made a contribution to the existence of the German church, too.

Q.- Why didn't you make a contribution to the German church in Germany.

A.- I was not competent for dealing with the parochial questions in Germany. But the relations between the German and the foreign church that was my job.

Q.- Did you do anything in Germany to ease the burden of the clergy that was not permitted the utmost expression of religion?

A.- If the German, or Catholic, church had the desire to attend foreign congresses in order to keep up the contact with the church; of if missionary work was to be done in China, or Africa, then I did so. That was the job which was entrusted to me.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken)

DR. HOFFMANN: Dr. Hoffman for Nosske. from Monday's session in order to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Nosske will be excused from attendance on Monday in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. FIGHT: Dr. Fight for Beberstein. excused from Monday's afternoon session.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Biberstein will be excused from Monday's afternoon session.

Mr. Ferencz, I think the interpreter is ready to give a clarification on the translation on which you made an observation before we recessed.

INTERPRETER LEA: I have informed myself that the word "Entlass" can mean discharged, dismissed or released.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, The record will show that for the clarification of the word in question.

Dr. Ulmer, just before we recessed the witness was taking us on quite a tour around the world and we last saw him in China and Africa. Now, let us try to bring him back to the scene of activity which is the locale in the indictment.

DR. ULMER: Yes, your Honor. The activity of the defendant, of course, is concerned with the activity of the defendan in the Foreign Office, therefore it is necessary that he went out to larger regions are concerned, and therefore he could take no influence on church matters within Germany. My last question, your Honor, to the defendant, was what the last, the ultimate aim of your cultural activities.

THE WITNESS: As a scientist and research worker, I want to find and answer for young people to the questtion of the relationship between the various nations, the attitude of the various people and their cultural communities.

As a cultural politician I wanted to take care that this culture was being kept up and maintained, and to create a community conscience between the various peoples. This was even more valid for war than it was for peace.

MR. ULMER: Your Honor, I have now finished my set of questions as far as my direction examination is concerned. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q: Were you concerned, Witness, about the dissemination of these cultural ideas in the kommando groups?

A: When I took over the leadership of the kommando Moscow I proved my attitude by, for instance, making free two churches and giving them back to the population so that the purpose for which they were actually built could be fulfilled again. I think this is a proof of my attitude to these questions, even during the time of my commando.

Q: Do I understand that during the time that you were with Einsatzgruppe B that you exerted your influence to have the churches reopened so that the civilian population could worship in the churches, is that what I gather from your observation?

A: That is right, your Honor.

Q: Yes, so that your part in Einsatzgruppe B was not to herd the people together and take them out into the woods for the purpose of execution, but to rally them together and March them to church?

A: One has nothing to do with the other, your Honor.

Q: Well, you know the purpose of Einsatzgruppe B. You know what the main purpose of all these Einsatzgruppen was.

A: Your Honor, I was not a member and not a part of the Einsatzgruppe B.

Q: Well, you were attached to Einsatzgruppe B, were you not?

A: This is a question of proper definition, your Honor. The fact that I was given a few leaders and a few interpreters by Gruppe B, that does not mean that I was actually attached to it but I regarded myself in my function and my activities in the East as an independent individual commando in the East.

Q: Your kommando at one time or another actually did participate in executions whether you were there or not.

A: At times when I was the chief of this kommando no. That is until the 20th of August. I attempted to make that quite clear in my direct examination.

Q: Yes, but prior to your arrival this Einsatzgruppe B was engaged in the execution of the well-known fuehrer order was it not?

A: That at the date when I arrived it was already active?

Q: Yes.

A: And indulging in these activities? I did not see this activity, your Honor.

Q: No, but they had taken place, and you know that they had taken place.

A: At the date when I arrived, I did not know that these activities had taken place. That was at the time when Einsatzgruppe, B, that was on the 6th of July, did not have the possibility of ever having been active.

Q: You knew the purpose of the Einsatzgruppen in that area; you knew the Fuehrer order, did you not?

A: I heard of this Fuehrer order, as I have already said, in my direct examination, I found out about the Fuehrer order, as I have already said, through other commando leaders.

Q: Yes, and we are to understand that once you got into the field, you immediately changed the complexion of things and that instead of having the Jews taken out into the fields to be executed, instead of the civilian population being expressed, you exerted your efforts to have the churches reopened and the civilians given the utmost religious freedom and cultural expression?

A: No, your Honor, I see no casual connection in this statement. There is no casual connection, your Honor, on the one side carrying out executions, or allegedly, and on the other hand, making churches available for the population.

Q: You volunteered this yourself. You gave us quite a very interesting narrative on your activity, and you told us how you held aloft the torch of religious freedom and how you kept alive the flame of cultural expression.

A: Yes.

Q: You told us that in quite a speech.

A: Yes, yes.

Q: Now I am asking whether you exerted your efforts in behalf of religious freedom, in behalf of cultural expression, in behalf of a political liberty when you were in the field?

A: Your Honor, I must then deal with the basic question of my attitude to the war in Russian and the question of the treatment of theRussian people by the German troops. Here also I have my own and a very independent opinion which I acquired during many years, and it is part of my attitude that was not part of my knowledge and my conviction that the German Army terrorized the U.S.S.R. when they marched in, but in my political conception it is certain that as Germans it would have been our task in the political administration and government of these countries and to ask for principles of political freedom and agricultural freedom, and even religious and cultural freedom.

conviction that that was the political program of the German Reich and that was to be carried out in the occupied Eastern Territories, and it is one of the overwhelming shocks of my life that I had to establish as I have now during the last weeks found out from documents which I had not seen before I came here, as, for instance, discussions between Adolf Hitler, Goering andRosenberg, and as I say, to recognize in such documents that from the very first day of our march into Russia, instead of political administration in the most genuine sense of the word only terror was meant.

Q: So you only learned about the terrorism when you got to Nurnberg as a prisoner recently?

A: I have had many experiences, your Honor, with terror.

Q: Did you know of terrorism in overrun Russia while you were there in charge of this commando group?

A: In Russia I found out that the political intention and the political system was a terroristic one.

Q: You did find that out?

A: What I found was against my personal convictions.

Q: Well, was it your personal observation?

A: Yes, it was my personal observation, and also what seemed to me just as necessary and as important, it was the realization that this policy did not agree with my personal idea of necessity of German policy in the East.

Q: And what did you do between June 22nd and August 20, 1941, while you were in that occupied territory, to restore political liberty and freedom to the civilian population?

A: My function in the East during the march was not of such a nature that I would have had the possibility to carry out such principles.

I could not do anything at all.

couldn't do anything else?

Q Of course not. And if your kommando had to be used for purposes of execution could you have done anything to prevent it? under my own personal leadership and under my personal supervision and under my personal order, if, as I say, my commando would have had to carry out such actions, I could have prevented them. tory, we understand that your kommando did not participate in any execution and that you exerted all your efforts during this period to cultural pursuits? not my order to spread culture.

Q What did your commando do during this period? existent archives in Moscow, to make use of them and make such arrangements as necessary.

Q What did you personally do; how did you yourself put in your time while you were there? On the 14th, I left Minsk after I had accomplished my task within the kommando.

Q And what was that task? with the first front troops and to take care that the archives were secured, and here I have to say that the original order I got, the original explanation I got was that within six to seven weeks the German Army would arrive in Moscow. Under those conditions this commando was established.

istic activities? yourself? the proclamation of a self-government on the part of the Russians, the fact that in this, self-government was not given over to the inhabitants of White Ruthenia or to the Ukrainians. indulged in terrorist practices. Now, just what happened that causes you to make this statement? What did you see; what terroristic practices did the German forces exercise? establish self-government, that in itself is proof that other measures of a very strong military force were exercised.

Q And you didn't know of the execution of the Jews while you were there?

THE PRESIDENT: Defense counsel may cross-examine the witness.

DR. LAMBERT: Lummert for the Defendant Blume. Your Honor, I have only one very short question to the Witness. BY DR. LAMBERT: Berlin, and soon after, you had a negotiation with Streckenbach who was the office chief of Office I of the Reich Security Main Office. May I ask you what day this discussion took place?

A It was on a Saturday. As far as I remember it was the 23rd of August. this discussion with Streckenbach? existed between Blume and Nebe. When I asked why, he told me that he had received a report from Nebe to the effect that Blume was not carrying out strong enough measures on the question of executions.

Q Did Streckenbach tell you any more? he had circumvented this execution order?

A No, he did not do that. He did not say anything about it. He only said that the report from Nebe had arrived. He did not ask me about their relationship but it is not impossible that Streckenbach might have done so already.

DR. LUMMERT: I have no further questions, your Honor.

DR. RIEDIGER: Riediger for the Defendant Haensch. Your Honor, I wish to put two short questions to the witness. BY DR. RIEDIGER:

Q Witness, do you know the Defendant Haensch?

Q Where did you meet him, and since when do you know him?

AApproximately since 1937 or '38.

Q And he was then in the SD Main Office?

Q What was he active as, what was his work? to be released from the Reich Security Main Office? in my faculty for foreign political science and asked me on that occasion whether I saw a possibility of a change, that he could change his activities so that he could leave the Reich Security Main Office and could enter the Ministry for foreign affairs or another agency of that kind.

Q Did he mention a reason why he wanted to be released? feel very well.

discussed this with you, and that on that occasion he asked you whether he could join the civil administration in Denmark? believe at that time he came to see me again and asked me whether on behalf of our relations with the Reich Plenipotentiary in Denmark I could use this connection in order to influence him. May 1942. How many participants were there?

Q Do you remember whether Haensch was present?

DR. RIEDIGER: Your Honor, I have no further questions, but may I now ask in this connection to excuse the Defendant Haensch from attendance in Court on Monday, for further preparation of his Defense?

THE PRESIDENT: You would like to have him excused from attendance on Monday?

DR. RIEDIGER: Monday.

THE PRESIDENT: Monday?

DR. RIEDIGER: Yes.

THE COURT: Yes, the Defendant Haensch will be excused from attendance in court on Monday in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. HEIM: Dr. Heim for the Defendant Blobel. BY DR. HEIM:

Q Dr. Six, several minutes ago, when you were asked by the President, you said you would have had the possibility to prevent executions if you for your kommando had received an order to carry out executions. Do you mean to say by that, Dr. Six, that this was equally valid for leaders of other kommandos, for instance, the leader of the kommando SK-4-A? Do you mean to say by that that the commander of the SK-4-A would have had the possibility to prevent executions which he had been ordered to carry out?

A No, I did not want to say that. I merely wanted to state that I as the commander of the Advance kommando Moscow was in a special position not to comply with execution orders. Therefore,as I received no such order at all I did not have to carry out such orders. It is, of course, evident, that whoever received such an order had to carry out this order, but I did not want to touch this question.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, your Honor, I have no further questions. BY THE PRESIDENT: would then have executed it?

Q Theoretical? Well, that is your field. You are a professor. Theory is your field, is it not? military organization is concerned and that the individual, if he has been put in such a situation, hardly or not has the possibility to evade such order if he receives such an order.

Q Then your answer is yes?

A Yes. What exactly was the question? in the field had received the Fuehrer order to liquidate civilians that you would have executed the order? now stated, you would have executed the order? situation from the position I am in today, and I did not receive such an order. militarily you were called upon to execute an order, that you would have no other recourse but to execute it.

You then stated a generic proposition. Now, we apply to you directly and we ask that if you were in the field and you held a position of command and you received this order, would you have executed it? if I regard myself merely as an officer, then this officer would have had to carry out such an order, but I cannot say that about myself, because I did not receive it. I can only see it is an abstract way, that in fact a leader, who receives such an order has to carry it out.

Q I don't know of anyone who could speak better about yourself than yourself. No one would know your experience; because of your training and education and culture no one would know you better than yourself and if you received such an order, you would go into a conference with yourself and then you would reach a decision. Now that decision would be either to execute the order or not execute the order. Your Honor. I would have to take the actual act of this order and I would have to discuss this act with myself and either would have to agree with this act personally or I would have to refuse it. I would have to make an inner decision.

A To think myself back into such a position I cannot do. I can only take an abstract case and I say this officer has to carry out this order and, if the officer, which in this case is Six, is in this dilemma, he had to carry out this order, but between the receiving and the carrying out of an order, there is a personal decision. At any rate I did not experience such a decision and therefore I can only look at it in an abstract way. involved in this theoretical question. Usually when one is confronted with a theoretical question, he desires to know all the factors. You, with your training and education and having bean a professor and a teacher and having lived many years and now having been in a courtroom since the beginning of this trial, and knowing all the factors, there is no reason why you should sidestep a direct question. Now you have gone so far as to say that if Officer Six were ordered to execute the order, he would execute the order. Now, are you -- is your name, "Six"?

Q Were you Officer Six?

is, "Yes," is it not? slip of the tongue -- between the receipt of an order and the carrying out of an order, there is, as we can recognize now in many cases, of my comrades, a very difficult human decision. This difficult human decision is not merely theoretical and cannot be expressed in the abstract and can only be experienced and it can only be answered as a human problem.

Q Dr. Heim asked you a very direct question. He asked you if his client were present with an order could he do anything other but obey it and you said, "Yes." Now I am asking you, if you, Six, were confronted with that order, to execute, would you have obeyed and followed out the order? In the position of an officer I have to carry out an order. But carrying out of such an order, as has been mentioned and asked about by the Prosecution again and again and the mental struggle with the moral problems, these moral values are of such consequence and severity that they cannot be theoretically discussed. They can only be experienced. like that unless you reflected on it and unless you discussed it. Now you have discussed it. We have discussed it for many minutes. Now I come back to the original question: If you received this order, would you execute it?

Q What your can you answer it in? How long do you want to reflect on this? We still have two more months left of 1947. What year could you answer such a question in? Your Honor.

Q Well, then, we come to this conclusion: that although you were an officer in the German Army for many years and although you have had the benefit of a very thorough education, and although you were a professor in a university, and although you were also a Dean, and although you also knew about religious values, and although you had spent many years of your life in the consideration of psychological and philosophical questions, now in this courtroom, when listening to this very simple question and especially in view of the fact when you realize that every other defendant is confronted with the same question, you refuse to answer it?

Heydrich to move and in full knowledge of the Fuehrer Order to carry out certain measures, I could answer this question exactly to day, but, as I have not received such an order then and neither was put in front of the alternative to carry out shootings, it is not possible for me.... decided the question on July 22, 1941? order first..... have come to a decision on July 22, 1941.

Q You could have come to a decision on that day?

Q And now with the benefit of six years' reflection upon such an order, you feel incapable of answering this question? receive this order as an order directed to myself personally and as a consequence I was not put into the personal position to struggle with myself and to have to come to a decision to carry it out. if Officer Six had received that order, Officer Six would have executed it. You made that statement. Do you confirm it now?

A I add, not this order, but "an" order, "an" order I said Your Honor.

Q Well, "an" order, "an" order might be merely to take a drink of water. We are speaking about "the" order. We are not speaking of play things here. If Officer Six had received the order which we are discussing here would Officer Six have executed that order? You answered that in the affirmative. Now, do you want to change your answer? Do you want to say that you do not agree with yourself of 15 minutes ago.

Q Well, then, do you confirm that answer?

A Yes, I said so, but I meant "an" order, generally, any order whatsoever.

Q Any order whatsoever, which could also include the Fuehrer Order?

Q Would it also include the Fuehrer order? I am considering all the phases between the receipt and the carrying out of an order, that is, the personal, the moral, the inner decision, which was not put to me, and, therefore, I must repeat that I can only say in the abstract that a leader or an officer has to carry out orders, but between the receipt of an order and the carrying out of an order, is the most important decision in human life; that is the mental dispute I think, and the fight about such a deliberation about such an order, that is the conflict, the most human inner quality, even if an officer; otherwise a question for morale and ethics would not exist at all.

Q Well, this is just merely an outpouring of words. I asked you whether you confirmed what you said 15 minutes ago and you said you did. Now I don't know whether this expenditure of rhetoric has in any way changed that original statement. We will take from what you have said that if Officer Six had received this order, he would have executed this order. You would have said that if Officer Six received any order, he would have executed that order and within that generic and comprehen sive expression, "any order", we will assume that you can include also such an order as the one which we have just discussed, namely, the Fuehrer Order.

attitude in this case without any moral and ethical participation, between receipt and carrying out of an order.

THE PRESIDENT: Any other defense counsel ready to cross-examine?

DR. MAYE : Dr. Mayer, for the Defendant Steimle.

I must correct myself, Your Honor. I am sorry. It is for the Defendant Klingelhoefer that I plead now. BY DR. MAYER (Attorney for the Defendant Klingelhoefer):

DR. MAYER: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Any other defense counsel wish to cross-examine?

Mr. Ferencz, are you going to conduct the cross-examination of the witness?

MR. FERENXZ: Yes, Your Honor, I am, but in view of the late hour, I think it is better to recess at this time than to be interrupted after ten minutes by a weekend recess.

THE PRESIDENT: For that reason, in view of the fact that after two days perhaps we would not be so fresh on what you have said, now in view of that fact, the Tribunal will recess for the day and for the weekend and will reconvene Monday morning at nine-thirty o'clock.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 27 October 1947, at 0930 hours).

of America, against Otto Ohlendorf, et all., 27 October 1947, 0930-1630.

Justice Mussanno,

THE MARSHALL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal 11_A.

Military Tribunal 11_A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q. Six, at the outset I would like to clarify a matter which was being discussed just before the recess. As concerns the defendant Blobel, you stated that if he received an order he would have to carry it out and there would be no possibility for him to prevent executions. You refused to judge whether you would have carried out such executions How can you make that judgment for Blobel? Blobel whether I was of the opinion that an officer could refuse to obey an order. I assume, of course, that if he puts such a question to me he does not refer to it as being especially pertaining to his client, but which referred to commanders as such; therefore, I stated that the order must be carried out, objectively speaking. From the very beginning, though, I made the reservation that between carrying out the order and the actual receipt of the order, there is an important factor to be considered, namely the personal will to come to a resolution. In this personal decision there is no way, of course. question and in your reply you did not intend to make any specific reference to this defendant, is that correct?

A Noo Mr. Prosecutor, I did not want to do so. I did not want to make a special remark as referred to the defendant Blobel.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, you have stated again what you have stated a number of times, that between the receipt of the order and the execution of the order, there would need to be a passage of time for reflection. The question which Mr. Ferencz has repeated to you this morning, which was given to you on several occasions last Friday, was very specific. Now this situation was put to you on Friday. Since then, three days have intervened, and you say that there would need to be a passage of time between the receipt of the order and the execution of it. Now three days have passed since this Question was put to you, do you think now you can answer that very specific question. That if you received an order which Blobel received, would you execute it?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, you are asking a hypothetical question.

THE PRESIDENT: We are not asking a hypothetical question at all. Now listen to this. Dr. Heim asked you a very specific question. I will read it to you. "Question: Dr. Six, several minutes ago you said when you were asked to that effect by the President, that you had the possibility -- you would have had the possibility to prevent executions if you or your commando had received an order to carry out executions. Do you mean to say by that, Dr. Six, that this was equally valid for leaders of other commandos, for instance, the leader of Kommando_SE_IV_A, do you mean to say that that Kommandocommander of SK_IV_A would have had the possibility to prevent executions which he had been ordered to carry out." Your answer was: "Noo I did not want to say that." Then after another little discussion here you said: "It is, of course, evident that whoever received an order had to to carry out the order." Now you took it upon yourself to answer for Blobel. You took it upon yourself to answer for a brother officer, a brother soldier. Now, if you could answer for him, and you go even farther, and answer for the whole German Army, you answer for every officer: if you could answer for these officers, all these other officers, you should he able to answer for yourself, because no one knows yourself better than DR. Six knows him. Now that is what Mr. Ferencz has put to you this morning very specifically and you have replied to the question, by saying you would need time for deliberation. Now, you have had three full days for deliberation, and we would like to know if you would answer that question directly, specifically, and not with a great deal of circumlocution? Proceed.

THE WITNESS: If I had received the order to shoot women and children, I, knowing my present inner attitude-- and I believe it still is the same as it would have been at that time if I should have received such an order, I would have refused this order by own death. I can not give you a clearer answer than that. If I would have had to shoot women and children, I would have refused to obey this order, even if I had paid my own life for it. BY MR. FERENCZ: caught in January 1946? disposal of the American troops, when I met my wife. Q That is equivalent to a colonel, is it not?

Q And what was your SS rank in 1945?

Q You did not answer my question. I asked if you had a special section concerned with the Jewish question?

A. No, there was no such special section.

Q. What was Section VII-B-I?

A. Department VII-B-I was non-existent. There was just a subdepartment of VII-B-I, that was free masonry and liberalism.

Q. You are sure it was not free masonry and Jewery?

A. Yes, I am absolutely certain, quite certain. cerned with liberalism?

A. According to my recollection and knowledge, it is absolutely certain that I was in charge of this office. There was no such section. It depended on what time you are referring to.

Q At any time did you have a section concerned with Judeism?

A. No, as such there was no department. There were plant, and it was within the church department to take up Jewish church history.

Q. Do you Know Hauptsturmfuehrer Ballensiefen?

A. Hauptsturmfuehrer Ballensiefen, yes.

Q Isn't it a fact that he was head of Section VII-B-2 which was concerned with Judeism?

A. I could not understand this question exactly.

Q. Isn't it a fact, that he was the head of Section VII-B-2 Which was concerned with Judeism?

A. well, obviously he was in charge of several departments in the Church Department. whether it was VII-B-2 or I, I can not remember, and I don't know what time you are referring to.

Q. Isn't it a fact that you had a separate sub-department concerned with political churches aside from the Jewish questions?

A. No, no sub-department on political church matters, just one small department on church and all its denominations.

Q. Do you know SS-Captain Morawsky?

A. Morawsky?

Q. Morawsky?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. wasn't he the head of sub-department concerned with political churches?

A. No, not for a moment, never for a moment.

Q. what political churches did you regard as opposing groups?

A. I have already said that the term political church matter was not used in my office, and that it said it was churches of all denominations, and that within these churches, the Christian Church, as well as the Jewish Church was the aim of the cultural research.

Q. In other words, you were concerned with the Jewish Church, out only from a point of view of cultural research, is that correct?

A. In any case at the period when I was responsible, that was the aim of our work, yes.

Q. Didn't the other SS men regard that as a little curious?

A. I did not understand the question.

Q. Well, you said that you were concerned with the Jewish cultural research matter; everybody else was concerned with exterminating the Jews, so isn't it a little bit odd that your department should be so different from all the others?

A. Will you repeat that? It is a well known fact that this office dealt with the cultural research of these churches, therefore, it was up to the office as such, and it also dealt with the historical research, and in addition to this, which I have already said, and which I can prove, that there were no matters of Jewish interest but the Jewish culture with which we dealth, because there was no expert and no scientist that could deal with this matter.

Q. In other words, you did have a subsection but no one dealt with the question, it was just an empty title?

A. Again I must repeat that Herr Ballensiefen was theonly man who was in this subdepartment, but dealt with churches generally, and his work, which he carried out at the period when I was responsible, and I can take responsibility for the truth of this, was cultural development of Jewry, and I can especially remember that in the period when he was subordinate to me he was mainly dealing with preparations for the establishment of assimilation between 1780 and 1815, and he wanted to write a thesis on this.

Q. For what purpose did you have this section on Jewry, just to take historical theses on it?

A. when it was instituted and at my time, this was its main and only task.

Q. Isn't it a fact that your purpose actually was to uncover whatever you could in Jewish history or elsewhere to be used to further the SS-Anti-Semitic actions?

A. No, never for a moment, at least not during the period of my position.

Q. Did they ever use your materials for that purpose?

A. Not during the time when I was in charge of the office. BY THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, that not for a moment would you even think of looking for material which might be used against Jewry in connection with its historical past. Does it shock you very much that any institution, office, branch or organization or such like should seek material for propagandistic purposes against the Jews?

A. No, your Honor, if that assignment would have been given to me while I held the office---

Q. Do you mean to tell us that in your department that you weren't interested in locating material which could be used against the Jews?

A. I do not understand, the nucleus of your question.

Q. Well, the actual basis of the question that Mr. Ferencz asked you if you did not have a department which was interested in locating material which could be used against the Jews, and you said horrifiedly, "No, not for a moment." Now, I am calling to your attention the basic policy of the Nazi party with regard to Jews, namely that the Nazi Party was going to make war on the Jews from every possible angle. You were a member of the Nazi Party, weren't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes, and you were interested in carrying out the policies of the Nazi party, were you not?

A. Which question an I supposed to answer, whether I am innocent or whether I dealt, with this question at all?

Q. You are supposed to answer the questions which are put to you, and the reasons they are put to you is this, that you volunteered, and remember this witness, that you volunteered this. It was not put to you by the Tribunal and it was not put to you by Prosecution counsel. You volunteered here on the witness stand to prove yourself a champion of religious freedom. You told us a very dramatic story of how in the field you opened the churches, that you led the population to the churches, so it is a subject which you opened up, not which anyone else invited you to address yourself upon. So therefore, these questions are put only because you opened the door to such questions. So, now we come back to the question which was this namely; were you interested in advancing the policies of the Nazi Party?

A. I was certainly not interested during my tern of office to supply propagandistic material with which another practical propaganda point could be supported. That was not the task I was in charge of.

Q. were you interested generally in advancing the Nazi Party?

A. I carried out what was within my field of task, but I cannot say that during any time, any period since 1939, I was interested in order to support the National Socialist Party in all its aims, but within the course of years certain very strong differences between my own attitude and the developing aims of the National Socialistic Party came into existence. garding Jews, did you not? Please answer that question, yes or no.

A. Yes, I know this point of program.

Q. Very well, and as a member of the Party and a member of the SS you were sworn to carry out the policies of Hitler, were you not?

A. No, I had not taken the oath as to that, to carry out everything without conditions, everything that Hitler ordered.

Q. You did not take the oath of allegiance to Hitler?

A. Yes, I was supposed to be faithful to Hitler, but not-

Q. Did you take the oath of allegiance to Hitler?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes, and that oath goes something like this, does it not: "I swear - or I vow - inviolable allegiance to Adolf Hitler, I will follow whatever he says or whatever his leaders direct me to do." Generally speaking, isn't that what the oath says?

A. Yes.

Q. That you were to follow Hitler and his leaders regardless, that is, what the oath says, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q Very well, And the basic principle of Hitler's policy, one of the basic principles, was war on the Jews. That is true, isn't it?

A. No, that was not the basic idea.

Q. I said one of the basic policies of Hitler's program was war on the Jews. You mean to deny that?

A. No, not at all.

Q Very well. Then since you had sworn inviolable allegiance to Hitler, and that included necessarily hostility toward the Jews, now do you tell us that in your work you were not interested in using material which you would find against the Jews?

A. I can only say this, if I had done so, your Honor,--I cannot say here that the plan when the department was instituted, that the plan then was in existence.

Q We are not speaking of the plan. Mr. Ferencz merely asked you whether you would not be interested in material against the Jews, and you were horrified at that question. You said, "not for a moment," and that is what provoked this long exchange between the Tribunal and the witness. Now we are asking you whether it is not a fact that in your work that any material which you came across, either through research or accidentally, which could be used against the Jews would be very important in the discharge of your duty toward Hitler?

A. I had no opportunity to do so.

Q. The answer isn't very clear to me. I ask you whether you would not be interested in material which came to your attention, hostile to the Jews, whether you would not be interested in using that material or making it available for others to use against the Jews?

A. No, I had no interest, no personal interest in doing so.

Q. Therefore, to that extent you did not follow your allegiance to Hitler, you had reservations on the Jewish question?

A. It depends what is intended by the Jewish policy of Hitler. I-

Q. We understand you to say that you do not know now what Hitler's policy was against the Jews?

A. I do. Far be it from me to say that the Jewish question was kept a secret in Germany until 1942 or had a different importance or significance than after 1942, and what I have already said. The Jewish question in 1930 or 1935 had an entirely different importance and significance, and I personally state these matters only for the reason that when I entered the NSDAP I did not regard the Jewish question as a basic question of the NSDAP.

Its very shape too must pass now. But at random, in order to prove my opinion and attitude at that time, my tutors were Jews.

Q. I didn't understand you. Who were Jews?

A. In 1934 I was made a doctor, got my doctor's degree under the sponsorship of these people, and if I had been an Anti-Semite I would not. I would not have come to see these two people and I would not have been in charge of them, my two very best teachers. Today I only want to say, to tell-

Q. Two of your teachers were Jews?

A. They were not only my teachers, your Honor, but they were the people under whom I had to work. My doctor's thesis, my thesis to make my doctor's degree, to take the test, as it were, that means a tutor has a certain confidential position.

Q. That was in 1934?

A. 1934.

Q. And you had a great deal of respect for these two men?

A. Yes. I was in the university and in the school and in the lectures. I was invited to their homes, and I must say that this certainly cannot be a bad relationship.

Q. Yes, you had a friendship for these two Jews.

A. The relationship was that of a pupil to his teacher. That means I had respect for them. I regarded one of them particularly with tremendous respect.

Q. And this great respect that you had for these two Jews, did it continue after you left the university?

A. Certainly. For instance, I corresponded with one of these two, and I was in close contact with him for years after.

Q. Do you regard these two Jews as exceptional men, or did they in themselves typify Jewry?

A. They were just as much Jews for me as were others, and I had no experience at that time.

Q. Then if they carried out the general characteristics of Jews, then you would feel very much offended if they were persecuted, wouldn't you? Please answer that question. You would feel very much offended if these two Jews were persecuted, wouldn't you?

A. I personally tried to protect then as far as I could.

Q. Would you please answer that question. You would feel very much offended if these two Jews were persecuted?

A. I regarded it in any case as highly unpleasant that these people were concerned in new laws and regulations.

Q. Answer that question, would you feel personally offended that these two Jews whom you respected and admired so much were persecuted? Would you think it unjust, unfair, unchivalrous and improper in a civilization such as you find in Germany, would you regard it as unjust?

A. Yes, I was hurt personally here, especially in the case of one person who --

Q. All right, Now, do you feel offended when all their brothers and sisters, going up into the hundreds of thousands and millions were persecuted, do you feel hurt when all the other Jews, who were of the same characteristics and temperament as these two Jews as far as race is concerned, do you also feel offended when they were persecuted?

A. May I ask what you mean by persecution, by persecuting, when the period of the persecution begins?

Q. Now, Professor Six, a man who has been a dean of a university and a professor and a journalist and a newspaper man and a general and a soldier, with all of your experience for you to ask what is meant by persecution seems a little trifling. You know from personal insult up to deliberate killings. Now, that is what is meant by persecution. It ran the whole gamut from the simplest kind of an insult to the last grave crime of killing them while they were in a defenseless position and burying them in unmarked graves. That is the definition of persecution. Do you feel offended when all the Jews were persecuted? Do you feel as much offended about that as you did about these two Jews you knew?

A. When on the 9th of November, 1938, I saw and I heard the Jewish synagogues were burned down, I was ashamed as a German, I must say that. I waited for the man Goebbels not to remain for a day longer in his office than necessary, and I must say it was a tremedous shock for me when I saw that he would remain in office, and not only, that but he was justified in his measures. If that is what you want to know, your Honor, I can still say as a German I think it is a shame and a scandal that churches are being burned down.

Q. All right then, you did agree with Hitler's policy of persecution of the Jews.

A. If it is a mortal persecution as it actually happened to be, If it was intentional to carry out the Jewish question systematically into the channel into which it was carried and to carry it out in that manner, if that really had been the case, although I do not know whether it was the case, then it is not for me to say here that I condemned the solution as it was later on called.

Q. Do you agree or not agree with Hitler's policy against the Jews?

A. I did not agree with this shape of politics.

Q. Very well. Then you had that reservation in your oath to Hitler.

A. In only this, your Honor, as a going system.

Q. You did have that reservation in your oath to Hitler?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes. when you were protecting the churches in Russia, did you also protect the synagogues?

A. I said in Smolensk there were no synagogues, and it is a fact that although these two churches were protected by me that was mainly for the reason that there were archives there and valuable treasures. I did not want to leave these churches open to plundering and spoliation.

Q. You were interested in the church because it was a depository of documents in which you were interested and not because it was sacred as a place of worship?

A. Why I was interested in this, was that the question?

Q. Yes, because you had told us that you had protected these churches, Now, you say you were protecting them from plundering because archives were located there. Now, I ask you, were you interested in saving these eeclesiastical edifices because they were the depositories of documents in which you were interested, and not because they were places sacred to worship?

A. I thought they were places of worship, and I thought one should return these places to people for this purpose. I believed that it was necessary and self-evident that churches that were wished for by the population as places of worship should be returned. I do not think it is my merit only that this was done, and I think a number of people did that, and I do not want to brag about it because I regard this as selfevident that it should be done.

Q. Well, you bragged about it on Friday, and have you changed your mind about it now?

A. No, but I do not Want to brag about it.

Q. How many men were in your command in Moscow, in your kommando?

A. In the Advance Kommando Moscow there were twenty-three people.

Q. In your organization did you have a chaplain?

A. In the advance Kommando Moscow, no. The advance Kommando's twenty-three men did not have a chaplain.

Q. Did you have a chaplain in your other organization, when you were with the Waffen-SS?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever conduct religious services yourself for your men?

A. I could not do so. I am not a clergyman.

Q. Did you ever offer them facilities for worshiping?

A. If a man intended to go to church and worship he could do so, he was free to do so.

Q. Your interest, therefore, in Moscow, in saving these churches, was an interest which did not arise out of any religious impulse in yourself, do I take it?

A. Religious impulse, your Honor, was put in front of me as it were. It was wished that churches would be put at the disposal of the population, and I thought it was the right thing to do, to grant this impulse.

Q. Are you -- You don't need to answer this question if you don't want to. Are you a religious person yourself?

A. Yes, I regard myself as a religious person. It didn't seem clear to me when you were discussing the terror in Russia which you witnessed whether this terror was being perpetrated by the Russian forces or the German forces.

A. What I mean to say, your Honor, was that I myself am of the opinion that in the course of time instead of a peaceful policy in Russia a power policy, a force policy, was developed as it was connected in Germany with the name Koch. What actually happened is not only a shock to me but it was also a shock to large parts of the German population.

THE PRESIDENT: I am sorry to have broken in on your cross-examination, Mr. Ferencz. You may proceed. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q. Six, you stated that when you saw the burning of the synagogues as a German it struck you as a shame and a scandel. I ask you now, when you became aware of the fact that such defendants as Ohlendorf and Naumann here were executing or ordering the execution of people, did that strike you also as a shame and a scandal?

A. I can say that all these measures which were instituted in Russia at the outbreak of the war came under an unambiguous and clear Fuehrer order, and I think I left no doubt when I said that each person was in severe dispute with himself, and there are people who had this tension and it remained until this very day, but at the moment in which I am confronted with an order to a supreme commander or political leader, I am confronted with a choice on the one side and a political order on the other side.

This tension is not new and historically speaking there always has been such a tension, I cannot say now if I am confronted with an order not --

Witness, pardon the interruption. However, I would appreciate it if you would first answer the question and then you may give whatever explanation you see fit. Now, I am asking you a simple question. You stated when you learned of the burning of the synagogues as a German it struck you as a shame and a scandal. I am asking you as a German did it strike you as a shame and a scandal when you learned of the murder of defenseLess people?

Answer the question and then proceed with your explanation. Is you answer yes or no? Did it strike you as a shame and a scandal when you learned about the execution of defenseless people?

A You mean, women and children?

Q You recognize the circumstances. You have told us there was a general Hitler order to kill all the Jews. When you learned that that Was being carried out, did it strike you as a shame and a scandal?

A I am prepared to answer it, but I cannot answer, if you don't ask me the question, "when". These orders that Jewish children and women were to be liquidated, I never learned in Russia. I cannot answer that, if I never found out about it. I cannot say how I regarded it. It is a hypothetical question. Nazi and an SD officer that the Hitler order to kill Jewish women and children and men was being carried out. When you found that out, at any time, did it strike you as a shame and a scandal, the same as the burning of a synagogue struck you as a shame and a scandal?

Q Did you regard it as a shame and a scandal. Those are your own words, you remember, as regards the synagogues. called by Goebbels as a spontaneous action, out without disregarding the Order of the Chief of State, the fact that synagogues actually burned and that no steps were taken to prevent this, I regarded as a shame, as a German and as a human being, but I cannot regard an order as a shame. It is, after all, the contents of an order, but not the order itself. I cannot say that an order is a scandal. If the Chief of State issues an order, I can only regard it as a human being, and I am prepared to regard and to judge it as a human being, but I cannot say that an order is a scandal, an order by the Chief of State.

I cannot answer that question.

Q I am not asking you about the order. I am asking you about the results of that order, the actual execution of people. You must have learned about that at some time in your long career as a Nazi. When you learned that people were actually being killed as a result of a Hitler Order, did that affect you as much as the burning of the synagogues did?

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, I think it would be well, if you stuck to his original phrase, "a shame and a scandal", so that we don't get off into other bypaths.

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, Your Honor. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q You used the words, "shame and a scandal", as regarding the burning of the synagogues. I am asking you now, when you learned that people were killed, that Jews were killed, did that strike you as a shame and a scandal too? children as a scandal and a shame, whether they were killed by partisans, or the Fuehrer Order, or by bombs. That remains exactly the same, whether the killing of women and children is a shame. If you want this answer immediately, I regard it generally as a shame.

Q I am not asking you generally. I am asking you very specifically, and I would appreciate a specific answers: When you learned that women and children and anyone else were being killed by you, were being killed by the German, as a result of the Hitler order, did you regard that as a shame and a scandal? regarded the killing of the Germans. I simply cannot make any difference between the one and the other.

Q Is the answer, "Yes", you regarded it as a shame and a scandal, when you thought about it, is that correct?

Q Way don't you answer the question specifically? I put the question specifically.

Why do insist on making it general?

THE PRESIDENT: Put the question specifically and get a specific answer. BY MR. FERENCZ: the Hitler Order, did you regard that as a shame or a scandal?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, or no. not enter my head, but my reaction did not work in this direction.

THE PRESIDENT: You are being a little slow in answer to the questions which were put to you, but you will observe that in every instance, the series of questions follow upon something volunteered by yourself. These questions are all prescribed and precipitated by the statements which you volunteered on the witness stand. Further you indicated very specifically that you regarded the destructions of the synagogues on November 8, 1938, as a shame and a scandal. Now the question put to you by Mr. Ferencz is simply this: Since you regarded the destruction of the synagogues as a shame and a scandal, did you also regard the execution of Jews as a result of the Fuehrer Order as a shame and a scandal? Now, please answer that Yes or No or tell us you feel dis clined to answer it.

Now, yes, or no, or indicate you do not want to answer that at all.

THE WITNESS: Must I answer this question, Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: I have indicated that if you don't want to answer it, then the Tribunal will have to assume that you don't want to make a comparison between the destruction of an inanimate conglomeration of stone, brick, and mortar, and pulsing live human beings. Now, if you don't want to answer the question, the Tribunal does not demand that you answer any question. You are indicted and you voluntarily take the stand. No defendant is compelled to take the stand, if he does not wish to, but once he takes the stand, he is subject to cross-examination and then, if he volunteers statements, certainly those statements are open to inquiry end the witness stated that he regarded it as being a shame and a scandal that the synagogues were destroyed.

Now Mr. Ferencz very properly asked you "Do you regard the destruction, the killing, the executing of men, women and children, as a result of the Fuehrer Order, a shame and a scandal?" Now, please answer that, yes or no, but, if you don't want to answer it, then, say, "Please, I do not wish to answer that question" and we will pass on to something else.

THE WITNESS: The shooting of women and children -

THE PRESIDENT: No, no. Now, we don't want another long speech. You are very interesting and we enjoy these bookish lectures of yours, being a university professor, they are very interesting, but now we have spent a great deal of time on this particular question and we don't want any long speech. Now, once again, Mr. Ferencz, put that question and stop there, and the witness will answer, yes, or no, except, if he is disinclined to answer it, then, he will have to ask the Tribunal to excuse him from answering the question, and of course be excused from answering the question. BY MR. FERENCZ: ler Order, did you regard it as a shame and a scandal?

Q I shall come to one more question. When defenseless men were shot, did you regard that as a shame and a scandal?

THE PRESIDENT: Why does it depend? Now, he said, if defenseless men were executed, a man is defenseless, he is helpless, he doesn't have an are to defend himself, I think that is what is meant by "defenseless", I don't need to have that amplified. If defenseless men were executed under the Fuehrer Order, did you regard that execu tion as a shame and a scandal?

THE WITNESS: If it is the expression of the fuehrer Order, then not.

Q Well, we have an interesting situation then. If defenseless men are killed as a result of a Hitler Order, you say that you did not regard that as a shame and a scandal. If defenseless women and children were killed, then you did regard that as a shame and a scandal. Why do you make the distinction? yes or no. This is the first time I have been allowed to say anything for some time, but I want to say something on my side, to make an objection. If you don't force me to answer, yes, or no, I want to state, Mr. Prosecutor, the term, "defenseless men" has to be defined very closely and you told me that I would be allowed to give a clarification afterwards. At the moment, or at least, shall we say, when I now state the meaning of the term "defenseless", the question is whether he would have the possibility to find out the case, or whether he would have been able to examine the actual possibility -

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, I think we can shorten this. What Mr. Ferencz meant, and you are right in objecting to the word "defenseless", if it were taken apart from the context of what has been going on now for two days by this: a man, a Jew, who was executed merely because he was a Jew. He was not spoken of as an individual that was given a trial or who was proved to have committed sabotage, or who was an active partisan, or who was lead out and shot. That is an act of war. We do not mean that idea. It means a man who was shot merely because he was Jewish, not having committed a crime, merely because of his race. Did you regard the killing of such a man, such a defenseless person as a shame and a scandal? I think that answers your objection.

THE WITNESS: In this question -BY MR. FERENCZ: The Tribunal has clarified the question. Would you answer the Tribunal's question, please?

A May I ask you to repeat?

Q The question is this: You stated that you regarded the killing of defenseless women and children as a result of the Hitler Order to be a shame sad a scandal. You also stated that you did not regard the killing of defenseless men to be a shame and a scandal. The question is: What is the distinction -- and by defenseless men, we meant to say, as the Tribunal pointed out, Jews who were killed just because they were Jews?

A Normally women and children are not waging war. On the other hand the man is a potential bearer of warfare. I underline this, I emphasize this "potential". If therefore the shootings are based on his characteristic of being a "potential" bearer of warfare, and if, furthermore, they are carried out when their potential guilt has been established in a concrete situation, then I think the shooting is justified. every day. The Jews were ordered to be registered. The old men who had never born arms in their lives were taken out and shot, along with the others. You have made a distinction between men whom it was justifiable to kill without limitation as to their condition or age, or class or anything else, and the killing of women and children, are you saying now that you regarded all men because of the mere fact of their sex as potential bearers of warfare, are therefore justifiable victims of this murderous order? and the women and children are disregarded. That, at least, is my opinion, and that is why I must make the primary and primitive difference between the potential bearer of arms and on the other hand the woman and the child. This difference is unambiguous and is in our cultural and moral code, and if I act according to this moral code, I must recognize this difference, but, if you ask my own opinion, I must give you the answer that according to the European moral code, the man is the bearer of arms, the bearer of warfare.

Therefore, I must make this distinction and I make it for this reason and for no other.

Q Then According to your cultural and moral code, it was justifiable to kill any man who was a Jew, regardless of his condition, age, or previous act, is that correct?

THE INTERPRETER: Would you repeat the question? It did not come through. perfectly justifiable to kill all men, because they were Jews?

A No, that has nothing to do with my moral and ethical code. According to my moral code, guilt has to be established, a guilt from a concrete situation. Europe, and your cultural and moral code, men were regarded as bearers of warfare? killing Women and children.

A This specific conclusion I did not draw. You did. I only stated facts of the case. children, out it was justifiable to kill men. is what I mean. were Jews was justifiable? it is justifiable, or, at least, was justifiable. It is another question whether it was also morally justifiable. any way? atmosphere, I regard the Fuehrer Order as unmoral, if I can speak as a citizen of a state. If I may be permitted to say so, who have, during the last thirty years, watched the establishment of a fighting moral, together with and in addition to a Christian and humanitarian atmosphere, and when I saw, according to these new orders, women and children were killed, not in actual combat, with your permission, I must say, as a citizen of a State, if I may be regarded as such, I regard it as amoral, but, of course, I can no longer say that as a humanitarian and as an individual.

I am justified to regard it as immoral. I want to say that quite clearly, out, as a citizen, I can only regard it as immoral and I give you the reason. The whole warfare moral or the so-called civilized world is overshadowed today.

MR. FERENCZ: It was a long speech.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you get an answer?

MR. FERENCZ: No, I didn't.

I would like to put the question again very simply. As I understand your answer, you regarded the Hitler Order as amoral, is that correct?

THE PRESIDENT: Now, listen, Witness, you can't be two individuals. You're one men and you can't day, "over here I am a citizen. Over here I am a person. Over here I am a professor. Over here I am a, soldier." You are one man. Please answer the question as one man, and we have spent a great deal of time on this. It has all been very interesting and it hasn't bear lost, because we got angles which might not have occurred to us before. Now let's epitomize it in one very simple question, did you regard the execution of a Jewish man, a male, did you regard his execution - merely because he was a Jew as a shame and a scandal?

THE WITNESS: As an individual, I regard -

THE PRESIDENT: No, no, no. Did you, not as an individual, just one certain individual, you. I only see one person. You talk to us as if you were a whole platoon of men.

THE WITNESS: I have Said that I regarded it as amoral. BY MR. FERENCZ: defendants, that the Hitler Order was a proper order?

THE PRESIDENT: While you are right at this point, I think I would like to acquaint Dr. Heim with what -- would you please step up to the podium, Dr. Heim? Because the witness has mentioned -- the witness has just Stated that he refused to answer this question, which might concern other defendants. I would like to call your attention, Dr. Heim, since you were not in the courtroom at the time, that this morning the witness made an answer which might seem to be contradictory to the answer which he made to a question put by you last Friday and, since it involves your client, we believe, in the interest of fairness and justice, you should know this answer, which could, be contradictor to the answer he gave on Friday. You had asked the witness this question: "Do you mean to say by that that the Commander of the SK 4a would have the possibility to prevent executions which he had been ordered to carry out. The witness answered among other things, but he made this very specific reply, "It is, of course, evident that whoever received an order had. to carry out the order." This morning he stated that had he received such an order, he would have refused to carry it out so in that he made a distinction between himself and your client, and we believe that you should be acquainted with that answer made by the witness. If, later on, Dr. Heim, you would like to question the witness on that, you, of course, will be permitted to do so.

DR. HEIM: (Attorney for Defendant Blobel): Your Honor, above all, I went to thank Your Honor for drawing my attention to this. Secondly, I take the liberty to ask you whether after the conclusion of the cross-examination of the prosecution, I can ask a few relevant questions of the witness?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, you will be permitted to do that, Dr. Heim.

DR. ULMER(Attorney for the defendant Six): Your Honor, may I ask you to inform Dr. Heim of the fact that the defendant refused for his own person and therefore provided that the question has no relevancy.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, I'd suggest that you acquaint Dr. Heim with the general nature of the witness' statements so that Dr. Heim may be entirely at home in this for the cross-examination when he takes it up.

DR. ULMER: Will that be now, Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: No, no, during the recess, hut I will say this for the information of the Marshal, that during the recess, the witness is not to speak to anyone.

DR ULMER: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, I think we might recess now.

MR. FERENCZ: If Your Honors please, I have just one question I would like to put. BY MR. FERENCZ: answer this one too?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. He refuses to answer why he refuses to answer.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, thank you for giving me the possibility of informing Dr. Heim. I used the recess for this, and at the same time Dr, Heim. I used the recess for this, and at the same time Dr. Heim was informed through his assistants who were present throughout the entire morning's session.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes,

DR. HEIM: (For the defendant Blobel): Your Honor, I an very well informed about everything the witness stated this morning, but my questions relating to this, I would like to ask at the end of the cross examination of the Prosecution

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, we are disposed to let you do that, so you do not have to argue about that. Yes, the Prosecution will finish its cross examination and then you will be given ample opportunity to go into that subject or any other Subject which you deem relevant in behalf of your client.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You are welcome. BY DR. FERENCZ:

Q. Six, do you know a police major named Johannes Hermann Mueller?

A. I do not remember that.

Q. How has made some statements about your character, which I would like you to have an opportunity to explain. Therefore, I am going to give you an interrogation of this police major, and will ask you to read two of the questions which were put to him, as well..... I will ask you to read to of the questions which were put to him concerning you, and to read his answers out loud, and then to give us an explanation of his statements. The questions are 27 and 28. Would you please read that out loud? Would you please read it out loud? I won't hear anything.

A. I am just ready.

Question No. 27. To the person to be interrogated, (probably it is meant to be Nebe, N-e-b-e) at the time?

Answer: That is a very important question. Do you know all those people.

...it was such a strange mixture of people.

that he had the execution carried out. I don't know whether he was an old-time Nazi.

He fitted very well into the circle.

"Question No. 28; What kind of an impression did he make?

" Also one of those wild worriers. This repelled me a little. A full stop I always thought , Good Lord, that man is a Professor. At the time He was dull. He had worries about his family and his wife, I don't know, but apart from that he was not very quiet." given to those questions?

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, the name Muller, is the most popular name in German. For that reason it would he very nice if the Prosecution would submit this document as evidence in order to give me the possibility of informing myself which Major Muller from the police is concerned, and to use that in my cross-examination and how it comes about that he holes such an opinion.

THE PRESIDENT: Counsel let me make one suggestion which has nothing to do with your request, that when any attorney steps up to put a question or makes a statement, especially right in the middle of an examination being conducted by someone else, that he give his name and the client he represents so that it can be seen from the transcript at once who it was that made the declaration.

DR. ULMER: I beg your pardon, Your Honor, as defense counsel of the defendant in the witness box, Dr. Six himself, it escaped me at the moment.

THE PRESIDENT: I did not mean it as a criticism. I am only stating that for the purposes of the transcript, the record which is printed afterwards, it would not he too apparent that you were the defendant's counsel.

DR. ULMER: I know, Your Honor, but still I had to beg your pardon because it was a mistake on my part.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, now Mr. Ferencz, Will you please answer Dr. Ulmer's questions.

MR. FERENCZ: I shall be very glad to give it Dr. Ulmer and make it a part of the record. I am talking about Johannes Hermann Muller.

I will give defense counsel whatever information I have about Herr Muller in order that he may acquaint himself with who this person is. I know he is a police major and I have given that much to the defendant. Now to come back to my question.

Q. Do you have any comment to make or examination concerning this police major's opinion about you?

A Well, I don't knew this police major and I don't know who he may be. The explanations are so general that I cannot comment on them, no decisive fact is put down here upon which I could comment. tyrant, particularly as regard to your subordinates? me. If you can give me details about it I can tell you what I think about it.

Q I will give you part of Schellenberg's interrogation and I will ask you again to read the questions concerning you and the answers, and then you will be given an opportunity to explain it, it is question No. 29.

DR. ULMER: For the defendant Six; introduce these documents as evidence and to give them an exhibit number.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, the derendant has asked to see the document so that he may be able to explain it, I have given him the document and it will depend. upon his answer whether I choose to submit it as a rebuttal document or not. I submit we are not obligated to make a document of ever piece of evidence we present to the defendant for the purpose of cross-examination.

THE PRESIDENT: So long as defendant and defense counsel are given every opportunity to see, study and scrutinize the document or Paper or memorandum whatever it may be, that the Prosecution is using, there is no necessity of making it an exhibit unless the Prosecution desires to do so.

BY MR. FERENCZ :

Q Now would you please read that question and answer? and subsequent questions and I must say that this question as such is rather taken out of the context, because a few pages previously and a few pages later other questions are mentioned:

"Question No. 29 What was the general opinion of him in the SD?"

Q He is talking about you there, is he not? time afterwards, "What was the general opinion of him in the SD?

"He had a way of treating human beings. He was a ruthless tyrant towards his subordinates. One must not take this amiss but one must blame those people who were the cause for his character becoming like this." your character? liberty of giving the same opinion of him. In any case I doubt that he tried as much as he could to observe the way I treated my co-workers. Schellenberger was so close to Heydrich and Himmler and always cooperated with them so closely that people in a position like mine did not seem important and interesting to him. In any case it is interesting for me that he gave this very careful answer, because as he says, I had a way of dealing with co-workers, this may represent a good way of treating them or a bad way. I know from my own experience that treated my co-worker's very well and that I concerned myself with their worries, but I am sure of one thing that I never thought myself in a position to determine or order their wills or opinions concerning the ways of their lives, that is all I can say.

Q Do you know why he regarded you as a tyrant?

little opportunity to be together with me. kommando Moscow? 20th of August.

Q Are you sure it was the 15th of July? July?

A I beg your pardon?

Q The fourth?

A I have never said that. May I just explain this: Of course, I had been appointed since the 23rd but the departure took place on the 14th or 15th. I not only stated this today but I have said it since the first day of my interrogation. it was explained to you that you were to perform a mission similar to that performed by the Einsatzstaff Rosenberg, is that correct? beginning your activities with the Vorkommando Moscow? that one did not have to study them in particular. Apart from that I must say that my office carried out such tasks in any case. Einsatzstaff Rosenberg in Paris, and you said that you were to do a similar thing in Moscow? berg was sentenced to death partly because of the activities of the Einsatzstaff Rosenberg in Paris?

A I don't know that, but I cannot see any connection between this and the activities of my commandos. the Einsatzstaff Rosenberg did in Paris?

A No, Mr. Prosecutor, there is a very important difference. May I explain it to you? The Einsatzstaff Rosenberg had the task to secure items of art and culture.

Q Does the word "sicherstellen" does that mean confiscate?

A Certainly for him it meant confiscate. He had the task to confiscate items of artistic and cultural value. My task was set down in a special agreement as confiscation of archive material, that is documents of the date prior to 1939; the confiscation of art and cultural items according to Article 56 of the Hague Convention is considered to be prohibited because they are to be considered to be private property, however, the confiscation of archive material, that is, such which are not considered of value for culture and art internationally, they are considered as a war booty and every power at war today considers it their right to confiscate such materials, for example in Germany, during the last two years the Ministerial Collection Center. tion to examining documents, also had the task of confiscating art works, is that correct? time.

Q Do you know about the "M"-action of Einsatzstaff Rosenberg?

Q Perhaps this will refresh your memory. The "M"-action, as found in the judgment of the IMT, was an action by the Einsatzstaff Rosenberg in which they took all the furniture away from all the Jews in occupied territory in the west and sent them back to Germany, did you ever hear of that?

have heard the word "M"-action here. that you were to perform activities similar to those of the Einsatzstaff Rosenberg, is that correct? the measure required that they confiscate the documents and archive material, that was to be carried out, and the rest of the material, the Einsatzstaff Rosenberg would have to confiscate on their own. This could not overlap because of an agreement as laid down in the year 1940.

Q I am not quite clear in your answer. Did you say you were a part of the Einsatzstaff Rosenberg? with the Fuehrer order and on the other hand the tasks of the Archive Commando of Office 7 was set down definitely by this agreement of the year 1940, and in this it had been set down expressly that only archive material and only archive material from the date since 1933 was to be taken, only these, the security police were to confiscate only these. the East similar to what the Einsatzstaff Rosenberg did in the West, which you explained after the examination and studying of documents? in the West but I had to deal with such things Which according to the agreement of Heydrich and Rosenberg in the year 1940, had been given as a task to the SD, only they were to confiscate archive material from the time after 1933.

Q Was the Einsatzstaff Rosenberg to do this by themselves? separately, that this be a task of the SD and the security police and in the future they should carry it out on their own.

Eastern front? berg were to be sent to the East as well but I have never come across any nor did I meet him previously.

Q You stated that there were 23 people in Vorkommando Moscow. How many vehicles did you have.

A Shall I repeat?

Q No, how many vehicles did you have? did you wear a uniform?

Q what want did your uniform indicate?

Q That is equivalent to Colonel, isn't it? Was that an honorary colonel or an honorary uniform? job was a university professor and as my files show, which you have submitted as documents here, I was still practically a member of the Waffen SS.

Q How were you addressed when a soldier came up to you? Did he speak to you as Professor Dr.Six, or did he cell you Colonel? you were just an honorary colonel, if you were dressed as a Colonel, as a commanding officer of a unit and soldiers addressed you as colonel, what do you mean that you were just an honorary SS Colonel now? honorary office.

position? colonels?

Q But you had another job, you used to be a college professor?

Q But one of your positions at least was to be an SS Colonel?

Q I am still confused by that "honorary", was your position as SS Colonel, aside from the fact you had a job elsewhere as a college professor, any different from the position of any other SS colonel? Are you trying to give us the impression that it was just a title that it had or do you mean to tell us that you were wearing the uniform of a colonel and addressed as a colonel and then you say it was an honorary position. Will you please tell me if it was any different from any other SS colonel? This fact is shown by the files you submitted yourself from the main SS office, where it says it quite clearly. I cannot repeat anything else but what I have always said and apart from the fact I did not know about this position and this had been indicated in my files several years before.

Q Did you get paid as a colonel?

Q Did you have the privileges of a colonel?

A What are the privileges?

A I can't say what privileges come within that position. Anyway, I didn't have any.

Q Did you have your own territory or area of operations?

Q You are sure you didn't have your own Gebiet or area of operations? that Smolensk belonged to your Gebiet or area of operations. Can you explain that? mean by saying now that this was in your advance territory? less than an area which was under my competency to carry out the Einsatz tasks, and it would have been like that, and as the title shows Vorkommando Moscow, this was a Commando which had the special task of securing the archives, and it was not an Einsatzstaff Commando owing to the fact I had no operational territory. lensk belonged to your territory? this territory. with 23 men it could be regarded as your area or was regarded as your area by another defendant, is that correct?

A I beg your pardon, would you repeat the question please? your 23 men that is the explanation why Blome said Smolensk was in your territory?

A That is a possible explanation. What he means I don't know, of course.

DR. ULMER: For the defendant Six.

Your Honor, they are referring to an interrogation of Blome. May I ask that the Prosecution state whether this concerns a document already submitted in one of the document books, what exhibit number it has and which book it is in, whether it is a document which had been submitted about a statement of Blome, and I ask that if it is not to be introduced or if the Prosecution does not intend to submit it, that the same reservations be made as concerns Muller and Schellenberger and the dependent Six and that this may be indicated.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, this is an interrogation of the defendant Blome which was not introduced as a document in as much as it is an interrogation. However, in view of the request of defense counsel I will submit the interrogation to the defendant Six and ask him to read the questions and the answers which he has just explained and I will at that allow his defense counsel to examine the document and he may use it any way he sees fit for further questioning of the defendant Blome or when he takes the stand.

DR: ULMER: I am very grateful and I believe this will avoid a number of misunderstandings. MR. FERENCS:

Q. Please read the question and the answer out loud?

A. Who carried out the Action Smolensk? Answer: Smolensk was not one. You are making a mistake here. Well, I know nothing about it. I only went in with the front troops and safeguarded the NKVD building, which was still in good order and then I left again because that belonged to Sixis territory. Shall I continue?

Q. No, thank you, that covers it. Your explanation then, of course is that you don't know why Blume stated that Smolensk was your territory?

A. No, I don't know that.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, please. Since you refer to the witness's rank in the SS, I have been able to locate the personnel records to which the witness referred. Would you please let him look at that document? III-B on page 79 in the English.

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, I am giving the English copy, Your Honor. I don't have the German copy with me.

THE WITNESS: I can read in the English.

MR. FERENCZ: Can also read the English.

THE PRESIDENT: Document No. NO-4807, and he said he reads English so you can have it in English.

MR. FERENCZ: I'll later on give him the other copy so he may follow it also.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. You indicated in answer to Mr. Ferencz's question that this personnel record shows that you were an honorary colonel. I don't find that phrase in the document. Would you please indicate which item it is, which can be interpreted as an honorary colonel?

THE WITNESS: On page 1 of the original document, it says, one moment please, I must look it up. It is different in the mimeograph copy. Under the column, "Profession" it says: Secretary: University teacher, and.

then in quite a different handwriting: SS Leader. My profession is given as secretary: college professor, and then SS-leader, I can only understand this to mean that at the time I gave as my main profession that I was a lecturer. Later, although it is not mentioned here, it says here, Employe: foreign office. If the RSHA or the SD Main Office had been my employer, it would have said here, SD Main Office, or Reich Main Security Office. For that reason I stated this.

THE PRESIDENT: That is the basis on which you make your statement that you were only an honorary colonel?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Who makes up this personnel record? Who makes up this Personnel record?

A. That is done by the expert in the So Personnel Department, and, as this file shows in the original, and in German, alterations are made continuously. This file was made in the year of 1937. Perhaps even in the year of 1936, because this time corresponds with the statement: docent, lecturer. Later on I was a professor, and later when all my changes were entered, it was never entered that my main job was in the SD, and I was paid for this, but under profession it says: docent lecturer, employer later foreign office.

THE PRESIDENT: Yo regard these as accurate then?

A. Yes, Your Honor, I also know it, owing to my position, and my payments, and soforth.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. As I glance at this document I see Another item which just fell before my eyes accidently. I would like to ask you a question.

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: I asked you not very long ago, maybe only an hour ago, whether you were a religious man, and whether you upheld the church?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Your answer is, yes. Now I'll direct you attention to this personnel record.

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Under the heading "Religion"?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: And there it says "left church"?

A. I don't know, No, Your Honor, it says there, Religion: believer in God, and in brackets, "Protestant" in the original here.

The president; Well, what does it say after that, the next line?

A. Church K.A. Might mean: left church.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, is that true?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: You did leave the church?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, so, therefore, your interest in these churches in Moscow was not because you had any reverent belief in the church, was it?

A. I believe the question doesnot exclude that even if I was not a member of the church I could still be a religious person, or am one.

THE PRESIDENT: Well you were not religious enough to want to stay in the church?

A. I was not religious enough not to have to stay in a church, but I claimed for myself, from reasons of freedom of conscience that I had to try to find a relation to God, as I thought I had to find it.

THE PRESIDENT: Why did you leave the Church?

A. Why?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes?

A. Why, for the simple reason because I believe that I could find my way to God without an intermediary.

THE PRESIDENT: Then why did you believe in saving these churches in Moscow? Couldn't all these other parishiners and worshippers also find God without an intermediary of the church?

A. That is a principle of freedom of conscience and belief i.e.

That every human being can find his way to God, ashe considers it to be right.

THE PRESIDENT: You feel that the church is necessary for these others but not for yourself?

A. Not that I consider it necessary, but for this fact, that every individual may search a vasic way to God, whether it be through the church, or whether it is done intermediarily.

THE PRESIDENT: When you answer my question this morning---

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: (continuing) as to whether you were a religious man, we gathered the impression that you were a man who believed in God, and attended church?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: But you do not attend the church. You left the church?

A. Yes, I left the church, but I want to assure you, Your Honor, that it does not change my statement that I am a religious person, and that my belief in God has nothing to do with my leaving the church. BY MR FERENCZ:

Q. You say that your special task was collecting archives, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your general task?

A. May I have the question repeated, I did'n get it.

Q. So you think your special task was to collect archives, but what was your general task? Did you have another function besides that?

A. No, I didn't say it was my special task, but it was a specialized task within this commando.

Q. I want to call your attention to Document Book- III-B, page 34, perhaps your defense counsel can give it to you in the German.

A. Thirty-four. (discussion between counsel)

Q. You will notice in paragraph 2 which begins on page 33 of the English, and goes over there to page 34, discussion of the functions of commandos expected to enter Moscow. It says: No assignment will be made until the fall of Moscow; thence, "neigher important material nor Communist officials can be seized." This is right before the end of paragraph 2. Wasn't it also part of your function in addition to the confiscating of documents to seize Communist officials if you could find them?

A. No.

Q. When you were in Smolensk, did you participate in combing the city for officials, experts, criminals, Jews, etc?

A. No.

Q. I want to call your attention now to Document Book II-B, page 8, at page 6 of the German, Document NO-2837, on page 7 of the English, it states: "In Smolensk some quarters of the town were systematically combed for officials, agents, criminals, Jewish intelligence, etc." Didn't your interpreters assist in this work?

A. There were few cultural quarters of the city where a systematic search for functionaries, partisans, and Jews and that were combed for such people, the result of which 74 people were shot. I never participated in any thing like that.

Q. Didn't your interpreters assist in these search actions throughout the city of Smolensk?

A. May I have the exact words again please?

Q. Didn't your interpreters assist in these search actions throughout the city of Smolensk?

A. In this search action in which several quarters of the city were completely destroyed, as a result of which 74 people were shot, no interpreters of mine took part in such activity, either.

Q. Did they assist in other search actions to find Jewish intelligencia, and Communist officials?

A. They didn't take part in any other either, in which people of that kind were searched for, or found, or shot.

Q. You and your own particular men who were qualified for this type of work did nothing then in Smolensk, while the rest of the troops was we busy, is that correct?

A. We did nothing with the rest of the troops?

Q. While the rest of the troops were so busy hunting Jews and Communists?

A. That troops do you mean?

Q. The SS-troops, or whoever it was. The Einsatzgruppe- which participated in these killings, in this particular case, EinsatzgruppeB troops?

A. In every case I can only repeat, that I didn't take part in any action in which Jews, Intelligencia, Functionaries, agents and looters were searched for, and as a result of which 74 people were liquidated, or had been arrested. That was the answer, of course, wasn't it to your question?

Q. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, you didn't ask whether he participated. You asked whether the interpreters did.

Mr. FERENCZ: Whether the interpreters participated. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q. Did your answer cover your interpreters, too?

A. No, nor did my interpreters take part in such task as described here, in particular, with such results as the shooting of 74 people.

Q. What other unite were in Smolensk at that time to do this sort of work?

A. In Smolensk ?

Q. Yes?

A. First of all, the Wehrmacht might have been there. Secondly, the police might have been there. The field commands. That is, quite a number of units.

Q. Anybody else?

A. Group-staff? Do you mean those?

Q. I am asking you -

A. In any case, I don't know of any action where the Group-staff had to carry out such an action in which 74 people were executed.

Q. Was the group-staff present in Smolensk?

A. From the 5 August on the Group-staff was present in Smolensk, I already stated that.

Q. This particular document lists these killings under Einsatzgruppe-B, part of a report from Einsatzgruppe-B?

A. My document here shows me only a heading, "actions against funtionaries, agents, Jews, sabotuers, and looters," without a date.

Q. The date is on the document, and that is before you, you have just read it, the heading, "Einsatzgruppe-B, location Smolensk." And then it goes on and describes the killing of these 74 persons?

A. What am I to reply to this?

Q. You were trying, to convey the impression that Einsatzgruppe-B or the staff of Einsatzgruppe-B certainly could not have done these things.

Is that still your impression after looking at this document, or do you think after looking at this, this was the activity of Einsatzgruppe-B?

A. I can not say from the documents who might have carried out this action, but I can assert and say one thing for certain, and I want to repeat this, that in this action the vor kommando did not take part in any form, and in this respect didn't participate in any search action, and these results they were not connected with it, and I did not take part in it.

Q. You are an expert on archives and documents. Did you look at this item, Document saying, "Einsatzgruppe-B, location Smolensk," describing killing of 74 People in Smolensk, and you say you can't tell whether it was done by the Einsatsgruppe-B, is that correct?

A. I can not say that because I don't know anything about it.

Q. You stated that you were not part, or the Vorkommando Moscow was not part of Einsatsgruppe-B, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. As an expert on documents, can you tell me why, if you were not part of Einsatsgruppe-B, the reports continually lists the Vorkommando Moscow under the heading of Einsatzgruppe-B, and in the place where they are describing activity of units of Einsatzgruppe-B?

A. I already stated during my direct examination that there are two location reports, simple location reports, which Nebe mentioned in his reports. These two which quoted, namely of 23 July and I believe of 27 July, they are only location reports; the next report which is submitted again in which Vorkommando Moscow is mentioned again is 29 August, and on 29 August I was no longer in Smolensk. Even if the time of the report and the time of the courier deducted from it, one can assume for certain that it was made out after my departure. Therefore, to repeat, and I want to mention this specifically, that the first two location reports were not made following reports from me, but must have certainly been compiled by Nebe, in his own authority and that I, furthermore, in this report of the 29th in my own handwriting--, and at my suggestion, made no reports, therefore, I can only repeat that the first two reports were made up after my departure, that is, at the time when he put himself in charge of the kommando, I can not be responsible for that.

Q. In other words, to summarize it, you say that if the reports show Vorkommando Moscow, or your unit, under description of "Einsatzgruppe-B activities" during your time, the reports are wrong, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And that Vorkommando Moscow, at least during your time, was not part of Einsatzgruppe-B?

A. It was not part of the Einsatzgruppe-B during my time. I have confirmation of that; I have proof of that, and that is my opinion to the very end.

Q. Why did you turn Vorkommando Moscow over to Einsatzgruppe-B?

A. There was no other leader in Moscow, that is, in Smolensk to whom I could have handed it over.

Q. How about Klingelhofer?

A. Klingelhofer, didn't have a special function in my commando; that is, he was not commissioned , nor was he brought along by me for any special task; or thus appointed by Berlin, therefore, there was not any other way, if there is a recall for me from Berlin than to hand over the commando until new instructions came from Berlin, to the highest SS leader.

Q. Who was your deputy in Vorkommando Moscow?

A. I never had a deputy.

Q. Who was the next highest ranking officer?

A. The next highest ranking officer was Sturmbannfuehrer Klingelhofer, but it was a mere coincidense, because he was not chosen for that, nor did I know him previously, and owing to that he did not act as deputy at all for me.

Q. You are saying then when you went back to Berlin, instead of turning your unit over to your next highest ranking officer, the defendant Klingelhofer, you turned it over to a unit which you were not connected previously, Einsatzgruppe-B, is that your answer?

A. No, that is not my reply. My answer is: Until a new commander or chief of this kommando was sent by Berlin, unless Klingelhofer's name had been mentioned especially from Berlin, I had to hand it over to the highest rank at the place.

Q. And you could not just leave it with the highest ranking officer in your unit, but you turned the whole thing over to a completely different unit with which you were not previously connected?

A. Well, when the Vorkommando Moscow was set up, it was attached to me personally. I personally took up the commitment with the Division Reich. It was founded on my activity---

Q. Please answer the question, and then give us the explanation.

A. What did you want me to answer now?

Q. Is it correct that instead of turning it over to the next highest ranking officer, Klingelhofer, you turned it over to a completely independent unit, Einsatzgruppe-B, with which you had not been previously connected? Is that correct?

A. According to the channel of command it seemed to be the only right way for me.

Q. What do you mean by "channel in which the news came"?

A. I did not have my own technician set, so I could not get news to my aid, owing to that the order for transfer from Berlin came through the Einsatzgruppe, through the radio, therefore, if no other specialized order had been given, I must consider it to be right to choose that way.

THE PRESIDENT: Would you like to recess now, Mr. Ferencz?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: There will be recess until 1:45 o'clock.

(The Court recessed unti 1345 hours, 27 October 1947).

(The Hearing reconvened at 1350 hours, 27 October 1947).

THE MARSHAL: Take your seats, please.

CROSS EXAMINATION (Continued) BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q Six, What is your connection with Himmler? on occasions when there was a larger circle present. with him?

A What do you mean, official relations? Of course, as an SS leader, as an SS Reich Leader, he was my highest superior.

Q Did you ever talk to Himmler?

Q Did Himmler know about your work?

A What work do you mean?

A It is possible. No, he had no special knowledge in a way that he might have known where I was aprat from a special appointment, no. a document we discussed or you discussed briefly yesterday. There are two interesting points in this document I would like to look into again. You will notice on Page 29 of the German, Page 27 of the English, that it states that the Staff and the Vorkommando Moscow liquidated 144 persons up to the 20th of August, 1941. On the page before that, page 26, the middle of the page, it says that the Vorkommando Moscow was forced to execute another 46 persons, amongst them 38 intellecutal Jews who had tried to create unrest in the ghetto at Smolensk. Do you tell us that the Vorkommando which you headed had nothing to do with these killings?

Vorkommando Moscow killed 144 persons up to the 20th of August applies only to the staff and not to Vorkommando Moscow, in that correct? gruppe B, say that the Einsatzgruppe B Staff was not occupied and could not have carried out any killings. In view of his answer how do you reconcile that with your statement that these 144 were killed by the Staff? Group Staff and the Advance Kommando Moscow had carried cut 144 executions cannot concern the Vorkommando Moscow as a matter of fact. That is for a variety of reasons. As I stated the Advance Kommando Moscow never carried out any shootings, and as this Vorkommando, this Advance Kommando did not carry out any shootings, there is no other conclusion that they must have been carried out by the staff. 144 persons. You say it could not have been the Vorkommando Moscow inasmuch as you did not have the facilities for killing. Naumann says the staff did not carry out any killings because the staff did not have the facilities for killing. How can you reconcile the two. fuehrer Naumann made his statements. As far as I can see from his statements here that must have arrived in Smolensk in either November or December. Whether conditions changed or he made any alterations I don't know in detail and I cannot it. could not have carried out these killings inasmuch as there were only twenty-three men and they were transistors and interpreters, is that correct?

executions; I said that it has not carried out executions. It did not carry them out. I first made an absolute concrete statement about the Vorkommando Moscow not carrying out any shootings. And then there is a report here which was made after my departure which mentions the staff and the Vorkommando Moscow, and I have tried to find an explanation, how I can concoct and explanation analytically. If I say the Staff carried cut 144 executions and the Vorkommando none at all, then there will he still 144.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, the Witness mentioned the month of November which I don't reconcile with this report which specifically says August. Can you give me an explanation as to what he meant by November?

MR. ERENCA: No, Sir. Perhaps the witness can explain it.

THE WITNESS: I was no witness of it, and I have no personal knowledge of shootings of the Group staff. Whatever I have said and analyzed out of these documents applies only to the documents we have here.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, I understood you to say in making an explanation of this item that a certain group arrived there in November. Did you use the month of November in a previous answer?

THE WITNESS: I was asked by the Prosecutor how HerrNaumann came to his explanation and my answer was that according to what I heard here Naumann must have arrived at the Einsatzgruppe at the beginning of December and I have to find out whether the documents, refer to November orDecember. Personally I can not give an opinion to this because I wasn't there at that time. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q Were your interpreters armed? rifle. That was merely a matter of security in a military fighting combat zone. It was after all a territory which was a combat zone in those days, which can be proved by the dates.

to have executed 144 persons, would it not?

Q Now you say, of course, that they didn't. On Page 26 we have the statement that the Vorkommando Moscow was forced to execute another 46 persons, amongst them 38 intellectual Jews. My question is if the Vorkommando Moscow was only there to collect archives, as you have been telling us, how do you explain the fact that they suddenly started killing the Jews?

A I don't know whether this report is correct and true. I accept it as a fact from the reports we have here. I furthermore testified that at my time there were no shooting of any kind. To this report in particular furthermore I said that the Advance commando Moscow did not carry out any shootings of Jews. If this report was made at any period after my departure, which, of course, I do not know, then it could be possible that the changeover brought it about, the changeover, I mean, which Nebe carried out After my departure, but again I cannot say anything as to this because at the time of my presence there there were no changes. Forkommando may have started to kill Jews as shown in this report, but during your time they were just archive collectors, is that correct? Whether they were carried out afterwards, after I had left, I do not know. Vorkommando Moscow carried out considerable numbers of executions. Do you have the same explanation about those, that the character of the Vorkommando changed after you left and then they started executing the Jews, but during your time they were just archive collectors?

A Here again I can only give the spine answer. At my time there were no executions. With the date of my departure, this becomes evident from the collection I have here, a uniform kommando was established, a common Kommando. For what reasons and why it was established I do not know.

twenty-three men, were they all scholars and students as you have tried to picture them and yourself?

A What do you mean? certain knowledge and training. You have explained at great length that you are a professor with many degrees, a learned man, and that is why you were put in command. Was it equally true about the other members of your unit, Were they also scholars and learned gentlemen? principles. Some had an intimate knowledge of Moscow, some were interpreters and had knowledge of achieves. killing the Jews the moment you left? attitude as to this. were you not? keen on shooting people or that they had the wish to do so. left, the Vorkommando Moscow started shooting at least hundreds of people?

A You mean when I left? been then after you left. You can see the documents now. If you like I will place them before you again, but you have seen them, saying the Vorkommando Moscow executed thousands of people, or at least hundreds. Didn't that surprise you in view of your knowledge of the nature of the assignment and the caliber persons you had working with you?

put in charge of the kommando he changed the Vorkommando Moscow for his own purpose - perhaps not or perhaps partly with perhaps. I mean that I am not certain whether the whole number of various u its referred to the Vorkommando Moscow also. did you refuse? my kommando from an archive kommando to an Einsatzkommando from this moment I am in charge of an Einsatzkommando, and as such I am subordinate to the Einsatz orders fro various reasons, for instance, in the assignment of task in the operational theater, whereas I had no operational theater before when it was an archive kommando.

Q Why didn't you want to be in charge of an Einsatzkommando? charge of an archive kommando. This archive kommando was within my field of interests. I cannot imagine if Nebe suddenly would have had the idea of putting me in charge of an Einsatzkommando, that I would have complied or would here like to comply with such a wish. When I was supposed to be entrusted with it I said there was no reason why I should take it over, and I made use of the only means of my disposal, I sent a teletype message to Berlin and asked for my relief. Einsatzkommandos which made you object to becoming an Einsatzkommando leader? authorized to assign me to such a task. That alone was quite sufficient for me. with the Einsatzkommandos but you didn't like Nebe to have higher authority than you?

A My decision at that time was of the following nature. I did not want to change my kommando and for that reason I asked my release.

The other reason was an entirely different one. Einsatzkommandos? I did not see them with my eyes. Therefore, from my own knowledge here I can give no answer to that question, or no satisfactory answer. requesting your release? correct?

Q You say: therefore, that it was possible, at least for you, to get released from duty on the Lastern front by simply writing a letter or sending a cable, and in five days you get back the reply saying you were released, is that correct? to Streckenbach, and in this letter I stated that the tasks with which I had been entrusted would take months as the military situation was a new one, and that under these conditions my presence was no longer justified and no longer necessary, and therefore this order or this assignment by Nebe to take over such a task as I had a special assignment with which I had arrived from Berlin, and that under no circumstances I would be Nebe's subordinate. And to this I got that answer. ivities taking part in Smolensk and you didn't want to be a part of them?

Q Why didn't you ask also for the release or withdrawal of year twenty-three men who also had a special assignment, you say?

subordination. It is quite possible that the others would wait for a few mouths until the Moscow assignment was topical again. Personally I did not have this intention. For this reason I asked for my release. The aim was to conquer Moscow, but as I said, according to the information we received, this might have taken months. to a strange organization and reported back to Berlin. What happened when you got to Berlin?

Q Just one question. What happened when you got to Berlin?

A I said before that I left the kommando to its tasks. I said in Berlin that would be necessary to send a new commander. gather, what did he say? November, and in between there was a period of two months, and as I have already explained, and I tried to make it as explicit as possible, he reproached me very severely and he drew my attention to the fact that for a lone time I had tried to leave the SD for the Waffen SS and as he accused me with desertion then I was from the SD since I was now trying to get to the Waffen SS. He also said that he was not pleased with my attitude during the last few years and he reproached me and said I had been unfaithful and disobedient. activity. Did he mention anything specifically about your activity in the Einsatzgruppe? Was he pleased about that, or was he displeased about that too?

A What should he have been pleased with? I don't understand the concrete question. disobedient and disloyal. I am not quite just sure why he called you those thing? Was it because of your activities with the Einsatzgruppen? time previously and especially, of course, because of having applied for being released. On the other side, of course, he could not expect me to have myself as a chief of an office subordinated to another chief.

Q Isn't it a fact that contrary to what you have just told me, you were highly regarded and that your activity with the Einsatzgruppe had been exceptionally well done?

difficulties, which lasted two months and that it lasted until the end of November, until the difficulties were put aside and then these dealings with Streckenbach come to comprise. I also stated that in the beginning of December I got my promotion re-effective with the 9th of November. If you mean that, I cannot say anything further. These are the facts and I have already stated this-

Q Isn't it true -period of three to three and a half months in between.

Q Isn't it true that you were promoted on the 9th of November because of your exceptional service with the Einsatzgruppe? about special merits. I am quite certain of that.

THE PRESIDENT: The answer isn't specific, Mr. Ferencz.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, his last sentence that he has said that in his recommendation it doesn't say anything about his exceptional service, but that appears to be an absolute falsehood and I mean to show him him letter of promotion.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Proceed.

THE WITNESS: You said, Mr. Prosecutor, because of exceptional service in the Einsatzgruppe. That is what I denied.

Q (By Mr. Ferencz) Did you get promoted for exceptional service in anything? Did you get promoted for your exceptional service in anything? My question is put just now; you are telling us now that for years you were in disfavor with Heydrich. You never did anything right, for the SS, trying to paint a picture as though you were very unpopular; now I am asking you: Did you get promoted because of exceptional service in anything? You say that you did not get promoted because of exceptional service in anything?

You say that you did not get promoted because of exceptional service in the Einsatz; was it because of exceptional service some place else that you got promoted a few weeks after you left the Einsatzgruppe?

A That is not known to me. I only know that there were no special merits concerned with my promotion, nor was it in the least in the Einsatzgruppe.

Q Did you receive your notice of promotion?

Q Whom did it come from?

Q Who signed it?

A I cannot remember the details. As a rule, or, to a certain extent, I do not know up to Oberfuehrer Handattenfuehrer - they were signed by Heydrich promotions to higher ranks were signed by Himmler. give you a copy so that you can look at it. "To SS STandartenfuehrer Dr. Six, Franz Alfreds, SS No." so and so. "SD Main Office."

"I hereby promote you, effective 9 November 1941, to SS Oberfuehrer for outstanding service in Einsatz." Signed "H. Himmler." Would you take a look at this, please? Now tell me is that you, Dr. Franz Alfred Six? Is that you? by Himmler promoting you for your outstanding service in the Einsatz? any promotion letter of this kind containing this sentence. for your outstanding service in the Einsatz?

Himmler for outstanding service in the Einsatz, but you have no explanation, particularly in view of what you have told the court now for a whole morning?

A I repeat the promotion with this particular text. I have not received. I I had received it, and I inspected it. I would have said so, here. Even if such a promotion was made, I cannot explain why it says special merits and does not say what it means. The Einsatz was mentioned, but it doesn't state the function and, aside from this, there is no special abnormal explanation of what I have just said. I cannot state -

THE PRESIDENT: Did you receive that document?

THE WITNESS: This document I never received. I cannot have received it.

THE PRESIDENT: You knew that you were promoted, didn't you?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: And how were you notified of the promotion?

THE WITNESS: I received a memorandum from Streckenbach and a special order.

THE PRESIDENT: And you say that you didn't receive this letter from Himmler?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE PRESIDENT: what is your explanation, why you didn't receive an important document of that character?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I am just saying that I did not receive this special order. Even if I had received it-

THE PRESIDENT: So then there is a possibility that yon did receive it?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE PRESIDENT: You volunteered that even if you had received it, then what? If you had received it, now, what were you going to say?

THE WITNESS: If I had received it, I would say that I have not received it in its form. I do not see any reason why, if such a document is availably and if I actually did receive it, I see no reason why, I should say I didn't.

THE PRESIDENT: Himmler's letters usually got to their destination, did they not?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: There is no reason why this should not have reached you in a normal course of affairs?

THE WITNESS: In any case, I didn't receive it. I have already said that I got my promotion at the beginning of December. It is possible that a explanation is contained in the fact that I got my promotion late, or that for some reason or other it was not received by me. I don't want to deny that I have been promoted, and furthermore I want to say that if I had received this order, I would have said so. I see no reason to deny the receipt of a letter, if I actually received it.

THE PRESIDENT: And you offer no explanation as to why a letter of this importance would not have reached you?

THE WITNESS: From the fact that this was a late promotion, it would be possible that this letter did not reach me.

THE PRESIDENT: I did Not catch that.

THE WITNESS: Apart from the fact that only in the beginning of December I was promoted to Oberfuehrer, that is, not immediately, at the 9th of November, apart from this fact. I have no further explanation. That is what I meant, and I mean. That is to say, that it is possible through this late promotion, I never received this order. When I got my promotion I got a memorandum and I get an order and from these two facts, I assumed that I had been promoted.

THE PRESIDENT: But you offer no explanation as to why a letter of this importance would not have reached you in a normal chouse of affairs?

THE WITNESS: I have no technical explanation for it.

MR. FERENCA: Your Honor, on the letter it says, "for outstanding service in the Einsatz."

Q (By Mr. Ferencz) How do you interpret that?

A I have no interpretation for it. Apart from the fact that, as I have said before, all promotions on the 9th of November probably contained the same statements. The same letters were received. archives, and had no connection with the Einsatzgruppen, how do you explain the word "Einsatz" in there. Did the word Einsatz refer to your activity in the Security Police?

A There are various explanations which could be used. The one is that the promotion was not specified sufficiently by the office of Himmler. A second explanation is that the office, that is the Streckenbach office chose this particular explanation to got me promoted.

Q Doesn't that mean the Security Police Einsatz in the Best?

A Can you repeat the question, please?

Q I say, doesn't that term "Einsatz" refer to your activity with the Security Police Einsatz in the Last? sure, by Himmler. It was suggested and proposed by Streckenbach or Heydrich; I am not certain what reasons there were to use this term. moted for outstanding service, after what you have told us about Heydrich's opinion of you?

A I don't know. I never looked at the proposal that Heydrich or Streckenbach made to Himmler. I don't know whether it was just a routine matter to promote me at the 9th of November and put promotion orders into this form.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, I havehere in my notes that you said that "Heydrich reproached me severely, because I had tried to leave the SD, that he would turn around and recommend you for promotion for the wonderful work you did in the SD?

THE WITNESS: Am I suppose to give an explanation, Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, there seems to be an inconsistency in your declaration, first, you said that Heydrich reproached you severely, and in answer to a question put by Mr. Ferencz, you said that "possibly Heydrich recommended me for promotion." That seems an inconsistency to the Tribunal. If it doesn't to you, then we will pass on to something else.

Q (By Mr. Ferencz) Did you receive notice of your promotion to Brigadier General in the SS? service with the Einsatzgruppe?

A You mean promotion to Brigadefuehrer? No, that promotion took place in 1945.

Q But in the correspondence concerning your promotion, didn't it say that Franz Alfred Six, Doctor, or Professor, was exceptionally good with the Einsatgruppe in the last and therefore should have been promoted?

A You mean my promotion to brigadefuehrer or Oberfuehrer?

Q I mean in your promotion to Brigadefuehrer; when they told about all your great activities with the SS didn't they also say that you had performed exceptional service with the Security Police and with the Einsatzgruppe in the East?

A. There is a period of four years in between 1941 and 1945. In 1945 I got my promotion on the 30th of January. It is quite unimaginable that in 1945, again special merits in the past should be mentioned in my promotion.

Q To you it is unimaginable. Let me refresh your imagination and I will read to you, and I will give you the copy to read in a moment.

Q "Reich Main Secruity Office, Berlin, 2 October, 1944, Subject: SS Oberfuehrer Dr. Alfred Six,"is that you?

A. Yes, that is I, That is 1944.

Q "1. Memorandum. The Reich Main Security Office requests the promotion of SS Oberfuehrer Dr. Six to Brigadefuehrer effective 31 January 1945". Then follows a long description of your Party membership, your SS membership, the badges and decorations you have on and it also says, "SIPO Einsatz." "SIPO" means "Security Police", does it not? That refer to the Einsatzgruppe on the Eastern front, does it not? thing which is not true, it says further on that "in his professional career on 9 November 1941, S was promoted by the RFSS" which means the Reichsfuehrer SS Himmler" to the SS Oberfuehrer for outstanding service in the Security Police, Einsatz in the East" and so on. I am going to give you this letter so that you can take a look at it. Will you explain, please, to the Tribunal, why it is that this SS correspondence refers to your activities with the Security Police, Einsatz from 22 June to 28 August, 1941, specifically saying East Einsatz and again refers to your promotion by Himmler, because of your outstanding service in the Security Police, Einsatz in the East, when you just went to collect archives and you didn't even do that well, you tell us.

A. The proposal was made by Erlinger, by Erlinger as deputy. That is, that is another man. This is not Streckenbach. Therefore, evidently in his proposal list, he must have referred to this list of the 9th of November, because the wording is exactly the same as the promotion list of November, and when I consider -

Q. Just a moment: The wording is not the same. Let me refresh your memory on that too. The letter from Himmler said "For Outstanding service in Einsatz" and the letter you have before you says "For outstanding service in Security Police Einsatz in the East." It is a little more specific. You haven't answered my question: In view of the story you have been telling us, that you were just collecting archives, how do you explain all this referring to your outstanding service with the Police and with the Einsatz in the East?

A. It says here, I repeat; "for special merits in the Security Police East" he was promoted. I see no large difference between the word Einsatz and Einsatz in the Security Police and the fact that I was a member of the Security Service and that for this Security Service I was in charge of Vorkommando Moscow is without doubt because Office VII was a part of the Security Police and the SD and, therefore, there is no special emphasis or difference as compared against the term used in 1941. It is only a special term which refers to my activity at that time.

Q. Tell me this. You notice it says, "SIPO Einsatz, 22 June 1941 to 28 August 1941, East Einsatz." Now you told us that on the 22nd of June you were ordered to establish the Vorkommando Moscow.

You told us that on the 20th of August, eight days sooner than your records show, you left the Vorkommando Moscow and that Vorkommando Moscow was not part of an Einsatzgruppe, even though the reports show it to be part of an Einsatzgruppe. Now here the letter again indicates that you were active with the Einsatzgruppe.

A. It does not say so, Mr. Prosecution.

Q. It says, "SIPO Einsatz," for those dates you gave plus eight more days.

A. Yes.

Q. East Einsatz.

A. Yes.

Q. Does that mean archive collecting to you?

A. In any case the fact exists that Office VII established the Vorkommando Moscow and that they acted also for their purposes in the East. This is not in contrast because otherwise it should read here "within Einsatzgruppe B." The fact that Vorkommando Moscow was active for the Reich Security Main Office, I never doubted for one moment. I merely said that it was not a part of Einsatzgruppe B.

Q. How do you reconcile your story that you were reprimanded by your superior officers; that you never were a part of an Einsatzgruppe, certainly not Einsatzgruppe B, with the fact that in your personal files you have a letter from Himmler promoting you for your outstanding service in the Einsatz and that in your letter recommending you for promotion to Brigadefuehrer in the SS gives the dates of your activity with the Einsatz and when it says more specifically that you were promoted for outstanding service in the Security Police Einsatz in the East , to me that doesn't resemble archive collecting either. That is, perhaps you can explain it, the same as you have explained everything else?

years after my appointment, that is, in 1941. Furthermore, it is a fact that another man proposed this and it is not the same man who made the proposal in 1941.

Q. So two people made the same mistake, Himmler and Erlinger, is that what you are saying?

A. No, the second is based upon the first, so to speak. The second used the same basis.

Q. And Himmler made the first mistake and Erlinger copied Himmler, although he didn't have the dates of the Einsatzgruppe, he out them down somehow or other, in order to get you a promotion, he told you the dates, which you conveniently forgot, since that was the week they were doing all the killing.

A. Himmler was sent the suggestions. The suggestions were made by the personnel offices. The basic files used are the same, and it is known that the proposals always painted a very beautiful picture and they emphasized all the details to get the promotion through.

Q. Is that the best explanation you have for that?

A. Apart from the fact that the proposal is based on the same basis as the one of the 9th of November, and that there were two different people who made these proposals on the same basis, and that it is also true that Himmler signed them, I have no further explanation. But I must say again that from this it does not become evident that Vorkommando Moscow was a part of Einsatzgruppe B.

got the dates 22 June 1941 to 28 August 1941, for your activity in the Security Police Einsatz in the East? You have told us that you left on the 20th of August, and that our documents showing killings after the 20th of August, and even immediately after, happened as soon as you left. And here you have an official letter saying, that you were with the Security Police Einsatz. until the 28th of August. Where did Erlinger get that information? that on the 20th of August I actually left, and not on the 28th, and I can only say tint after all the witnesses, the living witnesses, who saw when I departed, are more credible than the stated figure in the document books, the probative value of which I do not know, I shall prove that I left on the 20th of August. I think I can find manifold proof of this. My question is:

Q Do you know how Erlinger got that date, 28th of August 1941?

A I do not know ether he received the date, the 28th. It might have been the 20th. It can be a mistake in typing. It may be any mistake. I can only state, and I shall prove, that I left on the 20th, and the men who can bear me out are manifold. I do not know where Herr Erlinger is. Otherwise, he would have to bear me out on that. least as far as that 28th goes?

Q I also notice in this latter that it says, "SS Oberfuehrer Dr. Six is an active and proven National Socialist." Do you notice that?

Q That is true, isn't it?

Q Now let us go back a little bit. When did you first learn of the order to annihilate the Jews?

A You mean the year 1941?

Q That's right.

Q Where?

Q From whom? Einsatzkommnado 9 in Minsk.

Q Tell us something about it, That was the conversation like? He had a certain scientific knowledge and training; he spoke Russian -training concerning the killing of Jews, too. these particular questions were carried out, and he asked mo whether he would be employed in this here, too. out executive measures. executive measures, as yon call thorn -- I call them the murder of defenseless Jews -- is that what you wean by executive measures? measures.

Q What do you mean by executive measures.... writing letters to Himmler, or reading archives. What does executive measures mean? interrogations, etc. including shootings.

Q Interrogations and imprisonment, etc. By etcetera you mean taking people out and shooting them down, isn't that correct?

A He didn't ask me that. He gave me that one answer, and that had nothing to do with it.

Q Now, Professor Dr. Six, you are telling us about executive measures, and you say that means imprisonment, interrogations, etcetera. Isn't it a fact, known to you now and known to you then, that executive measures meant taking the Jews out,all of them, and killing them? Now answer that question.

A I wasn't present. used.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, he already answered that basic question, and now he is getting off on a side track. You asked him when did he first learn of the order to annihilate Jews. He said between July 7th and July 10th. Now, that is the answer to the question. He learned of the order to annihilate Jews at that time. Now proceed from that point. BY MR. FERENCZ: the Jews? executions of Jews.

QA Is that all you said to him? He says -- "Will you carry out executions of Jews?" -- and the first time you hear this you said, "My Commando does not carry out executions of Jews." Is that all?

A I said, we are not concerned in it. It is not our task, nor our assignment.

Q If that was the first time you heard of it, weren't you surprised, didn't you ask him "What do you mean -- executions of Jews?" or was it customary to have someone come to you and tell you, "I am carrying out executions of defenseless peoples" -- and you didn't ask him anything about it? Please try to be a little more credible.

and he told me that he had found it out at his garrison -- I don't know what name he mentioned -- he had been told then that it was an assignment; and I learned it then, and I told him that this was not our task.

Q You didn't tell him, "That sounds to me like a shame and a scandal" -- did you?

A I told him we had nothing to do with it; it is not our assignment. or shame, or displeasure, at this prospect of German soldiers or troops murdering defenseless people? measures. elimination of Jewry you never had any knowledge. Tell me, between yesterday and today, when did you suddenly acquire this knowledge?

A What general measures; what special measures?

Q Let me read you from the transcript. You were being questioned about your activities of Vorkommando Moscow, and the question was, "Well, then, before your march with the Advance Commando Moscow, did you receive any knowledge about the execution order? Answer: Yes. Question: When? Answer: when the leaders of other Commandos arrived, these questions --"

Q "......these questions naturally were mentioned and discussed. But I myself -- and I have to make a point in stating this -- had no knowledge about the general elimination of Jewry. Especially about the extermination of Women and children. As I said, I had no knowledge, and never received any knowledge."

When did you change your mind, between yesterday and today? about information. I emphasized I received information from the leaders of the Commandos, but I received no instructions. I made a difference between instruction and information. "instruction" and "knowledge"?

Q Does than transcript say "knowledge"?

A Then it would have to be examined. I said information and instruction.

Q Information and instruction, is what you said?

A Dr. I said I received information, and I have not received instruction.

Q Let me read it to you again: "As I said, I had no knowledge and never received any knowledge." Does that mean "instructions" to you?

Q Now it should. I agree. You didn't say it yesterday, though. Now, to whom did you protest about this general order about the elimination of the Jews? certain personality. The only possibility to lodge a protest would have been in Berlin; therefore, I never discussed this question in the given situation, and I could never actually protest.

Q Isn't it a fact that you were in favor of the elimination of Jewry, and therefore you didn't protest?

Q It isn't a fact that you were in favor of the elimination of Jewry? You just said no. Now, are you changing your answer to yes? shootings of the Jews.

Q When did you agree to the elimination of the Jews?

A I don't know what you mean.

Q You didn't agree in June or July. Isn't it a fact that you did agree at some time to the general elimination of the Jews? is that correct?

A What do you mean - agree to it? That I just said, "I agree to the shooting of the Jews." Is that what you mean?

Q I mean this. You heard of the order, or you gained knowledge, of the program to exterminate the Jews. You said you didn't protest to anybody because there was nobody there to protest to; whereas, it is actually a fact, and you know it, that you didn't protest because you were in favor of the program. Now, isn't that true? East because there were no superiors to whom I could protest.

Q Didn't you in fact tell the others that it was & good thing to eliminate the Jews, that it was necessary - as a good National Socialist didn't you further Hitler's program?

Q You did not?

Q What kind of a National Socialist were you? You read the report that you were a good National Socialist. You admit that you knew Hitler's program concerning the Jews.

Are you now trying to tell us that you were not in favor of that program? I could say - I tried to express it. I have no possibility now, or at least words do not suffice, for the expression of what I have to say. a loss of words. Isn't it a fact that as a good National Socialist you favored the program to exterminate the Jews? That you spoke in favor of it... if you want me to be more specific. Yes or no?

Q Then let me show you that you are a liar. I have here a confidential report made at the Works Session of the Consultants on Jewish questions on German missions in Europe. 3 and 4 April 1944. Krummhuekel.Do you remember that?

Q Were you there?

Q Did you make a speech? it. going to put to me.

Q You have seen the document, haven't you?

A No, I never saw it. And I always doubted the authenticity of it.

Q Well, let me read it to you. Perhaps you will remember. This was a session of members of the Foreign Office, was it not, to discuss the Jewish question. Is that correct?

A No. It was not. It was a session of the Foreign Office in which an information office was to be erected to deal with the question of a counter intelligence on so-called Jewish propaganda.

Q Did you make a speech on the Jewish question at that time? contained in the minutes....I just spoke about the Jewish organizations as such.

Q But you did say something about the Jewish question. You remember that? speech can be proved outside the context of the speech, and I can therefore, without a confidential agent, menage to remember what I said at that time. Therefore, it is of main importance for me, and it is only relevant what I know and what I can produce here as evidence.

Q At that meeting didn't they discuss the measures which were being taken to murder all the Jews? I was only for two hours at this meeting, and I left immediately afterwards. Therefore I could not have knowledge on any questions that were dealt with there from own experience or later informations. but while you were there, nothing happened, is that correct? bear me out, and they will say that after two hours, after I had delivered my short speech which lasted 30 minutes, I left.

Q Forty people weren't discussing the same subject, were they? They were 40 of a kind, were they?

Q Let me read you something. These are the minutes of the meeting, end it says here, in parenthesis: "As to the details of the state of the executive measures" -- and we just discussed executive measures -"in the various countries reported by the Consultant, are to be kept secret.

It has been decided not to enter them in the protocol." Now, let me read the minutes of what you said.... I will only read parts of it, though they are all consistent.

A It is a excerpt, Mr. Prosecutor. It is not the complete text.

Q No?

A The Minutes are not signed. They are not signed with a name.

Q For a man who hasn't seen this report you certainly know a lot about it.

A I am only asking. You said it was a confidential report. that it is Unsigned, that it is just an abstract; and a minute ago you said you never saw it. Now let me read what it says for the benefit of the Court - the Court doesn't know it. by now I know what it says in this report, what it is supposed to say and what it does not say.

Q Your knowledge of archives is amazing, Professor. It says here, under Professor Six: "Elimination of Eastern Jewry to deprive Jewry of biological resource. The Jewish question must be solved not only for German but also internationally". Jewish question you mean going for all documents in the archives and go study them somewhere. what did you mean by that? uttered, and I have no confidence in confidential reports which bear no signature, and I have no confidence in a witness who cannot be cross examined in this Court. Furthermore, I have heard about the participants and I have asked for affidavits to be made out, because this statement is so extensive and of such importance that it appeared to me even during the first days of my interrogation - and I thought that it must be corrected as from then.

Q What kind of a National Socialist were you if you didn't believe in those ideals? You mean that you repudiated Hitler? Is that what you are trying to tell us now? You were a good National Socialist but you did not believe in what Hitler proclaimed end carried out throughout the world? Is that what you are trying to tell us?

Q Yes or no. Then you can explain it.

A May I have this question repeated. It is very complicated.

Q It is not very complicated. You said you didn't make those statements, statements furthering the annihilation of the Jews. Your reports have shown that you were a good national Socialist. I am asking you if you repudiated the Hitler doctrine for the annihilation of the Jews.

A Evidently I said that, yes. I give an affirmative -

Q You say now that you repudiate Hitler's doctrine?

MR. FERENCZ: I have no further questions, your Honor.

DR. ULMER: Why I ask that this last document, so-called Krummhuebler Speech, be shown to me -- or has it been submitted? I never saw it.

MR. FERENCZ: I will introduce the document in evidence, Your Honor, and at that time the defense counsel will have access to it.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

(A recess was taken.)

MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. MAYER: Counsel for Defendant Klingelhoefer: tomorrow, Tuesday, and the day after, Wednesday, in order to prepare his examination, I ask that he be excused from the sessions?

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Klingehoefer will be excused from attendance tomorrow and Wednesday in accordance with the request by his counsel.

DR. MAYER: Thank you, Your Honor.

DR. ERICH M. MAYER: Counsel for Defendant Braune: Braune.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Braune will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow in accordance with the request of his defense counsel.

DR. KOESSL FOR DR. GAWLIK: For the Defendant Seibert: from attendance in order to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Seibert is excused from attendance in Court tomorrow Tuesday and Wednesday.

DR. ULMER: For the Defendant Dr. Six:

May I address a few brief questions on re-direct examination?

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed:

DEFENDANT, DR. SIX BY DR. ULMER: research? against Jewdom for Streicher or for whom was it prepared? ly the Jewish philosophy and Jewish Arab philosophy and the German philo sophy, concerning mysticism and other philosophies that was the program which I was to develop in this research but it never really come to that.

Q What scientific publications did Ovvice VII make during that time?

A Five or six books were published. I will give a few, for example, "Die Illuminaten", that is Free Masonary, an organization between 1790 and 1820, and another one was called the "Golden Rosen Kreuzer", that is a mystic organization in the 18th century; then the influence of the Great Prussian Landes Logen, and the participation of the dynasty in Germany, altogether there were five or six books.

Q About Jewry no publications were made?

Q Now another problem. How strong was an EinsatzKommando with executive tasks compared with the personal of your Archive Commando which amounted to 23 men? whole commando in front of me and, therefore, I can only say, what I heard, that the so called Sonder Commando had 80 to 100 men and an Einsatz Commando about 200 men, but I did see that with my own eyes.

Q And with the Vorkommando Moscow you were Standartenfuehrer?

Q At that time what was your rank as a soldier in the army? Waffen SS. I had been out on leave and had been requested for this task.

Q What was your military rank in the Waffen SS at the time? relieved only later. as an organization? or police troop?

self a colonel or could a brigadefuehrer call himself a major general, or did this extra military or honorary title have to be given out expressly? to be set up because at the same time it was a position in the civil service and that was unnecessary for me because I already was a civil servant. Therefore, I did not need it. officer in the Waffen SS, ever given to you? or Major General?

Q And now a third suggestion: In the approaches of the Prosecution about the recommendation for/promotion, the word "Einsatz" is mentioned. How was the word "Einsatz" used in the last war? Was it used as a collective definition for military service? front, then he was "un Einsatz", he was in the committment, that is, in the "Einsatz". 1941 as a special privilege or were you due for promotion or did you feel that it was high time you were promoted?

A I had not been promoted for three and a half years. And as Gruppenleiters, that means people of a lower rank and workers in the RSHA had become Oberfuehrers already, and I as a Standartenfuehrer, of course, could expect that the office chief had to have a rank no lower than the person subordinate to him, the Gruppenleiter. some committment ("Einsatz") had to be concerned or confirmed it, what I am trying to say is that if the promotion and the suggestion for pro Coutt II-A, Case IX motion had not referred to some kind of committment, would a promotion have been possible at all during the war?

A War service itself was condition for such promotion. Through the war, for example, I had been a soldier for more than a year with the Waffen SS, fighting at the front as an artillery officer.

DR. ULMER: Your Honor, those were my questions on redirect examination. It is all of the questions I have to the defendant as a witness. I want to explain some things. that owing to the difficulties in obtaining documents and the delays owing to the translation of documents, at the moment it is impossible for me to submit my document books to you now. I, therefore, Ask you to permit me that the documents may be submitted later, but fairly soon.

THE PRESIDENT: Your request is granted.

DR. HEIM: For the Defendant Blobel: witness, would you permit me to state here expressly that I do not consider the witness to be an expert on international law and an expert on the moral laws end laws of humanity without having the intention to under estimate the ability or moral attitude of the witness. Since, however the Tribunal end else the Prosecution have put some hypothetical Questions to the witness concerning this matter and for the reason of his replies to this question from which possibly some conclusions for the judgment on and the actions of the other defendants could be made, particularly concerning my client Blobel, I want to address a few questions to the witness in order to clarify so far as I consider them to be necessary for the defense of the Defendant Blobel. BY DR. HEIM:

Q Dr. Six, you said this morning during the cross-examination by the Prosecution, "If I had been given orders to shoot women end children, then owing to my inner attitude I can say I would prefer to die." Dr. Six, I want to ask you about this: Do you believe that the moral laws and the laws of humanity absolutely require to prefer suicide particularly then during the war and particularly in a committment then to carry out an order, that is an order to shoot women and children?

MR. HOCHWALD: If your Honors, please, I would like to taise an objection to the question of Dr. Heim. He has just said he does not consider the witness to be an expert for moral law and Laws of humanity but the question he is putting to him is a question to an expert. Do you think it is necessary, I do think that there is a strong contradiction between the explanation of Dr. Heim and the question he puts to the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, you will either have to take this witness as someone exceptionally qualified to answer such a hypothetical question and which he will be bound by for himself or you will have to exclude the possibility of any expertness on the part of the witness, and then take him as he is and answer for himself.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, the Tribunal and also the Prosecution have addressed questions about this to the witness concerning the basic ideas of the laws of humanity and the moral laws. I must say that the witness throughout several hours stated his opinion on this. I believe this justifies me in addressing questions concerning this without being able to consider the witness to be an expert on the principles of the laws of humanity.

DR. HOCHWASL: If Your Honors please, if the Tribunal and the Prosecution asked the witness a hypothetical question and the Tribunal and the Prosecution wanted to know the position of the witness for himself, Dr. Heim, of course, has the liberty to ask his client what he was thinking at the time but if he asks Dr. Six about hypothetical questions on humanity and on morals then he obviously takes him for an expert on this question, and the question on the part of the Tribunal and the Prosecution put to Dr. Six are very different from what Dr. Heim is doing. The Tribunal and the Prosecution wanted to know the position of the witness himself and Dr. Heim wants a statement of what his client would have eventually been thinking which is a completely different situation.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, on the part of the Prosecution the witness is supposed to be an expert. I think owing to this fact I have the right to address other questions concerning this to the witness. In my previous statement I merely stated my personal opinion as defense counsel for the Defendant Blobel.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, this witness has presented himself in a multiple personality at various times. He has testified using a defendant's roll, he has been a professor, he has been a soldier, he has been a journalist, he has been a Dean, he has been an archive collector, and now, you want to qualify him as an expert, that makes him six different people, now his name happens to be "Six" but still he is only one person, and whatever question you will put to him he will answer as Franz Alfred Six, so we will permit the question, but let's remember at all times that he is answering the question and not some abstract personality. BY DR. HEIM:

Q. Herr Dr. Six, would you personally as yourself, not as any abstract personality, answer my following question: Do you believe that the laws, the moral laws and the law of humanity absolutely requires to prefer to commit suicide than to carry out a military order during a war, particularly where there is a commitment concerned , an order to shoot women and children.

A. I am trying to formulate my reply as clearly as you have asked the question, Dr. Heim. From a legal point of view this is a question of personal discretions, and from a moral point of view, if I can separate this at all, and I think this is difficult,it is a question about the decision of ones own personal will, is the first item. Everybody has to decide for himself. If a man chooses for himself to carry out any such kind of an order, then this is his own personal decision. If he rejects it is an order which should not be given to him then that's a different decision. In the case I think I have to say that the order in itself puts everyman before the question and everybody had to give the answer himself. This is not a question which appeared only today but it is a question that is going throughout the history of modern moral law, and this tension cannot be done away with in the future either. It can only be answered in each individual case.

Q. Witness, is it at all possible to explain today whether you or, for instance, the Defendant Blobel, would have had a possibility not to carry out an order ?

A. There is the danger with all hypothetical questions. For that reason it was a great experience for me to know that in the English Parliament hypothetical questions are prohibited. But it is difficult in the year of 1947 to but oneself back to the year of 1941 with all the circumstances involving it, with the psychological tension, and then to decide with the utmost correction and to say what would have been done at the time. Have I replied to this question sufficiently?

Q. Dr. Six, what would have happened if you had been given an order to shoot women and children , and in order to avoid carrying out this order you would have committed suicide? What would have happened to these women and children then? What would it have saved -- their lives?

A. The order would have been transferred to somebody else.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, that question is much too hypothetical to be answered. He is asking if - -

THE TRIBUNAL: What he is asking is for now he takes another roll. Here comes as a necromancer one who can speak after death. Dr. Heim has asked Herr Six to tell us what happens after he died, what would happen after he died. We were willing to allow this witness to answer in some very unusualmental and spiritual qualities, but that he can talk to us as a spiritualist is a little bit beyond that we can permit here. BY DR. HEIM:

Q. Witness, I will address another question to you. Do you believe that it contradicts the principles of humanity and the moral laws, to execute women and children if these women and children had been condemned by a court martial because of sabotage , espionage and so forth?

A. If the actual situation can be established, if the individual guilt can be proved, if they had means to define this legally, then I think all that is necessary has been complied with, as and which judgment.

Q. Dr. Six, you were not the leader of a commando , but your task was, as we found during your examination, to secure archive material in museums. As a leader of this Vorkommando Moscow, can you form a judgment on the moral attitude and activity of a Fuehrer of the SK IV -A for example, can you imagine it?

MR. HOCHWALD: Your Honors, please, I object to that line of questioning on the part of Dr. Heim. He first stated that he does not consider the Witness an expert; then he ask the witness a question which obviously can only be but to an expert, and then he himself questions the possibility of the witness to answer such questions. So I really fail to see what line of questioning in this case is. So far as I understand it, the witness has said nothing about the activity of the Defendant Blobel in the East. He has made no judgment of that, what B lobel should have done, didn't do, or did do, so I absolutely fail to see the relevancy of this.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, on Friday the witness, in answer to a very specific question put by you, replied as follows: "It is, of course, evident that whoever received an order had to carry out the order." Factor No, 1. Factor No. 2 is that this morning he said that if he received that order he would refuse to carry it out. Now, he either has established one line of conduct for your client and one line for himself or those two answers are inconsistent.

Now, we are thoroughly willing, Dr. Heim, to allow you to question him on that apparent inconsistency, but I think we should limit ourselves, insofar as it is possible, to a determination of that apparent inconsistency, and you may put any question that you think is in order to clarify that point.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor.

Q : (By Dr. Heim) Witness, I go back to your answer of this morning where you explained that you would have preferred to die rather than carry out an order to the effect that women and children were to be shot. With this explanation did you only want to refer to yourself personally or did you also want to try to express that in your opinion the leaders of the executive kommandos, the Defendant, Blobel, for example should have acted in the same manner?

A: I again repeat that I see no contradiction in saying that I personally considered the order to shoot women and children wrong and therefore did not carryi it out and that somebody else did carry out the order, because in every human being, on receiving an order it is a personal decision and every person has to decide for himself. I once again repeat that the order as such I did not receive, but I was asked what I would have done, and since I was requested to tell it I gave a reply, which, owing to my present position, is quite obvious, and I further add I think it is almost certain that it would have been my decision at the time as well.

But actually carrying out such an order is up to personal discretion, and if I consider this solution to be suitable for myself this does not mean that it is the same for everybody else either. It is my decision, my personal decision, and every human being has different views about carrying things out. This was my opinion, and I repeat it still is my opinion.

Have I answered your question in sufficient detail?

Q: One more question about this, please, Witness, If I understood you correctly you were trying to say that not in every person by Nature the same moral principles are based in his soul from which he can come to such a decision?

A: That is right. I wish to add I lost a sister when she was very young, and I am fully convinced that this sister died innocently, and this death moved me so strongly and supported my personal judgment to such an extent that I personally have the strength to bear out what I have said here. That is my personal opinion.

Q: Witness, now the last question on a different subject. You explained today during cross-examination by the Prosecution that on 15th of August you sent a telegram to Berlin, and as a result on 20th of august you were transferred to Berlin. Could you say whether the leaders of the executive kommandos, my client Blobel in particular, would have had the same possibility, in such a simple and fast manner, to be transferred from his office as leader of SK-4-A?

A: I tried to explain the particular situation in which I was the particular position. I said that taking over a different task would have menat an integral Change of my position and my being subordina te to another office chief.

This fact I emphasized very strongly in my letter to Streckenbach, and that certainly was the reason why, owing to the fact that time should not be wasted until my original assignment be carried out, I was granted such time. I have no personal experience about the possibility of others being transferred, but I believe in a normal case it is like this, according to my experience in the SD, throughout many years, that transfers and appointments are made by superiors and are not made on personal suggestions.

Q: Witness, since this morning, did I or anyone else talk to you about these questions?

A: No.

DR. HEIM: Thank you. I have no further questions. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q: Witness, did you ever witness an execution?

A: No.

Q: Did you ever see the preparation for an execution?

A: No.

Q: Did you ever happen upon a scene after an execution had just been completed?

A: No.

Q: In all the time that you were in the East you never saw preparation for the killing of anybody?

A: No.

Q: So that all your answers are entirely theoretical and academic insofar as executions are concerned?

A: Yes.

Q: You have indicated very strongly that you disapproved of the execution program as laid down by Hitler, that is true?

A: Yes.

Q: So to that extent you had a reservation in your mind when you took the oath of allegiance to Hitler?

A: Yes.

Q: This morning I quoted the oath from memory as I had recalled it. I will now read it literally. "I vow inviolable fidelity to Adolf Hitler. I vow absolute obedience to him and to the leaders he designates for me." You took that oath, did you?

A: Yes.

Q: But you were not willing to live up to it according to its letter?

A: First of all and most of all I did not think that such an oath would include an entire program which varied very much.

Q: Then when you learned that it did include a program which conflicted with your conscience, you desired to deviate from the program and an allegiance to the oath, is that might?

A: That is a question which is very decisive, and I don't know whether I can reply to it in three or four words.

Q : You can give me more than three or four words.

A: If I am to answer this question freely, such a decision does not arise suddenly, but they are very difficult situations of development which only form by and by and throughout the years since 1939 whether a person was a National Socialist or a German, a growing criticism arose against political measures, and a certain attitude did not come about all at once but was a result of a great number of realizations and experiences. I believe my attitude or my relation to Adolf Hitler did not come about all of a sudden but through years and they changed.

Q: Witness, when did you take your oath, what year?

A: I gave my oath in 1935 or 1936.

Q: Alright. So that you had several years to ponder over the solemnity of that oath. Between 1936 and 1941 you had five years so that you can't say that this suddenly hit you like a lightening flash and you had to make an instantaneous decision. Now we ask you again, did you feel yourself free to deviate from this order when you received an order that conflicted with your conscience or with your system of morals?

A: I did not put this question to myself with such clearness.

Q: Well, thik of it now.

A: I am prepared to give this answer, your Honor, but I don't quite realize what alternative you expect of me.

Q: I don't expect any alternative of you. I only expect a true and honest straightforward answer. You took a solemn oath to follow Adolf Hitler, to obey not only his orders but the orders of all leaders appointed by him, unquestioningly. That was the oath. Now I want to know if you were willing to live up to that order unquestioningly or whether you made exceptions here and whether you side-stepped somewhere else?

A.- I certainly did not follow this oath -- I cannot think of the proper expression -- I did not follow this oath without any doubts or considerations, but I had a lot of doubts and misgivings on various occasions.

Q.- Then you were wailing to deviate from the oath?

A.- Owing to the fact that at the points which I mentioned just now, I did not follow the oath.

Q.- Then you were willing to use your own mind in deciding which part of the oath you would follow and which part you would not?

A.- With such clarity, which part of an oath I would obey and what parts I would not obey, as in a scale of figures, I could not express it so clearly, but it was clear to me that certain requests made to me, I could not comply with.

Q.- Yes. You then did not regard the oath as having a sacred binding obligation, in accordance with this letter?

A.- If I answer this question, I must say that political revolutions, spiritual revolutions, and conscience revolutions, always existed.

Q.- Now please answer that question. You were willing to deviate from the oath?

A.- I already said that.

Q.- Yes, now, are you willing to deviate from other oaths that you take?

A.- I have not given any other oath in my life.

Q.- You gave an oath here the court to tell the truth. Did you ever deviate from that oath, because of the situation with which you were confronted?

A.- I do not think I will have any advantages if I deviate from an oath in this tribunal.

Q.- So, therefore, you will deviate from an oath only when it will be to your advantage?

be to your advantage?

A.- No, just no -

Q.- No? Then you make a difference between the oath which you gave to Hitler and the oath which you gave somewhere else.

A.- The oath I gave to Adolf Hitler was a political oath. The very moment when a relation exists between the person administering the oath and the person giving the oath, or, rather, if a breach occurs here, then I believe it is possible to make political reservations.

Q.- Then you do make a distinction between the Hitler oath and another type of oath.

A.- I make a difference between a political oath and an oath only directed to God.

Q.- So therefore a political oath, you can treat as you wish, but another kind of oath you regard as sacred and binding?

A.- There are people in Germany -

Q- No, don't tell me about people in Germany. I am asking you, here, in Nurnberg.

A.- What question?

Q.- You do make a distinction between this oath to Hitler, which you call a political oath, and another oath?

A.- The oath I gave to Adolf Hitler was an oath of allegiance and only of allegiance. The very moment where I think I can not give my allegiance here on one point, then I believe I can make my reservation there.

Q.- Yes, and did your superiors know that this was the way you were treating the oath, that you could abide by it when you pleased and ignore it when you so chose?

A.- On this particular question, that is the Fuehrer Order to kill women and children, I tried to evade the oath by my thoughts. I never received it personally. Nobody told me I should shoot women and children and I believe that this refusal in my mind is one of my rights as a human being, and, if I have the courage to say this, to express it here, not matter what results I may derive from this, I believe I did this after mature and serious consideration.

I also accept the danger that the only oath I gave in my life should be questioned while I am sitting here in this Tribunal.

Q.- Did you have the courage to express yourself that way when Adolf Hitler was alive?

A.- I believe that through many individual actions, I have dared to disobey this order, through practical measures.

Q.- Then you did receive the order. You say you have dared to disobey it.

A.- I did not say that I received the order, I merely said I had the courage at that moment to take certain measures, for example, to help Jews.

Q.- You helped the Jews when you were there in the East? Is that the reason you received the promotion? Tell us how you helped the Jews when you were in charge of this Moscow Kommando, Tell us what you did to help the Jews while you were there.

A.- I did not help them then at that time.

Q.- You didn't help them when they needed your help?

A.- I didn't understand the question.

Q.- You knew that an order was out to exterminate Jews, because you spoke to a Kommando leader. You told us about this, on July 7, between July 7 and July 10, you knew that there was an order out to exterminate Jews. Then was the time for you to show your humanity and now tell us what you did then to help the Jews.

A.- At that time I did nothing.

Q.- You did nothing? And when you went back to Berlin, did you tell Heydrich that this order was unconscionable one, that the extermination of Jews was contrary to every law of civilization and humanity -- did you tell him that?

A.- I did not have much opportunity to speak at the time. During the discussions, he mostly talked.

Q.- Yes. So that it all comes down to this: that your courage in defying Hitler comes to you in 1947 and not 1941. '42, '43, '44 or '45?

A.- I believe - but it would go into too much detail -- other political factors played a part here.

Q.- Yes, now you were promoted, because of what you did in the East, weren't you?

A.- According to the words of this declaration. Not in my opinion.

Q.- Well, you didn't promote yourself. Others promoted you and it was their firm believe that you had conducted yourself in so examplary a manner that you were entitled to a promotion?

A.- I already said that I am not sure that it wasn't a pretext used on the 9th of November to promote a great number of leaders and it did not depend on the examination of the merits of the person at all.

Q.- You were willing to have yourself considered as an exterminator, one leading those Kommando groups closely in the execution of innocent people, so that you might receive the promotion, even though it was untrue?

A.- I said that I did not see the promotion in its wording, I said that from the very beginning, I wasn't conscious of the fact, therefore and the second letter, which was submitted to me concerning my second promotion I did not see either because this was an internal memorandum. Therefore, on both occasions, I did not know the reason.

Q.- So that it wasn't until 1947 that you learned why you had been promoted?

A.- Yes, until that time I did not know that the reason for my promotion were to be my special merits in the East and I don't know what special merits I gained in the East.

Q.- You don't know of anything which you did in the East which would have entitled you to a commendation or a promotion?

A.- No.

Q.- And you think that this promotion came out of the goodness of heart of Himmler?

A.- No, I said that obviously it was a result of Streckenbach's intermediation and the fact that it was only expressed in the beginning of December seems to be a very good reason for this.

Q.- So that what you want the Tribunal to believe is that Streckenbach, out of his great friendship for you invented the story that you had conducted yourself gallantly in the East in the execution of these orders at the head of your Einsatzkommando and that he manufactured this story out of his love for you in order to have you promoted?

A.- This record in the document, as I can see, says merits in the commitment, the Einsatz. This does not mean, Your Honor, that they are concerned with merits concerning the extermination of Jews.

Q.- Well, you have stated that you didn't do anything in the East which entitled you to a commendation or promotion, insofar as your original mission was concerned, as you told us your original mission to be.

A.- That is my personal opinion.

Q.- Yes, so, therefore, the promotion was not given for what you tell us you did in the East, namely, collecting archives. We at least can exclude that. You say you did nothing in that respect.

A.- In any case, I cannot say why Streckenbacj should have said this, Consequently I can say neither the one nor the other thing.

Q.- So it was all a mystery why you got this promotion and the mystery wasn't solved until you reached Nurnberg?

A.- No, I did not say that. I said it was my turn. I had not been promoted for 3 1/2 years; that Gruppenleiters had already been promoted to Obergruppenfuehrer and I was still a Standartenfuehrer. What this printing part in this is -Q.- Are you speaking of the promotion in 1941 or the one in 1945?

A.- 1941.

Q.- Yes, when you were a member of the SS?

A.- Yes.

Q.- And an actual member, not an honorary member?

A.- I repeat again I was not paid and it was not my main task. There is a difference between an honorary position and a main position.

Q.- One has to believe now that you did all this work just out of charity, that you didn't receive any pay, while you were wearing the SS uniform?

A.- Not a penny.

Q.- You didn't receive any pay?

A.- No.

Q.- From nobody?

A.- I was paid by the State as a university professor, but I was not paid by the SS.

Q.- But you were being paid?

A.- Yes, certainly, but not by the SS.

Q.- But you received a stipend every month regularly?

A.- Yes, I was paid by the Reich Education Ministry.

Q.- You were paid by the Reich Government?

A.- Yes.

Q.- The same government that paid all SS people?

A.- But from their own resources of administration and from other field of administration.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning at 09:30.

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the courtroom will please find their seats.

Military Tribunal II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

DR. VON STEIN: (Dr. Von Stein for the Defendant Sandberger) today and tomorrow to prepare his examination.

THE PRESIDENT: You want him excused immediately?

Dr. VON STEIN : Yes, please, Your honor.

THE PRESIDENT. The Defendant Sandberger will be excused from attendance in Court today and tomorrow in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. RIEDIGER: (Dr. Riediger for the Defendant Haensch.) that he be excused for today and tomorrow in order to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Haensch will also be excused today and tomorrow for the same purpose.

DR. MAYER: (Dr. Mayer for Defendant Steimle.) morrow to prepare his examination.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Steinle will be excused from attendance in court this afternoon and tomorrow for the purposes indicated by his counsel. left the room?

Dr. Ulmer, have you finished with your client?

DR. ULMER: (For Defendant Six) I have one final request, whether it would be possible to get the record also in the English version of the days that the defendant Six was in the box in order to check up on the translation, since on "Einsatz" which is commitment, and "Einsatzgruppen" there might have been some confusion.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will authorize your receiving an English copy of the transcript. The mechanics of your obtaining it will be worked out through the Defense Center.

DR. ULMER: Thank you, Your Honor, and may I reserve the right, if I should find out that something is wrong, may I point it out?

THE PRESIDENT: By all means that, right will be reserved to you.

DR. ULMER: Thank you very much.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, Dr. Ulmer, what more will you have to present in behalf of the Defendant Six?

DR. ULMER: First I shall only have to submit documents, Your Honor, concernining witnesses, it depends on whether Witnesses are to appear and can appear here who can state that the witness did not take part in any shootings. Bringing in such witnesses has its difficulties and not the least is the fact that it has been in the papers that all people who had anything to do with Einsatzkommandos may be sent to Russia. The result of this might be that possible witnesses nay be hiding, and for me as a Defense Counsel it is particularly difficult to bring the witnesses here at all. But anything witnesses could prove I could prove here thorough affidavits and documents. I already have these here, and very soon I will submit them to the High Tribunal. The delay is not owing to me but only owing to the technicality of mimeographing and translating the documents.

THE RRESIDENT: Dr. Ulmer, you, of course, present your defense in any way that you desire. We will merely inform you that the Tribunal stands ready to offer you any and every assistance within its power to facilitate the obtaining of such proof as you believe is relevant and which is available in behalf of your client.

DR. ULMER: Thank you very much indeed, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Six will now be returned to the defendant's dock and the Defendant Paul Blobel will be taken to the witness box.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, Dr. Heim for the Defendant Blonel. I want to discuss a basic question which arose owing to an occurrence this morning. When I came into this room this morning and talked to the Defendant Blobel, and put down my two hands on the barrier the guard instructed me to step back 70 centimeters. Your Honor, the Defendant Blobel is hard of hearing. There night be some difficulties during the session here owing to that. It is impossible for me to talk to him when I am 70 centimeters away from him, who is sitting. For that reason I ask the Tribunal to instruct the guards that one may put one's hands on the barrier, and I don't quite realize whether this is an offense against security.

MR. FERENCZ: If Your Honor please, the question of how far any one must stand when speaking to a defendant is a question of security which is solely within the competence of the military post who are responsible for the security, and I do not believe it nay properly be raised in this court. If there are any objections so that the defense counsel feels he may not present his defense, I ask the Court to instruct him to take it through the correct channels, namely through the Defense Administrator, making an appeal to the persons responsible for the security in the jail.

THE PRESIDENT: I mil say with regard to that, the Tribunal is ready at all times to hear complaints, criticisms, or appeals of any nature Which have to do with this trial and if Dr. Heim believes that his discharge of his duty is in any way being impeded by what he has now announced, he is entirely within his rights to inform the Tribunal, and the Tribunal will immediately look into the matter which he has mentioned, and if security regulations, because of the unusual circumstance, will allow him to advance closer to his client for the purpose of conferences that privilege will be allowed to him.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor. fied as follows:

JUDGE SPEIGHT: Witness, raise your right hand and repeat after me. pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

( The witness repeated the oath.)

THE PRESIDENT: Before you begin your examination, Dr. Heim, the Tribunal will instruct the Marshal to contact the prison physician to examine Dr. Blobel during recess time to ascertain that his hearing is so defective that it is necessary that his attorney approach closer than the security regulations require.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor.

BY DR. HEIM:

Q. Witness, please tell us your full name.

A. Hermann Wilhelm Paul Blobel.

Q. When and where were you born?

A. On 13th August 1894 in Potsdam.

Q. What was your father's profession?

A. My father was a carpenter.

Q. Did your father do any political activity and did this have any results?

A. As far as I know my father was in a trade union. In 1899, owing to a strike, he left Berlin and went to Remscheid. He worked in Berlin as a carpenter in a construction firm. He wanted to work with a construction firm in the States. The mother followed him with the children, and my parents stayed in Remscheid.

Q. Please describe briefly your career until the beginning of the First World War, to start with.

A. At the age of five I came to Remscheid in the Rhineland and there I visited the elementary school. I then learned the carpenter trade. I passed an examination. After that I worked as a mason and also worked in the office in a construction firm. I trained myself in mathematics and other subjects connected with construction. In 1912 I passed the entry examination at the Royal Construction School in Wuppertal. I continued to work as carpenter apprentice, and I saved money in order to be able to visit school. I was exempt from military service for one year.

Q. Herr Blobel, did you take part in the First World War?

A. Yes.

Q. Please give a short description.

A. On 1 August 1914, I joined as a pioneer, the engineer regiment 24 in Cologne. At the geginning of November, 1914, I went into the field to the front. I remained with this unit from '14 until '18 at the front.

At the end of the war I was released. I had several slight wounds. I was released to go to Remscheid.

Q. Please describe your professional training and activity later on.

A. With the assistance of my parents and my brothers and sisters my professional training between 1919 and 1920 at the higher technical college in Wuppertal was finished. After that I was a building technician in various positions in construction firms and in 1924 I got a certificate as indepentant architect in Solingen.

Q. Did the economic collapse in 1926/27 concern you?

A. My activity as an architect started very small, from 1924-1927 I was successful. So that is 1926 I had a capital of my own of approximately- 15000 Reich Marks. I used this to build an apartment for myself. The money breakdown in 1926/1927 caused that I received very few orders, and therefore also the salary was missing sometimes, and business obligations I had very few. My debts at the tine amounted to 16,000 Reich Marks, On the other hand, I had duesof 25,000 Reich marks to come, which I could not get. In 1929, that is '28, '29 and '30 there was a time when I got no orders. My mobile property wasused to cover the debts. In 1931 I could not be leased. I was unemployed and until 1934 I got the unemployment relief which was. entered in the register.

Q. Until this time did you take part in any political activity or were you interested in politics at all?

A. Until 1931 I did not belong to any political party. My professional activity for many years caused no to have connections with SPD circles, the Socialist Party of Germany.

Q. Did you then join any political organization, and if yes, which one?

A. In May 1931 I joined the SA Reserve, a group of older businessmen. In October 1931 I joined the SPD, the Socialist Party of Germany. In January 1932 I came to the So as a candiate. In 1932 I received my book of membership to the SPD.

In 1933 the SPD was prohibited.

Q. Mr. Blobel, does your reply not contain an inconsistency, that you were a member of the SPD and the SA or SS Candidate at the same time?

A. At the time a great many members of the SA Reserve were in the same position. We did not consider the SA to be a political organization but rather "Vereiv" a club, which it actually was. Concerning the membership in the SPD and at the same time the application to join the SS, I saw no contradiction in this, because at that time I did not carry out any political activity in the SA, in which I found no aims opposite to those of the SPD. At that time the SS was established in Solingen for the first tine and Gruppenfuehrer Weitzel was appointed for this district in Duesseldorf. In 1929, with a few hundred men he went over from the SPD to the SS.

Q. Witness, how long were you a member of the SA Reserve?

A. A member of the SA Reserve I was from May 1933 to - or rather June, July, 1931. In July 1931, I left the SA Reserve.

Q. What was the reason and your motive to change your political opinions and to leave one party?

A. The difficult position made it necessary to join people who were prepared to help each other.

Q. Did you join the NSDAP?

A. I was registered through the SS.

Q. When was this?

A. I received the membership book in 1934. My application was filed at the end of 1934. My register card submitted by the Prosecution does not coincide with these dates. In this file as date of joining the NSDAP, the 1st of December is entered, 1931, but this time is too early. It is predated.

Q. Having been a proper member of the SPD, did this not have any consequences for you?

A. In 1933, a procedure was opened in the examination board of the NSDAP, owing to my membership in the SPD.

Q. Witness, using this opportunity, I want to refer to Document Book III-C of the Prosecution, page 17 of the German text. It is Document NO-3197, Exhibit 136. It is the file submitted by the prosecution as your register card. This is your personal file, page 17, in the Document Book III-C.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: page 11 in the English.

Q. Thank you, Mr. Prosecuter. On page 1 of the document a number of decorations are mentioned and the copy of the document does not reveal which of these decorations you receiver. Witness, would you please explain briefly which decorations you actually received, according to your personal records?

A. I only got those decorations mentioned in the copy of the register card, those which bear a star in these records here.

Q. That is sufficient. Witness, what did you do after 1933?

A. From 1933 to 1934 I was still unemployed. In 1934 until the middle of 1935, I was employed by the City of Solingen with a month salary of 120 Reichmarks. After June 1935 I came to the SD Section, Duesseldorf.

Q. Herr Blobel, please describe your activity in the SD in Duesseldorf.

A. As an architect, I Wes appointed by the SD. I set up and conducted the construction of the SD office in Duesseldorf in 1935. I remained with this new agency and I had to deal with the information service deomestic sphere in the Duesseldorf district. When the SD Section was extended I then became Chief of a sub section and later on the Section Duesseldorf, within the Oberatschnitt (Main Section) Duesseldorf.

Q. During your activity in Duesseldorf, did you have any differences with superiors or other party agencies?

A. Differences of opinion in dealing with some subjects occurred repeatedly. The change in the leadership of the SD Sectors also causes divergencis in opinions with the subordinate leaders.

Q. When were you promoted for the last time?

A. My last promotion occurred on the 30th of January, 1941.

Q. How do you explain the fact that since 1941 you were not promoted any more?

A. I had no previous convictions by any court, and there is no reason why I should not have been promoted. Perhaps I was too old, because sufficient younger members were there who confirmed with the conditions required. The judgment of my superiors about me I don't know, but the judgment of the superiors was decisive.

Q. What were the chances of promotion for full-timeservice leaders generally?

A. On the whole, promotions were made from time to time in spaces of one to two years, according to efficiency.

Q. Which organizations, sections, or associations connected with the NSDAP did you also belong to?

A. I was a member of the NSV, the Reich Colonial association, the Reich Association for Air Raid Protection, the Reich Association for Art, and then I was in the SA for a number of months. I left the SS when I was transferred to the SD.

Q. When were you appointed to go to Berlin?

A. I was drafted on the 13th or 14th of June, 1941.

Q. What kind of an authority was this?

A. I was taken from military Service as being indispensible in civil life and I was put at the disposal of the Reichfuehrer SS. This being ordered to Berlin was to be regarded as conscription.

Q. Was this drafting to Berlin--could it be compared to a conscription for War?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time did you know the reason why you were appointed?

A. I did not know the reason for this, no.

Q. Where were you sent from Berlin?

A. From Berlin I was sent to Pretsch with other leaders.

Q. Did you previously know about the transport to pretsch?

A. No.

Q. In Berlin, did you take part in any official discussion?

A. No, not even in the discussion in the Prinz Albrecht Palais, which were mentioned here repeatedly. On the day of my arrival, together with other leaders, I was sent to Schmiedeberg immediately.

Q. What statements can you give concerning the age of the leaders in Schmiedeberg and Pretsch?

A. In general, the leaders were much younger than I was.

Q. Witness, at the time you were already 45 years of age. At the time on comparing yourself, did you realize the differences in age between you and the rest of the leaders, and did you not think about whether it might be a special motive for your being drafted?

A. I considered this drafting to be a reply to my application to leave the SD.

Q. Can you give us facts which confirm this assumption of yours?

A. With the inspecteurs, Brigadefuehrer Freiherr Von Schade and Oberregierungsrat Nockemann and Oberregierungsrat Hasselbach, who were in charge of the SD Main Section (Oberabschnitt) at the time, I requested that I be released from the SD, because I wanted to go back to my former profession, particularly as the personal relation with the Chiefs of the Main Section in Duesseldorf was not bearable any more. There were so many intrigues.

Q. How long were you in Pretsch?

A. Until the morning of the 23d of June, 1941.

Q. Please, describe briefly the external events during your stay in Pretsch.

A. On arriving in Pretsch, Schmiedeberg, men had already been established there. The leaders were given quarters and billets in Schmiedeberg and other localities. I had to report to Dr. Rasch whom I saw on the 17th or 18th of June there. The setting up of units or detachments was done according to the lists of the members. I did not know the general situation; on the 17th or 18th of June, the leaders were sent to the leaders Training School in Pretsch.

Q. Who announced the reason for your appointment?

A. It was announced by Gruppenfuehrer Streckenbach, in front of all the leaders who were together in the Leaders' Training School in pretsch.

Q. What were you told about your future commitment there?

A. Streckenbach announced: From that moment on, You, as well as all subleaders and men who have been drafted will be under war regulations., which have to be observed by a soldier in the field. All of you are bound to the Fuehrer by oath. to inform you about just like every other soldier of the Fuehrer.

You know about the measures you will have to expect according to war regulations. According to the Fuehrer Order, Einsatzgruppen are being formed and subdivided into Kommandos. These Einsatzgruppen will be subordinated to the Army commanders on the expected invasion of the East. Your task is the following: In cooperation with the Wehrmacht, the German Army, all elements which endanger the security are to be seized by you. political activists, functionaries, agents of the Communist party, and Jews. their men. The leaders of the Einsatzgruppen can make use of penal law and jurisdiction, according to the SS and police laws. In cooperation with the Wehrmacht, you are to see to it that personal discipline and good conduct will be maintained during the march and when carrying out the tasks and you will emphasize this."

Q. What was the general attitude when the tasks of the unit were announced?

A. At first there was general silence. The speech was finished. We went into the different rooms. There little circles formed and in general the task was considered a necessary security measure while the News Agency and Information Service and the fighting of armed resistance of the forces mentioned were main items. No one could exactly picture what the task was which Streckenbach had explained in a few brief words. He had explained a great deal more about the soldierly behavior of the men of the Security Police, Who, together with the Wehrmacht Would march cut to the front. That was his main concern.

Q. what picture did you have, Herr Blobel,at the time, about your future task?

A. My personal opinion of this task was based on the fact, to be part of the Wehrmacht in a military commitment as a Security Police especially to secure the troops, and if these Einsatzgruppen were committed there had to be reasons which indicated danger. As opponents, there was the enemy counter Intelligence with all its branches, which we did not know as yet, but which had to be known by the Military counter-intelligence.

Q. At that time, could i you imagine at all that the security tasks given to you would conflict with general moral laws?

A. About the extent of the tasks of the Security Police, I could not imagine anything. I did not know the Eastern Territory until then. The generally valid laws of morals and law I considered to be our directives. Apart from that I imagined the Security Police tasks to be the same as I had seen in the work of the Security Police in The Reich, as I remembered during the franc fireurs partisans time from 1914 to 1918 during the first World War.

Q. At the time would you have had the possibility to leave your commitment("Einsatz") and resign?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. I had been drafted under war law, to this particular task. A refusla would have caused a court-martial.

Q. Do you know any case that when the orders were given in Pretsch Schmiedeberg a leader asked that he be transferred?

A. I did not hear of any such case. I did not hear of that kind of thing.

Q. What would have been the consequences according to the laws at the time if one had refused to obey the order which had been given?

A. From that moment onwards, the man would have been given to the SS and Police court to be examined and the punishment inflicted by the police court was much stricter than that of the Army Courts-martial. The sentence was death for disloyalty.

Q. How was the task distributed in Pretsch?

A. The Einsatzgruppen A,B, C, D were formed.

Q. To which Einsatzgruppen were you appointed?

A. Einsatzgruppen B; after a few days it was altered into Einsatzgruppe C.

Q. Who was the chief of your Einsatzgruppe?

A. Dr. Rasche.

Q. How was the subdivision in Einsatzgruppe C which had previously been Einsatzgruppe B?

A. Einsatzgruppe C was subdivided into Sonderkommando 4a, Sonderkommando 4b, Einsatzkommando 5 and Einsatzkommando 6.

Q. Was there a difference between the Sonderkommandos and the Einsatzkommando concerning tasks ?

A. The Sonderkommandos were units subordinated directly to a Army unit, in particular officials of the STAPO and the KRIPO as interrogating officers, so to say as, a Secret Field Police and extension officers for the political secotr. The Einsatzkommandos on the other hand were directly subordinated to the Einsatzgruppen.

Q. I refer to the document submitted in Ohlendorf's cross-examination by the Prosecution , NOKW -256, Exhibit 174. It is the draft for an order the commitment of the Sonderkommandos and the Einsatzgruppen and it says on page 4 of the German copy: "The Sonderkommandos of the Security Polce (SD) carry out their tasks on h their responsibility." Witness, is this draft not in contradiction with the way it was carried out according to which the Sonderkommandos were subordinated to the Army?

A. Not at all. This document is a draft order, which obviously had nothing to do with the later Barbarossa Decree.

The fact is, in any case, that the Sonderkommandos immediately subordinate to an Army unit, as can be shown by my other explanations.

Q. Was there a difference between the Sonderkommandos and the Einsatzkommandos concerning the number of men?

A. The Sonderkommandos in contrast to theEinsatzkommandos were much smaller concerning the number of their men, approximately in a rate of one to four, at least of one to four.

Q. How strong was the SK 4A and how far was it set up? What were the subdivisions?

A. Sonderkommando 4a consisted of a commando Leader, 7 leaders, 45 subleaders, men, drivers, kitchen personnel, altogether a total of 1 7 45.

Q. Who were the leaders of your Kommando?

A. The leaders in the SK 4a were Criminal Officers and leaders from the SD: Jantzen, Hanf, Haefner, Karlson and Dr. Funk were candidates for the leading staff. Drafted as war emergencies and appointed as interpreters were Von Radetsky and Mueller.

Q. Were they commanded for a special purpose?

A. The drafting to the Einsatzgruppe was considered a military commitment.

Q. For Now long did your appointment last?

A. The time of the committment meant for a definite period of time, which, however was not fixed according to which the course was to be carried on.

Q. When did the SK 4a leave Pretsch and where did it go to next?

A. Gruppe C, that is, the previous Gruppe B, as well as SK 4-a, marched in the surly morning hours of 23 June 1941 from Pretsch via Liegnitz and Gleiwitz, to Cracow.

Q. What orders did you get there?

A. On the 25th of June 1941, in Cracow, I received the order to march SK 4a to the AOK 6 headquarters, and that I should report to the Commander-in-Chief of the 6th Army, General Field Marshal Von Reichenau.

Q. Witness, please describe further events, particularly the occurrence when you reported to the AOK-6.

A. The SK 4-a marched via Sandormirsz, Samos (?) to the headquarters to the AOK 6 near the river Bug . On the 26th of June 1941 together with the leader , I reported to the Commander-in-Chief , General Field marshal Von Reichenau, in the afternoon. The Field Marshal ordered me to a discussion. Also the following people were oredered to take part: The Chief of Staff, the Quartermaster General, the Chief of Department 1-C; a colonel, Major Palzow, officer in the Department C; and another major of the staff, Altogether, the Field Marshal and five officers and myself, and a leader of mine. The Field Marshal who was walking about in the park in his bathing suit turned to me with the following words: "Please excuse my dress. I have just returned from the front. I expected you already for three days , together with your commando." I told the Field Marshal that three days ago we had set off. The Field marshal said, "I am glad you are here there is your Commando stationed , - and how many men do you have," I told him how many ,1:7:45, the Commando was still approaching.

Q. Please describe the discussion with Field Marshal von Reichenau.

A. It follows now the discussion, with almost verbal extractions: "The Field marshal: Herr Major Palzow, please give me the map and the order which concerns the Commando." The Field Marshal to the officers of the staff:" Gentlemen, please hold the map. About the position:

We are here, we are there, and there." And the Field Marshal pointed out on the map the position of the front." And according to the reports received by the divisions in these areas," -- and he indicated these places on the map," armed civilians have been met who have done us a lot of harm." And he said to 1-C, "Please, Colonel submit today's report." Then he continued: "According to the situation, the Commando will be sub-divided into three sub-divisions, and subordinated to the commanders in chief of the Division. The army order, please." Herr Major Palzow, who had the order in his hand, showed a page in the text to the Field Marshal, The entire order consisted of about ten to twelve pages. The contents of the order were: announcing the individual units , out of which the army was set up, and also troop units which had been ordered to the combat area of the Sixth Army. The next paragraph dealt with the commitment of the Commando of the Security Police, and their tasks . I heard there about the same assignment of tasks , how they were announced by Gruppenfuehrer Streckenbach at Pretsch. The contents were approximately as follows: PKH. A file number. Top Secret matter. Date, July .1941. And the contents were approximately ...: "Since it is to be expected that the advance of the units is hindered by the many political groups of the opponent, the commanders in their territory are given detachments of the Security Police of the Reichsfuehrer SS. The task of these commandos deals with the Security Police activity concerning political opponents and the absolute elimination of all elements and Jews, insofar as they endanger the security of the units. The commandos will give instructions as required to the units subordinate to them, " Then some more followed, which I don't remember exactly. I told the Field Marshal that the Commando, according to the commitment order Barbarossa -- this order which had been handed to me by Dr. Rasch in Cracow -- that the Commando, of the Rear Army territory with view to marching routine - was subordinate to him. The Field Marshal give the order that concerning the technicalities of the actual marching and the supplies, and concerning the task it be directly and immediately subordinateto AOK 6, and should only be used in the fighting area.

The Chief of Staff received the order to inform the Commander of the Rear Army territory, and also the Division Commanders about the commitment of Commando 4-a. The Chief of Staff ordered the 1-C to carry out such an order at once. A copy of this order was received by the Commando the following day. The contents of this order was approximately the following: "AOK 6, Department C, the SD 4-a, of the Security Police of the Reichsfuehrer SS, are subordinate to AOK 6 , Department C with regard to factual concern with the task to carry out Security Police measures on political events endangering the security of the troops. The Commando is to be supported in every respect. " And then the stamp of the AOK 6, and the signature. Another copy of this order was given to the leaders of the later Teilkommandos - subcommandos. The Field Marshal instructed all officers of the staff who were present to support the commando in every respect. I was given the order to advance the Commando as quickly as possibly. Maps were handed out; march routes were fixed; news service and reports from the Division were discussed. The Field Marshal gave orders current personal reporting to him or the chief of staff, or rather, to 1-C. A permanent liaison officer was appointed, and the utilization of material which had been captured by 1-C and the Ukrainian Special department which was attached.

Commander-in-Chief of AOK-6? the 1-C of the AOK 6 with the duty to report to Field Marshal von Reichenau and to supply a permanent liaison officer, as to the marching route, and the supplies, it was attached to AOK-6, it was ordered to be in the fighting area.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I believe this is a suitable moment to introduce the document Blobel No. 1, as Exhibit No. 1. This is the first document in Document Book Blobel No. 1. It is a plan with the title: "Division and Subordination of Sonderkommando 4-a on the 28th of June 1941." yesterday.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, it concerns the first photostatic plan in the book. It is called, "Division and Subordination of Sonderkommando 4-a on the 28th of June 1941."

Q (By Dr. Heim) Witness, please explain to the Tribunal, briefly, the sketch made by you. dotted lines show the relation concerning the information service among the units. In the middle of the sketch you see AOK 6, to which Staff Department C under Field Marshal von Reichenau belonged. As the plan shows, this Department C was a Special Ukrainian Department. This special department was connected with the former Ukrainian Colonel Brisancz, and exchanged news and information with him. Brisancz himself was in the military counter-intelligence. On the right side of Department C you see the liaison officer of Sonderkommando 4-a, put in who was attached to Department C of AOK 6.

THE PRESIDENT: May I say to the interpreter that the designation on the chart, in English, is "Section C". I presume that when you are say ing Department C you are referring to the same block which is here indicated as Section C. And if that be true I would suggest the use of Section C to avoid any confusion when the record is read and compared with the chart.

INTERPRETER: Thank you, your Honor. BY DR. HEIM

A The full lines indicate about the Section 1-C. The orders were sent immediately to the offices of SK 4a; also direct to the Teilkommandos of SK 4a with the divisions, In the latter case, the orders were sent through 1-C of AOK 6 to the competent 1-C -

THE PRESIDENT: Does any one know what the equivalent in the English language is of 1-C? What the equivalent would be in the American Army?

MR. WALTON: Your Honor, please, that would be the G-2, or Intelligence -- Chief of intelligence.

THE PRESIDENT: I see. Very well. Thank you very much, Mr. Walton. BY DR. HEIM: the competent 1-C of the Intelligence Section of the Army unit, and from there to the Teilkommando. Information, but not orders, were sent from the Teilkommando to the office in the same manner. Or through courier. As the dotted line indicates, between the Teilkommandos and SK 4-a and the orderly room. In the upper part of the chart the subordination of AOK under the Army Group South is shown. Between the Army Group and AOK 6, the Higher SS and Police leader with his staff acted as intermediary. As the line of the Higher SS and Police Leader to Einsatzgruppe C shows, the Higher SS and Police Leader had the right to give instructions to the Chief of Einsatzgruppe C. Between Einsatzgruppe C and SK 4a there is a full line missing because orders by the Einsatzgruppe C were sent via the liaison officer with AOK 6 to SK 4a, to the orderly room. The SK 4a, therefore, was subordinate immediately to the AOK 6, and also to Einsatzgruppe C. On the way, orders were given via AOK 6. An immediate connection with Einsatzgruppe C existed temporarily between the Ukrainian interpreters inasfar as they could meet within movements of the units about.

This is indicated by the dotted line between the interpreter unit of Einsatzgruppe C and the interpreters of SK 4-a, The interpreter of Einsatzgruppe C were mostly Ukrainian emigrants -- politically it belonged to Colonel Brisancz and had been connected with him during the war 1914-1918. by Field Marshal Von Reichenau? breaking unit. Also, personnel was appointed for the orderly room. This can be seen in the chart discussed just now.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, may I point out that the three Teilkommandos are entered at the bottom of the sketch, and on the same level the safebreaking division. Below the little sections, the strength of the individual commands are mentioned.

Q (By Dr. Heim) What tasks did the Teilkommandos have?

A The Teilkommandos: Security Police work -- that is, finding and seizing of the opponent's document material, interrogations of persons, filing of documents concerning certain events were part of the security task. Also, participation in the carrying out of executions. were to be carried out by the Teilkommandos?

A No, I was not entitled to this. The Commander-in-Chief did decide about this. Or rather, the Commander of the Army unit in whose territory the Teilkommandos were committed.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, may we suspend now?

DR. HEIM: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed. BY DR. HEIM: sub commandos. How high was the strength of a Teilkommando normally? command.

Q That would have been twenty? commissioned men and officials and two to three drivers. On the Chart I have just described you can see this strength regulation.

Q What was the task of the Constant Liaison Officer in the AOK/6?

A The Constant Liaison Officer had to transmit the orders of AOK/6 to the Teilkommandos and had to transmit also reports of the Teilkommandos to AOk/6 via I/C. He also had to inform the orderly room and the office about reports with regard to changes of the location of the Teilkommandos, and on measures issued and directives issued by the Supreme Commander. The location reports of the Teilkommandos were sent to Group C via the AOK/6 by radio, and during the first period they did net arrive because the group had a different code key which was not known to us. troop?

A We didn't have any radio installation.

SK-4-A, in the registrar's office. to the SK-4-A itself? the I/C commanders of the division and were in constant exchange of news with the units which were part of the division. There they received direct orders from the AOK/6, and these orders were channeled through the SK-4-A according to the situation.

THE PRESIDENT: Pardon me. Dr. Heim, the reference to a division, is that to an Army division?

Q (By Dr. Heim) Witness, the Bench would like to know whether the reference to a division actually refers to a division of the Army? security division in the territory itself.

Q Was this division under the Armed forces command?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q (By Dr. Heim) Was there any connection between the Teilkommandos and the remainders of SK-4-A?

A Namely the remainder of the SK-4-A consisted of the registrar's office and the food supply office. As long as the Teilkommandos were in the direct vicinity of the remainder of the SK-4-A, that is the orderly room, they had a possibility to contact them by courier, but there was no radio or other means of communication at the disposal of the command. The Teilkommandos via the I/C of the AOK/6 and further on via the I/C of the division could be contacted. During the advance, there was no possibility at all of a contact with the orderly room because of the distances. Also the bad roads hampered these communications considerably. The battle area had a part in it and also the actual situation of the fighting itself. as the situation arose?

A The Teilkommandos were formed as the situation arose. They were not a permanent unit. The changes made in the distribution are shown by the charts after all, and during my testimony I will refer to them again. the SK-4-A, taking especially into consideration your own personal position? In what area of the AOK/6 did the SK-4-A exert its activities?

A In the battle area of the A OK/6.

Q Well, what do you call the battle area? forty Km large which extends to the backward area, but once in a while that would go further in the rear even.

Q What activities did the SK-4-A normally exercise in this area? as well by the Army as by the civilian agencies. Furthermore the checking of elements by which the troop had suffered damage while they were advancing, either snipers or saboteurs or attacks by civilians, and so on and so forth, or by persons not belonging to the uniformed battle units. Furthermore, it was a task of the SK-4-A to make use of the record documents as far as Security Police measures were concerned, and in this connection the SK-4-A had also the duty of sorting out the documents, the documents first of all which pertained directly to military matters, that is within the scope of the AOK/6, and such documents as were to be transferred to the RSHA. Furthermore the SK-4-A was in charge of investigation and search for persons which had made the troops suffer damage, and furthermore they had to search for political activists, saboteurs and suspected elements who had taken part in activities against the troops. Search was also carried out on the part of search lists, and these search lists given to the SK were in line with those used by the killed troops when they reached into Germany. The SK-4 had to search for the persons. The further task of the SK-4 was to interrogate these persons, to establish the facts, and on that occasion the Production of the files and the drawing up of the files was done by the interrogators. Q Witness, what was the Security Police task? That was the Security Police Task of SK-4-A, but I want the properly speaking SD tasks, for instance, reporting on the occupied areas and so on and so forth.

A Yes, that was connected with it. That was the task of the interpreters of the chiefs of Subkrumandos.

rather deal with the Security Police tasks of the SK's. A while ago you stated that it was a task of the SK-4-A to interrogate persons. What happened, with these persons once they had been interrogated, that is usually? Kommandanturs or of units of the Armed Forces. Once they had been interrogated, the files and documents were submitted to the AOK/6. During the first period I did that personally most of the time, that is, I submitted them to the Supreme Commander, personally. The other files which had been drawn up at the divisional quarters were brought to the Army Commander by the competent command chief who was responsible and had proper Police training, and he submitted it either to the Supreme Commander or to the I/C in charge. In cases of which I personally know, the Supreme Commander, on the strength of the Fuehrer order, ordered the executions when the files were submitted and when he saw that there had been violation of international law and of the customs of war established beyond doubt in these files. you make any suggestions to him concerning executions?

A No, I wasn't even in a position to do so because I didn't have the proper police and legal training. Therefore, I didn't interfere in the interrogations either, because I never dealt with things like that. files to the Supreme Commander in AOK/6? established in the files they were immediately released, but that happened already with the units before the files were even submitted to the AOK/6. these crimes where it was not found out they were not guilty?

A The OAOK/6 ordered the execution of all such persons for which the files established that they had violated the customs of war and the international legal prescriptions.

These lists were attached to the files. out by the AOK/6? of files submitted to him, discussed the matters with the legal officer of the AOK/6, checked them and then made his own decision. For all these activities public posters had to be posted up by the AOK Commander, by which the population was informed that these crimes were liable of capital punishment.

Q Didn't you have any misgivings at the time that these orders ordering executions were contrary to the international law and that carrying them out you could make yourself punishable? law, especially as the Russian adversary did not consider himself bound to the customs of war and to the international law. Furthermore, these shootings were not coarried out in any arbitrary manner. On the contrary, in line with the international law in force at that time, every case was individually checked and only on the strength of this examination the decisions were made. Even today I am of the opinion that this procedure was quite in line with international law. AOK/6 concerning the carrying out of the executions as ordered? discipline for the executions, which could only be carried out in a military court martial manner. He ordered that a shooting command was to be formed, that there should be two rifles always for every person to be executed, that the command should be conducted in accordance with military rules. That pistols or a shot in the neck be used as the Russians did, was prohibited in the most severe manner in accordance with the regulations dealt out by the Supreme Command. The details of the execution were fixed by the Supreme Commander, and instead of the five rifles per person as was ordered by a military commander for the execution of a German convicted it was lowered to two rifles per person only. carry them out in exactly the same way as they had been issued by the Supreme commander?

mentioned. Reichenau towards the tasks of the Security Police as you have just referred to them? and more specifically by the reports given to him by the I-C and the special detachment of Ukrainians, was very well informed concerning all the developments and concerning the activities of political groups, sabotage units and attacks against the troop, enemy propaganda, and in the interests of the security of the troops the Supreme Commander, of course, made it a very strong point to eliminate these circles and to prevent these incidents. At all times Von Reichenau stressed the most intense persecution and immediately carried out the punishments publicly posted up for such crimes. With regards to that the Supreme Commander in his daily orders had informed all the officers and soldiers of regulations of conduct of a very positive nature. One of these orders was so stringent that I still remember it. The wording was, "To all officers of my staff and to all officers and enlisted men under my command: I prohibit for all officers and soldiers not members of a commando carrying out these orders that they stand around as spectators and loiterers" - and this word (loiterers ' was so stringent "when the commando carry out their difficult tasks and thus prevent them from doing them properly". The wording went on to say that even every officer that loitered around the executions as a spectator would be put in that category.

The local reports of the sub-commander had to be sent to Group C and in regular intervals a report on the activity of the Kommando had to be given also. Furthermore, the enemy espionage material had to be secured for AOK 6. The connection with Group C was only possible via Army radioo because we had no radio installations of our own. Furthermore, the Supreme Commander requested reports concerning the condition of the territories in the Ukrainian area. In the same way, such reports were made for Group C. Every commander had to make a report also on the situation.

The bodies were mutilated in a most horrible way. I personally even saw that five German soldiers, shot in the back, had their backs slit on an iron gate and one morning they were found like that. From further reports, I also remember that Pro-German Ukrainians were killed by terror groups by being put alive into boiling water and when the German troops marched in a few hours later, they found these people partly living. Those were a few occurrences picked out of the many reports which we received at Sokol.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, now I should submit Document No. 2 and have the witness comment about it, and, therefore, I dare to suggest to the Tribunal that maybe we should start our recess now.

THE PRESIDENT: The suggestion is welcomed and the Tribunal will recess until 1:45.

(A recess was taken until 1345 hours.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. HEIM (for the defendant Blobel): With the permission of the Tribunal I will continue with the questioning of the defendant Blobel. We stopped talking about August 1941, and I take the liberty, Your Honors, in this connection to submit the Document Blobel No. 2 as Exhibit No. 2. It is the second photostatic copy in Document Book 1 for the defendant Blobel, and it is headed, "Division and Subordination in Sonderkommando 4-A at the end of August 1941." BY DR. HEIM: front of you, the division and subordination of SK-4-A at the end of August 1941. leader is mentioned. From his a channel of commend exists to the Ukrainian Battalion and the police regiments, and an exchange of information with the AOK 6. And finally, a channel of command of Einsatzgruppe C. Subordinate to AOK 6 was the Section C, which was at the same level, concerning orders, as Einsatzgruppe C. Between Section C of the AOK 6 and Einsatzgruppe C, there was an information service and also a channel of command. The SK 4-A, as the line from Einsatzgruppe C to SK 4-A shows, received the instructions and orders immediately from Einsatzgruppe C whereby the channel of command was between the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe C and the Chief of the SK 4-a. As the chart also shows, the two sub-kommandos of the Security Police were in the area of the territory of the Army Commander, and also the Waffen-SS. Immediately subordinate to the AOK 6 were the security divisions with the Ukrainian militia in the army units, the local commandants throughout the territory, together with the Ukrainian security units which were attached to them. On the left side of the chart it shows that the orderly room consisted of three officers, six *CO's and privates, one cook and helper, and also one or two interpreters.

The sub-kommandos had to discuss, screen, interrogate, make out documents, and to carry out executive measures, together with the Army, or units with whom they worked. At the same time, the sub-kommandos helped with the combating of partisans, together with the army, the local commanders, and Ukrainian militia in the Army units.

His manner was inconsideration of others; given orders should only be reported when they had actually been executed.... His instructions were supported through the SS and Police Court of which he was the presiding judge.

Q Were the Ukrainian militia units the same as the Army units?

A No; there were Ukrainian security units with the local commandanturas; secondly, Ukrainian militia units within the Army - that is, with the Security Division of the Army. Witness, will you please comment on these reports?

A I was not present during this event. It happened when I was absent, at the time I was at the hospital in Lublin. In this connection, however, I want to point out that this report is not correct, and that there is a discrepancy in it. In the Situation Report No. 37 of 29 July 1941, Document No. 2952, Exhibit 71, the execution of 400 persons in Shitomir is mentioned, by the SK 4-A. In the Operation Report No. 47, of 9 August 1941, Document 2947, Exhibit 82, from the Book II-C - there it also says that in Shitomir 400 people were executed.

DR. HEIM: Your Honors, may I state where you can find the two documents the witness just mentioned? The Document NO-2952, Exhibit 71,is contained in Document Book II-C of the Prosecution, on page 18 of the German text. The Document 2947, Exhibit 82, is contained in Document Book II-C, on page 72 of the German text.

Some were in favor of the Germans, and some strongly disapproved of the Germans. The armed civilian resistance was carried out by civilian agents of the Russian NKWD who organized it and carried out by them. Civilian snipers, partisans, spies, agents, saboteurs of traffic, railroads and streets, of communications and army property, could be found. Russian agents formed resistance groups against the German army. Partisans and guerrilla bands were active. Excesses took place, murders and arson were committed, they tried also to destroy the harvest and the machines. The Russians helped these partisans and guerrillas and suddenly a great number of people moved from the east to the west. Parachutists acted as agents.

At the same time the activities of these offices had to be carried out in the same territory. For example, the agricultural leaders were operating very near the fighting units. It was the same with the police and security tasks of the higher SS and police leader and the units intended for the army, such as the security division of the army, the secret field police, local kommandanturas with their local Ukranian security units and the Ukranian militia units as part of the security units. Also the front units with their security behind the front line or in the area near the front. In the same territory, the higher SS and police leader had his police regiments of the regular police and the Ukranian militia also subordinate to him. The sub kommandos were in the areas near the combat line subdivided into smaller divisions. same place?

A The result was something similar. In the same territory the higher SS and police leader was with his advanced regiments and the regular police and the Ukranian militia units who were subordinate to him, and on the other hand the army with the subordinate units, security divisions and the Ukranian militia units, also the secret field police and the local commandanturas and the Ukranian security departments. Reports about endangering the security came repeatedly to the Einsatz Fuehrer of the army near the front. The measures were carried out by the army leaders themselves, that is, measures according to the army orders were carried out independently or with the instructions of the competent Department "C" of the front divisions or the security divisions. The latter were executive organs to whom the local commandanturas with their Ukranian security units and the militia units which I have already mentioned, were attached. They were all subordinate. To seize the people who gave the information and their means of information were to be seized. Such persons had to be given to the G-2 section immediately to be interrogated. Apart from the military reconnaissance they had to transmit political information. The number of such persons who took part in this was very large on the whole and extended from place to place.

Another task was the reconnaissance about the whereabout of guerilla forces, their propaganda, their arms strength and their informations and channels of communication, and agents. Reports about these investigations to the competent agents in their territory supporting them, assistance when seizing such opponents, interrogation of the persons arrested, preparing of records and additional information to the information the G-2 officers had gotten.

Q What kind of an illness did you have? the time and the staff physicians of the AOK 6 looked after me. and if so, who was this deputy?

A No special deputy was appointed. My chief had their spheres of work. The interpreters Mueller and Radetzky looked after the information service and the sub-commando leaders who were 100 to 120 kilometers away automatically arranged everything with the competent army agencies, the local commanders, the G-2 of the divisions and leaders and commanders of the divisions.

Q What was the reaction to the measures which had been ordered?

A The measures were not approved of. Dr. Rasch withdrew from the vicinity of the SS and police leader and went with some of his group staff to Novo Ukarinka, and the sub-kommandos of the SK 4A withdrew further back to the front. German text. I believe in the English text it is page 82, it is the document exhibit 82, document NO 2947.

MR. HOCHWALD: It is on page 66 of the English.

DR. HEIM: I beg your pardon.

Q Do you have the documents?

Q Exhibit 82, document NO. 2947, in this document it is reported and I quote:

"In Berdichew until the arrival of Einsatz Kommando 5, a unit of Einsatz Kommando 4-A was committed. 148 Jews were executed because of looting, Einsatz commando 5 further executed 74 Jews up to this time."

Witness, will you please comment on this part of the document?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, what page of the original is that on? What page of the German original, because the report is rather long.

MR. HOCHWALD: In the English it is on page 71 in the middle of the page, the fifth paragraph from the top.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, thank you. when you refer to a report, Dr. Heim, and then it has been located, please indicate the page of the original, because it does not always correspond with the mimeographed copy. Some times you may have a page and a half of the original report on just one page of the mimeographed copy.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor, for helping me.

Q Will you please comment on this passage in the document? measures only upon the order of the competent army commander, but there is also a possibility that this instruction was given by the higher SS and police leader and that the staff was in Berdichew. I was not present myself during this event. It must heave happened during the advance. page 122 of the German text. It is document Exhibit 23, document No. 3154.

MR. HOCHWALD: The document is on page 89 of the English, Your Honor. BY DR. HEIM:

Q It is situation report No. 80 of the 11 September 1941. I quote from about the middle of page 122 of the German text which is at the beginning of page 13 of the original. It is the third paragraph in the original I quote:

"In Korosten, according to reports received, numerous Jews who had previously fled had gathered again, constituting a source of continuous unrest.

"238 Jews who had been rounded up and driven to a special building by the Ukrainian militia, were shot.

"In Fastow, where the Secret Field police of the local command post and a Landesschuetzen Batallion had already liquidated about 39 snipers and 50 Jews, order could be fully restored only after Special Kommando 4-a had shot a former terrorist and all the whole Jewish inhabitants between the ages of 12, and 60, making a total of 262 heads.

"Therefore, the execution figure of SK A4 until the 24-8-1941, amounts to 7152 persons."

Witness, how do you explain this report just submitted?

Ukranian militia, but the SK-4-A had nothing to do with these actions, because Ukrainian militia were not subordinate to the SK-4-A. Also the SK-4-A could not give orders to Ukrainian militia, and SK-4-A was also not mentioned as an executive unit. Fastow is 90 kilometers to the east of Zhitomir, to the southeast, and very near the combat area, it was an artillery zone around Kiev. In this territory only a Commander of the Army or a unit commander of the Army could have given orders. Whether Subkommando 4-A ever went into Fastow I personally do not know.

It says then, "With that the figures of executions by the SK-4-A amounts to 7152." The difference between this figure and the previous figure, 2531, cannot be understood, and does not conform with the facts. This description in the report shows that all figures in Korosten and Fastow, where the SK-4-A is not mentioned, were added to a total, an addition according to territory results, of figures of executions by the SK-4-A through the information service. It is very probable that from situation reports where events in the Ukrainian territory were mentioned, these figures were included in the figures of the nearest headquarters.

Q Was the execution of the persons mentioned there ordered by you? order.

Q Who gave the order for the executions then?

A I personally do not know. In Korosten it must have been that authority to whom the Ukrainian militia was subordinate. This might have been an Army unit or the Higher SS and Police Leader. As to the Fastow case, either the front can have given the order or the security division belonging to the AOK/6.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, just for a point of information. Witness, where were you when Special commando 4-A was in Fastow?

DR. HEIM: Witness, do you understand the President's question?

THE WITNESS: Yes, where was I when the Sonderkomando 4-A was in Fastow.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: We had a subkommando to the south. I personally was in Shitomir in the orderly room.

THE PRESIDENT: And whom had you authorized to head the Kommando 4-A in Fastow while you were in Shitomir?

THE WITNESS: At the south territory there was a Subkommando South near Biala Zerkjew Wassilkow at the time.

THE PRESIDENT: Either I didn't get your answer or I didn't make my question clear enough. Whom had you authorized to direct Special Kommando 4-A when it was in Fastow and you weren't there, you were in Shitomir? To whom had you delegated your authority to command the unit when you were not there?

THE WITNESS: The subkommando leader of the commando South was Jantzen. About September he was ill in Zhitomir for sometime, and shortly before the kommando moved he came back to the kommando. At that time, as far as I remember, the kommando was subordinated to the GFP there, that is the Secret State Police, because there was no other leader at their disposal.

THE PRESIDENT: But you were normally the leader of this SK-4-A, were you not?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I was the chief of the entire command.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, that is right. Well, you weren't in Fastow when these events occurred, as you have told us, but who was in charge of the Kommando in Fastow? Being the leader, whom had you delegated to lead the Kommando?

THE WITNESS: I did not give any such order. I only heard about this event in this report, and the leader in September, Jantzen, was ill in Zhitomir for two weeks during that time.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, I didn't say that you had ordered anybody. I am just asking whom you placed in command of Special Kommando 4-A during the time that these events occurred since you were not there.

THE WITNESS: In this lower territory there was a Subkommando South, and it was lead by the leader, Jantzen.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, was it Jantzen who was in Fastow when this occurred?

THE WITNESS: Whether he was in Fastow I don't know,but he was in Biala Zerkjew. That is further southeast.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, if Special Kommando 4-A was in Fastow at the time indicated, then it was Jantzen who was in charge of it at that time. Well then, I take your answer to be that it was Jantzen.

THE WITNESS: Jantzen was in charge of the Southeast Subkommando, but whether this Subkommando went to Fastow, I only just read that in these documents, that it actually had been there.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. HEIM: couls you give orders to them and tell them the commitment? in their territory they were subordinate to the Army Commander in the territory. They were part of the division where they operated at the time.

Q At the time did you give orders for executions? of the German text. It is the document, Exhibit 73, Document NO-3151.

Q (Continuing) It is the situation report No. 86 of the 17th of September 1941. On Page 32 of the German text, Page 17 of the original text, ti says in the third paragraph, Page 17 of the original, continuation of the original, Paragraph 4 of Page 17 of the original, I quote: "that the Sonderkommando 4-A has exterminated 6584 Bolshevists, Jews and asocial elements." Witness, will you please comment on this?

total are incorrect. It is contrary to the facts. Exhibit 73, NO-3151, Document Book II-C of the Prosecution. It says that the SK-4-A, according to the situation report No. 86 of 17 September 1941 executed 6584 persons. On the other hand the SK-4-A until 24 August 1941 is supposed to have shot 7152 persons, as the document Exhibit 23, Document NO-3154 shows. This document is contained in Document Book I of the Prosecution, on Page 122 of the German text. It is a situation report No. 80 of 11 September 1941.

THE PRESIDENT: What was that document number again, please?

DR. HEIM: The document quoted here last is Exhibit 23, No-3154. It is a situation report No. 80 of 11 September 1941.

Q (By Dr. Heim) Witness, how do you explain inconsistency shown in the documents according to which, until 24 August 1941 the total figure of executions carried out by the SK-4-a is 7152 persons, while according to a later report of 17 September 1941 it is only 6584? execution figures in the reports. While on the 24th of August, 1941, according to Document 3154, 7152 have been listed as the total figure, the situation report of 17 September,1941, shows the figure 6584, without correcting an obvious mistake.

THE PRESIDENT: Which of these figures do you tell us is correct?

THE WITNESS: Neither of these figures, your Honor. The reason is this, the total figures contain the execution figures of others, of the militia and of other units, and also executions carried out by the SK 4A. All these units took part and all these figures are added up here. This is an addition according to territory and the situation reports mentioned only the total. It is shown there, so many people were shot by the militia, then, on that day the Army shot so many people. At is a situation report covering all the sectors adding all the figures and sent to Group C.

THE PRESIDENT: What is the purpose in pointing out the discrepancy in these figures between the two reports?

THE WITNESS: First of all 7152 are supposed to have been shot, on the 24th of August, by the SK 4A, but on the 17th of September the report says that there were only 6584, that is about three and a half weeks later there is a difference of approximately six to seven hundred.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, I know there is a difference. I say, what is your purpose in pointing out a discrepancy? You have given us this for some purpose. What is the theory of the discrepancy?

THE WITNESS: What I am trying to say is that the figures mentioned in the documents here could not possibly be correct and that the information is incorrect.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, could one of the figures be correct?

THE WITNESS: No, it cannot be correct, because I have read in the previous documents that for example in Luck 1160 and another 300 and a few others were shot and there it says expressly that police, Army, together shot so and so many, the Ukrainian militia so many. In other words,all the units together achieved this figure.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, do I understand you are attacking the arithmetic of the reports?

THE WITNESS: The addition in itself is not correct. Whether the facts actually were like this I cannot say. It is possible, of course.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

( A recess was taken)

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed.

Q (By Dr. Heim) Witness, before the recess, we stopped with two activity reports which contradicted each other, as you said. You were asked by the President why you drew the attention of the Tribunal to this contradcition. Witness, was it your intention thus to explain that the activity reports submitted by the prosecution do not correspond to the actual executions, or, at least the figures mentioned in the reports? tioned therein. They are not correct themselves. The facts do not correspond to those mentioned here, namely, that SK 4a was competent for these figures. It is the addition of these various units which participated in these incidents.

Q Who was responsible for the reports of Einsatzgruppe C? Group C, Regierungsrat, administrative councillor Dr. Hofmann.

Q Can you comment on Dr. Hofmann's procedure of making reports from your own knowledge? unfair in drafting his reports. He was unfair to the Group Chief and also to the Reich Security Main Office. In the general reports about territories all events were mentioned which concerned executive measures and executions, as far as they were known to the sub-kommandos. These general reports were mentioned by Hofmann as the output, as the accomplishment, as it were, of the Kommandos.

Q What is your opinion as to why Hofmann reported these happenings? power. For this very reason, his reports were untrue and incorrect. His personal ambition and the high figures which he mentioned and the promotion were his leading motives.

on the commander of the RSHA? chief of staff of Einsatzgruppe C. He was actually in charge of Group C and all sub-departments and administrative matters. He was guided by his personal ambition and he was known as a very ambitious person in his attitude and in his aims. He was generally noted as a cunning liar. Dr. Rasch was led by him, whereas it should have been vice versa. Radomyschl? and that was in August 1941. After the order by the higher SS and Police leader about the more severe measures against the Jews became known, this sub-kommando moved further to the last at the front line near the territory of the Waffen SS, which had been assigned to this territory, and which was subordinated and given to the kommando for the combatting of armed bands, and which was active there. It was the territory of Malyn Macarow. The time was the middle of August, 1941.

Q I now refer to Document Book II-A of the prosecution. It is page 93 of the German and it is 86a of the English text. It is Document NO-3149. It is Exhibit 46. It is an Operational Situation Report is for the 9th of September, 1941. It is Operational Report 88. I quote from the third paragraph of page 93, that is the German text, 88 of the English text. It is on page 4 of the original about the middle of the page and it is headed, "Measures in the sphere of the Security Police." I quote.

Q I quote: "On the 6th of October, 1941, the-

THE PRESIDENT: We have September. You read "October."

THE INTERPRETER: It was my mistake, Your Honor. He said the 9th.

Q (By Dr. Heim) On the 6th September 1941, the Kommando 4a carried out a Jewish action in Radomyschl. There, Jews had convened from the entire vicinity.

The Jewish apartments, therefore, were overfilled. On the average 15 people lived in one room. Sanitary conditions, therefore, had become untenable. Every day several Jewish corpses had been taken away from the houses. Food for the Jews as well as for children could not be issued. As a consequence of this increasing danger, contagious diseases existed. Therefore, 1,107 Jews were shot by Kommando 4a and 561 more Jews were shot by the Udrainian militia." That is the end of my quotation. I ask you, Witness, does this report correspond, to the facts?

A I cannot give you my own picture of the circumstances. Rad_ omyschl was was 50 to 60 kilometres east of Shitomir. Therefore, even if this report corresponds to the facts, the competence was in the hands of the local commander or the medical departments of the Army. The spreading of disease in the units of the Army was very prevalent at the time. I myself was suffering from Wolhynian fever at that time.

Q Could you order such an action at all?

A The order for such an action could only be given by AOK/6, the competent Army authorities in agreement with the supreme commander of the AOK/6 and the SS Police Leaders. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Witness, Dr. Heim asked you a question which you did not answer. After he read from the report in question he said to you, "Is this report in agreement with the facts?" Now will you please answer that question put to you by your own counsel? not from my own experience. At a later date I heard a report about conditions in Radomyschl, in which it said that an action by the Higher SS and Police Leaders had been carried out. with the facts? are as described here, whether that was so in individual cases, I don't know.

I know in any case that the action by the Higher SS and Police Leaders was carried out. you, or, at least, you have seen the report. The report is very specific. Your attorney asked you, "Is this report in accordance with the facts?" In reply, you said, first, that you did not know of the situation when it occurred. Later on you learned the facts. Now I ask you, is this report in agreement with the facts? who was in constant contact with the SS and Police Leaders, some epidemics must have occurred and an action did take place.

Q Then there were executions?

A Yes. The Higher SS and Police Leaders carried out an execution. That is correct. The fact that an execution had taken place was confirmed later on. executed because a supply of food for the children was impracticable? 4a?

A No, that was not mentioned to me as a fact. I only heard that a part

Q How many were shot by that Kommando?

A It was never stated exactly. People participated who actually belonged to the Ko mmando North and who at that time were in Radomyschl.

Q How many were shot by Kommando 4a, do you know?

Q How many juveniles were shot by the Ukrainian militia?

A I don't know that either.

Q And how many Jews were overcrowded in the flats?

A I do not know exactly. I did not receive the news.

Q Then you tell us now that you din't know the facts at all, is that right?

A The facts I did not see with my own eyes. I only know -

Q Did you learn of the facts? You told us that someone had related to you what had happened. Now did he mention these items which I just read to you, and which your counsel read to you?

stances, that the Higher Police

Q Now, now, witness, let us be a little specific. I asked you a series of questions. I'll repeat them. First you tell us that you do not know of the facts of your own personal knowledge because you were not there. Now let us agree upon that. Were you there, or not there?

A I wasn't there.

Q Very well. Then you tell us that someone related to you what had happened, is that right?

A Yes, that's correct.

Q Yes. Now, did he tell you that 1107 Jewish adults were shot by Commando 4-A?

Q All right. Did he tell you that 561 juveniles were shot by the Ukrainian Militia? living in a room? for the children, was impracticable?

Q Answer that question. Did he tell you this.... that there wasn't enough food for the children?

Q All right. Then you don't know anything about these facts, do you? as that action was carried out in this town which was reported to me by Meier.

you agreed with the facts. Now you tell us that you were not there, and the person who spoke about the episode did not tell you any of the facts which I read from the report. That's right, isn't it? this at all, are you? You cannot tell whether this report is correct or not? later. each item, that Meier had not told you that. So, therefore, you have no knowledge of these facts at all, not even from hearsay; so, therefore, you cannot tell whether this report is correct or not, can you?

A That is quite correct, Mr. President.

Q Yes. All right. Proceed.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, may I draw your attention to the fact that the witness save me the following answer: "From my own, knowledge I can give no picture of the circumstances as they happened." And, putting it in one sentence, he continued: "But if it is based on actual facts, the local commander was responsible."

THE PRESIDENT: Well, naturally, if he said he wasn't there, he knew nothing about it, and he gave no order, his conclusion is that he is not responsible. The point that seems rather strange to me is that you would ask him whether this report agreed with the facts when he tells us that he knew nothing about the facts.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, it becomes evident from the report that allegedly executions were carried out by SK 4-a. I merely wanted to know from the witness whether it corresponds to the facts that these executions were carried out by the SK 4-a.

BY DR. HEIM:

Q Witness, I have another question to put to you. Did you, as the commander of SK 4-a, have anything to do with the executions mentioned in this document? authority and the AOK/6 and I have nothing to do with the action and the circumstances as described in the document. I was told about them afterwards. I was told about the participation of a number of men ordered by the local police commander. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Who was in command in the field, of Commando 4-a at this time? in this town - Radomyszl? not actually present in Radomyszl at the time of the date of this document. September 6th?

Q Were they under you?

A Yes, they were subordinated to me; to the Staff 4-a, and to myself, as I was the Commando Leader. BY DR. HEIM: fact that a group of the SK 4-a had participated in this action?

A No, that was not known to me. I only learned that very much later from Sturmbannfuehrer Meier, who was in the office of the Higher Police and SS leader and who, based on these facts, made an examination, an investigation at SK 4-a in Shitomir, for the reason of finding out whether the sub-commando witch was stationed in the northern territory was authorized to get an additional supply from the country itself.

The following event happened. The sub-commando had moved to MalynMacarow, further to the East, in the middle of August - and they had left four people in Radomyszl who kept pigs - which was their so-called fat store - and one day the SS and Police Leader came with his staff, and he established that there were four members of the SK left there, and he ordered them to carry out this action and at the same time he confiscated a few pigs. The report of this officer went to the Higher SS and Police Leader, and he gave them to Meier, and Meier had to ask us about this. And eight or ten days later he made an inquiry into the matter and on that occasion Meier told me that an action had taken place, and three people of yours were used in this action. That is how I found out about this action, but the leader of the sub-commandos did not know anything about it at the time. They only learned later, when - preparing their march to Kiev - they wanted to fetch their sausages and their ham and these were gone.

Q Who carried out the action, generally? regiments of the Higher SS and police leader of the Ukrainian umilitia and a number of men of the SK 4-a, that is, the Part Special Commando North who were stationed at the time in Radomyszl. by the sub-commando independently? when I met the leaders again in Kiev I heard about it because they were very much embittered that the supply had been taken awry. An independent report on the part of the sub-commando was never issued. such an "operational report" had been received by you?

that 1107 men had been executed, I would have asked him: with your 15 men only? He certainly would appeared to be a liar.

THE PRESIDENT: It is not clear to me, Dr. Heim, just what this last exchange was. I understand you asked him - what would he have done if the writer of the report had told him that 1107 Jews had been executed... Was that the question you put to him?

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I asked him: What would you have done as leader of SK 4-a, and what would you have said, if your sub-commando leader had reported to you to the effect that the sub-commando had carried out shootings of 1107 people?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes; and his reply was that he would have called this man a liar. Yes. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Witness, why would you have celled him a liar? Did you know what the facts were? Did you know how many were killed? were killed? know, I would have asked him .. Where did you got this report from... Who ordered it to you... And I would have said it is impossible that 1107 people were shot in one day by 15 people. would know that 1107 people could not have been shot in the period of time indicated, is that right?

Q You would know that as an expert?

A Yes; according to the order, executive measures issued by the Higher commander, this would have been impossible, that he would have shot 1107 people in one day with 15 people.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

DR. HEIM: I now come back to the document discussed last, which is Document Book II-A of the Prosecution, on page 93, I think it is, page 86 of the English. It is Document NO-3149, Exhibit 46, on page 8 of the original document. It says in the last but one paragraph, the last sentence, that is, the original document, page 8, last paragraph, last sentence.

DR. HOCHWALD: Your Honors, on page 89, third paragraph from the top.

THE PRESIDENT: That is the page we were already on.

DR. HOCHWALD: That is the next page, the sentence following the quotation by Dr. Heim.

THE PRESIDENT: I see.

DR. HEIM: I quote: "Thereby the Sonder-kommando has taken care of a total of 11,328 Jews till 6 September 1941."

BY DR. HEIM: ed in that report? In the proceding document, II_C, Document 3151, Exhibit 73 of the Prosecution, page 32 of the German Book, it says that on the 17th of September that SK 4-a carried out executions of 6,548 people. According to the Operational Situation Report 88, Document 3149, of the 19th of September 1941, according to this report, as I say, the Special Commando 4-a until the 6th of September 1941 executed 11,328 people. This comparison shows very clearly the incorrectness of the Operational Situation Reports, which contradictseach other if we regard then closely.

Q This rapid increase of the numbers -- how can you explain it? The discrepancy between these two reports?

total figure of 7,152 on the 24th of August 1941. The Operational Situation Report of the 17th of September 1941, Document 3151, reports the number 6,584 on this day. The Operational Situation Report of the 19th of September 1941 mentions a total figure of 11,328 on the 6th of September 1941. The figure 11,328 on 6 September 1941 is in no logical connection to the figure 6,584 In the report of the 17th of September 1941... just as little as 11,328 to 7,152 of the 24th of August 1941. Experience tells me that Hofmann as a reporter got a supply of reports from the Army authorities via Sturmbannfuehrer Heier, which he used these figures in his own reports. Apart from these documents, the situation reports of the sub-kommandos were at his disposal, the reports of the commanders of the subcommandos, in which the activities of all units stationed in the territory were reported about. The text of the reports which went to Berlin was in the hands of Hofmann. BY THE PRESIDENT: to the events of September 6th in Radomyszl? Berdichew and sent current reports to Gruppe C because that was his assignment. It was his duty, in fret, to maintain the connection between the Gruppe C leader and the Gruppe, and he currently reported to Hofmann about these general happenings. September 6th?

A Whether Hofmann established this figure, I cannot say. The additionamust have been made in Berlin. Hofmann will have reported for the territory, saying that in his particular tine so and so many executions were carried out. Under this particular unit the EK 5, the SK 4-b, or SK 4-a, and in my opinion these were added as being within the territory.

on September 6, 1941? How many men were in that sub-commando? four men -

Q How many?

A Four men.... four men.....

A No; the entire sub-commando had only 15 State police and SD men of the SK 4-a. executed in one day, you said that 15 men could not do it. So there were 15 men in the operation?

A That's correct. The Kommando was operated by four men in Radomyszl and the others were in the front line division in MalynMacarow. There was a distance between these units of 40 or 50 kilometers. That was the only independent Kommando which they had, which the officer of the Higher Police and SS leader had found somewhere. executed 1107 persons, you said you would have called him a liar because 15 men could not have executed that many. That is what I understood you to say. one leader.

Q But 15 men could not have executed that many in one day?

Q How much time is required for an execution? the Supreme Commander was, two rifles to one person, one firing squad; and if I now think about it, for a short while, and as I experienced myself in Sokal when twice approximately 30 men were shot. The whole duration of the leading in of the prisoners - it takes about 10 minutes.

If I then work it out mathematically, it means that in an hour six squads are active, and if I think about the firing duration, I begin to think that it is impossible that this could be carried out

Q Well, I don't see where it is so incredible. Suppose that 1107 men were taken by trucks cut into the woods, or into a field.... that would only require one operation. You have them out there. Then they are lined up. You say there are 15 men in the shooting party, and two rifles to a person.... that would give you on the average of 71/2 per shooting... In order to work this out without too much complication, we will say seven to a shooting. With 100 shootings you would have disposed of 700 people, wouldn't you?

Q Yes. All right. And now, how much tine is required to lead out seven men and to shoot them down? That certainly wouldn't take more then four or five minutes, at most, would it?

A That would take ten minutes, certainly... to line up, to lead in, and line up the prisoners. To make the firing squad ready, to put down rifles, to take them up.... the carrying away of the corpses to the graves, and the leading in of the further seven men. all, would be 42.

an hour would be 42? day, this was in the month of September, when you had plenty of day light, you would have 15 or 16 hours of daylight, and if they were operating continuously 700 or 800 could have been killed in one day.

A Your Honor, no kommando can stand up to this. If a kommando works perhaps an hour it is enough and it cannot be put to shooting people all of the time, that is too much.

Q Well then how many could have been executed in one day normally? What number would you have regarede as not being subject to criticism or as being an exaggeration? men and each shooting took about an hour, and afterwards their nerves were in a very bad state and you could not have used these people again the same day, one would have had to put up many more kommandos if you wish 1100 people to be shot in one day, that is impossible, incredible. on day, you wouldn't have called him a liar, would you?

A No, one wouldn't do that. I knew my men. category of a credible or veracious person? concerned, you must have a unit with a special guards and a special unit which has no other assignment than shooting and for the guarding of corpses of 200 people, there must be other guards, there must be other units.

Q Did you say "guarding the corpses?" somewhere, they had to be guarded.

Q Why did you have to guard the corpses?

Q Oh, I understood you to say you had to guard the corpses. Very well, proceed Dr. Heim. BY DR. HEIM: mentioned, are these executions mainly Jews, if that report is correct at all? Jews. text, as the document Exhibit 81, document 3146, in the English document book it is on page 62. It is operational situation report No. 94 of the 25 September 1941, on page 69 of the German copy, page 14 of the original, approximately at the beginning of the page 14 of the original copy, under No. I, it says and I quote:

"The group staff is still at Nowa Ukrainka. After the fall of Kiev, headquarters will be shifted to that place. Sonderkommanda 4a is still in Shitomir; Teilkommandos at Radomysihl and Bialacerkiew. Other Kommandos are deployed in the area of Malin-Macharow, Korosten and east of Wassilkow."

MR. HOCHWHALD: Your Honors, it is on p ge 64 of the English document book in the middle of the page. There is the Roman numeral I - Locations. BY DR. HEIM:

I continue quoting:

"On the basis of an agreement with the Army High Command it is guaranteed that a Vorauskommando of Eisatzkommando 4a and of the Group staff will march into Kiev with the advance guard after the fall of the town." paragraph and it says:

"Sonderkommando 4a has now surpassed the number of 15,000 executions."

15,000. Did this Sonderkommanda 4a carry out any further assignments in that section there? these few days. According to my knowledge document 3149 of 19 September 1941 mentioned the number, 11328, document 3146, however of the 25 September mentions the number over 15,000. These two figures show a difference of 3672 people. Assignments of these measures in the period mentioned were not carried out and were not participated in by any of the SK 4a.

Q The stations and garrisons mentioned in the document Ex. 81 with regard to SK 4A are they correct? commando was at Makarow, the Southern subcommando was in a sector near Wassilkow with troops in Kopastow. That was in the vicinity of Wassickow. The orderly room remained in Shitomir until October 1941. The subcommando 4a was not stationed in Korosten, but the interrogators had carried out interrogations on the orders of the higher SS and police leaders. The locations Korosten and Radomyszl are not correct, for this period. lation which just occurred. The witness said the orderly room of SK 4a remained until the march of 17 September 1941 in Shitomir. I think the word October was mentioned. SK 4a had sent an advance commando to Kiev, who gave the order to send the mentioned advance Kommandos of the SK 4A to Kiev? and I received an order from the group because only special units which were agreed upon beforehand were allowed to enter Kiev.

Q Will you give us further details about the march towards Kiev?

direction northeast to Macharow with its special advance units. The south commando, however, was ordered to march together with the advance commando Haefner and together with the 29th Army Corps to Kiev, from the territory around Wassilkow. The orderly room of the SK 4a with the 8 or 10 men who were left there with the kitchen machinery and the vehicle repair shops and with the Ukrainian personnel marched on the 17 September 1941 in the direction of Kiev from Shitomir, on a detour road in the north. The garrison of the AOK 6 was given the opporutnity to contact the staff officers of the army group again, and on the same day Paltawa has been taken by German troops.

Q When did you reach Kiev yourself? I reached ths suburb of Kiev and I met the Commander Haefner and on the 24 of September 1941 I reached Kiev itself .

Q When did the individual subkommandos of the SK A4 reach Kiev? that is about 8 or 10 men under Haefner, also the South subkommando under Jantzen, the North Kommando, and the Waffen SS from the Northern territory reached Kiev on the 25 September.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, do you think we might suspend at this point?

DR. HEIM: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess - do you have something, Dr. Ficht?

DR. FICHT: For the Defendant Biberstein: tomorrow afternoon's session because he has to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Biberstein will be excused from attendance in Court tomorrow afternoon.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 0930 29 October 1947)

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal No. II. A.

Military Tribunal No. II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Just before you begin, Dr. Heim, I would like to make a short announcement. On Friday afternoon the Tribunal will recess at three instead of four-thirty. In order to make up that hour's time, We may run a little later this afternoon. We may go as far as five o'clock this afternoon and five o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and then on Friday at three o'clock we will terminate for the week, so that the attorneys can make whatever plans they desire. to trial briefs. At the end of the trial, of course, each counsel will address the Tribunal in behalf of his client. In addition to that, if he wishes, he may beforehand prepare and submit to the court what we call a trial brief, a brief on the law and on the facts. the defendants in order to analyze the various documents. It may be impossible in the course of an examination or cross-examination or in a final summation speech to refer to all of the documents in a way that would be entirely satisfactory to the attorney and his client, so that you are advised that, if you wish, the Tribunal does not request, but, if you wish, you may prepare a brief on the documents and on the law involved in a particular case which you are handling. That, of course, applies to the prosecution also.

DR. HEIM (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BLOBEL): Your Honor, I permit meself to ask a question of the Tribunal. I think as far as I am concerned and, as far as my colleagues are concerned, it would be an advantage-

THE INTERPRETER: The switch here is out of order. I cannot hear the original.

(The sound system was repaired.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, after what the Tribunal has stated, I would like to ask a question. This is important for my colleagues as well. and it would be to their advantage to know today what period of time is allotted for this closing speech, because this time and the knowledge of this time would be important to us, because we could then tell to what extent and how long we should submit a closing brief to the Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Let me say very clearly that there are two items. one the closing speech, which is delivered orally and which, or course, is also written, but which is delivered physically by spoken words to the Tribunal, when all the testimony is in. That is a normal procedure and happens in every trial. within the time alloted to him, in the final speech, cover all angles of the case legally and factually, he may, in addition, prepare a brief in which he can point out various arguments legally and factually. These briefs should be prepared currently and one should not await preparation until the end of the trial. I would suggest that each attorney who believes he will prepare a brief, should start on it immediately upon the conclusion of his case, because he knows what he has presented and, of course, he knows what the prosecution has presented. The same things is true of the prosecution. not have time to go into all the documents in cross-examination. It may not even be necessary, but in preparing a brief and then every reference which the prosecution feels is necessary in order to establish the case may be made in that brief. Is that clear?

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: We only add that the Tribunal does not insist upon it that you prepare these briefs, but, if you do prepare them we shall be glad to have them.

DR. HEIM: Thank your, Your Honor. With the permission of the Tribunal I continue my direct examination of the Defendant Blobel, as a witness in his own defense.

PAUL BLOBEL __Resumed DIRECT EXAMINATION __ Continued BY DR. HEIM (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BLOBEL): Kommando 4a in Kiew. Witness, you said that various Kommandos of Special Kommando 4a arrived in Kiew on the 20th of November, 1941. with the mission of establishing themselves in Kiew, and then on the 24th of September you arrived yourself in Kiew and on the next day the two sub-kommandos arrived there too. In this connection, I would like to refer to Document Book I, page 149 of the German, page 415 of the English text. This is Document NO-3140, Exhibit 30.

In the English text on page 118, in the German text on page 150, it says, literally, at the beginning of page 9 of the original, about the middle of the page in both books-

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: On page 118 in Document Book I, in the middle, the heading is Kiew, "I, Kief."

Q I quote: "A Vorkommando of the Sonderkommando 4a led by Obersturmfuehrers Haefner and Janssen, 50 men strong, arrived on 19 September 1941 with the fighting troops in Kiew. The Main Kommando of the Sonderkommando 4a reached Kiew on 25 September 1941 after Standartenfuehrer Blobel had already been in Kiew on 21 and 22 September. The Vorkommando of the Gruppen staff, Hauptmann of the Schutzpolizei Krumme, Obersturmfuehrer Braun arrived in Kiew on 21 September 1941. The Gruppen staff followed on 25 September 1941."

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, you supplied the name which is absent in the English copy after "Standartenfuehrer". Which name did you read?

DR. HEIM: Your Honor. I beg your pardon.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: On page 115 of the document book it shows that the name is Blobel. Is that what Your Honors wanted to know?

THE PRESIDENT: That is right. Thank you very much.

Q (By Dr. Heim) Witness, is this description of the RSHA correct just as I have read it?

A The dates are not correct. Haefner and Janssen, as I have already mentioned, with 17 men and drivers, as well as with 28 men of the regular police arrived in Kiew after the day it was captured that is on the 20th of September. I personally arrived in Kiew on the 24th of September, one day before the Northern Kommando arrived. The Group Staff was already in Kiew when I arrived there. report is not correct, as far as the date of your arrival in Kiew is concerned?

A No, it was not the 21st and the 22nd of September. It was the 24th of September, 1941. answer until the translation has come through. Please describe briefly your first impressions about the conditions in Kiew. on their way to the front. Explosions to k place at various places. The inner city was in flames. Troops and units were quartered there. The roads were cleared of barricades by the troops. The part of the city which had been burned was evacuated by the population, who went to sleep in parks, and many buildings had been evacuated by the fleeing population.

Q When did the main Kommando of Special Kommando 4a reach Kiew?

A The Kommando designated "Main Kommando" was the northern subcommando with the Waffen-SS. This Kommando arrived on the 25th of September, 1947, in Kiew.

Q Where did Einsatzgruppe C take up headquarters? ing for its headquarters.

Q Where was the orderly room of Special Kommando 4a? space in a building nearby. The Ukrainian population greeted the German troops with obvious pleasure. :

Q What was the situation which Special Kommando 4a found in Kiew? Wehrmacht units went through the city and blew up the streets, but the fire spread to the other parts and did not stop. The entire city was a sea of flames and thick clouds of smoke covered the city.

Q What order came about as a result of this fire? 1941, all billets, those which were situated in the center of the city had to be evacuated. The Special Kommando 4a moved to a stadium on the Dnjepr River. All units which were not needed in Kiew had to evacuate the city.

Q Did this order also apply to the Group Staff? ing had been heavily damaged by explosions. to Special Kommando 4a? original units. The Regular Police joined the Group Staff in its guard duties.

Q Did sub-kommandos of the Special Kommando 4a remain in Kiew? ship of Untersturmfuehrer Mueller, up to then an interpreter, was ordered to report to Poltava at the front.

It consisted of a leader and 12 to 15 non-comissioned officers and men. that time?

A Yes, the leaders of the executive units. Hanf, Tausen, Haefner, Janssen, upon order of the Group, had to return to Berlin, to continue their studies. Dr. Funk had already left the Kommando in Shitomir.

Q Where did the rest of Special Kommando 4a stay? northern sub-kommando were billeted near the group which now occupied the main building of the NKVD, which it had confiscated.

Q What was the health condition of the members of this Kommando? had been taken to the hospital. I personally had been wounded on the Q How strong was SK 4a at that time? addition to about 1,745 men.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment. The witness apparently uses some technical expression which can very logically be interpreted in the manner in which the interpreter has given it to us, but that seems to clash with that has been stated before. The number did not reach the total now just stated so please repeat the number slowly and then we will see just what we get.

THE WITNESS: The Kommando contained about two-thirds of its original strength and the original strength was as follows: I Kommando leader, 7 officers, 45 men.

THE PRESIDENT: Because of that technical expression one seven four five we get the idea of 1,745 which, of course, is incorrect.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, please permit me to make an explanation about this concept, one dash seven dash four five. In the German Wehrmacht it was customary to list the leaders, the officers and the men, and list them in this position, numerically, and merely have a line between those numbers.

THE PRESIDENT: Do we understand that the first digit indicates the commanding officer; the second, the number of subordinate officers; and the third number or position of digits indicates the number of men. Is that correct?

DR. HEIM: Yes, that's right. Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you. BY DR. HEIM?

Q. Witness, you were just telling us how strong your commando was. About 30 men remained, including officers and men, including the advance commando which had advanced toward Poltawa under Mueller. What chiefs were at your disposal?

A. The following chiefs were at my disposal: Untersturmfuehrer Mueller with an advance detachment at the front; Hauptsturmfuehrer Radetzky, with a driver who had been ordered to go to Army Command 6, and the administrative officer who had been recalled to his original unit but who was still with my commando.

Q. How strong was the remainder of Sonderkommando 4-a which remained in Kiev?

A. The rest of Special Commando 4-a, including the office helps, men and drivers, amounted to fifteen or eighteen men in Kiev. That is, non-commissioned officers and men. Added to that was myself and the administrative officer.

Q. As leader of SK 4-a did you have any special duty to make out reports?

A. Outside of the fact that the persons had to be reported to the Group, I had no duty to report to Army Command 6 or to the Higher SS Police leader, or the town commandant.

Q. Where was the headquarters of the Higher SS and Police leader?

A. The staff of the Higher SS and Police leader immediately after marching into Kiev had set up headquarters there.

Q. Can you tell us what jobs the units had which were immediately under the command of the Higher SS and Police leader?

A. The police regiments of the regular police, as well as the mandant, had marched in and were used in combatting the fire, and also had to remove Russian explosives and road mines. There were thousands of mines on the roads, even in the city itself. The streets were just filled with mines.

Q. What units outside of combat units were stationed in Kiev at that time? the command of the town commandant. Other units, such as supply units of the Transportation Corps of the various Army units, who started to set up their supply camps, etc.

Q. What mission did the SK 4-A have in Kiev?

A. The missions of the commando in Kiev consisted, first, in ascertaining the situation in the town itself. Reports about the population, and from the troop units, were summarized and passed on to the Group.

Q. What can you tell us, briefly, about the conduct of the Russian enemy during your stay in Kiev?

A. The terror acts of the enemy groups were large-scale. There were attacks, shootings within and around the city, which became more frequent. Security units of the Army, of the regular police, and of the Ukrainian units, made possible many arrests of people.

Q. What measures did the military commander undertake against these acts?

A. The Army or the town commandant posted announcements and threatened severe punishments if the decrees which had been ordered were violated. All troop units were used in arresting sabotage troops and terrorists.

Q. Did the conference take place in Kiev about the execution of measures in order to re-establish security aid to fight these disturbances.

A. As I heard later on, a conference did take place.

Q. Do you know between whom this conference took place?

A. The conference took place between the town commandant of Kiev, Brigadier General Eberhardt, the Higher SS and Police leader Jeckeln, and the leader of the Einsatzgruppe C, Dr. Rasch, or his Chief of Staff, Hoffman.

Q. Were you present during that conference?

A. No, I did not take any part in such a conference with the town commandant or the SS Police leader. I was not ordered to attend such a conference. I was not able to do duty because of my head wound.

Q. Did you know the results of this conference?

A. I know that the Higher SS and Police leader after that conference ordered action against these terrorist attacks.

Q. In this connection I refer to Document Book I, on page 149 of the German text. This is Document NO-3140, Exhibit 30. This is the situation report 106 of the 7th of October 1941. On page 155 in the German book it says, literally.... it is in the beginning of page 15 of the original-

DR. HOCHWALD: It is page 124, Your Honor.

DR. HEIM: Witness, do you have this page?

WITNESS: Yes.

Q. (By Dr. Heim--continuing) I quote: "As an added factor it was proven that the Jews participated in the arson. The population expected adequate retaliatory measures by the German authorities. Consequently, all Jews of Kiev were requested, in agreement with the city com mander, to appear on Monday, 29 September until 8 o'clock, at a designated place.

These announcements were posted by members of the Ukrainian militia in the entire city. Simultaneously, it was announced orally that all Jews were to be moved." retaliatory measures in Kiev, or with ordering them?

A. As far as giving orders for those measures I had nothing to do with it. The decision was in the hands of the Higher SS and Police leader Jeckeln and the town commandant, or the commander of the Army area.

Q. Did you know at the time that the retaliatory measures had been ordered, and do you know the reason why they had been ordered?

A. An order for the retaliatory measure was reported to me via the Group staff. The reason for this order was to be found in these terrorist attacks which were currently known, and the fact that the fire in Kiev could be traced back to Jewish origin. And the daily reports about the front actions show this especially.

Q. Did you consider these retaliatory measures which had been military law?

A. The continuous arson, explosions, attacks and murders, and

Q. In the document just cited it says, in the continuation of the above mentioned citation, I quote:

"In collaboration with the Gruppen staff and to commandos of the September, 33,771 Jews."

Is this figure 33,771 Jews, correct in your opinion?

A. In my opinion this figure is exaggeratedly high.

Q. In the case of the people who were executed, were they ex clusively Jews?

A. I don't know that.

Q. Did the exact numbers of executees -- did they ever become known?

A. He, they never did become known exactly. A lot of guess work best.

As a basis for his figure, the evacuated apartments might have

Q. How many members of SK 4-a took part in this execution, who had been ordered to do so by the Higher SS and Police leader?

A. As far as I remember, according to the number of people then

Q. Were these 15 men joined in a firing squad?

A. The men of SK 4-a were assigned to the general duties, whether any such people had been ordered to join a firing squad, I don't know.

I just don't know.

Q. During the action in Kiev did an officer of SK 4-a participate?

A. No, an officer did not participate, and I myself was not present at the execution. I personally was not fit for duty at the time.

Q. Were any reports made out by SK 4-a, about this execution perhaps giving the numbers?

A. The possibility exists. In my sick room Hoffman reported on the 1st or 2nd of October, and told me that he reported to Berlin, that the Group staff and the SK 4-a, and police units, had shot 33,000 Jews. As a further document he requested a report by SK 4-a. He then repeated this request. Whether this report was written or whether he dictated it, I don't know.

Q. Did you contradict such a procedure, or object to such a procedure of reporting about executions?

A. I told Mr. Hoffman at the time that such a procedure of reporting would give a completely false picture in Berlin, and if Berlin would ask for reports under oath, steps would be taken against him and myself; but Hoffman had already reported to Berlin and was not prepared to correct his reports afterwards. He continued to send detailed reports about Kiev to Berlin, which have also been included in these operation reports.

Q. Did you -- that is to say, did the SK 4-a -- have anything to do with the collection of clothing, since it says in the document that money valuables and clothing were safeguarded?

A. The SK 4-a had nothing to do with that. As far as I knew, Ukrainian militiamen did this.

Q. Do you know who received these things?

A. The Ukrainians had the administration of these things. How they were distributed, and who was the recipient, I don't know. The militia was under the Higher SS and Police leader.

Q. I again refer to Document Book 1, page 156 of the German text.

This Exhibit 30, Document NO-3140. In the English document book it is page 115, under III, in the middle of page 16 of the original. We have a report -

DR. HOCHWALD: It is page 125 of the English, Your Honor. BY DR. HEIM:

(continuing) In the middle of page 16 of the original, under III, there is a report about the operation against the Jews in Shitomir. There it says, I quote: "After the confinement of the Jews to a resstricted area, which had been carried out by the Feldkommandantur following a suggestion of the Sonderkommando 4-a, a considerable calm was noticed, for example, at the markets and so forth." tion to the Field Command?

A. As far as I remember the SK 4-a in a report to Group C suggested this in its report, about the situation in Shitomir. This was done because the Ukrainians had often confiscated apartments from Jews who had moved there in 1937, and at that occasion murders and excesses had taken place.

Q. On the next page of the document, about the middle of the German text, a little below the middle on page 17 of the original, a conference which took place on the 10th of September 1941 in the Field Command is spoken of. According to this situation report, it had been decided as a result of this conference to eliminate and liquidate the Jews of Shitomir Completely and finally, - did you participate in this conference, witness?

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, the Prosecutor just drew my attention to the fact that in the English document book the 13th of September 1941 is given as the date of the conference. In my document book, in the German text, it says the 10th of September 1941. I cannot determine at the moment which one is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: May we not have a look at the photostat to determine which is the correct date?

DR. HOCHWALD: Your Honors, please, this document is Exhibit No. 30.

THE PRESIDENT: The Secretary General, will please locate that exhibit and submit it to the Tribunal.

Q. ( By Dr. Heim) Witness, did you participate in this conference at the Field Command?

A. I didn't take part in such a conference, but I can say definitely that the report about Shitomir was submitted to the SS and Polices leader Jeckeln. The order of Jeckeln about the shootings and what was to happen about the Jews was brought by Obersturmbannfuehrer Meier. Furthermore, the document, just mentioned says that on the 19th of September the Jewish quarter was evacuated and three thousand and some odd Jews were registered and executed.

Q. Did the SK 4-a have anything to do with the execution of these Jews -- because the Prosecution insists on the responsibility of SK 4-a in this case.

A. The SK 4-a had nothing to do with this. The SK 4-a was not in Shitomir at the time but was about 150 kilometers east of it, just at the time they were marching into Kiev. On the occasion of this execution, and at any other time, or for any other reason, the SK 4-a did not confiscate any money, or valuables, or clothing. The statement in this document is absolutely incorrect and -

Q. In connection with this-

THE PRESIDENT: Pardon me. I didn't catch that last word.

INTERPRETER: The defendant said the statement was a big lie.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, I see. All right.

Q. (By Dr. Heim -- continuing) In connection with this operation report just discussed I want to refer to Document Book 1, page 159 of the German, page 129 of the English text. There we find Document NO3824, Exhibit 31. This is your affidavit, witness. It is an affidavit of the 6th of June 1947. In this affidavit it says, under number 7, I quote:

"In September or October 1941 the Einsatzgruppe C under Dr. Rasch placed a gas van at my disposal, and one execution was carried out by means of that gas van." that is to say, the Special Commando 4-a, used the gas van. Is that correct?

Court No. II-A, Case No. IX.

A. No, I never said anything in my interrogation about the use of the gas van for Special Commando 4A. This cannot be concluded from my statement in the affidavit that the Sonderkommando 4a used the gas van. This gas van was always with Group C, that is to say, it was delivered around this Kiev time and it was with the group staff. The group staff at the time was at the same location as Sonderkommanda 4a. I saw this gas van employed by another unit and later the gas van was used as a truck for general purposes.

Q. I now come to a set of questions which refer to a number of situation reports. Witness, was another Kommanda in Kiev together with the Special Kommanda 4a?

A. Einsatz Kommando 5 had also arrived in Kiev on the 25th or 26th of September 1941 with about 150 men. This was not the entire Einsatz Commando 5. Einsatz Commando 5 was larger than that.

Q. Who was the Commanding officer of Einsatz Commando 5?

A. The Commanding Officer of Einsatz Commando 5 was then Obersturmbannfuehrer Meyer who had until that time been permanent liaison officer to the higher SS and police leader for Group C and who had relieved Schultz.

Q. Did the performance of the two kommandos of Einsatz Group "C" in Kiev result in a change of the organization?

A. A change in the organization had been planned. The Special Kommando 4a which was weak and continued to be weakened by losses was to be dissolved and incorporated into Einsatz Commando 5. Obersturmbannfuehrer Meyer was to assume leadership since I was to be relieved because of sickness and injury. This reorganized Kommando 5 was then to put men at the disposal of the regular garrison duties and men were actually detailed to Shitomir, Rovonow and other places.

Furthermore, it was planned for the area of Charkow to use a certain advance commando there.

Q. Was this plan realized?

A. Not essentially, except for the details which I have already just described, but the files of special kommando 4a were handed over to Einsatz Commando 5,

Q. What was responsible for this plan not being realized?

A. About this time, October 1941, the Reichsfuehrer SS visited the higher SS and police leader Jockelm at Kiev. Dr. Rasch for reasons known only to him incurred the displeasure of the Reichsfuehrer. He then subsequently left for Berlin. In his absence Dr. Hoffman took over the command of Group "C".

THE PRESIDENT: Will you suspend just for a moment, please. We have before us now photostat of the Exhibit which was under discussion a few minutes ago. We have document No. 3140 before us for scrutiny and on page 17 we are looking at the date which was a subject for discussion a few minutes ago. We would like to have both the Prosecution and defense look at the data and see if they can agree upon it because it is not entirely clear.

MR. HOCHWALD: It seems to me to be a zero, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, does it seem more like a zero than an eight to you?

DR. HEIM; Your Honor, I consider the number to be. a zero.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, we agree on that.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I would then request a corresponding correction in the English document book,

THE PRESIDENT: That correction will be made. What page is that, Mr. Hochwald, do you recall the page in the English text?

MR. HOCHWALD: I shall find out, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Page 126, Judge Dixon says.

MR. HOCHWALD: Yes, it is 126, on the bottom.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, we will accept for the moment September 10th as the date but we will not close the door to any further discussion on this date. It may be that the photostat can be subjected to microscopic inquiry in order that all ambiguity may be removed. It may be that in connection with the rest of the document and with other documents that the 18th of September might be more logical and then that would fortify the possibility that that digit is an eight instead of a zero but for the moment it will remain the 10 of September. BY DR. HEIM:

Q. Witness, I would like to repeat the question just asked of you. You have only answered it partly. Why was this reorganization which you mentioned not realized?

A. I described that Dr. Rasch had left for Berlin and Dr. Hoffman-had assumed command of the group. After the return of Dr. Rasch from Berlin in the last third of October, 1941, the command was finally handed over to Dr. Thomas in Kiev. The new Chief, Dr. Thomas, left the two kommandos, EK 5 and SK 4a, according to the plans and used SK 4a in the combat zone and EK 5 in the rear areas, just as Dr. Rasch also recommended my release since the setting up of garrison units had already started and was proceeding.

Q. What directives did the new group Chief, Dr. Thomas, make about the area or about the garrison disposition?

A. The remaining kommandos, SK 4a until it had completed the necessary motor repairs, remained in Kiev, but it had orders to meet with the other two sub-kommandos in the area of CHARKOW.

EK 5 was to remain In Kiev and to continue its activities East of the Dniepr River and the area Kiev -- POLTAWA was rear area territory.

Q. In your opinion, does the possibility exist that the simultaneous presence of SK 4a and EK 5 in the Kiev area lead to mix-ups in the reports of the chief of the security police and the SD?

A. The IK 5 with a strength of about 180 men and the rest of SK 4a with a strength of one kommando, which is one administrative officer and 30 men had the same garrison, namely, Kiev, as can be seen from the document book II-C, Exhibit 72, No. 2830.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please witness, would you like to make a request for the excuse of the defendant

DR. DURCHOLZ: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: He will be excused under guard. BY DR. HEIM:

Q. Witness you just said that the Einsatz Commando 5 had a strength of about 180 men, whereas SK 4a had one commanding officer, one administrative officer and 30 men. Here you had reference to a document which shows this relationship. Will you please refer to this document once

A. The document in which these reports are listed is in document book 2-C, Exhibit 72, document NO-2830, operational report of the 12 November 1941, on page 20. I now refer to document book II-A on page 43 of the German text. This is Exhibit No. 38, document No. 3155 in the English document book. This is on page 43. This is the operational report 111 of the 12 October 1941. On page 4 of the original, pardon me, on page 5 of the original, the second paragraph reads as follows:

In the English document book it is on page 45 and I quote:

"on the 26 September, the Security Police took up its activities in Kiev. On that day 7 interrogation Kommandos of Einsatzkommando 4a started their work in the Civilian Prisoner Camp, in the Prisoner-of-War Camp, in the Jewish Camp, and in the city itself." it to you?

A. This is an obvious mix up with the EK 5 stationed in Kiev. As has been frequently mentioned before the SK 4a strength was negligible so that the activities of the SK 4a mentioned here is impossible. I repeat, the SK 4a in Kiev consisted of an administrative office and supply units, the drivers, four men, and 7 or 8 Ukrainians, two men in the division and three men in the orderly room. Usually three men were detailed for interrogation duties. The interrogations themselves were carried out by officers who were first of all brought in from the Reich to the group and who had been provided for garrison duties and they frequently changed. SK 4a never was active in carrying out interrogations in camps as the report mentions.

"In Kiev, Sonderkommando 4a regularly carried out interrogations and arrests, which in most cases led to executions. Here, almost without exception, we were concerned with active Communists who had worked for the KP."

Witness, is this report correct?

A. What I have already said before is to be applied here, that this is also a mix-up with Commando 5.

Q. Can you give any more facts which point to a mix up between EK 5 and SK 4a?

A. The facts mentioned in No. 2832, in Book II-C, Exhibit 79, situation report 135, this is on page 50-a of the English text, the 19 November 1941, this is on page 51. The localities mentioned in this report, Koselex, Tschernigow, Njeschin, all of these localities were within the area of EK 5, which was in charge of the entire area East of Kiev, down to Poltawa, and to which this area had been given as rear army territory. The same document, page 22 of the original, shows that from the 20 October to the 26 October, 1941, the EK 5, executed the 36 political functionaries and 32 saboteurs and looters and 4372 Jews, in area of Kiev, without mentioning the locality. This is on page 57 of the English. In the week from the 26 October to 1 November, 1941, inclusive, Einsatz Commando 5 executed 40 political functionaries, 60 saboteurs, and looters, and 2585 Jews in the area of Kiev, again without mentioning the specific locality. There it is noted specifically that the number 2654, includes 414 hostages shot as a reprisal for various arsons and 1391 executions carried out by a sub-commando of Einsatz Kommando 5, which had returned from the area of Squirapogrewitscheplisky. This sub-commando at the time in question returned from the area of the EK 5 to Kiev. The mix-up of EK 5 with SK 4a becomes even more evident from the report of the headquarters and radio communications. In document No. 2830 of the 12 November, 1941, and in the document No. 2832 of the 12 November, 1941, and in the document No. 2832 of the 19 November, 1941, SK 4a is credited with signal communications with Dujivovetrowsk, which actually belonged to EK 5. This circumstance can be traced back to the reorganization which the group must have reported to Berlin.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I would like to give two exhibit numbers to the documents which the witness has just mentioned; Document NO-2830boars the Exhibit No. 72, and it is in Book 2-C, on page 20, of the English text. The Document NO-2832 is Exhibit No 79, and is on page 58 of the English Document Book.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, this might be a good place at which to have a recess.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, did you have the opportunity to study the document under a microscope, or under a magnifying glass.

DR. HEIM: I did so, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, doesn't it seem to you now more likely that it is an "8" rather than a "zero".

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, in an examination I have convinced myself that it is an "8". Especially as on the proceeding page I compared the eights and I can now state that it must be an "8" and not a zero.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the record will show definitely and definitively that the date is "18" and not "10".

DR. HEIM: Thank you, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: yes. BY DR. HEIM: ness of the Operational Reports concerning the mix-up between EK5 and SK4A and I have one question to ask you. During this time did SK4A carry out executions at all, when the SK4A was stationed in Kiev together with EK5? September 1941.

DR. HEIM: I now refer to Document Book II-A of the Prosecution and I turn to page 42 of the German and 43 of the English text. Here we have document NO-3135, Exhibit No. 38, this is an operational report number 111 of 12 October 1941.

On page 4 of the original, of English Document Book, on page 44, the fourth paragraph at the bottom, it says, and I quote: "The Sonderkommando 4-A has by now reached the total number of more than 51,000 executions. Apart from the special action in Kiev of 28 and 29 September, for which 2 Kommandos of the Police Regiment South were detached, all executions carried out sofar were made by that Special Kommando without any assistance or outside help." It is on page 44 of the English text, and it is the fourth paragraph from the bottom. operational report. Will you comment on it, and will you give the Tribunal a detailed statement telling us whether this report about SK4A is true, and whether this SD4A carried out 51,000 executions, and if this statement is in agreement with the facts?

A. The facts according to the operational reports prove that the total figure is incorrect. In various and numerous reports, as I have already said, in connection with the SK-4-A, other units, as, for instance, Army units and units of the Higher SS and Police leader are mentioned. In the operation report of the 12th of October, which is Document 3155, 8800 Jews are reported as having been shot, without mentioning the name of the location of EK-5. From the 25 September until the 5th of October, 1941, the largest part is taken by the sector Kiev; EK-5, with approximately 150 men,-that is three-fourths of the actual kommando,--was stationed in this territory.

Q. Was the SK-4-A in the position, as it was a small unit, able to carry out the following executions within this period mentioned without outside help, these 51,000 minus 33,771, the result of which is 17,229? Will you comment on this?

A. Without any outside help this was practically impossible, and secondly the reported total figures contain execution numbers of other units. One can currently prove it in the succession of documents. There is also, furthermore, the reporter himself added the figures.

Q. I now refer to Document Book II-C of the Prosecution. On Page 28 of the German text--it is Exhibit No. 72, Document NO-2830-is the operational Report 132 of the 12th of November, 1941. It is Page 20 of the English text, your Honor. On Page 5 of the German copy it says, and I quote:

"The number of people executed by SK-4-A has increased to 55,432." That is the end of my quotation. Witness, do you think this figure mentioned here is correct?

A. The figure mentioned here is subject to the same condition as all others which were mentioned, and is equally incorrect. In the same document there are other executions mentioned which were, allegedly, carried out by the SK-4-A in Borispol., Q. mid you learn of these executions at the time?

A. No, I never learned of these executions at the time. The SK was never detailed to Borispol, and SK-4A could not dispose of a platoon, which is about fifty to sixty men.

Here is the same mix-up between a platoon of the EK-5, which is in the rear area territory, with units of SK-4A.

Q. I now refer to Document Book II-C of the Prosecution on Page 43 of the German, Page 37 of the English text. It is Document NO-3404, Exhibit 75. It is Operational Report 119 Of the 20th of October, 1941. On Page 47, the first paragraph in the German text, Page 40 of the English document book, second paragraph from the bottom it says, and I quote: "An operation was carried out in Iwankow on 19 September 1941 by the Sonderkommando 4a with the aid of the militia, in which 166 persons were apprehended and liquidated." That is the end of my quotation. witness, is the report correct?

A. Whether it is correct I do not knew. Through this document I am learning for the first time of this alleged fact. I looked on the map and I saw that Iwankow is north of Markov before Kiev. It is an incident which happened before we reached Kiev. The militia mentioned in the document, according to circumstances prevailing there, must have been subordinate to an Army unit. The action itself is not known to me. From the report it does not become evident for what purpose the executions were supposed to have been carried out. The order for such measures I was not authorized to give. I was not entitled to do so as the executive power was in the hands of the local Army commando. ment 3140, according to which on the 19th of September, 1941, that is, therefore, the same day, in Zhitomir an operation is supposed to have been carried out by the SK-4. Iwankow and Zhitomir are 110 kilometers apart as the crow flies, and the subkommandos at the time were in the vicinity, in a radius around Kiev and were marching towards Kiev, towards the units to which they had been detailed.

Q. In this same document an operation of the SK-4a is mentioned in korosten according to which 177 Jews are supposed to have been executed.

Will you comment on this?

A. By order of the group, three interpreters had been ordered to Korosten as from august 41, before I was detailed there, on the 13th August 1941. I was suffering from Wolhynian fever at the time. The SK-4a, according to my knowledge, never had a subkommando stationed in Korosten, or never had one ordered nor detailed there. The kommandos of the SK-4a were stationed in the frontal area around Kiev in August, or September at least.

Q. Please will you go to Document Book II-c of the Prosecution, to page 31 of the German text. In the English text it is Page 27. There we have Document NO-3151, Exhibit No. 73. on Page 32 of the German text, Page 29 of the English text, the third paragraph from the bottom, an execution is mentioned, an execution, in fact, of 160 people in Korosten. Is this action, according to your opinion, the same as the one mentioned in 3404 in Korosten?

A. In my opinion it is the same operation. The document does not mention any dates, at least no different dates. Both reports were taken from different contexts by the reporter. The situation reports and the other reports originated from the Higher SS and Police Leader.

Q. witness, I now come to the document just mentioned, which was NO-3404. It is in Document Book II-C of the Prosecution, Page 37 of the English book, Page 47 of the German text. On Page 40 of the English text, the second paragraph from the bottom, there is an execution mentioned, an execution of three adolescents by the SK-4a at Radomysohl on 13 September 1941. These adolescents, according to the report, are supposed to have carried out espionage, and therefore were executed. witness, did these executions take place according to your knowledge?

A. What measures were carried out there I cannot say. Basically, any case of espionage had to be reported to the competent Army agency, and in this case it was G-a. The perpetrators had to be arrested and turned over to G-2. In various cases they were parachutists who were arrested.

Q. who, according to your knowledge, gave the order for the execution of these adolescents?

A. It can only have been the competent G-2 division, or the G-2 officer of the AOK/6 who reported the incident and took the according executive measures.

Q. Do you believe that these executions were properly investigated beforehand?

A. Yes, I think than an interrogation must have taken place, interrogation and sentence was here in the hands of the Army.

Q. In the same document it says in the context that the special kommando 4a on the way from Wyrna to Dederow stopped a gypsy band of 32 persons and that these persons were executed by the SK-4a. The reason given was the fact that when the wagons were searched German equipment was found and that the band could not give any information as to the origin of this equipment. Is this report correct?

A. This is the first time that I heard of this report. In the frontal area around Kiev and also the rear Army territory, the existence of gypsies would have been an exceptional thing. In these territories there were no gypsies and no vagabonds. We never met them. It is not known to me that a report of this kind was ever issued or received. The gypsy country was very much more to the south. In the report, in my opinion, again there must have been a mix-up of the authorities of the kommandos. I can find no other explanation.

Q. Witness, you will not be able to tall me the order of execution, based on your statement, of course?

A. No, I can make no statements as to this.

Q. Furthermore, it says in the same document that an advance kommando, a Vorkommando of the SK-4a on the 4th of October, 1941, in B ereslow, with the aid of Ukrainian confidential agents, carried out a Jews-operation. According to this operational report a total of 537 Jews, namely, men, women and adolescents, were apprehended and liquidated. That do you know of these operations as mentioned in the report?

A. I know nothing about the operation itself. The territory at the cast of Kiev was the rear Army territory which came under the EK-5 in which Bereslow is situated. The SK-4a, the advance kommando, was stationed at that time in Charkov or near Charkov, 300 kilometers more to the east. The rest of SK-4a was stationed in Kiev and was not liable for assignment. It was just being restored, and of the men of the actual SK-4a nobody was ever there.

Q. I now refer to Document Book II-C of the Prosecution, Page 62 of the German text. It is Exhibit No. 72, Document NO-2830. In the English Document B ook it is page 20. Here an execution of 1365 people in Lubny is mentioned. Witness, were these executions ordered by you. It is Page 20, 24 of the English document book, first paragraph from the top.

A. These executions were carried out on my orders. A platoon of the SK-4a was never in Lubny. The advance kommando of the SK-4a led by Mueller must have passed Lubny, which is evident in Document 3405 which is in Document Book II-A. It is Exhibit No. 72. On Page 9 of the text it says that this subkommando of the SK-4a took over on the 18th of October, 1941, making use of the file material which was left over by the SK-4a, and it took over the tasks of dealing with current events. As I already ski, a platoon as mentioned in the documents was not at the disposel of the SK-4a and a platoon was not a part of SK-4a, and therefore it cannot have been made use of for a matter of this kind. It must have been a different unit. This is the first time that I heard of an event of this kind.

Q. In the same document it says that on the 8th of October, 1941, special kommando 4a in Jagotin was searching for suspicious elements.

During this operation 125 Jews had been arrested and had been liquidated. Herr Blobel, does this report agree with the fact?

A. The report concerns the same location and it can, therefore, not have referred to SK-4a. I do not know these happenings.

Q. Witness, I want to refer to the document which you mentioned before, and I want to deal with it in detail. Will you take Document Book II-A and will you take Page 61 of the German text? It is Exhibit No. 42, Document NO-3405. It is Operational Report 156 of the 6th January, 1942. It is on Page 57 of the English document book, your Honor. In this document shooting of 34 agents and Communists and 73 Jews of the SK-4a also in Lubny is reported. What do you know about this operation, and what did you ever learn about it?

A. This event concrns the subkommando 4a which in the middle of October, 1941, in Kiev, staffed by one leader and 15 Underleaders and men, was reinstated and subdivided, and marched towards the advance kommando in Charkov. The march passed Lubny at the direction to the sector Charkov. According to the document this subkommando took over the files in Lubny which were left by the preceding kommando. The advance kommando must have marched on by the time of reporting. The files could only be left with the local kommandantura or with an Army unit, and lists concerning information and investigation results must have been at their disposal which were then followed up by the kommando. I remember the leader of this kommando who took part in the reinstatements of the group and was detailed to the group SK-4a, he was quite a now man. I remember, as I say, that later when he arrived in Charkov in December, 1941, he described the state of the kommando and said that the kommando, including members of the Wehrmacht and Army, went to the kommandantura in Lubny and other villages in the vicinity, and that they searched for partisans and raided partisan hiding places, and thus they also found lots of food. The kommando itself found and took with them pickled beef, large supplies of pickled beef, and they found members of armed bands.

The kommando from the beginning of their being stationed in Lubny until the march to the cast, to Charkov, dealt mainly with these matters. After they arrived in Charkov I heard for the first time of this activity, of this subkommando which was floating about in the territory.

THE PRESIDENT: I didn't quite get the connection of the pickled beef in this narrative. Just what was that? Will you repeat it, please?

THE WITNESS: The kommando leader in December, 1941--

THE PRESIDENT: Which kommando leader was this now?

THE WITNESS: The kommando leader of the newly install subkommando which arrived in the vicinity around Lubny on the 18th of October, 1942.

THE PRESIDENT: Which number was it?

THE WITNESS: That was the only subkommando apart from the advance kommando.

THE PRESIDENT: Of the SK-4a?

THE WITNESS: Of the SK-4a, that was part of SK-4a.

THE PRESIDENT: All right.

THE WITNESS: These people arrived in Charkov in December, the advance kommando, the subkommando, and the remainder had to eat in this location and these men carried with them this preserved beef which they had taken with them.

THE WITNESS: It was pickled, beef, as the Russians do prepare it. We distributed it later on to the population of Charkow.

THE PRESIDENT: You distributed this pickled beef to the population?

THE WITNESS: Later on, when the kommandos left, this pickled beef was distributed to the population.

THE PRESIDENT: How much did you have that you could distribute among the population?

THE WITNESS: The barrels.

THE PRESIDENT: Two barrels?

THE WITNESS: Two big beer barrels.

THE PRESIDENT: How we have beer in it? And how much population was there?

THE WITNESS: We did not give it to all the population of Charkow, but to the nearest inhabitants.

THE PRESIDENT: About how many people received a piece of this pickled beef in the beer barrel?

THE WITNESS: By special order of the commander, the population of Charkow were supported in food supplies, because there were emergency circumstances, as far as food goes in Charkow during this particularly severe winter; and kitchens were installed for the people who were in the vicinity and they received a meal from the Wehrmacht rations and for this purpose this beef was used and it was cooked-

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, it was cooked? I thought you said it was pickled.

THE WITNESS: Yes, they make a special kind of meal from this, mixed with beans and the Ukrainians eat it in this manner.

THE PRESIDENT: You said that you distributed the two beer barrels of pickled beef among the population. I want to know how many people were beneficiaries of this beef distribution.

THE WITNESS: Well, there must have been three to four hundredweight of beef, and every day they had large boilers of 150 liters and meat of this kind was added to the beans and men, women, and children, whoever was there, came and got this food in tin plates, they got some soup too and they were most satisfied with this food, because conditions were very bad.

THE PRESIDENT: How many people received the pickled beef from these beer barrels?

THE WITNESS: AT least 100 to 150 people received this food.

THE PRESIDENT: All right. We may proceed with the march.

Q. (By Dr. Heim) Witness, did you finish your answer just then?

A. I want to give details about the condition of the sub-Kommando in December 1941, when they returned from this territory, this was 1 1/2 months later than it says in the document.

Q. Witness, in the same document, it is NO-3405-in Document book II-B of the prosecution, page 65 of the English, page 69 of the German text, there is a section which is headed, "Activities of Sub-Kommando SK-4a in poltawa" -- and quote. In this report it says that in Polotawa on the 23rd of November. 1941, a Jew's extensive operation was carried out during which 1,538 Jews were shot. Did the SK-4a carry out such an action in Poltawa?

A. My Kommando Sk 4a did not carry such an action in Poltawa, because it had neither a sub-kommando nor even a platoon which was ever stationed in poltawa. If this action is correct and corresponding to the facts, the Special Kommando 4b, which was actually stationed in Poltawa would have been responsible, or the EK5, which was detailed to this location. I don't know about the events as mentioned in the report.

Q. I shall put it to you, witness, that according to this document the total figure of people shot by the Sk 4a until 30 November 1941 is of 59,018 people. Will you please comment on this?

A. The total figure is in contradiction with logic. It is an addition to reported figures which contain different units and different territories. It is also an addition which was carried out by the Berlin Agency.

The units were mixed up and some figures have been doubled. The town, Boguslaw, Kochewatgo, Tscherepin, Shwaliwka, Justungrad, Wolodarka, Uman, Tyschy, Borispol, Koselez, are garrisons of the EK-5, but outside the sector of the activities of the unit. The locations, Kiew, Boguslaw, Tscherepin, Gornos taipol, Dymer, Poltawa, Ghermkow, Tschernigow, Charkow, Ostow, Oster, -- Ostow and Oster both-Lubni, Gornostaipol, Dymer and Poltawa are all within the sector of the rear army territory east of Kiev, which came under EK-5, under the leadership of Obersturmfuehrer Meyer. SK 4a, the actual SK 4a including this sub-kommando in the combat area carried out 107 shootings in Lubny farther east.

Q. Witness, before I now come to a new sector, I want to refer to another document. This document is contained in Document Book ii-C of the prosecution, on page 37 of the German text. It bears the exhibit number 74, Document No. 2827.

THE PRESIDENT: I didn't catch the document book number.

DR. HEIM: II-C.

Q. II-C, Exhibit 74, Document 2827. It is in the English Document Book on page 33. On page 34 of the English Document Book in the second paragraph from the top, it is on page 39 in the German document book, it says, I quote, it is page 34, second paragraph in the English. "on 7 November 1941, a sub-kommando of the SK 4a shot 385 Jews in Gornostaipol, according to martial law. These Jews had, for the greater part, been driven together into Gornostaipol from the surrounding villages. On its way back to Kiev, the sane Kommando shot 120 Jews in Dymer, and 30 Jews in Oster on the same day. This action Was carried out in cooperation with the Wehrmacht offices without any mishap." That is the end of my quotation. Witness, does this agree with the facts?

A. The actual SK 4a was never active in these villages. Gornostaipol and Oster were within the field of activities of EK 5; in this way, this report is not in agreement with the facts.

Dr. HEIM: Your Honor, I now take the liberty of offering Document Blobel No. 3 as Exhibit 3. It is the third photostatic chart. It is in the first document book, Blobel, which is headed with, "Breakdown for Subordination System of the SK 4a as from the middle of OctoberNovember, 1941."

Q. Witness, does this chart agree with the actual subordination system of the SK 4a in September, October, 194l, when the remainder of this Kommando was stationed in Kiev?

A. Yes, it is the exact reproduction of the subordination system in October and November, 1941.

A. Will you please give us a detailed description of this plan?

A. This chart contains three sectors. The rear army territory at the bottom; in the center, there is the combat area; the frontal area is at the top. In the rear army territory and operational territory, which at that time was a civilian administered territory, the Einsatzgruppe was stationed, first under Dr. Rasche and then under Dr. Thomas. The remainder of the kommando 4a, under my own leadership, was subordinated to Group C and was actually part of the frontal sector, but through changes in the personnel had remained in the garrison of the Group. The channel of command was: AUK 6 G-2 to the unit and from there to the sub-kommando. Orders of Group C to the sub-kommandos in the frontal sector were never given, because the commander of the ACK 6 had the sole power of command for the whole combat area. The channel of reporting of the sub-commands Was: G-2 of the Division to G-2 of the ACK 6 and from there to Group C and from there to the remainder of 4a, each time via the liaison officer with ACK 6. For the rear army territory there was an exchange of orders between ACK 6 and Group C. With the later curtailment of the rear army territory, which was conditioned by the Dnjepr River, this same channel of command remained Group C to ACK 6.

Kiev? frozen and the bridge had shifted. It was a very difficult march.

Q Whi was the destination of the SK 4-A?

A Charkow via Poltawa, there to report to the _OK 5 and then the march to the destination. There the field marshal had to be reported to. There was a personal discussion and then the assignment was

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, the last document from the Document Book Blobel No. 1, I take the liberty of offering this Blobel Document No. 4 as Exhibit No. 4. It is a photostatic chart headed, "Purely Military Assignment of the Special Kommando 4-a in the Sector Charkow in December 1941, January 1942." assignment of the SK 4-a, concerning the subordination system? 1942.

Q Herr Blobel, will you give some details to the Tribunal? and the distribution of individual units. In the lower part, the territory has been put in. In the rear army territory, the combat area has been put in. At the some time, the Dnjepr river shows the border of the rear combat territory. In the back there is the civilian administered territory, which has been put in at the upper third of the chart.

In the civilian administered territory, the SS and Police Leader was in command of Einsatzgruppe C. In the combat area, AOK 6, with its supreme commander and the subordinated Division C is marked in. In the last mentioned, there was the permanent liaison officer of the SK 4-a. A dotted line shows the channel of command of liaison officer to the supply kommando in the combat area of the SK 4-a. As this dotted line points out, there was a channel which went via the supply kommando 4-a to SK 4-a. Its force was in the frontal area or, at least near the frontal area. The SK 4-a, as is shown in the lower third of the chart was stationed in the defense regions around Charkow, together with other units. From the Division C of the AOK 6, as the full lines show, the orders went immediately to the commander of an army sector who was in charge of a number of defense sectors. The SK with a number of other units became a sector within the general defense sector; the sector commanders were immediately subordinated to it. The line leading from the AOK 6 to the division commander shows the immediate subordination system and frontal divisions were immediately in the front line, in special positions.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I think this would be the time to have a recess.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until L;45.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. EHIM: Blobel No. 4, which received Exhibit No. 4. This chart shows the military assignment of the SK 4-a in the Charkow area from December 1941 to January 1942. military assignment within the sector Charkow. of AOK 6 was assigned. Shortly after my arrival in Charkow we had negotiations with him and we discussed the situation. All officers of all units in and around Charkow participated in this discussion. the units, and the commanders, were assigned. The SK 4-a was assigned for day and night duty in the Charkow sector. Positions were taken up; engineers blasted the position; it was severe cold; alarm stages were ordered from one to three; territorial and road security was established; the Russians attacked in the southeast at various points. These break-throughs generally ended at the hedgehog position, generally behind the frontal position. About ten kilometers before advance raids against Charkow. Q What was your state of health at that time?

A Bad. I still suffered from Wolhynian fever because of exertions and strains.

THE PRESIDENT: I have heard reference to this fever now very many times; I have not yet got the name of it. Will the interpreter please spell it for me?

INTERPRETER: W-o-l-h-y-n-i-a-n.

THE PRESIDENT: Never heard about that particular type of fever, so it was quite a mystery to me as to what the word was.

DR. HEIM: I myself, although I have been a soldier in Russia, have not experienced it. But as far as I know, it is a disease, a fever, the cause of which apparently has not been discovered until this very day. Unfortunately, I am not able to give you a further statement about it as I have not experienced it myself. But perhaps the witness can give you a detailed statement.

THE PRESIDENT: No, I am not interested as a doctor to ascertain the symptoms of the disease. I merely wanted to know what the word was.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, Wolhynian is a county in Russia, a district. It has many swamps - and as this fever has been influenced by the swamps and occurs in many cases in this district, it got this name Wolhynian fever.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Thank you very much. BY DR. HEIM:

Q Witness, you said that there were many cases of Wolhynian fever; what was the cause of this? against it; but the men also were taken with this fever, severely, or perhaps sometimes less severely. Suddenly one had high fever and just lay around for days - it was an intestinal disease.

Q How long did the disease affect you?

A From the end of December 1941 until March 1942. In February my state of health improved. Then I had a severe relapse in March 1942.

Q When were you detailed back to Berlin?

Q When did your successor take over SK 4-a?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, in February he was in Berlin, and I understood him to say he got the fever again in February.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, the witness said he was recalled to Berlin - or the order to return to Berlin reached him at the end of January 1942. He said before that in February 1942 his state of health improved. He did not yet say when he was relieved in the East.

THE PRESIDENT: I understood himto say that in February 1942 he had a relapse of the Wolhynian fever. But since he was in Berlin at that time, if he had any fever at all, it would have to have been the Berlin fever.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I did not -- (Interrruption)

THE PRESIDENT: Don't worry about it, Dr. Heim, it isn't that important.

DR. HEIM: How long were you in the East?

Q Before March 1942 you did not go to Berlin?

Q When did your successor take over the Special Commando SK 4-a? beginning of January, new officers of Gruppe C had been detailed to take over the administration of the current administrative matters.

Q Who was the successor as the leader of SK 4-a?

A My successor was Dr. Weinmann.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, before I conclude with the activity of the defendant as the leader of SK 4-a, I want to cone back to a number of documents of the Prosecution. BY DR. HEIM:

Q A preliminary question. Witness, did you yourself ever order executions to be carried out?

A I never ordered executions, and never carried out executions. In each case I received orders for the execution from my superiors. In cases in which I myself received such orders there was documentary evidence on the basis of which the responsible bearer of the order had decided upon these measures, and which, in my opinion, were justified according to international law.

Thus parts of the Commando under the Army, or under the Higher SS and Police leader who carried out these measures -- these units had been ordered by the commander of the AOK 6 or by the Higher SS and Police Leader to carry out these measures.

on page 27 of the German text. It is exhibit No. 132, document No. N)-4438. In the English document book it is on page 20. It is an affidavit by the co-defendant Radetzky of the 25th of July 1947. Under figure No. 5 which is at the end of page 2 of the original of the affidavit, the defendant Radetzky says, I quote: "I also know that Stadartenfuehrer Blobel ordered executions." End of my quotation.

Witness does this affidavit not contradict your own statements? executions, but in each case 0 have received express orders to carry out executions from superior authority. My own explanation of Radetzky's statements is that he wanted thus to express that I had these executions carried out by members of the SK 4-a. As it becomes evident from the lines just before, in this affidavit, Radetzky hardly knew anything about the executive measures in regard to executions of the SK 4-a, so that he was not in a position to know on whose order these executions were based. 4-a carried out executions which had been ordered by AOK 6 or other authorities. Did you not have any moral scruples about carrying out executions -- that is, did you regard the carrying out of these executions as in agreement with international law and in agreement with humanitarian principles? indulging in espionage and sabotage, and those who were of a detrimental of ect to the German army, were, in my opinion, completely in accordance with the Hague Convention. I believe that the Allies could have acted differently in their advance into Germany if they had been faced with the violations of international law which the German Army faced inthe East. Inhuman treatment of German soldiers, the bestial treatment of such soldiers, and shooting of such soldiers by Russian civilians from ambush, and the unlawful warfare waged by the Russian would fill whole archives.

The AOK 6 collected these incidents as proof. For this purpose special departments were established, and from the very beginning of the fighting, such cases could be established. As far as I know, the German Wehrmacht suffered about ten to fifteen dead each day -who had been killed on the march through these territories on the march to the front - shot from ambush, in violation of international law.

I myself saw one morning, five members of the German army shot and han gthe corpses. The reports from Department 6 show that five German airmen been committed by the Allies. Your only experience with the enemy in this war was with Russia, was it not?

THE PRESIDENT: There seems to be a question about the interpre tation.

Just a moment please.

(witness continuing.) taken part. In those localities which the German army passed on the advance, atrocities increased. The last incident which I know from the report myself, happened in Charkow. In the winter from 1941 to 1942 an engineer company on the march was attacked by Russian panje cars-which are horse-drawn vehicles loaded with straw, and they were attacked from those cars with machine guns and killed. The following Russian armored cars rolled over the corpses of the members of the German army. BY THE PRESIDENT: Eastern front?

A What I am stating concerns only Russia. Yes. "Allies" -- at least, that is theway we got it.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, may I say something here? The witness said, "I believe that the Allies during their march in Germany would not have acted in a much different manner if the same violations of international law had happened to them which happened to the Germans in their march to the East." Your Honor, I have laready noticed that through the translation the subjunctive does not come through. "Had" can mean in the German "Haette" or "Hatte". This, of course, gives the Tribunal a distorted picture.

THE PRESIDENT: He was only stating a supposition, then?

DR. HEIM: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

A (By the witness - continuing) As for this last incident in Charkow, it could be established that many partisan groups collaborated with the Russian army, and that was made possible because the frontal position was arranged in hedge-hog positions with large distances in between. The German dead are many - at least, those who were killed by invisible, armed civilians from ambush. One had to be very careful about the harmless-looking groups of fields workers who, in reality, were armed partisans bands, and only those who fought the Russians can really testify how ruthlessly and how brutally the Russians fought in this war. I wish, your Honor, you could seen these mutilated corpses and the brutality murdered German soldiers in Russia. for instance, where executions took place at the hands of Ukrainians and such people.

The supporters of the propagandists were the danger of the rear of the German army, and measures taken against these, and reprisals against such people are justifiable according to international law, or, at least, I regarded it as justifiable according to international law.

hostages I did not and do not regard justifiable. With such an order I do not agree and I do not agree with it today. the German text. It is Exhibit No. 31, Document No. 3825, and in the English document book it is on page 129. It is the affidavit of the Defendant Blobel of the 6th of June 1947. I refer to No. 7 in this affidavit, that is in the German document book on page 162, and in the English page 131. Your Honor, it is on 131 of the English document book. It says here, beginning with No. 7 end I quote:

"The Sonderkommando 4-a has killed women and children too." That is the end of my quotation. Witness, this sentence is in the affidavit which you gave to the Prosecution. Is this statement correct?

children for espionage and sabotage and a military court martial passed judgment on them. women and children?

A Not under these circumstances. Every spy and saboteur knew what he had to expect when he was arrested.

Q Why did you have no moral scruples? losses and damage on the German side, if the individual was sentenced to death by the German Wehrmacht. I must, however, call those executions as morally indefensible if special units had to take a part in the shooting of women and children, as for instance in Kiev where I cannot say whether women and children were actually shot. I myself have never seen an execution of women and children and I never experienced such an execution. 1947. As Mr. Wartenberg confirmed when he was on the witness stand, this affidavit is an escerpt from your interrogation by the Prosecutor.

tion. Witness, were you ever during this interrogation, before you made out this affidavit, warned by the Prosecution that you had the right to refuse to give testimony about any facts which might incriminate you?

Q Did you make out this affidavit yourself, or did you dictate it? an affidavit was there submitted to me. in this affidavit? changes, whereupon a new affidavit was made out. On the afternoon of the same day I was called in again to sign the new affidavit and after I had read through this new affidavit I told Mr. Wartenberg that there was an erroneous and distorted picture in this new affidavit and that some additional remarks concerning the individual points would have to be inserted. Herr Wartenberg told me then that the text must not be changed, and that we would have many discussions about it in the future and any desired additions could be made then.

Q Were you called in again for an interrogation? to explain in how far the present affidavit does not correspond to the contents of your interrogations?

the shooting of women and children. I have already dealt with it during my direct examination and I do not have to explain my attitude now.

Q Witness, under No. 5 of your affidavit it says: "It is page 161 in German, it is 130 of the English, and I quote:

" According to a superficial estimate the correctness of which I cannot guarantee - I presume that the number of executions in which the Sonderkommando 4-a took a part lies somewhere between 10,000 and 15,000."

correct in this form, or can you give us a few further explanations as to these figures? a maximum number of the executed people in which the SK 4-a together with other units participated, insofar as a commando or even one man of the SK 4-a was concerned, This number, in my opinion, includes all operations which were ordered by superior authorities and which were made known to me at the time. I stick to this estimate and this limitation of this particular figure, even after having been made acquainted with the documents in this trial. Apart from the retaliatory measures which had been ordered and the measures carried out by a order of the Higher SS and police leaders, or of the Supreme Commander of AOK 6, SK 4-a only then carried out other executions if actually cases were established and based on investigations in the files of the office of the Supreme Commander of AOK 6 or his deputy, as long as I was leader of the SK 4-a. During this whole time of my command I never had to make an independent decision to carry out an operation. the English Document Book I of the Prosecution, and it says, and I quote:

"Q I witnessed several mass executions and in two cases I was ordered to direct the executions." That is the end of my quotation. Witness, do you have to make any explanatory remarks as to this? the Einsatz Commandos in Sokal in the neighborhood of the headquarters of the AOK 6, which was ordered by Field Marshal Von Reichenau, executions of perpetrators which had carried out tortures and brutal measures against German soldiers and I had to report the carrying out of these two executions to the Field Marshal.

6 of the affidavit, and I quote:

"In August or September, 1941, an execution took place near Korosten. 700 to 1,000 men were shot and Dr. Rasch was present at the execution." End of quotation. The impression could be created that this mass execution was carried out by you or that,is, by the SK 4-a, if the preceding and subsequent sentences are scrutinized; will you comment on the wording of this particular sentence?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, don't you think it will be better merely to call his attention to the statement and then let him give his comment? You proceded your question by indicating what the impression was. Now that may or may not be the impression of any one who reads it neutrally. Merely direct his attention to the sentence or paragraph which you think is subject to an interpretation in two ways and let him comment on it.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor, for calling my attention to it. BY DR. HEIM:

Q Witness, you have heard the quotations from the affidavit. Please comment on the statement of that dry? Leader in August of 1941 near Korosten. The Higher SS and Police Leader had detailed police units as well as Ukrainian militia for this operation, and I found out about this operation because I received an order from Group "C" to look around among the prisoners and pick out members of the Ukrainian bandera and to bring them to Shitomir. At this time there were three interrogators and also a driver of SK 4-a who had been sent to Korosten to the community building in order to carry out interrogations. These officers had informed the G-2 of AOK via the Eastern Commandatura that the Higher SS and Police Leader had ordered the shooting of the arrested people, and as I have already explained AOK 6 had a special department for Ukrainian matters.

These people were in contact with this department and it was immediately ordered to pick these people out. The cause for this special operation by the Higher SS and police leader was the blowing up of the water tower and the railroad facilities in Korosten itself.

Q Will you further comment on your own connection with this, witness? fuehrer Mueller who was the Ukrainian interpreter in order to seek out 10 - 12 members of the Ukrainian bandera and to carry on long interrogations of these prisoners. These men were members of the bandera group who were active only in making propaganda for their own Ukrainian Nationalist idea. I picked out these people and took then with me to Shitomir and they were taken to Lemberg the next day. out in your own presence in Korosten?

A No, during my own presence no execution was carried out. When I had these people picked out in Korosten I found out that in a large operation in the whole area near Korosten, 700 to 100 persons had been arrested. I did not see the arrested people. The number of prisoners in Korosten from which I picked out those ten to twelve people, amounted to about sixty to seventy people.

Q In your affidavit you say that Dr. Rasch was present. How do you know that if you yourself were not present at the execution?

A I met Dr. Rasch at my departure from Korosten, having received a report by the AOK he had gone there to get his own information. Execution orders Rasch did not give in Korosten, as officers of Jeckeln, the Higher SS and Police Leader, were in charge of all of these operations there.

Q Witness, in your affidavit it says, under No. 6, page 130 of the English document book, and I quote: each". That is the end of my quotation. Does this statement refer to the statement of the executions in Korosten.

Please comment on the context and connection between these statements which you made to Mr. Wartenberg. an answer to the question as to the position of SK 4-a. At the time of the interrogation I said that the execution commandos of the SK 4-a were sub-commandos of the SK 4-a and at that time there were two sub-commandos which had been assigned to the front area, which contained 30 men of the protective police and approximately 30 to 35 People, state police, security police and men of the SD and, of course, drivers and interpreters. Each commando had half of the last mentioned category. In my interrogation I made this statement in answer to the question as to what was the strength of these execution commandos. But to put this sentence into the actual affidavit under No. 6 is illogical.

Q Furthermore, under No. 6 of your affidavit you describe explicitly the executions and that the President considered you as an expert in executions. Have you any comments or explanations or additions to make to that? answering individual questions about the actual carrying out of an execution, for instance. These statements are generally the description of an execution itself as they were carried out in the AOK under my leadership, and I think they also explain the matters regarding interrogations and sentences and examinations. The actual way of reproducing my statements were in a sort of a condensed form, as it is in paragraph 6 of the affidavit, and, of course, gives a distorted picture to the effect that the SK 4-a with the police and with the Ukrainian militia subordinated to it, actually carried out executions in Korosten and this is not the case. page 131 of the English document book. Have you any further comments regarding figure 8 of your affidavit, or have you anything to say in addition to it?

the following owrds are missing: "By order of the Higher SS and Police Leader took part in an operation."

Q This paragraph 8 of your affidavit deals with Kiev. In your testimony so far you have already commented on it, so that it is not necessary to repeat this subject. have you anything to say in addition to it, especially referring to your own person or your successor or your deputy, when you yourself were absent? Meyer who was in charge of SK 4-a when I was not present myself. I found this out later and I have already mentioned this during my testimony. come to Book 3-B of the Prosecution. It is on page 24 of the German text, it is Exhibit 119, it is Document No. 3842. BY THE PRESIDENT: Witness, you say Mr. Wartenberg did not indicate to you that you were not compelled to make any statement which might be interpreted as being adverse to your own interests?

Q Yes, that is what you said. Now had he said that, would you have withheld some of the statements which do appear in your affidavit? as I have already said.

Q Just a moment, please. You have gone over this affidavit paragraph by paragraph and almost sentence by sentence and we have understood your explanations so don't let us go into that. The question I am asking you is entirely separate and apart from what you have already told us. My question is simply this: Mr. Wartenberg failed to tell you that you were not required to make any statement which might be adverse to your interest? 1615

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Now my question is, if he had told you that would you have withheld some of the statements which you did make?

A No, I would not have withheld anything, your Honor. I said that I have nothing to withhold.

THE PRESIDENT: So the fact that he did not tell you that in no way prejudiced your case, because you would have spoken freely anyway, is that correct? this situation was only mentioned briefly in one point in the affidavit, and I had told him, Herr Wartenberg, this gives an erroneous and distorted picture.

THE PRESIDENT: I am not addressing myself as to that point of the affidavit at all. You have given us un some detail your version of what the interrogation really brought out, and you quarrel with some of the statements made here in the affidavit, and we understand that -

THE PRESIDENT: I will repeat it. Mr. Wartenberg didn't say to you "You are not required to make any statement which may be against your own interest."?

A No, he didn't say that.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Now let us suppose he had said to you, "Herr Blobel, you are not required to make any statement which may be against your own interest." Let us now suppose he did say that. Would you have told your story to him in any way different from the way in which you did tell it to him?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, that is all.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. I just wanted that answer, and you gave it to me very clearly.

BY DR. HEIM: It is Exhibit No. 119, Document No. NO-3842. I am not in a position unfortunately as to give you the English page. It is the affidavit of Eugen Steimle on 14 December 1945. On page of the German copy Steimle describes you as a bloodhound, brutal, and without any inhibition, and not very well liked. That is the end of the quotation. I want to ask you, witness, did you as leader of SK-4-A over have any dealing with the co-defendant Steimle? past activity as leader of SK-4-A? seen him, and I didn't know him.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I shall now proceed in questioning the witness concerning the further events after his return and his further activities. BY DR. HEIM:

Q Witness, you were speaking of your recall to Berlin?

Q You mentioned your return to Berlin, didn't you?

Q For what reason were you detailed to Berlin?

Q When did you arrive in Berlin?

Q To whom did you report and what instructions were you given there? me that Heydrich would decide as to a further appointment, and I would have to wait for the return of Heydrich.

Q Where did you go after you had reported to Streckenbach?

immediately, I went to see my family in Solingen.

Q Give us the details of your visit to Heydrich? Heydrich personally, in the middle of May 1942 I reported to Heydrich in his office. Heydrich sat at his desk. He looked at me, sitting in his chair, "Well, you have developed a "tummy" - a stomach. You are a soft person. You can only to be used as a china manufacturer," and this statement of his followed me through the years. "You will only be used in a porcelain or china factory, but I will put your nose very much deeper into it. You will report to Obergruppenfuehrer Mueller." I reported to Obergruppenfuehrer Mueller and he was very short. I was asked about my billet, then I was ordered to go to my accomodations in Berlin Wansee, and to wait for further instructions from Mueller. Department-IV, Obergruppenfuehrer Mueller? was assigned by Obergruppenfuehrer Mueller, who was chief of Office-IV, to deliver the order about burning of the places of execution to the Commanders of the Security Police in the east. this order?

A I had already been given the instruction to see Dr. Thomas, who was in charge of Security Police in Ukraine, in order to pass on this order to him. I had to wait further instructions, and, therefore, I could not leave immediately. In August '42 Obergruppenfuehrer Mueller ordered me to go to Litzmannstadt, and to report to the State Police Office there. In the vicinity of Litzmannstadt there were old tombs from the time of the Poles, where corpses had been cremated. Various kinds of cremations were carried out there. In September 1942 I had to pass on the order to the commander of the Security Police in the Ukraine. Dr. Thomas, Chief of Group-C, and at this time the commander of Security Police in Ukraine refused to carry this out pending a conference with Reichfuehrer Himmler.

He thought that this was a very foolish order, and this I reported to Mueller after my return. It was in May 1943 that I had to see Thomas again in order to report to him, that the Reichfuehrer-SS, in disregard of his objection, demanded a burning of all these places on the whole Eastern Front. Dr. Thomas in June, July and August 1942 began with this work. According to his express wish, I had to prepare special fuels in Berlin for this purpose fuel quotas which were to be supplied from the fuel plants in the Ukraine. That demanded constant travel from Berlin to Ukraine. In September 1943 the front shifted within the Ukraine sector. Until that point only a few places had been scorched. With the front going back, the work was discontinued. In September 1943 I had to pass on the same order to the commander of the Security Police in Eastland, who was Brigadierfuehrer Piffraner. Piffaner was in Berlin for a conference and had already received directives from Mueller in Berlin. The Higher SS and Police Leader Jockeln, who was Piffraner's superior, in his own sector begun with the scorching in October but he had discontinued this activity during the winter, and, only in June and July 1944 did he begin again. Here also the work was discontinued when the front shifted.

Q In what territories were these schorchings carried out? the eastland. ditions caused that?

Q What was your further assignment? RSHA, the Reich Security Main Office, and Gruppenfuehrer Roesner, in Leibach, and I was to be assigned in the partisan warfare. he had refused to deal with me, giving the reason that he had been assigned the mission of fighting partisans from the Reichfuehrer-SS, and he himself would make his own arrangements. I was supposed to go back to Berlin.

Q Did you actually work as liaison officer at any time?

Q Where did you spend the following months?

A The following months I spent in Marburg, on the Drau River. In January 1945 I developed a liver and gallbladder ailment there, and until 15 April 1945 I was in the hospital of Dr. Greiner.

Q Did you ever receive a further assignment? gave me a teletype on 13 March -- rather, the 13th April 1945, a teletype from the Reich Security Main Office in Berlin to the effect that on 11 April that was to be two days before - was to be in Berlin and report to Office-I. Therefore, the deadline had already passed.

Q Where were you during the last months of the war?

A From Marburg on the Drau I went to Salzburg. During the end of April 1945 Kaltenbrunner arrived and I reported to him. He presented me to his staff, he said: "Please, gentlemen, dispose over him," and without awaiting any further orders or assignment, I went in a volkswagen to the south, and joined the troops there, and crossed the High Tower Mountains.

Q When and under what conditions did you become a prisoner? went back the same way, because the Russians were pressing towards the north. My car burned down and to save myself I was dressed in my undershirt and a pair of trousers - I went to Rastatt where I was arrested by the Americans on 8 May.

Q To what camps were you sent?

A The first camp was in Rastatt; then Wagrheim, and after that a camp in a forest that was called Edelfing - and the Eidling Reid (Lake); then the Field Hospital 504. From Field Hospital 504 I was moved to Hospital 2057. That was in Garmisch. That was in August 1945. you were arrested? times, and thirty-five centimeters of intestines had to be removed. These were the after effects of the Wohlhynian fever. Then I also had trouble with my heart muscle. On 23 May 1947 I arrived in Nurnberg.

DR. HEIM: I have finished with the direct examination of the witness Blobel in his own defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Defense counsel may now cross-examine Blobel if any defense counsel desires to cross-examine.

DR. RATZ: Dr. Ratz for Radetsky. BY DR. RATZ: affidavit contained in Document Book I, page 159 of the German text, page 129 of English. In the last paragraph in your affidavit you have said verbatim the following, I quote:

"9. Since, during the period from June 1941 until January 1942, I was several times seriously ill, and confined to various hospitals, I cannot be charged with responsibility for all the executions of the Sonderkommando 4-A. During the period of my absence the kommando was taken over by Dr. Rasch, Haupsturmfuehrer Waldemar von Radetsky, and Hauptsturmfuehrer Dr. Beyer; under their direction a number of mass executions took place too." that it was not Radetsky but Hauptsturmfuehrer Mayer that commanded Special Kommando 4-A in your absence. I now ask you to explain in detail how this No. 9 in your affidavit came to be made out.

A Paragraph No. 9 of the affidavit of on the 6th of June, 1947, came to be made out in the following manner: Mr. Wartenberg asked me who commanded the kommando during my absence, and he named a few officers who belonged to the Kommando. I certainly did not know for the simple reason because of illness I was absent and when I left I did not order that this man or the other man assume command, for I was unconscious and had high fever. Only later when I returned to the kommando in Zhitomir, I heard that Hauptsturmfuehrer Mayer had been in charge of the kommando. He was the permanent deputy of Group C with the Higher SS and Police Leader Jeckeln, and he was also present with him in Lutsk. At that time the SS and Police Leader Jeckeln ordered him to assume command of the Kommando. That is what I learned when I returned to Zhitomir; during the entire period of my absence Mayer actually did lead the kommando.

During my interrogation by Mr. Wertenberg, I did not remember this. I had been in the hospital in Garmisch for two years and came to prison right from my hospital bed, and on the second day after my arrival I was questioned about all these matters. Von Radetzky I always remembered as being the highest ranking officer, so that Mr. Wartenberg and I both assumed that von Radetzky must have taken over the command during my absence. But I had forgotten at that time that Radetzky was an interpreter and on a war emergency status. It would have been absolutely senseless to use an officer on a war emergency status and have him do police duties such as Dr.Funk did.

Dr. Rasch was the commander of Einsatzgruppe C. He doubtless led Special Kommando 4-A during my absence too, but he certainly must have given his consent to Jeckeln that Obersturmbannfuehrer Mayer should assume command. A Dr. Beyer at that time, during my absence was detailed to the SK from the Group in order to conduct an investigation about a dispute between myself and an Army officer. the mentioning of Radetzky in my affidavit, as my deputy,is not correct. It is to be traced back to an error on my part. This mistake can be explained by the face that after all this time had passed, and because of my weakened condition, I could not remember all the details. Mr. Wartenberg and I sort of discussed who could this have been, who could have been my deputy, and as a result of this discussion in this manner this paragraph 9 mentioned the name of Radetzky.

Q Another question. In another document it is said that the Defendant von Radetzky was commanding officer of the Advance Kommando Lutsk. please comment on this.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If Dr. Ratz intends to ask the witness questions about a document, it seems to be only fair if he shows the witness the document and informs the Tribunal and the Prosecution to which document he refers.

THE PRESIDENT: That is proper.

DR. RATZ: Your Honors, this is an affidavit in Document Book III-C, page 47 of the German book. This is Document NO-4765, Exhibit 137.

MR. HOCHWALD: Page 30 of the English Document Book, your Honor. BY DR. RATZ: officer of Advance Kommando Lutsk?

A From Sokal an advance kommando of SK-4-A went to Lutsk. This was done as ordered by the Commander-in-Chief of AOK 6 northerly route, a middle route and southerly route. The commanding officer of this subkommando was this Dr. Funk. He was the senior ranking officer. He had to report to the division commander there and to receive his orders about security measures. von Radetzky was then sent along with the safe blasting unit. They dealt with cutting and welding instruments, finger-printing material etc., and it was his job to capture enemy documents. In Lutsk they found maps and charts of a Russian General Staff which were very important for the Army command. A courier called for this material, and as far as I remember it was Haeffner who was then liaison officer with Army Command 6. Radetzky was, therefore, free and independent of Dr. Funk with his six men and drivers. He had a special mission and was not tied down to any one locality, and I never heard that Redetzky participated in an execution in Lutsk, as I can say with my honest conviction he never participated in any execution.

Q Another question: Why shouldn't Radetzky be in command of the other men of Special Kommando 4-a? had been distributed there as per orders, I took Radetzky aside and I told him that as a wearer of the uniform and as a Hauptsturmfuehrer, he could not act as the commanding officer of the other leaders since, first of all, the others had previous police training and he was only assigned to the kommando as an interpreter on a war emergency status. The officers who had been trained in police measures, who had been criminal commissars by vocation and who were leaders of the Executive Service with Special Kommando 4-a were given the command of the sub-kommandos in the nature of a training course, whereas Radetzky and Mueller were interpreters and were too busy themweilves with interpreting jobs. Radetzky knew the Russian language and was competent for the Russian reports and Mueller knew the Ukrainian country since many years, especially as a business man, and was competent to deal with Ukrainian documents. the Army command 6? with Army command 6, which continued to be mutually exchanged in order to exchange reports. With Army Command 6 there was a Department of Economics and in this department, there was much more material to be found than in this small special kommando, and Radetzky evaluated this material in his reports. Later on, around September 1941, even laterit must have been later -- Radetzky was appointed by the group as permanent liaison officer to the Army command 6. As liaison officer, he operate between Army command 6 and Einsatzgruppe C, but he was listed in the personnel file under SK 4a. At that time he was active for SK 4-a and he lead the supply unit; as a liaison officer,his main job was to regulate the communications between Army command 6,Group C and the Army Group, but in detail I don't know about his activity.

Q Witness, do you know anything about Radetzky's further activity as liaison officer to the Army Command 6 when Radetzky was detailed as liaison officer to Army Command 6? the 26th of September, 1941. Until that time Carlton was liaison officer, because Army Command 6 was up in the north and he was close to it with his sub-kommando. When the leaders of the Executive Service were relieved, Radetzky was ordered to Army Command 6, for there was a great lack of officers and SK 4-a no longer had any officers and Radetzky after these leaders left, was ordered to report to the Army Command 6 by car, but the car broke down and he was brought into Kiev with a Horch car. I was in the sick room and the Chief of Staff Hoffmann visited me and asked me for a report about the conditions in Kiev and, since the Higher SS and Police leaders had ordered the action, we could not report about the total situation. One might merely have mentioned that the SK 4-a had been participating with 15 men. Therefore, I rejected Hoffmann's demand. I told him this would distort the picture, but, as I already said, I already had reports, but still he would not let well enough alone. However, Hoffmann did not receive any reports from me that day, but the possibility exists that subsequently on the next day Hoffmann did ask again and then dictated the report in his orderly room and might have had it signed. It was around this time that Radetzky broke down in his Horch car on his trip to the Army Command 6 and was then brought back to Kiev. perform? Radetzky always stayed with the Army Command. I saw him again when in the beginning of December, or on the 27th or 28th of November, we left Kiev, that is, around the turn of the month, we marched through Poltawa and I had to report to the Field Marshal in order to get an order to march into the front territory.

The front area could not be entered without having definite orders to that effect on the marching papers and one could not leave the front area either. At that time Radetzky told me about a furlough, but this did not depend on me, but it had to be granted by the Einsatzgruppe because the latter needed a new liaison officer to Army Command 6 and, as far as I recall, in the middle, or, in the last third of December, 1941, he left on furlough; but I can't remember that I ever saw him again. In this connection, I can emphasize once more that Radetzky never received any orders from me to conduct executions or to participate in such. What happened during my absence I don't know from my own knowledge.

Q Now a final question, Witness, in order to come back to Radetzky's position as going under a war emergency status, what position did Radetzky have in this status? as an interpreter. This could be seen clearly from his pay. Just like other interpreters on a war emergency status, Radetzky drew per diem pay, whereas the criminal kommissars, the criminal offices drew salaries at home. The Special Kommando consisted of officials of the State Police, of the Criminal Police, and of the SD, and further of active people of the sphere of the SS or so-called people ordered to the Waffen SS and furthermore of people on an officer emergency status. He did not have a rank as an official and as a man on an emergency status, he merely had the right to wear the uniform, according to his rank which he held in an SS formation and this does not mean anything and it separates him from the active leaders. That he was an SS-Hauptsturmfuehrer in the Security Police also separates him from the other people and among the drivers who were the uniform of Untersturmfuehrer that did not show,because in the General SS they held this rank and therefore it was not decisive in the SK 4-a what rank you held in the SS, hut what rank you held as a civil servant. If Radetzky was an honorary officer of an SS unit, he would have had to have been six or seven years with the SS in order to become an SS Untersturmfuehrer, but all told, the SS Hauptsturmfuehrer Radetzky did not have an equivalent rank and was not supposed to be considered in the same nature as Dr. Funk or Dr. Janssen, who held a civil service rating, that is, criminal commissar or officer of the Executive Service.

Radetsky was merely used there on the basis of his own personal knowledge.

DR. HEMM: I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Does any other defense counsel wish to cross-examine the witness Blobel? If not, the Prosecution may begin its cross examination. BY DR. HOCHWALD: May it please the Tribunal.

Q Mr. Blobel, what was your rank in May 1941?

Q That is the rank of a full colonel, is it not? colonel, it was just Standartenfuehrer in the SD. German army? Is it?

A No, not in this connection. This concept only arose after the war. It was not equivalent to a Standartanfuehrer in the Waffen SS, where this designation had army privileges. the rank of a lieutenant or a captain, -- or, what was it? I would like to know what equivalent it was.

A Well, in 1941 there was no equivalent. It was merely the agency leader of SD Unit, who could be an Obersturmbannfuehrer.

Q Let me rephrase my question now. When you came to the east as a Standartenfuehrer and you met a major or a lieutenant colonel of the army, who of you had the higher rank when you were both in uniform? rank. I had the rank of SS Standartenfuehrer in the SD, and the other was a major in the Wehrmacht.

Q Mr. Blobel, I don't think that you answered my question. It was a very simple question ... when you met a major or a lieutenant colonel of the army, and you were yourself in the uniform of a Standartenfuehrer - who of you was the higher ranking man? It's not a question whether uniforms were different.

A None. Because the officer of the Wehrmacht had his rank, and I was a Standartenfuehrer SS. I was addressed as such.

Q All right. In Germany officers used to salute each other, and the lower ranging officer saluted the higher ranking officer first. So when you, being a Standartenfuehrer, being in a uniform of the SS met a lieutenant colonel of the Wehrmacht, was he supposed to salute you first?

A We both saluted each other as officers. They could see that it was not an equivalent rank.

Q That is not the question. How long have you been wearing a uniform?

Q Will you give me an answer, please? How long have you been wearing a uniform in your career as an SS man? with the SD, temporarily.

Q All right. How many years was that?

Q So let us say approcimately ten years? of military and SS regulations is very scanty. It take it from your information that you do not know whether a Standartenfuehrer was in the rank of a colonel or was not.

We will ascertain that in another way.

Mr. Blobel, when you were first sent from Berlin to Pretsch in May 1941, did you know that you were supposed to take over a Command of an Einsatzkommando, or a Sonderkommando?

A No, I did not know that previously. I only heard that in Pretsch.

Q Why do you think you were sent to Pretsch? Did you have an idea what you were going to do there?

A No, I did not know it at all. I could just as well have been called to hear Heydrich or a conference with him, as he used to have them, or it could be anything. It was not known.

Q It could not be only a meeting, could it? you to report to Rasch?

A Yes, I had to report to Rasch. Rasch told us that the officers who had to report to him, were under his command, and on the same day on which I met Rasch there we were all ordered to report to the officers school in Pretsch. Streckenbach?

A Yes, that was the day of Streckenbach's speech. where Streckenbach spoke? What, exactly, did Rasch tell you , ... that you were under his command, you said? What kind of command? Did he tell you something about Einsatzgruppen? Did he tell you that you would be the leader of a Sonderkommando? What did he tell you?

A Dr. Rasch didn't tell me anything. He didn't know anything himself.

under his command, but he did not know what kind of command that would be? Is that what you. are telling the Tribunal? Dr. Rasch, and that Dr. Rasch would take us to this conference.

Q All right. You knew that you were commanded. What I wanted to find out is, what did Rasch tell you? It is very easy -- I do not think this question is complicated to understand, witness. What did Rasch tell you? He told you you are under his command. All right. Did he tell you what kind of command it would be?

A No, he did not know anything about it himself. He only said: "In the afternoon you have to report to Pretsch."

Q So he did not tell you that you were under his command?

A He told us, "You are now assigned to me and you have to report to the school in Pretsch this afternoon about three o'clock together with me. I'll meet you there."

Q That is all you heard?

Q And you were at that meeting where Streckenbach spoke?

Q Who, of the defendants, was present at that meeting?

A Dr. Rasch, Dr. Hoffmann. Of the defendants I think i saw Ohlendorf. The others ware strange to me, I didn't know them. present at this meeting were the defendant Ohlendorf and Rasch, is that right?

A Ohlendorf, Rasch, Dr.Hoffmann.

Q Dr. Hoffmann is not a defendant in this trial. So - these two, Ohlendorf and Rasch.

told you during this meeting? from this moment on you are officers under martial law, and you have to carry out missions which I am now going to tell you about. You have to execute them exactly as any soldier would before the enemy. Then he detailed the missions and the directives and he said. "During the march in the east which is to be expected, Einsatzgruppen will be formed which are sub-divided into commandos and you will lead these commandos. And the Einsatzgruppen and commandos will be under the Army commanders during this march to be expected in the east. And the mission which I am now going to explain to you is the following: all elements which endanger the security of the troops:

the activists, Communist agents the security are to be apprehended, and Jews in addition. the case which was very close to his heart.

It was not clearly delineated. am interested to know. to be considered out there and because we were under the army, we were under the supervision of the army, and in addition some directives of execution had to be issued, for the question was left open completely. I never saw a written order.

Q Witness, I don't think that you answered my question. I asked you: were you of the opinion that all Jews were to be arrested or only the Jews who would be dangerous for the German army and committed any crimes would be. arrested by the Einsatzgruppe.

Q Not all of them?

this court room? Did you hear his testimony here?

AAt the beginning I wasn't here. Streckenbach gave in Pretsch? Did you hear that part of his testimony?

Q I unfortunately don't have the transcript here but I do think that I can say he made it unmistakeably clear that Streckenbach told and everybody understood him so, that by no means only the guilty Jews were to be arrested, but there was an order in existence which provided for the killing of all Jews, men, women and children alike, and of the killing of all gypsies and the killing of all communists and that this was made perfectly clear in this meeting, in which you, together with the defendant Ohlendorf, were present, is that correct? not here. Streckenbach, did you not? now and I must always say that this question was discussed so often out there. Therefore, something must have been said in this respect, but if I must repeat this precisely I cannot do so. description of what happened during this meeting and on my question you have been repeating the very same precise description again. So tell me now, who is telling a lie, you or the defendant Ohlendorf? You both heard the same statement by Streckenbach. You both tell us something completely different about that, what Streckenbach says.

Will you tell me now, can you remember what Streckenbach said, did it escape your attention that he said all Jews were to be killed? "And Jews" we were to understand it that way at that time. between the testimony of Ohlendorf and yours. The defendant Ohlendorf told the Tribunal very openly and his testimony is corroborated by the testimony of four of your co-defendants, who testified after him, that it was an order to kill all Jews, not arrest them. It is entirely different. Will you explain that, why the differentiation between killing and arresting escaped your memory?

DR. HEIM: FOR BLOBEL: Your Honor, I ask that the Prosecution be directed that if he is recalling testimony of witnesses here, he should read the testimony. The Prosecution is not so much asking the witness questions but he is beginning to argue.

THE PRESIDENT: First let us clear up the initial point. The Prosecution asked the witness to relate what had happened at that meeting with Streckenbach, and the witness indicated those who came within the order, he listed spies, saboteurs and various others and then he ended with the phrase "and Jews". Now it is not necessary to labor that point. The Tribunal understands from that that whatever the witness was instructed to do with regard to certain categories, that it included all Jews. Now that is the first point, that is clear. The second point is what was the witness instructed to do with these categories which includes "and Jews", that is where we are at present. So you may proceed from that point, Mr. Hochwald, as to what he was instructed to do with regard to these various classifications, among which there was the item "and Jews."

DR. HOCHWALD: I only want to remark the fact that I was not able to present the witness with the transcript. I have sent for the transcript and by mistake another part of the transcript was sent to me, otherwise I would have had the transcript in English and German available.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, but he has not yet answered that question specifically. So get an answer to that and then you can begin to make whatever comparisons the situation logically calls for. BY MR. HOCHWALD: you heard from Streckenbach, whether all Jews should be killed or whether they should be only arrested? Streckenbach was concerned, but these execution, measures would also have to be conducted and these did include Jews also, "and the Jews", that's how I remember and I meant that the entire Jewry was meant by this. BY THE PRESIDENT: Now, you haven't answered the question, witness. You have already disposed of the first part that it includes all Jews, so it isn't necessary to repeat that. We understand that, but whatever the instructions were, were they to include all Jews. Now what Mr. Hochwald asked you, is what were you to do with all Jews, added to the other classifications, of course. Now that is what he wants you to answer. shoot. BY MR. HOCHWALD: all Jews were to be shot, is that right?

Q That about the gypsies? more. This is all strange to me.

Q What about the communist functionaries? agitators were emphasized especially as the carriers of these political circles which would hinder the advance of the German army. were to be killed? that these cases had to be gone into and to be worked out that in order to apprehend these people the documentary evidence and the naming of people were to be found in this. And then it was concluded that these activists were the leaders of the communist party in that country. according to Streckenbach's statement sufficient that whenever somebody was found who was a communist the order was to kill him? be proven. knew when you left Pretsch that all Jews, whether they committed a crime or did not commit a crime, were to be killed by your unit, or that in the case of communists there was a difference made, as to whether a communist was guilty of a crime or not, is that what I take from your testimony.

in general terms and the apprehension of other people and their sentencing also was ordered by that order. that at least a part of your function would be to kill defenseless people, is that correct? "The Jewry" there were definitely defenseless people among them and one could not assume that they were all to be considered as criminals. and your unit did not commit any acts which were against the laws of war and the laws of humanity. Do you consider the killing of people, just for the simple reason that they were Jews, in accordance with the laws of war and in accordance with the laws of humanity?

A No, not at all. Not with this conclusion.

Q But you had your order from Streckenbach. Will you comment on that. Will you explain to the Tribunal and to me, how it is possible that you made this statement just now. It was an order that you received?

Q May I interrupt you. It took approximately half an hour to get you to say on this that all Jews were meant with these words, so we are so far that you said you knew that all Jews were to be killed. Please explain now the question I asked you. You told the Tribunal that no acts were committed by you and your unit, which are against the law and the laws of humanity. My question is, did you consider the killing of defenseless people, just for the simple reason that they were members of another race in conformity with the law of nations, and the laws of war, and. the law of humanity.Will you answer this question, please?

THE PRESIDENT: The trouble there, Mr. Hochwald, you put him a question and after you put these questions, then you said, will you answer the question please. Now he said, nein, nein., and. I don't know whether he gave one "no" for the first question, and the second "no" for the second question, or both "no's" for the second question, or both "no's" for the first question. Just ask one question at a time, please.

MR. HOCHWALD: I beg your pardon, Your Honor. BY MR. HOCHWALD: people just for the simple reason that they were members or another race, that is , in conformity with laws of war end laws of humanity? they are Jews, I don't consider in accordance with the conception of international law, and not according to the laws of humanity either.

by your units. How do you reconcile the fact that you received the order from Streckenbach to kill all Jews on the one hand and on the other hand that you never carried out any acts which are against the laws of war and the laws of humanity. How did you reconcile these two statements? regulations which were to be issued by the chief of command 6 and I was under his command. This was the framework in which I was included in this order, and the opinion of this man was decisive.

Q You are speaking about Field Marshal von Reichenau, are you not? disregard this order which was handed down by Streckenbach, but came, as we have been very often told here, from the head of the State and Highest Commander, Adolf, Hitler? at the Army Command 6, but he had a written order. Streckenbach, if Field Marshal von Reichenau did not even know about the order? exactly the same, and he had it in his document, and Major Paulsen read it to no when I reported to him. also by Field Marshal von Reichenau to kill all the Jews? Field Marshal had to see to it that the orders of his subordinate commanders were examined and that they were followed. the same order as it was handed down by Streckenbach, and this order was read to you. I do think that we agree that one of the most important part of this order, was the order to kill hundreds of thousands of defenseless people.

The question to you is: Did Field Marshal Reichenau hand down the order for the killing of all Jews to you?

A In this order it said -- "as it is to be expected -can explain the whole thing, but I would be glad if you could so answer, yes or no. It is a very easy question, if you can say in this order the killing of all Jews was provided for?

A No, this order was not given to me by Reichenau. For the reason that the order which was in von Reichenau's hands and which read: "That during the advance of the German Wehrmacht the political people who would endanger the security of the Wehrmacht and then it enumerates: the agents, the saboteurs, the agitators, and so forth and - among them Jews - among: them Jews, were to be dealt with by the police officers.

Q I don't know, but I do think you did not answer my question. Is it true, on do I understand you correctly that you said that in the order which was given you by Field Marshal Reichenau, the killing of all Jews was not provided for? not given in this form. and was an order of Hitler. Who relieved you of this order? I was now under Field Marshal von Reichenau's command, to whom I was subordinated, and I had to comply with his orders. a Higher Authority than Field Marshal von Reichenau was?

Q Did you carry out the order you received from Streckenbach?

given by the head, of the State. Can you explain that to the Tribunal? his area, and if he received the same order, he had to account for it to his superiors. Field Marshal von Reichenau the killing of the Jews was not provided, so he very likely did not receive the sane order. But did you report to Field Marshal von Reichenau when he gave you the information what your task would be that you had received in Pretsch, the special task to kill all the Jews with your unit? there was no question from von Reichenau which would have lend to that,to start this question, for I had no written order, I had only received an order from Rasch to report to Field Marshal von Reichenau he will give you further orders. order on your own discretion. That you just disregarded this order on your own discretion, the order from Streckenbach to kill all the Jews? Is that what you want to say? command at all. The Field Marshal might have said something else to me. immediate superior? chief of the group. Sofar as orders were concerned, the commander of Army Command Six.

Q Is it true that the defendant Rasch was your immediate superior?

Q You were commander of Sonderkommando 4-A, is that correct? 4-A were subordinate to you? A These sub-commandos were under SK 4-A organizationally, and were part of SK 4-A and therefore were subordinated to me as the commanding officer.

Q. And the officers?

A. Yes, the officers too,

Q. Did you have the duty to supervise the activities of these Teilkommandos?

A. To supervise the activity insofar as it convered the people conducting themselves in a soldierly manner and according to orders, a real job of leading men.

Q. You had no supervision of their activities, is that what you are going to imply?

A. In the activity I had no influence directly because the competent divisional commander or a member of the divisiona staff the G-II was the decisive factor.

Q. Did you or your office receive ever reports about the activities of these Teilkommandos?

A. Yes, of course, we received reports about the activity of these sub-kommandos.

Q. So you knew everything that was going on in those Teilkommandos, did you not?

A. Sooner or later, sometimes not at all.

Q. Can you tell the Tribunal whether the leaders of your Teilkommandos carried out the Hitler Order which provided for the killing of all Jews and gypsies?

A. How carried it out?

Q. I did not say "how" I said "whether".

A. In this concrete form in which Streckenbach gave it they did not. The officers carried out the execution ordered to them in the way the Army Commander of Army Command 6 had ordered them.

Q. It means they killed only people who were guilty of offenses against the Wehrmacht, is that right?

A. Yes, as far as there was no agreement between the Higher SS and Police Leader and the Commander-in-Chief about entire localities as far as retaliatory measures existed or from other reasons.

Q. Were you informed about such reprisal measures?

A. Later and partly from the documents here,

Q. So you did not know during your activity that reprisals on a very great scale were carried out?

A. Yes, we knew that.

Q. And you considered those so-called reprisals justified before the laws of war and the laws of humanity, is that correct?

A. In my examination I emphasized that I considered that justified according to international law, What was done as a result of punitive action; but that people were shot who were not hold as hostages or were not guilty of anything, that I refused. I did not confirm that, and I objected to it.

Q. Were such people shot by the Teilkommandos under your command?

A. Yes, it is said here in the doucments that in Kiev it was the order of the Higher SS and Police Leader. The case of Radomischl was mentioned here where people of the kommando took part. These are incidents which I did not approve of at all.

Q. But you knew about that when you were commander of SK-4a, did you not?

A. Yes, certainly I knew about them. Yes, we heard about them, we were out there in that area.

Q. You have been very often ill during the time you were in command. You just told the Tribunal that you did not agree with those measures. Why did you stay in command of Sonderkommando 4a if you were so very much opposed to these measures?

A. Well I had no opportunity to go to a higher agency who would have taken a personal interest in it and would have immediately effected a transfer. That did not happen until later in Kiev when I spoke with Dr. Rasch.

of the campaign, quite ill as an effect from imbibing too much alcohol? Is it not true that you were to be removed at that time, and did you meet an intervention with your superior, the Defendant Rasch, that you should stay in command of Sonderkommando 4a, is that right?

A. That is not right.

Q. That is not true?

A. No, at that time I was sent to the hospital at Lucks because of suspected typhoid and I was unconscious with high temperature.

Q. How were your relations to Dr. Rasch, your immediate superior?

A. I first knew Dr. Rasch at Pretsch, and then I saw him again when the order was given out at Crocow on the 25th. Thus I got to know Dr. Rasch as my superior. Outside of that I had no contact with Dr. Rasch.

Q. Did he know that you were ill?

A. Dr. Rasch later was reported about it, yes.

Q. What do you mean by later, please, after you had returned or during your illness?

A. No, on the march when the remaining kommando went to Lutsk from Skolan and changed quarters there was a dispute between an Army officer and myself- and that was reported to Dr. Rasch at the time by the kommando. How that was reported, I don't know. For that purpose he sent Hauptsturmfuehrer Dr. Beyer to the kommando.

Q. May I interrupt you? I do think my question was: did Rasch know that you were in the hospital? He was your immediate superior. I do think it should be natural that he was informed that you were not in charge of the kommando, but it is my question, and you can easily answer it with yes or no, that it was reported to him that you were not on duty, that you were in the hospital, a few kilometers from the front.

A. Yes, the kommando probably informed the Group C whenever it was possible, and since it could not maintain communications with the group, the Higher SS and Police Leader must have made the decision in Lutsk, and he must have reported to Dr. Rasch. This is how I assume it, but I don't know.

THE PRESIDENT: I am informed, Dr. Hochwald, that the film will expire in two or three minutes, so that I wouldn't want you to be right you see.

If it is agreeable to you we will recess at this point.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. The Tribunal will recess until tomorrow morning at nine-thirty.

( The Tribunal adjourned until 30 October 1947, at 0930 hours).

on 30 Oct. 1947, at 0930-1630, Justice

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II-A.

Military Tribunal II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

DR. MANDRY (for the defendant Sandberger): Your Honors, I would ask you to excuse the defendant Sandberger today and tomorrow, as I would like to prepare his defense with him.

THE PRESIDENT: You wish him to be excused now, immediately?

DR. MANDRY: Yes, end tomorrow.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Sandberger will be excused from attendance in Court today and tomorrow. He will be taken from the Courtroom under guard.

You may proceed, Mr. Hochwald. BY MR. HOCHWALD: May it please the Tribunal.

Q Mr. Blobel, I asked you yesterday whether you once made an attempt to be relieved from your duties as commander of Sonderkommando 4-a. Will you tell the Tribunal whether you made such an attempt?

A When I was ill I asked Dr. Rasch to be relieved from my post.

Q When was that? of October.

Q What were the reasons for your request?

A Dr. Rasch knew that I was ill and the doctor told him about my state of health and he agreed to my release.

correct?

A Yes, and this was supported by Dr. Rasch. tasks which you had as commander of Sonderkommando 4-a? utter.

Q And why had you such reasons... why did you not conform with those tasks? of interests. And the whole assignment was revulsive to me.

Q Why... why did you have a revulsion against this task?

A I had had a different profession. I had been an architect, and I had not been active in police matters, and I had not been trained in this, and the Einsatzgruppen and the Einsatzkommandos... even when I joined the Einsatzgruppen in the army my actual task was going to be the carrying out of police measures -- police assignment. givings about these executions which were carried out by Sonderkommando 4-a, is that correct?

A Of course, I had a revulsion against them. That was part of my state of health. that correct?

AAs far as criminals were concerned, yes. Not the others. I have already stated that... I felt revulsive toward them from the bottom of my heart. chain of command as far as your commando was concerned... your Exhibits 1, 2, 3 and 4. You have drawn these charts yourself, is that correct?

Q Did you make these charts according to your memory?

Q Have you such documents? according to your recollection? ordination at the time. compiled from any documents which you have, is that correct? as I experienced them myself while I was with AOK 6, and the subordination of Gruppe C. to report to Heydrich, is that correct?

A No, I was not forced to report to Heydrich. I had to go and see him.

Q But he spoke to you, is that right? minutes, then I left. That was the first time I actually saw Heydrich in his office.

Q He was your high superior?

superior. soft, is that correct?

A He used the expression "effeminate man".

Q Why did he reproach you for being too soft?

A I don't know. I discussed that with Obergruppenfuehrer Mueller and I thought about it a lot, and I assume that he drew that conclusion from the fact that I had been ill all the time, and he must have received further reports from Dr. Rasch or from other people of the same group. out the Hitler Order? during those three minutes he merely insulted me.

Q So you actually do not know why he considered you to be too soft? being entitled to furlough.

Q All right. I would like to discuss with you now your activities in the Sonderkommando 4-a. Were reports sent from your Sonderkommando to Eintsatzgruppe C?

Q Who made these reports? operational situation reports which were compiled either by Mueller or Radtzky or other leaders, -- they were submitted to the Group. to Einsatzgruppe C? these reports also contained information on the activities of the Teilkommandos, is that correct? happened in this sector, was compiled in these reports. leader of Einsatzgruppe C, who was also leader of Office No. 4, Hoffmann, received this information and out of this information he made his reports to the RSHA. Is that correct?

A Yes, that was Hoffman's task. reports which were made by his staff leader before they were sent on to the RSHA?

A I don't know. I was very seldom with this Group. means, how Hoffmann made his reports, and about Hoffmann's activities in Einsatzgruppen, how strong he was, how much he exaggerated ... I can presume you also know what Rasch did, as you were so well informed about Hoffmann's activities in this respect.

A My knowledge I received from Dr. Krieger, Oberregierungsrat (Government Councillor), from the time when Dr. Rasch with part of his Commando, was in Novo Ukrainka, and this Dr. Krieger compiled these reports in Shitomir and Obersturmbannfuehrer Meier added his own reports and his own figures. This I experienced myself; and I also experienced myself how these people compiled these reports, which were meant to go to Berlin.

Q Did you over see Hoffmann make such a report?

A I also saw Hoffman making his reports,but I don't know whether Rasch ever read them. I do think he must have received knowledge of them. made strongly exaggerated the numbers of executions carried out -- of course, as far as Sonderkommando 4-a is concerned. Is that correct? have been compiled according to sectors as they were compiled by Special commandos and summed up of the events of various smaller locations and are reported as such, and those reports were then only very roughly compiled to give other events of other kinds, which these leaders reported. what you just told us ... did you ever voice any opposition against this way of reporting to Berlin? in Kiev wanted when I told him that these matters had to be reported to Berlin, and this would have a completely wrong picture and Berlin would not believe it -- but it was too late. He already reported it.

Q Did you report to Dr. Rasch about these astonishing facts?

A No, I hardly ever saw Dr. Rasch. First of all he was in Shitomir all the time, then in Novo Ukrainka - he was in Novo Ukrainka first, then he came to Shitomir, then he held a raw with the Reich-Fuehrer, then he was in Berlin, and practically Hoffmann was the leader of the whole Group. numbers? the Group to the RSHA.

Q Did you do that, Mr. Blobel? you consider a number of ten to fifteen thousand people executed by Sonderkommando 4-a as the correct number? in which the Commando took part, from one man to the whole sub-commando. This is my estimate according to the documents, according to which events have been made known to me which I did not know in this form. BY THE PRESIDENT: were interrogated on June 6, 1947?

A Interrogation? Not before my interrogation. documents? estimate which I recollected from my own memory and I cannot vouch for the number. BY MR. HOCHWALD:

Higher SS and Police leader Jeckeln to Rasch in Shitomir, did you?

A Yes, the Gruppe staff passed on these reports. I think it must have been Dr. Krieger or some such person. That was before I fell ill in Shitomir. did you? leader had been there, and that very strict measures against the Jews were ordered by him as the measure carried out up to now displeased him, he was not in agreement with such measures carried out up to then.

Q Did you consider this order binding for you?

A Binding? That is a thought that has to be considered. One had to receive special orders, special executive orders. binding for you? ... Will you please answer first with yes or no, and then you may explain whatever you want to. had to comply with it.

Q So you did consider it binding for you? yes, binding. the stronger measures against the Jews? What kind of stronger measures were they? order, to apprehend the Jews living in that area for labor and those whom they didn't like were probably to be shot.

were to be used for labor, and if they should not comply with these reports they would be shot, is that what you want to say? the Jewish population according to their ability to work, those who would be able to work and those who would not.

Q What was to happen in the people who were not able to work?

Q You carried out this order, did you not?

Q Excuse me, I didn't understand your answer, will you repeat it, please? this order binding for you, and now you tell the Tribunal that nobody gave you this order, inspite of the fact that you admitted here that you were officially informed about the order. Will you explain this discrepancy between your answer, no, and your answer about two minutes ago?

A Well, that depended on conditions. In this territory, the Commander-in-Chief of AOK-VI had to approve of any operation, and on the same level of command was the higher SS and Police Leader: if these two authorities of command were in agreement with each other then the operation was carried out, because an operation was never allowed to interfere with the fighting units from any activity, and these two men had to agree upon them.

Q Rash was your superior, was he not?

Q He handed down this order to you, is that correct?

A Rasch not personally. Rasch was in Nove Ukrainka for a discussion of this order which came to us.

the Group Staff Chief, of which was Rasch, is that correct.

Q You said that this order was binding for you. Now you explain again that this order was not binding for you. As you didn't know whether Field Marshal Richenau and Jekeln had agreed upon this order. Is that what I have to understand from your answer? Reich Fuehrer to Dr. Rasch of this particular sector, the Commander-inChief of AOK-VI, was in charge who in any case had to give his agreement for any operation. the carrying out of this order? and at this time I did not go to AOK-VI for the reason that Group-C maintained the connection between AOK-VI itself and didn't want any overlapping of these particular channel commands. that you didn't know whether the order was approved by Reichenau, but at the same time you state here that you never heard from Reichenau whether he had approved of the order or not. Is that correct? Is that what you are going to tell the Tribunal? these orders, because I was not present myself. this order was valid or not? must have been valid but in the carrying out depended on other factors. you did not carry it out, is that correct?

it is perfectly clear to the Tribunal what you said. I do think this ground covers it. Did you communicate this order to the offices of your teilkommandos?

A They found out about it themselves. That was at the time when I was ill. received the information, I think, and they might have discussed the matter with Dr. Krieger, or some other member of Group Staff C. from the commander, Standartenfuehrer Blobel or nothing from his office Just by chance when they came to the office they were told by a clerk, we have received the order from Himmler to kill all the Jews who were unable to work, is that what you are going to imply? Leaders in that form, I believe, and when orders were carried out these leaders were dependent on the Wehrmacht leader, or the Army leader in this particular sector, and these commanders of the Army unit could only receive orders from their own superiors. valid for you but not valid for your subordinate officers, Is that just what you were going to say. Possibly you can be a little bit more specific, a little bit. I asked you very specifically a question which is extremely easy to answer, so probably you can be a little bit more specific than you are just now? commanders or only for myself? Did I understand you correctly? Police leader, and was passed onto Group-C, and it was valid for Group C and its subordinate commanders.

correct? attached to Sonderkommando-4-A, did you inform him officially about this order? sub-commando Leaders?

Q Let's say, a new officer came to your commend, Sonderkommando-4-A, after the order had been issued, and after you returned to active duty after your illness again, he came in and reported to you, did you inform this officer, or did you inform him about his task with Sonderkommanndo-4-A did you inform him about the order of Jeckeln? had happened in the sector, and about new orders which had been gives, and this major frame order which was give out by Jeckeln was also made known to him.

Q So you did inform him, is that correct?

Q That was the new leader?

A There was no new leader. It would have been my task to say so. received it? Did you consider such an order justified and in accordance with the laws of war?

Q Why? ings, because selections were first to be made which were supposes to be valid, and this was in direct contradiction to the general humane conception.

Q Did you have a revulsion to carry out this order?

Q Did you ever report to Rasch about this order?

could not even discuss them with him.

Q So you didn't do anything in order to be relieved from the carrying out of this order, and you did also not report to Rasch that you are not willing?

to carry out this order and you did also not report to Rasch thatyou were not willing to carry out this order, is that correct?

A. I was not quits as stupid as all that. I didn't want to show him my active mind, what was in my mind, there were other possibilities.

Q. Did you use the other possibilities, can you say?

A. The happy circumstances that my sub-commandos Were actually stationed in this front sector under the army units, and that one could evade the Supreme Power of the Higher SS and Police leader.

Q. and by that fact, you were able to avoid the carrying out of this order, is that what you want to say?

A. Yes, that is one of the facts which was so favorable, which put us in such a position.

Q. So you never carried out the order in spite of the fact it was valid for you, is that what you want to say?

A. No, it was not carried out by us directly, and indirectly.

Q. Indirectly, of course, it was the effect of that operation the Higher SS and police Leader was engaged in, with the AOK-VI when these two gentleman had that discussion.

Q. And in this case this order was carried out by you and your unit, is that right?

A. When the units were detailed to such assignment, they were carried out as the document here proves.

Q. And if that is what in this case Reichenau and Jeckeln agreed upon it was in accordance with the laws of war and the laws of humanity, is that what you want to say?

A. No, that is not what I want to say.

Q. You don't want to answer this question. Do you know whether thedefendant Radetsky know about the order of Jeckeln?

A. Whether he heard about this order during his work, or any reports, it is possible, but it is not necessarily so.

Q. You told the Tribunal just a few moments ago that your officers know about the order, or must have know about the order. Why do you say now that Radetsky, who was one of your officers, possibly didn't know about it?

A. Because Radetsky was not the chief of the Sub-kommndo.

Q. That is Radetsky?

A. Yes, but he had nothing to do with the executive power. I can not say, he might have heard the report or discussion or talks of other leaders. As it was supposed to be asked, he might have discussed them with other leaders, that is.

Q. You don't know anything then?

A. I can say that he might have informed himself and probably did not just pass over the events.

Q. Who gave the order for the killing of the insane?

A. I never hoard of that order.

Q. It was never carried out by you and your unit?

A. No, SK-4-A never experienced such activity, and never carried out such orders.

Q. I shall refer to document II-C, page 52. Document NO 2832, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 79, I an sorry, it is page 55 Your Honor, I want to quote from Page 61 of the German, where were you on the 23rd and 24th of October? Were you ill or were you in your office?

A. On the 23rd and 24th of October I was in Kiev, where I had my head injury.

Q. Were you on duty, or were you ill?

A. I was not on duty. The whole unit or kommando was just being restored.

Q. Were you not on duty?

A. No.

Q. Did you see any reports of your teilkommandos when you returned to duty?

A. We had only one sub-kommando in Charkow, and on 23rd and 24th there was a sub-kommando stationed there for a short while. The whole SK-4-A had marched away in the direction of Lubny.

Q. Did you find the page which I wanted to quote from, in Document No-2832?

A. Yes, I have it.

Q. That is page 55 of Document Book II-C, Your Honor. Page 6l of the German. There is the last sentence of the third paragraph from below. It says, on the same day, and it is the 24th of October, through the request of the director of the mental asylum at Czernikow, liquidation of 270 incurables was complied with, and if you read the whole paragraph you will see that that is a report of the teilkommando of the Sonderkommando-4-A. Do you want still to maintain that insane were never killed by units under your command?

A. Yes, I stick to my opinion, that Sonderkommando or a unit of SK-4-A never killed any insane people in Czernikow or anywhere else.

Q. What is your explanation then to this report?

A. Yesterday in my direct examination I said that this territory and this sector, and those reports came from EK-5, which was stationed there, and which was assigned to this sector, SK-4-A had no platoons. I can say it only had a sub-kommando and advanced kommando, which on the 18th, that can be seen from this document they marched off to Lubny.

Q. Do I understand then from your answer that this report is a mistake, is that right, and your memory is correct?

A. No, that is mistaking the kommandos.

Q. It is a mistake, is it not?

A. No, it is mistaking the kommandos, but it is a fact that the EK-5 is to have supposed to have carried out the task of SK-4-A, as it is mentioned here as SK-4-A, and that is the same also, referring to the number of the document, and I have named the location yesterday of the village where SK-4-A could never have been assigned, and these locations belonged in the field of activity of this EK-5.

Q. Herr Blobel, you commented yesterday on the document which is to be found in Document Book II-a, Your Honor, it is on page 81 of the English, and page 84 of the German. It is Document NO-2938, Prosecution's Exhibit No. 44 -- 81, Your Honor, and I shall quote from the first and second paragraphs on this page; under heading "Page 13 of the original cont'd." You commented yesterday on this document, which states that on 2nd July, 1160 Jews were shot as a reprisal,that this Was a justified measure, and I want to quote what you said yesterday:

"I only had disgust for such enemies when I heard about these occurrences, because the most primitive people only did such things, and therefore, I considered the measures for a punishment of these criminals completely justified."

DR. HEIM: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Prosecutor to read the question again, as the translation is very bad and only came through in parts.

Mr. HOCHWALD: The question was not finished as yet, as a ratter of fact. You, Herr Blobel, commented on the facts which I stated here in the document, namely, that 1160 Jews were shot as a reprisal, and that these measures were justified, by say in: "I only had a disgust for such enemies when I heard about these occurrences because the most primitive people only did such things, and, therefore, I considered the measures for the punishment of these criminals completely justified." If you now examine the document more closely you will see that it has said here that a total of 10 German members of the wehrmacht were killed; as a reprisal 1160 Jews were shot. Do you want to imply that the shooting of 116 Jews for one German soldier is a justifiable measure?

A. During my testimony yesterday I spoke about the events which occurred in Sokal which I saw with my own eyes, and I drew my conclusion from this observation of mine. In Lucks, there were four German airmen who had been massacred, and then two-thousand Ukranians were slaughtered by the Russians, and whether these reprisals which was carried out and ordered by the Field Marshall -- were in agreement with the measures which are agreed upon by International Law, that I can not say in detail myself. I can not establish that formally myself, whether this number 116, or other figures, whether it is cor rect, as the correct figure of reprisals, I don't know, but that is entirely within the sphere of competency of the commander-in-Chief.

Q. Would you consider it justified to kill 116 Jews as a reprisal for the killing of one German? Do you consider that justified? Yes or no. It is easy.

A. That did not only refer to the Germans. That is the general situation which is to blame for it, and that was also judged by the field marshal. Mathematically how many reprisals were shot for one German, I do not know.

Q. My question was completely different from that which you answered to, I asked you a question which you can easily answer with yes or no. Do you and did you consider the killing of lie Jews as reprisal for the killing of one German justified? Answer that with yes or no.

A. Well, I would then have to answer with the conscience of the field marshal, and if I were a field marshal and I had the whole perspective of the happenings and if I had the right to judge this, and if German blood is shed, I would, of course, have to order a justified punishment for it in order to have the necessary prestige as the supreme commander of my army, towards my soldiers.

Q. Do I understand that you do not want to answer this question which I put to you or do you want to answer it. It is a very simple question. Do you, not the field marshal, consider the killing of 116 Jews as a reprisal for the killing for one German justified?

A. 116 Jews for one German? I don't know. I am not a militarist, you see. One can only judge it from a sort of public sentiment and from one's own human ideas. If they are enemies and if they are equal enemies the question would have to be discussed whether one to 116 is a justified ratio of retaliation.

Q. That is what I am asking you all the time, nothing else. That is the only thing I want to know from you. Do you consider this justified? Nothing else, nothing about a field marshal and nothing about the fact that they were enemies or not. That is a reprisal measure, nothing to do with enemies.

A. Well, whether for these atrocities a reprisal measure had to be carried out, well I must answer to that. (Film had here)

Q. You considered it justified, is that what you said?

A. Some kind of reprisal measure, some kind of retaliation measure is called for in this situation.

Q. So I take it you do not want to answer my question. In the same document there is a mention made on the same page, Page 55, your Honors, about a Killing of 300 Jews - I am sorry, it is Page 81, your Honor 300 Jews and 20 looters.

THE PRESIDENT: What book?

MR. HORLICK-HOCWALD: This is Page 61 of Document Book II-a. It is still the same document, your honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Horlock-Hochwald) There is no mention made about a reprisal. Do you consider this shooting justified?

A. No, it is the effect of the general order which is not discussed in detail. This does not say why these Jews were shot, but it says twenty looters had beer apprehended. The death punishment for looters was justified. Now, you talk about 300 Jews but it does not say why they ware shot, so what have these people to do with the happenings? It is not stated what crimes they are accused of, this is in disagreement with the major Fuehrer order.

Q. So you consider this killing of the 300 Jews as not justified?

A. No, I do not think it is justified.

Q. It was done by units under your command, is that correct?

A. Not under my command.

Q. It was a Teilkommando of your Sonderkommando.

A. It was by a kommando but not by myself.

Q. You made it very clear here that these Teilkommandos were under your command, did you not?

A. The subkommandos. Of course I was, at that time, the leader of the subkommando until these events happened.

Q. But you were still command or of sonder-kommando 4a, were you not, at that time?

A. Noo I was ill at that time and I was in the field hospital at the time when these retaliation measures were carried out.

Q. You were officially relieved of your command then, is that what you want to imply, at that time?

A. well, I cannot say relieved. I was ill, I was absent through illness.

Q. So you do not take any responsibility for the killings which were carried out in the time when you were ill in the hospital?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Did you read the reports about these killings when you returned from the hospital?

A. No, not that either.

Q. You were not interested in what was going On in your unit during the time you Were ill?

A. In those circles it was being discussed, and the people were not all together, not all collected. One could only find out, could only hear news from the cook or from this or the other person who told me that shots were fired there and some command moved to another place, but I did not have any official reports or copies of reports. I never got any information from Dr. Rasch either.

Q. You have told the tribunal not very long ago that you received reports from your Teilkommandos and that you read those. Now you say again that you have not got reports. It is not easy for me to reconcile this very different statement. Possibly you can advise us how that was possible, that you received the reports and you read them all the time, and then at once you did not read them any more.

A. That depended on conditions, of time, As long as the subKommandos were moving along with the army divisions, one didn't see them for days and weeks until they actually submitted their situation reports, and during the time that I was ill in hospital and reports of any kind or copies of such reports were not submitted, or at least not submitted to me.

They went to the group. It was just a matter of personal information.

Q. You had no connection with the Teilkommandos at all, is that what you want to say?

A. Yes, connections I had via the liaison officer of G-2. Yes, there was some kind of connection and contact, but I never knew what would happen today or tomorrow. At this distance one could not find out about this and one had no influence on future happenings. One justhad to sit back and watch what would happen.

Q. So you want to say that the Teilkommandos did not report to you, they reported directly to Einsatzgruppe C, and also Einsatzgruppe C did not inform you what your own Teilkommandos were doing, is that what you want to say?

A. No I do not want to say that. what I want to say is that events which happened in the frontal area were investigated, preliminary investigations took place which took some time and that then the activities during certain periods were reported by kommando leaders to the liaison officer.

Q. Did you get those reports which were made to the liaison officer?

A. The reports which the liaison officer collected I read, or at least in parts, as I could get hold of them, and I also read those documents which were received in the orderly room, because a subkommando which was near our location in Sokal and who dealt with the ready files had to submit then through AUK.

Q. Am I mistaken in assuming that the reports which were sent from the Teilkommandos to the liaison officer were the same which were sent from the liaison officer to you and the same that were sent from the liaison officer to Einsatzgruppe C, is that correct?

A. Hardly anything was changed in those reports, or perhaps nothing at all.

Q. But you, have received the same reports from the liaison officer as Einsatzgruppe C, is that right?

A. The reports, the situation reports, yes. It could not have been otherwise, could it?

Q. So let us now conclude a little bit. These reports which are in evidence are reports which were made at the RSHA from reports which were sent from Einsatzgruppe C to RSHA. These reports, as far as Sonderkommando 4a and its Teilkommandos were concerned, were based, as you just explained to the Tribunal now, on the reports of the liaison officer. The liaison officer had received his information from the Teilkommandos. He gave this information to you and to Einsatzgruppe C. Is it not true then, that you have received in your office exactly the same reports as these which are in evidence now?

A. That have been submitted here? No, not at all, not by any means. The original reports were concerned with all the little details. They were filed, discussed, and then there were additional operational reports. The liaison officer collected all these individual detailed reports. The Leader IV of Group C compiled and collected all the operational reports, because they had been too much detailed. Every little case would have been mentioned, and I don't know what Berlin would have done with all these detailed reports.

Q. Well, as a matter of fact Berlin got its reportof executions from the same source as you received your reports, from the Teilkommandos, is that right or not? The source was the same , is that right?

A. Yes. The sources may have been of a different nature. For the Group C also got the situation reports of the Higher SS and Police Leader through their own liaison officer and also situation reports fromother agencies which went through the channel of reports.

Q. But Mr. Blobel -- you have described to the Tribunal very clearly that the sources for the information of the activities of Teilkommandos came from the Teilkommandos to the liaison officer. The liaison officer forwarded them to the Einsatzgruppe C and to you. TheEinsatzgruppe C, on the other hand, forwarded them to the RSHA, so is it not true that, as far as Sonderkommando 4a and its Teilkommandos and subunits are concerned, the source of information which you received was absolutely the same as the source of information for these reports which are in evidence? Is that clear, or not? I do not speak about the Higher Police Leader and I do not speak about Field Marshal von Reichenau. I just speak -- at very most , I just speak about a small unit. I just speak about Sonderkommando 4a.

A. That was one of the sources

Q. All right. You have also commented here on another document. I refer, your Honors, to Document Book II-A, Page 89 of the English Page 93 of the German. This is Document NO-3149,Presecution's Exhibit 46. This document states that 1107 Jews were killed by Sonderkommando 4a for the simple reason that it was difficult to get food for them. You have commented on this document here by stating that this report could possibly not be correct as a small Teilkommando would have been physically unable to carry out so many executions in such a short time, is that right?

A. I said during my direct examination that the men which were left in Radomyszl by the Commando, about three or four, had been detailed to this operation on the part of the Higher SS and Police Leader, and took part in this operation, and that this report must come from the source of Obersturmbannfuehrer Mayer who was the permanent deputy, of Group C with the Higher Police and SS Leader, and that this kommando, these three or four men, would not have been in a position to shoot these 1107 people. This is one of the most evident reports, as to how the situation reports were compiled from all sources.

Q. would it have been possible for the men of the Teilkommandos; as far as I remember you were not sure whether these Teilkommandos were 15 or persons. Let's take it there were 15. If they would have used automatic pistols or submachine guns and would have shot the people in the neck , would it then have been possible to carry out as many executions as are mentioned in this report?

A. I have already made a statement on this in my direct. examination , that certain particular measures, executive measures of the higher supreme leader had beenordered, and that it was impossible to reach this number of executions with only 15 men.

Q. Will you tell the Tribunal then that it is impossible that these Teilkommandos carried ou t shooting by submachine guns or by automatic pistols or by shooting in the neck ?

A. It was prohibited.

DR. HEIM (For Blobel): Your Honor, It is a hypothetical question and the witness is under no obligation to answer this question. Your Honor, I object to the admissibility of this question. It is a hypothetical question which the witness cannot answer and need not answer. According to my knowledge witnesses may only be asked questions which witnesses are able to answer according to their own knowledge or what they know from hearsay.

THE PRESIDENT: As the Tribunal heard the question it had to do with the methods of execution so that certainly would be within the sphere of the witness's knowledge, and as I recollect, the specific question was whether machine pistols were used or whether the method of shooting in the neck was employed.

Now, the witness can answer whether those methods were used or not. That is not hypothetical. killing was done by means of machine pistols or the technique of shooting in the neck. Will the you please answer that question?

A. For execution the kommandos had rifles as ordered. Submachine guns or machine guns or hand pistols were prohibited. They were not used. Also the Russian method of shooting in the neck, was equally prohibited and it was not carried out. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Do we understand that all those exectuions were done with rifles?

A. with rifles as ordered by the kommando.

Q. And we understand that you said yesterday that there were two riflemen per subject, per executee , is that right?

A. Two men, two rifles, for one person.

Q. Yes. Now leaving aside for the moment all discussion about the correctness or justice of an execution, we would like to have you describe an execution. Now, in your affidavit of June 6, 1947, there is one paragraph which states that out of the total number of persons designated for the execution 15 men were led in each case to the brink of the mass grave where they had to kneel down, their faces turned towards the grave. By whom was the grave dug?

A. Our men dug the grave, our men.

Q. The subjects had nothing to do with the digging of the grave, is that correct?

A. No.

Q. No, now you say, "their faces turned toward the grave. The execution squads were composed of men of the Sonderkommando." Well, we will leave that out, because we are now only describing or attempt ing to have you describe an execution.

When the men were ready for the execution one of my leaders who was in charge of this execution squad gave the order to shoot. Since they were kneeling on the brink of the mass grave the victims fell, as a rule, at once into the mass grave." In order that the subjects would fall into the mass grave and in order to avoid shooting in the back of the neck, I take it then, that the shots would pass over the grave?

A. The shootings? No, the target was : heart and head.

Q. Yes, but the victims were on the other side of the grave. In other words, they had to be facing the riflemen and consequently the grave would be between the riflemen and the victims.

A. Up to ten steps; up to ten steps.

Q. No, no, please answer that question. The position of the grave as regards the riflemen and the executees, was the grave in between these two groups?

A. No, the grave was the last unit, grave, executees and the kommando - the firing squad, the grave and executees.

Q. Then they would fall over backwards into the grave?

A. No, they fell face down.

Q. Then you had to shoot them in the neck, in the back?

A. Yes, in the back.

Q. Oh, then , you did shoot them in the back?

A. They were shot in the back position.

Q. Well, if they were facing the grave and would fall into the grave upon being shot, then they would have had to be shot in the back, would they not?

A. Yes, that is what I say.

Q. Yes, they would be shot in the back. You did not shoot into the neck, you say?

A. No, not the so-called shot in the neck of the Russians, the way we put it, the pistol shot, which is fired at a very close range of the executee.

Q. Now you say that the rifleman would aim at the heart. Was any placard or bull's eye or any kind of a marker placed on the executee's back so that the bullet would reach the heart of the subject?

A. Yes, there was a bull's eye over the heart and the middle of the head.

Q. Always on the subject's back?

A. No, the men know this from their military training where to aim.

Q. Yes, but the shot would always enter from the back.

A. Yes, they were shot from the back.

Q. Yes, now what distance was the rifleman from the subject?

A. Up to 10 steps.

Q. You say up to ten steps? Could it have been shorter?

A. 8 to 10 steps.

Q. 8 to 10 steps? Would that include the length of the rifle or not? In other words, would the ten paces extend from the muzzle of the weapon to the subject, or from the rifleman to the subject?

A. From the back of the subject , who was about 1 to 2 paces from the grave until the first member, there was always 8 steps, 7 to 8 feet, 7 to 8 steps were actually made; to one farthest back it was ten steps; when the order was given to fire, the first member kneeled down; the second member kneeled down in the place of the first; the first victim kneeled down; the next was supported by the next one; then the order was given to fire and rest arms, secure arms, arms down. The first man got up and the men stood at ease.

Q. You say that the victim was helped by the next person, you mean by the next victim?

A. I do not understand.

Q. Who took the victim to his place?

A. There were other men, other units, when, for instance, 30 men were executed in these places and 6 to 3 men shot at a time, then the others were led in by a group of another 4 to 6 people and were put into position and the men who brought in those people also were the ones who put them into the graves and the death was confirmed by them.

Q. Yes, now you did say in answer to one question that a bulls eye was used and then later I understood you to say that the riflemen were so expert that they knew where to aim. Do I understand that in som instances a marker was used and in other cases no marker was used?

A. I did not say that markers were used, that bulls eyes were used and I am only trying to explain how a group was shot by a military Kommando and how the military kommandos carried out the shooting.

Q. Then I misunderstood you. I am sorry.

A. According to military rules.

Q. Yes.

DR.HEIM: (Attorney for the Defendant Blobel): Your Honor, the misunderstandings are the fault of the bad translation of this morning.

THE PRESIDENT: I see.

DR. HEIM: I found out that, for instance, it was said when Blobel said the following: that the Russians carried out the shooting into the neck, the word "Russians" was left out. This is not true, Your Honor. The witness said there were not markers or bulls eye. It is only the fault of the mistranslation. There are misunderstandings between the Tribunal and the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: Then I can clear that up very easily, Dr. Heim, I will put a direct question to him which, I am certain , will clarify the entire situation.

Q. Was any type of marker or sign used on the victim to guide the aim of the riflemen?

A. No.

Q. Were these riflemen all previously qualified as expert shots ?

A. As far us people were members of the SK 4a, they were police officials or detachments of the Waffen-SS or the Army Units and they all had had a military training, and aiming training, and firing training were within the plan of instructions.

Q. Striking a vital spot in the body requires a very steady hand, a very good eye, and perfect control of the nervous system. Could you say that all these riflemen were so trained that they could bring home their shot to a vital spot in the victim's body at all times?

A. After the order had been given to fire the deed were examined and two men were detailed with this task. It was always clearly established that the aim had been reached.

Q. Were these physicians who examined?

A. Those were people who had been detailed by their Commanders to deal with it. Sometimes they were officers of the Army units or even the leader himself, and when Army units dealt with these executions there were also medical officers.

Q. But you did not always take with you a medical officer, did you?

A. In Sokal the executions of which I am describing, these medical officers and these military doctors were present.

Q. But in the Teilkommandos which were made up of small groups, would there be a physician available at all times at the execution?

A. The respective military commander of the unit had to give the order; had to report about it to his superiors. If he had to report about an execution to his superior officer, I can assume that he kept to the instructions.

Q. But it would happen would it not, thatat times there would be no physician present and then this examination would be done by one of the squad?

A. In sokal the exectuions of which I am describing , this was carried out to the samllest detail end I can assume that in other locations officers took great care that these rules were carried out.

Q. I am only asking you, Witness, wouldn't it happen that because of the small number in the squad that a medically trained person would not be present and then the examination would need to be done by one of ths soldiers or one of the officers not medically trained?

A. I hardly think that one would have trusted the judgment, of just one single person. The officer or the leader of the SK, whoever it was, must have confirmed himself the actual death of the victim, because that was his duty.

Q.Yes, I take it that an officer would confirm the fact of death, but this officer would not necessarilybe a physician. Now what tests would the officer apply? Would he listen for a beat of the heart, or would he touch the pulse? What methods would he usually employ to ascertain whether the victim was really dead or not?

A. When no doctor, no physician was available, I am sure that he must have gotten hold of a trained medical officer of some kind, whom he consulted.

Q. Well, now you said in your answer that "when no medical officer was abailable." That presupposes that none was available. Did the examining officer merely look down into the grave to see whether anyone was moving or not and be satisfied with that kind of an examination whether death had been inflicted?

A. No, no. After every shooting order this happened: After each firing order, when the shots were addressed, somebody looked at the victims because the victims were then put into the grave, when they did not fall into the graves themselves and these tasks were in the field of tasks of the men of the individual commandos. The edge of the grave had to be cleaned, for instance. Two men who had spades dealt with this.

They had to clean it up and then the next group was lead there.

Q. Since this was all done rapidly, might it not be possible that a victim would be buried, even though not actually dead?

A. No, that is quite impossible, Your Honor.

Q. You exclude that possibility?

A. Yes, for the simple reason that if it was ascertained that the shots which had been aimed at the head had not actually hit the head, one of the men of the firing squad was called in, who fired again from a distance of 3 to 4 paces. He shot again and thus it was made absolutely certain that the person concerned was dead.

Q. In applying the coup de grace, was a pistol or the rifle again used?

A. Only the rifle was used.

Q. The rifle was used in every instance?

A. Yes.

Q. I understand that your regulations, as you pointed out yesterday, provided that two rifles were used for a non-German and five rifles for a German, in the event there had to be an execution of a German subject, is that correct?

A. No, that is not correct.

Q. Will you please tell us just what you said yesterday on that subject?

A. The military regulations decree that if a German has to be shot, the man must be shot by five rifles; five rifles must point at the victim. That was the subject of the discussion which Field Marshal von Reichenau had who decreed that only two rifles should be used in disagreement with the regulations and who also further decreed that the grave should be dug and this grave had to be placed in a territory suitable for executions and executions had to be carried out either in the early morning or in the evening. After that the grave had to be filled in immediately. The ascertaining of death in each case was the duty of each leader and he had to make use of medical officers or Army physicians and these regulations were thus carried out by officers and leaders and they were followed.

Q. You told us that an execution would usually occupy about ten minutes. Would ten minutes include the marching to the grave and the placing into position and the firing, the examination of the victim, and the actual burial?

A. As I said that ten minutes was the minimum period, that is, of course, all according to the area and the various groups. It might have taken a little longer.

Q. But, generally, ten minutes or a little longer would include the entire operation from the moment that the victim marched to the grave until it was all over.

A. Ten to fifteen minutes.

Q. Yes, now was that also true when women and children were executed?

A. I never saw that.

Q. You never witnessed the execution of women and children?

A. No.

Q. We will come back to the question I put about a minute or so ago which I don't think you fully answered, namely, the German regulations which provide that five rifles shall be used in the execution of a German. Then you stated that the Field Marshal had reduced this number to two for non-Germans.

Is that what I understand you to say?

A. Yes, in this form it had been ordered.

Q. The original order which came from Hitler, Himmler, Heydrich, Streckenbach and all the way down to you, what did it say with regard to the number of rifles to be used per victim?

A. There were no directives about the carrying out of this order, or, at least, they were not announced. I received my instructions from the Supreme Commander.

Q. When he reduced the number from five rifles to two rifles, was there any discussion on the subject?

A. No. the Supreme Commander ordered this in his instructions. He said there used to be five men who participated in an execution of Germans. Now we shall use only two, and that was the order.

Q. Did he regard that two would be ample to do the job?

A. That must have been his opinion.

Q. Yes, well, then, do you know the original regulation provided for five, if two would have been ample?

A. I don't know the individual orders of the Army units.

Q. Very well. Now, isn't it possible that the reason five rifles were ordered originally was to exclude the possibility that the victim might not actually fall dead after the volley?

A. Whether the possibility exists that the victim might not be killed after two shots, is that what you meant, Your Honor?

Q. No, this was what I meant: That five rifles, or five bullets, were required by the regulation in order to lessen as much as possible the chance that one of these bullets, at least, did not strike a vital spot. In other words, there is more chance that a man will die when five rifles are firing at him than if only one is firing?

A. I do not understand. In the case of five shots, it is without doubt that death would occur.

Q. Yes.

A. If there are only two shots, death will also occur after the shots hit the head and the heart, but one rifle is not enough. Therefore, the Field Marshal ordered two shots.

Q. Yes, but with five being a certainty, two could mathematically be less than a certainty.

A. It had the same effect.

Q. Very well. The victims who were awaiting their turn to be shot, could they see what was happening before their turn arrived?

A. No.

Q. How were they hidden from the view, or how was the view concealed from them?

A. The victims were under guard in the territory farther away and in such a position that they could not see what was happening.

Q. How much distance would they need to travel after the order was given that they were to be shot until they actually arrived at the grave?

A. At least 100 paces, all according to the area, whether it was hilly, or even, or whether there were any buildings.

Q. If there were any physical objects large enough behind which they could be kept for a few minutes, you always endeavored to plate them behind these objects, is that what I understand you to say?

A. Yes, yes. People were led in back of these physical objects.

Q. Very well. Of course, they could hear the shots?

A. Yes, that is possible.

Q. Yes. Did you over have any experience with the victims being recalcitrant as they were being lead to the grave, attempting to break away or was there any demonstration, or any attempted struggle?

A. I could never observe when I was in Sokal that there was resistance.

They were well guarded, and Eastern men get over things so very quickly and I was always surprised at that. Even when those executions took place in Sokal the same thing happened. It was quite unbelievable for us Germans.

Q. You mean that they resigned themselves easily to what was awaiting them?

A. Yes, that was the case. That was the case with these people. Human life was not as valuable as it was with us. They did not care so much. They did not know their own human value.

Q. In other words, they went to their death quite happily?

A. I would not say that they were happy. They know what was going to happen to them. Of course, they were told what was going to happen to them and they were resigned to their fate and that is the strange thing about these people in the East.

Q. And did that make the job easier for you, the fact that they did not resist?

A. In any case, the guards never met any resistance or, at least, not in Sokal. Everything went very quietly. It took time, of course, and I must say that our men who took part in these executions suffered more from nervous exhaustion than those who had to be shot.

Q. In other words, your pity was more for the men who had to shoot than for the victims?

A. Our men had to be cared for.

Q. They had to be guarded?

A. Cared for.

Q. I didn't catch that.

A. The men who shot had to be looked after, needed to be taken care of.

Q. And how were they cared for? Did you have nurses along to cheer them up in this task that they had to perform? In what way were they cared for?

A. The people had to be told before these executions about the crimes of the executees, why they had been sentenced. They were told about those facts and that the order of the Supreme Commander was the death sentence and that they had to carry out these orders by actually shooting these people. These men of our Kommandos where did they come from? They came from all classes of the population. One was a criminologist. One had a free-lance profession. One had been a merchant. They had never shot anybody before and for those people it was something quite unusual.

Q And you felt very sorry for them?

Q You didn't feel any pity for the victims because you felt that they were entitled to be shot? they actually committed. Those people had themselves committed murders and shootings, and shot soldiers, and who by their own will had brought death to other people. execution?

Q Now, you said that all these people had committed crimes. Mr. Hochwald was examining you not very long ago about the death of ten Germans and the killing of 1,160 Jews in retaliation. 116 Jews per German. Now, did each group of 116 participate in the killing of that one German?

A I don't know. killing of 10 Germans -- had they themselves committed the crimes which you have just mentioned? You said that all these victims themselves had committed murders, they themselves had killed people; therefore, there was no reason why you should waste any sympathy on them. But if 1160 people were killed for the death of 10 Germans, it follows that some of the 1160 had not actually killed anybody, doesn't it? Your Honor, you were mentioning the figures which refer to an incident in Luck where a number of Ukrainians were murdered by Russians -- and 10 German soldiers were murdered by Russians, as it says here in the document.

Q But Mr. Hochwald questioned you at length on that very subject, and he asked whether you would be filled with revulsion at the thought of 1160 people being killed for the death of 10 Germans, and you said, Well, I would have to consider that.

And after some consideration here in the witness stand you finally came to the conclusion that the reprisal was justified. Is that right? justifiable to kill 1160 people because 10 Germans had been brutally murdered. fluenced the Field Marshal, and upon which he ordered retaliation measures. Whether the number is just in any such instance I cannot say but retaliation measures are justified in any case.

Q But this is something which is very recent. The questioning took place a half hour ago or so. Mr. Hochwald asked you whether it was proper and just to kill 1160 people because 10 Germans had been killed. And you, after a great deal of deliberation and voicing your doubts, and expressing your opinion, finally concluded, here on the witness stand, that since 10 Germans had been killed, brutally killed, murdered, that it was entirely in order as a military measure to have a reprisal, and if 1160 were executed that was entirely correct. You said that, didn't you? measure, and the ratio of 1 to 116 is too much, too high. If it had been 1 to 10, veil, I could understand it, perhaps.

Q You would justify 10 killings to one as a reprisal? perhaps not even the ten, but at any rate nine wouldn't have committed any murders themselves.

Q We understand, you said that. It is a retaliation measure. It is reprisal measure. It is a military measure. You told us that. And we understand it.

But if ten are killed for one, then at least nine of the ten are innocent of killing. regarded as hostages, as it is used, generally judging it in the manner of the people, it must be said that if one person is murdered ten hostages must be shot. And if the Supreme Commander says one person must be shot, then he can take out one of these people. the supposed criminal, it is entirely in order to execute the ten?

A I imagine that they must be able people. That is what I mean. actions to be hostile to the German forces, if there is a death on the part of one of the German forces. it is entirely in order, and proper, to have reprisals. And you have indicated a ratio of ten to one would not be unreasonable. guilty in your eyes because he was part of the enemy? if he took part in a crime he had to get his punishment, but I do not know details about the extent of reprisal measures carried out by the army units. I have no judgment of it. From my own human feelings, from my own understanding, I can only say that such atrocities had to be avenged.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you wish to say something, Dr. Heim?

DR. HEIM: Before we have the recess, Your Honor, I would like the following question clarified. Is the defense allowed to speak to a witness who has been brought here by the prosecution as a prosecution witness. The prosecution itself is of the opposite opinion.

MR. HOCHWALD: I do think that Dr. Heim refers to the defendant, not to a third witness. As far as I can remember, the Tribunal ruled three or four sessions ago that during cross-examination the defendant is not to be spoken to by anyone.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't understand Dr. Heim's question to be that at all.

MR. HOCHWALD: I do think that is Dr. Heim's question, sir. Therefore I tried to have it explained.

THE PRESIDENT: Will you please repeat your question. I understood that your question was -

DR. HEIM: An I permitted, as defense counsel, to speak to the defendant who is now in the witness stand after he is now in crossexamination. This morning the prosecutor told me that it was not allowed.

THE PRESIDENT: You were correct Mr. Hochwald, in your interpretation of what Dr. Heim said. When a witness is under cross-examination he is not to be spoken to by any one without the Court's approval. The Tribunal rules that while the present witness is under cross-examination he may not talk to his counsel or to any one else.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hochwald, just Before you resume I have only one question to put. BY THE PRESIDENT: our questioning, there is something said about the collection of clothing of the victims. Were the victims unclothed before the actual shooting?

Q In your affidavit you said, "At that time, clothes and valuables were not yet collected. Later on this was changed." Did the rule become modified in that respect, later?

by the Ukrainians and they took care of them. I know that.

Q Well, then, the clothes were removed Before the execution? taken away from them at all. This only happened in Kiev. How this was done, I don't know. In any case, the Ukrainians later took the clothes which were left behind and other items and distributed then.

Q. When the rule was changed, were the clothes removed before the execution?

A. In the SK 4a this never occurred. I couldn't describe any case and I don't remember any case where in any way the people who were to be shot had their clothes taken from them before they were shot.

Q. The reports take frequent references to the turning over of clothing to your commando SK 4a, clothing and valuables, was this clothing and were these valuables collected before the execution?

A. The SK 4a never received such collections as I pointed out yesterday, it was reported in Shitomir once that the SK 4a received valuables there and the SK 4a has never been in Shitomir. The secend case refers to Kiev.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Mr. Hochwald: BY MR. HOCHWALD: may it please the Tribunal:

Q. Herr Blobel, did the Sonderkommando 4a also report to the army authorities?

A. Sonderkommando 4a, the leaders of the sub-commandos had to them to him, at least those which concerned his unit. About special reporting about their activities I hardly think they had to do to the General of the Division. The G 2 officer dealt with this, who was in charge of this task.

Q. Who gave a report to the I-C officer about executions being carried out?

A. Well they gave him the records and the G-2 Officer either had to contact the G-2 section of AUK 6 or had to ask for authority or orders to carry out executions, and if the sub-commandos took part in these, an officer must have known a bout these facts.

Q. Do I understand you correctly, that they reported about the number of executions which were carried out, is that right? Will you answer that "yes" or "no", please?

A. I would like to hear your question again, please?

Q. It it correct that the Teilkommando leaders reported about the numbers of executions they had carried out to the army authorities?

A. These reports to the army authorities....

Q. I asked you to say first "yes" or "no", then you may explain to the Tribunal whatever you want to explain, but I am at a loss to understand whether you answered my question in the negative or positive. Therefore, please, answer first by "yes" or "no" and then explain,

A. As a reply to the question of whether the sub-commandos gave reports to the army authorities....

Q. About the executions, the number of executions which they carried out. This is the question. It is a very, easy, short question:

A. Of course.

Q. Did you read these reports?

A. How could I have read them, I never used to get them.

Q. They were not sent from the army authorities to you?

A. No, no.

Q. Do you remember having seen a report to the army authorities concerning the executions carried out in Kiev on the 29 and 30 of September?

A. From the army authorities?

Q. Or by the army authorities?

A. I don't remember ever having seen a report.

Q. Could it be true if the army got these reports, and as I understand you, the army got these reports not over staff leader Hoffman, who was exaggerating so very much the numbers, would it be true that if in such a report by the Army the number of 33,000 would appear, would you then still say that this number of killings was exaggerated?

A. According to the reports and all of the talk in Kiev about this occurrence at the time it couldn't have been that number of people. These were all estimations.

Q. Wherefrom do you know that those estimations were exaggerated?

A. Well because Hoffman already admitted that this figure was entirely wrong and that it was much too high, he should have know it from his discussions with the Higher SS and Police Leader and from the town commandant.

Q. The army authorities obviously were of a different opinion, I would like to introduce at this point document NOKW 2129, as Prosecution Exhibit 179, Your Honors. I am sorry I haven't got the English copy. I should have it.

THE PRESIDENT: This is the English.

MR. HOCHWALD: I know, but I don't have that copy.

THE PRESIDENT: You, yourself don't have one.

MR. HOCHWALD: Just the German. BY MR. HOCHWALD:

Q. This document is a number of copies which were handed over for the war diary. We have translated only a few short excerpts out of the Enclosure No. 2 of this document, and this document reads on page 9 Of the original, which is page 2 of Enclosure No. 2: about "Subject: Visit to the Field Command 195 Kiev."

"The total population is estimated at about half the normal number, for instance about 400,000. The Jews of the city were ordered to present themselves at a certain place and time for the purpose of numerical registration, and housing in a camp. About 34,000 reported, including women and children, After they had been made to give up their clothing and valuables, all were killed; this took several days."

Do you think that this estimate is correct, Mr. Blobel?

A. Only from what I heard, I can only keep to what I have said already, that is an estimate.

Q. It it patently clear from this report as it is from all other reports which speak about the killing in Kiev, that women and children were killed in this execution. It it not Mr. Blobel?

A. Whether women and children were executed here too, is that correctly, what I understand, that is what was said then, yes.

Q. You testified here that retaliatory measures against Jews were necessary, and, therefore, in full agreement with the laws of war: would you be of the same opinion now as it is established that 34,000 were killed?

A. Such a measure, I consider now as ever to be incorrect and I could never testify to it as being correct.

Q. Did you find yourself bound by your orders to participate in executions of this kind?

A. May I ask to have that again, please?

Q. Did you find yourself bound by the orders you had received to participate in actions of this kind?

A. Yes, bound one was.

Q. You did feel yourself bound, is that right?

A. Yes, one felt bound to this order, yes.

Q. You testified here repeatedly that all reprisals were certainly justified, is that also correct in cases where at least one-third of the victims were woman and children?

A. I did not make any such statement on that or say it was justified if one-third of the victims were women or children. I did not state anything concerning this. I merely said it was wrong and incorrect to include women and children.

Q. The question is: Do you consider such an execution justified when approximately one-third of the victims are women and children, defenseless women, defenseless children? Will you answer this question, please?

A. No, I don't consider that to be correct. I have expressed that very clearly yesterday.

Q. Do you consider such killings murder?

A. Murder - in any case it was quite an incorrect order, and these are victims who would suffer in the course of war events whether it could be legally described as murder, that is a different question.

Q. What do you think - I do not ask the legal people, the legal people do know what it is to kill 33,000 people, but I asked your opinion:

Do you consider these killings in Kiev, as they appear in the reports here and in the report which Was just handed to you. Do you consider these killings to be murder?

A. Well, if one describes the killings of these people as murder or homicide so still it is a unique phenomena in the course of these war events.

Q. But Mr. Blobel, I asked you whether you consider the killing of these 33,000 people to be murder, which is a question which you can answer with a "yes" or a "no". Do you consider it murder or not?

A. No, the expression "murder" can not be applied here because there were reprisal measures which came in answer to terroristic actions.

Q. Do you consider these reprisals justified if one third of the victims are women and children?

A. This reprisal being extended to women and children I do not consider to be right.

Q. So, do you consider then the killing of women and children as it happened in Kiev to be murder?

A. It is a reprisal measure, which extends also to those women and children, and the person who ordered this had to see clear whether he could be hold responsible for murder for this or whether this was permitted as a reprisal measure and whether it was in accordance with International Law.

Q. This was not the content of my question. I asked you whether you considered the killing of defenseless women and children in an act of reprisal to be murder, yes or no, what do you consider it?

DR. HEIM: For the Defendant Blobel: Prosecution, the witness in his cross examination is only at the disposal of the Prosecution on facts which he has seen and heard about and he can only now testify on this subject. The opinion of the wit ness about any facts as maintained by the Prosecution are irrelevant and in my opinion should not be used in cross examination.

MR. HOCHWALD: Dr. Heim has interrogated the witness Blobel here for two days and during these two days the witness Blobel has a hundred times at least declared that the killings as carried out by Sonderkommando 4a and it's subcommandos were entirely justifiable in accordance with the laws of war and the laws of humanity. I should be at liberty to ask him now whether this statement which he certainly made of his own free will is also valid for the killing of women and children, that women and children were killed, is contended by the Prosecution and proved in it's case in chief.

THE PRESIDENT: There is one objection which has not been raised and which the Tribunal raises and sustains of it's awn accord, and that is the pounding with the pencil by the Prosecution on the podium which sounds like a sledge hammer in our ears.

MR. HOCHWALD: I am sorry.

THE PRESIDENT: So that objection is sustained on the part of the Tribunal. with regard to the Prosecution's question put to the defendant it is relevant but it seems as if the witness has given his answer and I don't know how a repetition can give us any more light than has already been shed on that particular inquiry.

MR HOCHWALD: I am sorry, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY MR. HOCHWALD

Q. In connection with the killings in Kiev you testified that you do not know whether members of Sonderkommando 4a participated in this execution, is that correct?

A. I did not say that. I merely explained that the SK 4a through an order for the group sent people to take part in the action which had been ordered by the Higher SS and Police Leader, and that the SK 4a then in fact appointed 15 people.

Q. So you know that members of Sonderkommando 4a participated in these killings?

A. I know that, yes.

Q. But you are also sure that neither you nor one of your officers participated in these killings, is that correct?

A. That is also correct, yes.

Q. Do you know Sturmbannfuehrer Albert Hartl?

A. Hartl?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I know this Hartl as a church expert in the RSHA, in the Reich Main Security office.

Q. Did you meet him once in the East?

A. I believe he visited troop "C" on one occasion and traveled through the territory during the winter once.

Q. When were you acquainted with him in Kiev?

A. I couldn't say that.

Q. Approximately in the spring of 1942?

A. No, I remember having see this man Hartl when I went to Kiev later to visit Dr. Thomas in the office of the Commander of the Security Police, I saw this man Hartl there. Yes, he must have been there.

Q. But you did see him then, it was when you met him at Dr. Thomas' it was in Kiev, was it not?

A. At Dr. Thomas's in Kiev, in his office building.

Q. Did you show him then, when you met Hartl there in Kiev, did you show him the place where the Jews who were killed by you and your Sonderkommando, and were buried in Kiev, can you remember this affair?

A. Me, to have shown Hartl that place. I cannot remember that at all. That is all imagined. At the time Hartl was in a SS and Police procedure because of some internal occuppences in the building there and I recall having met and saluted him when passing him/in the corridor in August and did not talk to him any more since then.

Q. I would like to refresh your memory. Your Honors, I offer document No. 5384 as Prosecution Exhibit 180.

DR. HEIM: For Blobel:

Your Honor, I object to this document. It is an affidavit by a certain Hartl which the Prosecution submits as Exhibit No. 81. I request that this document only be admitted if I am given an opportunity to see the affiant, a certain man Hartl, and to cross-examine him here on the witness stand. On the principle of the best proof it is appropriate that Hartl who as far as I know is in the prison here be brought into this court room to be examined here on direct examination.

THE PRESIDENT: What do you have to say to that, Dr. Hochwald:

MR. HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, I do think that this affidavit is perfectly admissable. If the Defense wants to crossexamine Hartl on the affidavit, the Defense is at the liberty to do so. He only needs to file the request of that kind with the Secretary General.

THE PRESIDENT: If the affiant is available to the Defense for cross-examination and may be called by the Defense for cross-examination, then, of course, no harm may be done the Defense by the introduction of the affidavit.

MR. HOCHWALD: To the best of my knowledge, Your Honor, Hartl is here in the jail and can be called for cross examination by the defense any tine.

DR. HEIM: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed. BY MR. HOCHWALD:

Q. I want to read to you from this affidavit.

DR. FICHT: For the Defendant Biberstein: ted to us to be called as a witness and I, therefore, object to the admission of the document, because this person will be examined as a witness here any how, and according to the principle of the best evidence he should be examined here himself and not his affidavit introduced.

THE PRESIDENT: Let's hear what the Prosecution has to say in reply.

MR. HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, Dr. Ficht himself has said that Dr. Hartl will be a witness for Biberstein, that means that he will be available to the Defense for cross-examination and from what he said on behalf of the defendant Biberstein it seems to me impossible for the Prosecution to receive from this witness the information on which the affidavit is introduced, as the case of Biberstein has nothing whatseever to do with a meeting which took place between the Defendant Blobel and the affiant, so from the contention of Dr. Ficht alone it is perfectly clear that we are at liberty to put in the affidavit. When Dr. Ficht calls his witness to the stand Dr. Heim will have ample opportunity to cross-examine the witness on the affidavit, but we do not intend and see no reason to bring this witness into Court in order to let him testify on two very short excerpts.

THE PRESIDENT: we would recommend this procedure: That the Prosecution counsel proceed to examine the witness on the statements made by one Hartl and to the extent deemed necessary on that subject. He may read what Mr. Hartl has already stated but the affidavit itself should not be introduced as an exhibit at this moment. After Hartl has appeared and testified then the Prosecution nay determine whether to present the affidavit or not because it may be that the witness will repeat what he said in the affidavit, and, then, of course, the affidavit is superfluous. He may deny it and then the affidavit may be introduced to impeach him.

MR. HOCHWALD: I thank you very much, Your Honors. May I then reserve Prosecution Exhibit 180, document No. 5384?

THE PRESIDENT: That reservation will be given to you.

MR. HOCHWALD: I would like to read from paragraph 3 of the affidavit:

"In March or April 1942 I met Paul Blobel in Kiev." That is you, Mr. Blobel, is it not, Paul Blobel, is that you?

A. My name is Hermann Wilhelm Paul Blobel.

Q. "When we were both making a trip to the estate of the commander in chief in Kiev. Dr. Thomas, on the outskirts of the city, in the vicinity of the cemetery, Blobel Showed me a certain place and said that Jews whom he had killed with his Kommando were buried there. It was an old tank ditch, which was later filled in. Blobel mentioned that these executions were carried out on the advance march."

what do you have to say to that, Herr Blobel?

A. This Herr Hartl I did not meet in 1941 but in the year 1943. This was not in March or April but it was inthe summer months July or August 1943. There I met Hartl for the first time when he was with Thomas. Whether I travelled out to the estate of Dr. Thomas with Hartl I cannot remember, because not after all of this time I cannot remember that, but I don't see why I should have done that and that I showed him a tank (Panzer) ditch on the way and said to him that Jews had been shot by my Commando there during the advance March, I presume he just endeavored there

Q. Is it true or not that you told him that?

A. It cannot be correct.

Q. It is not true then?

A. Noo it is not true.

Q. Then I would like to read from paragraph 5 of the same document, Your Honor:

"Twice while I was in the East I had a chance to see executions. The first one I saw in Kiev from a distance. Oberfuehrer Erhlinger had the Kommando."

Do you know a man by the name of Erlinger, Oberfuehrer?

A. The Oberfuehrer Erhlinger at the time was still a Standartenfuehrer in 1943, and was the commander of Kiev with the Commander of Gruppenfuehrer Dr. Thomas. I know this man Erhlinger but definitely he was not an oberfuehrer in 1942 already.

Q. "I saw the second execution in Kremenstchug, where Sturmbannfuehrer Platt had the Kommando."

Do you know Sturmbannfuehrer Platt?

A. No, I don't know Sturmbannfuehrer Platt.

Q. We will go on with the quotation:

"In the first execution exactly 100 persons were executed. In the second execution more than 100 persons were executed. The people were executed by a shot in the neck. The corpses were buried in a large tank ditch. The candidates for execution Were already standing or kneeling in the ditch. One group had scarcely been shot before the next came and laid themselves on the corpses there." carried out. Do you still maintain this statement?

A. I maintain it now as ever. The executions which the SK 4a carried out under my command at the order of the Commander-in-Chief were carried out in the proper court martial manner as I have described here. What Ehrlinger and Platt did at that time and this cannot have been that year, because one time they say 1942, and the date is wrong. It should be 1943. Those were Commando agencies which were active there two years later and I don't know anything about that.

Q. Do you still maintain that by Sonderkommando 4a no other shootings were carried out than by rifle, two men for one execution?

A. Yes, I state that now as before.

Q. Do you know how it was possible to kill approximately 34,000 people in two days, and this number should be established by now?

A. I cannot make any statements about that. I did not see it and it was up to the Highest SS and Police Leader who had ordered this, and as far as I know ordered his police regiment and the Ukrainian militia to do this and the 15 men of SK 4a did participate in the course of this action. Whether these men actually shot I did net witness that personally.

Q. You told the Tribunal that you were rather often ill. Will you give for the sake of the record exactly when you were on duty and when you were ill in the time from May 1941 to the time you left the East, which was in April 1942?

A. In the first third of July: 1941, throughout July I was in about hospital and at the beginning of August, during the first days I went back to the Commando.

Q. It would be correct that you were ill from the 10 of July to the 2nd or 3rd of August in the hospital?

A. That might be approximately correct.

Q. Proceed.

A. After my birthday I became ill again, around about my birthday, and approximately until the beginning of September, the 1st 3rd of September, shortly before the departure for Kiev, I was continually in the quarters there.

Q. Will you tell the Tribunal what time it was, from whichday to which day?

A. On the 13th of August was my birthday, 4-5 days before our departure, and that was on the 17th, or maybe on the 18th when we moved. It must have been the 12th or 13th of September.

Q. It was a complete month, was it not?

A. Please?

Q. You were ill a complete month, from the 13th of August until the 13th of September, is that right?

A. Yes I got up in between but then it started again. Malaria and Wolhynian fever are similar and you have occasional attacks.

Q. Did you get reports from your teilkommandos during this time?

A. Some might have been received. It is possible that when I was well, I read a few reports and that I was told where the commandos were and how individual people were because in the house itself we had accommodated 10 or 12 sick people for as I have said this fever spread immensely.

Q. When were you ill for a third time?

A. At Kiev I had been wounded owing to the blasting on the 24th the 24th of September.

Q. How long were you ill?

A. It took a long time until I was cured. I still had scars when we left for Charkow. On the 27th or 28th of November we left Kiev and went to Cherkov and during this march, which in all took about ten days, and owing to the strain of the march -

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, the Prosecution is very obviously desirous of getting from you a chronology as to the perios of time that you were disabled because of illness. Now instead of going into a great detail, detail much of which has already been given to us, state the dates. Now you have told us from July 10 to August 10 you were in the hospital, August 13 to September 13 you were in the hospital. Now when was the next period of disablement. Give us the dates.

A. During the time of September I was in the commando in a special room because there were no hospitals or they were over-crowded.

Q. You were disabled from what day, from what date in September to what date?

A. About the 13th of August until about a month later.

Q. You have given us that and you have told us the first time that you were in a hospital. Now you tell me you were in a room. After September 13th when did you become disabled again?

A. I said that I became ill and remained with the commando and a staff physician of the AUK 6 looked after me there. In Kiev I had been wounded in the head and was kept in my quarters.

Q. I am sorry I don't speak German so I can't give it to you in German, out I am trying to make it as clear as possible and I am certain you are getting the translation accurately. Give us the dates that you were disabled. Now we have got as far as September 13th. when was the time you again because disabled after September 13th?

A. The 24/9/41.

Q. Until when?

A. Until the departure on the 27th or 28th of November from Kiev.

Q. Very well, September 24th to November 28th?

A. Yes.

Q. All right, now the next time you were unabled to perform your duties?

A. At the end of December until the beginning of October or rather February, 1942, in the first third, I don't know the exact date, about the 10th of February, I was up for about ten days and from the end of February until the middle of March I was down again.

Q. That covers the whole period of your illnesses during that campaign?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the Tribunal will not be in recess until five minutes past two.

(The Tribunal adjourned for the noon recess) (The Tribunal met pursuant to noon recess at 1400 hours)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Mr. Hochwald.

MR. HOCHWALD: May it please the Tribunal. BY MR. HOCHWALD:

Q. Herr Blobel, you commented yesterday on Document Book I, page 131 in the English, and page 159 in the German book. This is your affidavit NO 3824, Exhibit No. 31. You commented on paragraph 8 of this affidavit, and I quote: "During the last days of September 1941 the Sonderkommando 4-A in cooperation with the group staff of the Einsatzgruppe-C, and two units of the police regiments stationed in Kiev, carried out the mass executions of Jews in Kiev." You said about this sentence, that the passage "By order of Higher SS and Police Leader" was missing, is that right?

A. Yes, I said that.

Q. And did also say, that this passage "By order of the Higher SS and Police Leader" was contained in the original which you signed, and, is that in the copies before the Tribunal? Is that what you want to say?

A. I had assumed that the supplement of this missing sentence had no ending, as it says here, "During the last days of September 1941 the Sonderkommando 4-A in cooperation with the group staff of the Einsatzgruppe-C, and two units of the police regiments stationed in Kiev." and there is no end of the sentence, and, then it just states the number which I had mentioned.

Q. I'll ask you another question. Do you want to say that in your original which you signed, and which is in the photostat before the Tribunal this sentence "By order of the Higher SS and Police Leader." is contained? Is that what you wanted to say yesterday when you said this passage was missing, or did you think that this passage was missing just in order to make the sentence complete, and this is an addition which you make only now?

and at the time when I made it out, it was to the effect that it was on the orders of the Higher Police and SS Leader. this passage "by order of the Higer SS and Police Leader" was not included, was it?

Q By whom? something missing in the sentence which has been overlooked. would now add the passage to it, do you not? But it was not contained in the original, which you cited, is that correct? This is an addition which you are making now, an explanation to the sentence, but not a part of the document, is that right? That is the only thing I am asking you. sentence, or rather, this addition was contained. before the Tribunal as an exhibit, this sentence, "by order of the Higher SS and Police Leader" is contained, is that what you say?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If your Honor please, could the SecretaryGeneral get Exhibit No. 31 for the inspection of the Tribunal and of the interpreters?

THE PRESIDENT: The Secretary-General will please get that exhibit.

Q (By Mr. Horlick-Hochwald) Will you turn now

DR. HEIM: Dr. Heim for the Defendant Blobel. lowing fact: The witness just now said "should", "should" be contained in the original. I think it was translated "must be". The conjunction wasused in the German and not the indicative, because the witness did not say it was contained but it should be contained.

I would only like to say this, in order to prevent any misunderstandings, that the Prosecution should not say that it actually was contained in the document book in the original document, in case it is not contained in the document.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Whether in the mimeographed copies which were made, this very important passage was left out by mistake or whether the witness signed a document in which this passage is not contained, wasthe only reason for this line of questioning, and I do think it was perfectly clear, I asked the witness whether he meant this as an explanation to the sentence or whether that was left out in the copies. It is not clear from his statement in direct examination, and I only wanted to make clear whether by mistake of the people who copied the document this sentence was left out. Nothing else is being implied.

THE PRESIDENT: Does the statement by Dr. Heim change your question?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Not at all; not at all.

Q (By Mr. Horlick-Hochwald) In Paragraph 9 of the affidavit which is on the next page - your Honors, page 132 - you stated that the Defendants Rasch and Radetsky and a certain Dr. Beyer took over the Sonderkommando 4a when you were absent for reasons of health. You now say that none of these three persons replaced you but that it was a certain Oversturmbannfuehrer Meyer commanded Sonderkommando 4a in your absence, is that correct? fuehrer Meyer took over the kommando in my absence. Wartenberg, is that correct? time and when reading through the documents I suddenly remembered the exact facts of the case namely that it was not Radetzky who was the kommando leader in my absence but that it was actually Sturmbannfuehrer Meyer who wasappointed to this post by the Higher SS and Police Leader, and I said furthermore that I went through the names of leaders with Mr. Wartenberg and we consulted each other as it were, as to who could have been in charge of the kommando, and we suddenly remembered the name of Radetzky.

point in the meantime, between the execution of the affidavit which wasthe 6th of June, 1947, and your testimony here, is that right? corrected my statement, is that what you mean?

Q It was between the 6th of June and yesterday, is that right?

AAnd now, yes. I had suddenly remembered it when I went through the documents again. signed the affidavit? not a real officer, he was only a war emergency appointment, is that correct? appointment was valid only for service in the RSHA but not for an assignment in the Einsatzgruppe, is that true?

A No, that is not quite correct. We had various war emergency commissions or appointments who were men who had been drafted, like, for instance, the Interpreter Mueller or the Interpreter Radetzky. The difference between them and other leaders was that they had no military and no special training, but on the other hand, they had a special knowledge, like knowledge of languages, for instance, like Russian or Ukrainian, and for this purpose they were assigned and drafted to the East.

Hauptsturmfuehrer at all? wasn't a Hauptsturmfuehrer in the Security Police; he was just wearing the uniform of the unit in which he had been before. As far as I know it is the Volksdeutsche Mittelstelle.

Q Washe a Hauptsturmfuehrer or was he not a Hauptsturmfuehrer? I did not question you on what uniform he were. I am just questioning you on the rank, nothing else. reason that he would have been a Tribunal commissar and in that case he would have had a police rank, a service rank and corresponding certificate; with the aid of these certificates one recognized the actual official rank and also the civilian rank which goes with this service rank. The State Police had a red certificate; Criminal Police had a red certificate, red paper with a green line, and the members of the SD had a red certificate with a white crossing line. All those who were not in possession of such certificate either had their SS pass of the General SS according to which they held the same rank within the SS, or they had a temporary SS pass which only authorized them to the uniform.

Q Witness, I do not think that you answered my question. I asked you whether you know or you do not know whether Radetzky was a Hauptsturmfuehrer in the SS or not.

Q Radetzky was not a Hauptsturmfuehrer of the Security Police. He wore a uniform of an SS Hauptsturmfuehrer of an SS unit, of the VOMI, whichwas part of the SS, V-o-m-i, and was only on a war emergency basis.

Q I ask you this very specific question for the third time. I did not ask you what kind of uniform he wore. I do want to hear from you whether he was a commissioned officer, a Hauptsturmfuehrer in the SS.

Nothing else did I ask you. It is V-o-m-i, part military organization. If he was a Hauptsturmfuehrer he could have been a Hauptsturmfuehrer in the SS, is that correct, but he could not have been a Hauptsturmfuehrer in the Volksdeutsche Mittelstelle. So, was he a Hauptsturmfuehrer of the SS, and please, I have explained that now fifteen times, will you answer the question with yes or no? Mittelstelle, was an SS agency. SS the Defendant Radetzky was, would have been in the position to be a leader of Teilkommando or Vorkommando according to his rank? have been superior to other officers, and in this case he would have had certain experience in interrogations. We would have been an interrogations officer, because that was the purpose.

Q. I do not think that you answered the question. I asked you whether Hauptsturmfuehrer Radetzky, according to his rank, would have been in the position to become a leader of a Teilkommando or Vorkommando. Will you tell the Tribunal yes or no, then you can explain why he could have been or why he could not have been, but it is absolutely necessary that you answer these very specific and very clear questions with yes or no.

A. As a Haupsturmfuehrer of the SS, that is as Hauptsturmfuehrer of the General-SS, he could not become a leader, a commander of an Einsatzkommando.

Q. So it is your contention that it would have been impossible that Radetzky ever would have been in the position to become a leader of a Teilkommando or Vorkommando, is that your contention?

A. Radetzky could not in any case, in the form in which he appeared on the horizon in a war emergency commission, could, I say, not be superior to other officers in any shape or form. He only held a war emergency commission.

Q. Will you please answer the question and then explain. I am in no position to find out from your information whether you answer my questions in the affirmative or the negative. I do not know. Possibly I am not clever enough to understand it. The question is, could Radetzky, having been a Haupsturmfuehrer of the SS, ever have received the position of a leader of a Teilkommando or of a Vorkommando, or was it by the simple fact that he was, as you say, on a war emergency status, would this status exclude him from this position?

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hochwald, now you have put three questions into that one question. You can't get a yes or no answer.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Two questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, two. Let's make it only one and then you can logically demand a yes or no answer.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: I am sorry, Your Honor. I only wanted to explain to the witness both the positive and negative side of the question.

I withdrew the question and repeat.

Q. ( By Mr. Horlick-Hochwald) Was it possible for Radetzky, having been a Haupsturmfuehrer in the SS, to become a leader of a Teilkommando or Vorkommando?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Your Honor, is that a question which can be answered with yes or no?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, certainly.

A. Ho, that was not possible.

Q. (By Mr. Horlick-Hochwald) All right, did you ever speak with Radetzky about the Fuehrer order as the order was handed down by Streckenbach?

A. The general information about happenings in Pretsch or what had been said by Streckenbach in Pretsch was in the presence of all the leaders, and they were, of course, immediately informed about it.

Q. So Radetzky knew about this order?

A. why, the leaders knew the order; the leaders were aware of the order.

Q. Did you ever speak to him about this order?

A. It was in fact discussed by us in Pretsch.

A. It was in fact discussed by us in Pretsch.

Q. Did you, Mr. Blobel, speak to Hauptsturmfuehrer Radetzky about the Hitler order?

A. As I said, it was made known generally to the leaders in Sokal when the Einsatzkommando was stationed there, and when it assigned to its task by the Oberfuehrer, by the Superior Commander, and Radetzky was present on that occasion.

Q. Shall I imply from that, what you said, that you do not want to answer this question? The question was, did you, Herr Blobel, speak to Hauptsturmfuehrer Radetzky about the Fuehrer order. Will you answer that with yes or no, please? You gave already explanations that he know about it. How I am interested to hear from you whether you spoke to him about it.

A. Yes, Radetzky was present at this discussion with all the other leaders. I did not speak to him myself when alone with him, We were there when the information was made know.

Q. Did Radetzky ever voice an objection against this order to you?

A. At the time Radetzky waid that he had been assigned to the SK-4a as an interpreter and in my direct examination I stated that I drew Radetzky's attention to the fact, in Sokal, that he, as an untrained police expert, he could not ne put in change of a subkommando in the Army units; therefore he had to take over the safe-blasting kommando where he had been put in charge of security files and documents.

Q. Herr Blobel, you did not answer my question, and it is quite obvious that you evaded answering the questions I am putting to you. The question was very specific. Did Radetsky over voice to you objections against the Fuehrer order?

A. Yes, he talked to me about it, and the discussion took place that he would not be considered for this order he had gone to the S-III, and therefore he carried but those tasks.

Q. I do not think that what you have just said answers the question. Did he object specifically to the contents of the order, that means to the killing of all Jews, gypsies and Communists. Did he do that?

A. Do you mean to say -- Is that what I understood?

( The question was repeated by the interpreter.)

A. Yes, he drew my attention to the fact that he was only there as an interpreter and that he was not qualified. He said that he was not qualified to be with anything else, and of course, he thus expressed objections.

Q. What did he say as to the objection? You said, "You can't be," to him. You said that he had objected, What kind of objection did he voice?

A. He said, "I have been engaged, and I have been detailed here as an interpreter, and I do not have to deal with tasks of the assignment of the Einsatz itself.

I must be used as an interpreter only." "Yes", I said, "as a police expert without any training you cannot be put in charge of a kommando and therefore you will be an interpreter."

Q. You have told us what he said?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he over ask you to be relieved from his position as he could not bear the fact that defenseless people were constantly killed in very great numbers by the unit in which he served as an officer?

A. Such a personal suggestion, or rather personal plea, Radetzky did not send to me, I don't know if he spoke to Dr. Rasch about it.

Q. What was done if Radetzky or others of your officers would have voiced such objections and asked to be relieved from the assignment?

A. It would have been my duty to send this gentleman to Dr. Rasch and ask him to discuss the question with this authority, As far as that is concerned, he could have gone.

Q. You would have sent him to Dr. Rasch, is that correct?

A. Yes, I would have sent him to Dr. Rasch.

Q. There would have been no action against this officer on your part?

A. Well, that depended on Dr. Rasch's stops or Dr. Rasch's attitude.

Q. I asked on your part, Herr Blobel, and not on the part of Dr. Rasch. You would have taken no action against Radetzky or another of the officers if he would have asked to be released as he did not want to carry out the Hitler order. You would have taken no action, is that correct?

A. If I had received the orders for it, but if he just said, "I want to be released from my post", as far as I am concerned, I would have said, "Go to Dr. Rasch. As far as I am concerned, you can go."

Q. I would like now to turn to your assignment in Einsatzkomando 1005, That was a special task of the burning of the corpses in mass graves, is that correct?

THE PRESIDENT: Is that a document number, Mr. Hochwald?

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: No, if Your Honors please, this special assignment which was given to the witness by the Chief of the Gestapo, Mueller, was known under a code name, Einsatskommando 1005, and that was what my question was.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, but I didn't get any question from your statment to him.

Q. (By Mr, Horlick-Hochwald) The question was whether Einsatzkommando 1005 was the code name for this special task of burning of the borpses in mass graves?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: That was the question, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

DR. HEIN: (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BLOBEL) Your Honor, I object to this set of question. The Operation 1005, that is, the burning of corpses from the graves in the East is of no value for the proceedings here. In my opening statement I made statements to this effect and I said that the burning of corpses is not a punishable act and it does not matter by whom these persons were executed. In the opening of this set of questions, I only see an unnecessary extension of the proceedings here and I deem this set of questions of no probative value whatsoever. I would like, therefore, to ask you not to have these questions answered.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If Your Honors please, if I am not very much mistaken. Dr. Heim asked the witness many questions about these special assignments. It is in the nature of cross-examination that I should be permitted to ask the witness any questions which, were put to him during direct examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Regardless of whether Dr. Heim opened this subject in direct examination, the subject is mentioned in the documents and therefore it becomes part of the res gestae of the case. Cross examination may be continued.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: Before I go into this point, it possibly would please the court to see the affidavit of Blobel in order to ascertain whether the passage "By order of the Higher SS and Police Leader" in para. 8 of the document is in the original.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, first indicate so that the record will be very specific on the subject what the mimeographed copy states, what the original photostat states, and what the witness himself stated so that if there is any discrepancy along the line it will appear in the record.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If Your Honors please, I want to quote from page 131 of Document Book I, in which this document is contained. This is NO-3824, Prosecution Exhibit 31. Paragraph 8 of the mimeographed copy, is contained in the document book roads: "During the last days of September 1941, the Sonderkommando 4a, in cooperation with the Group Staff of the Einsatzgruppe C and two units of the police regiments stationed in Kiew carried out the mass execution of Jews in Kiew."

Would it be agreeable to the Tribunal to have the interpreter check the German text of the exhibit with this English translation?

THE PRESIDENT: Now is that the sentence which is in dispute?

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: That is the sentence which is in dispute.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. The photostat may be submitted to the interpreters. It is enough if the interpreters will compare the photostat with the mimeographed copy and indicate whether the translation in the mimeograph is faithful or not.

(The interpreters did as requested.)

INTERPRETER HILDESHEIMER: It is the exact wording, Your Honor. The wording of both sentences is identical.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Let us proceed now to something else.

Q. Herr Blobel, is it true that you entrusted with the special task of burning of corpses in mass graves by the Chief of the Gestapo Mueller, is that correct?

A. No, that is incorrect in this form. The assignment was turned over to the Commander of the Security Police and SD on the Eastern Front and I had merely the task to collect the order from Gruppenfuehrer Mueller.

Q. Did you not do anything else?

A. No.

Q. You didn't do anything else but go from Berlin to the Higher SS and Police leaders and tell then there is an order in existence to the effect that you have to burn these things?

A. No, I had nothing to do with Higher SS and Police readers either. I acted by order of the Gruppenfuehrer Mueller.

THE PRESIDENT: Let us get this very specifically, and see if we can avoid the wasting of unnecessary time. Your affidavit reads as follows: "In the Fall of 1942, I was assigned to go to the occupied territories as Mueller's deputy and to wipe out the traces of mass graves of people executed by the Einsatzgruppe," Is that correct?

TEE WITNESS: In this form it is not correct. I have the document here.

THE PRESIDENT: It is followee by the sentence, "This was my task until summer of 1944." Is that correct? Is that correct?

THE WITNESS: Gruppenfuehrer Mueller gave me the order to submit the order to the SS leaders to burn down the graves.

THE PRESIDENT: How does that differ from what appears in this affidavit?

THE WITNESS: There is no exact difference.

THE PRESIDENT: How, witness, you are causing us to lose a lot of time. When a question is put to you very specifically, you say it is not correct. Then we talk about it a little while and you say it is correct. How please listen to the questions and answer. How you tell us that this is correct, your statement in the affidavit is correct.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. How don't waste any time upon that feature. That is correct.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: Thank you very much, Your Honor.

Q. When did you start with these tasks?

A. At the end of June 1942 Gruppenfuehrer Mueller gave me the order for the first time to go to the BDS, in the Ukraine, and to pass on the order to burn down the graves on his special order. This first journey had to be postponed, however, because I had received another order and I had to wait then in the vicinity of Litzmannstadt. The burning were carried out, test burnings, in fact, and in September 1942 I went to the Ukraine to see Dr. Thomas for the first time and I passed on the order to him. Dr. Thomas refused to carry out this order and he said it was non sensical.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: May I interrupt the witness, Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

Q. That was not what I asked you. I only asked you when did you start?

You have said all that which you have just told to Thomas already in direct examination. You started in summer 1942, is that right?

A. In Summer 1942, we had these test burnings. The actual task was only started in the next year, in June and July.

Q. 1943, I take it. Was it?

A. Yes, 1943, yes.

Q. Were you present during such operations?'

A. During the test burnings I was present, yes.

Q. And were you also present when mass graves were burned, later when the experiments were already finished?

A. Yes, on one particular soot, I saw a place near Kiew which had been burned.

Q. By when was the actual work carried out?

A. In Kiew there were Ukrainian SS men or a company of SS men, members of the BDS, and members of the SS and Police leadership Office and the Regular Police.

Q. Were no laborers used in order to carry out the dirty work? Only SS men would do that?

A. Ukrainian SS men were assigned to the digging works.

Q. He laborers, no Russian laborers or soldiers?

A. He, Uniformed Ukrainian SS men, a company.

Q. I didn't catch this, They were not in uniform, these SS, is that what you said?

A. They were in uniform, uniformed Ukrainian SS units.

Q. And they carried out -

A. They were uniforms.

Q. And they carried out all the dirty work. You did not use any Russian laborers at all?

A. For this purpose, no Russians were used.

Q. Only SS men?

A. Yes, these SS men.

Q. And what happened to these SS men, as you say, after such an operation was finished?

Did you take then along with you, or did they stay at the place, or did you have some specialists, some special laborers, who did the work?

A. I was never in charge of any komnandos at that place. That was a matter to be dealt with by the competent commanders or the Supreme Commander of the Security Police. It was under his charge.

Q. Whose kommandos were they?

A. Those were the commandos of the Supreme Commander of the Security Police in the Ukraine.

Q. Can you tell the Tribunal what Einsatzkommando 1005 was?

A. This name, this term, 1005, must have been invented by somebody or other. It wasn't an official term, It was coined, and that is a self-assumed name.

Q. I just want to know, you stated in your affidavit that Mueller entrusted you with the task of removing the tracesof executions carried out by Einsatzgruppen in the East. He entrusted you. You are going to tell me that you were not at all interested in this task, that you just locked on, when the Higher SS and Polizeifuehrers arrived there. Is that what you are going to imply?

A. He, no, that is not correct, as you say it. I had to take this order to the BDS and the BDS had to take care that in his territory all these places were actually burned. He had to assign his own kommandos for these tasks.

Q. Did you have some specialists with you who showed these people who were actually active in the burning, how they should do it, or did you advise them to, or how was the whole thing done?

A. No experts, no skilled workers were necessary for this assignment. The covers were lifted, the covers of the graves; motor fuel was filled into them, or any kind of fuel, and suddenly a great torch was lit. That was the whole task.

Q. And this task was carried out solely by SS men and no laborers were used, is that your contention?

A. He, we needed no civilian workers. I never saw any civilian workers in this task. They were all SS men. They were paid for their work. They got double and three times their ration for their work.

Q. But no civilians--

THE PRESIDENT: He has stated that several times, Mr. Hochwald. He civilians. They were SS men.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: I am sorry. I would like to offer Document NO-5498, which is an affidavit of the affiant Adolf Ruebe, Your Honor, as Prosecution Exhibit 181.

DR. HEIM (Attorney for the defendant Blobel): According to principle of the best evidence it would be possible for the Prosecution to call this affiant on the witness stand, especially as this affidavit was only made out seven days ago. At least, I want to apply to have this only admitted in evidence, if the affiant, a certain man called Ruebe, can be called in to the witness stand here.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If Your Honor please, I was not in a position to find out the whereabouts of Ruebe, but there can be no question that Dr. Heim can get the address of the affiant any time and that if he makes an application he can get the witness here for cross-examination. I therefore do think that the affidavit is perfectly admissible.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I would like to call your attention to the fact that in this affidavit, as well as in the affidavit by Hartel, submitted by the Prosecution this morning, the address is not mentioned, contrary to the regulations prevailing here for the submission of affidavits.

THE PRESIDENT: The Prosecution is called upon to furnish Dr. Heim with the address, if they have it, of the affiant Hartl and the affiant Adolf Ruebe. With regard to the doucment now before the Tribunal, the same ruling will be made as was made this morning in connection with the Hartl affidavit. It may be used for the purpose of cross-examination but it will not be admitted in evidence at the present time. If Ruebe is called as a witness by either side and he confirms what is in the affidavit, then the affidavit may be introduced for the purpose of contredic tion. In questioning the witness on this affidavit, it will be suggested to the Prosecution it will not be necessary to read the entire affidavit into the record but only to read such parts as are immediately relevant in the cross-examination of the present Defendant on the witness stand.

HR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If Your Honor please, I intended to read only paragraph 4 of the affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If Your Honor please, Mr. Schwarz, these interrogator is just here and I can ascertain now the whereabouts of the affiants, Hartl and Ruebe.

THE PRESIDENT: I wish you would do that immediately.

HR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: Would you excuse me for a minute?

THE PRESIDENT: Certainly.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If Your Honors please, the affiant Hartl is in the Hurnberg jail. The affiant Ruebe is hold by the Spruchkammer of Karlsruhe. Karlsruhe.

THE PRESIDENT: If Dr. Heim will present his application for the production of these witnesses, present his application to the Tribunal, it will be approved forthwith.

MR. HORLICK HOCKWALD: May I read not, Your Honor?

THE RESIDENT: Yes. please.

Q. (Reading) "In October 1943 I was transferred to Kommando 1005. This kommando was under the leadership of Standartenfuehrer Paul Blobel." Herr Blobel, is that you, Standartenfuehrer Paul Blobel?

A. I an Standartenfuehrer Paul Blobel, yes.

Q. (Reading) "It was the task of this kommando to destroy mass graves. This work was done by Hauptsturmfuehrer Harte. The graves were opened by Russian civilian prisoners, the corpses taken out by means of iron picks, piled up and later burned. After completion of the work, the Russian civilian prisoners were shot by the members of the kommando. The corpses were burned too. I was present at such shootings several times, namely at Minsk, Schmolewitzsche, Pinsk, Janow Koprin, and Slonim. At the beginning of December 1943, Standartenfuehrer Blobel, accompanied by Hauptsturmfuehrer Harter, arrived for the purposes of making an inspection of our work." End of quote. Do you want to comment on that, Herr Blobel?

A. Yes, I can comment on this that the Kommando 1005 was not under my leadership, but as I have already declared, that the Supreme Commander of the Security Police, I have not seen myself, or, that is, the commanders had this order.

As this man here describes in Minsk, a burning of the corpses and I never met a Hauptsturmfuehrer Hartl. In September I went to Kiev in the Eastern Territory to Oberfuehrer Piffrader. The commanders, or, at least, the BDS were responsible for the carrying out of these tasks in their independent sectors.

Q. So you deny these facts stated in this affidavit, is that correct?

A. In Minsk I have not attended any burning of corpses. In Kiew I saw a burning of corpses with Ehrlinger and from there I was detailed to the Eastern territories to Piffrader, and I never had such kommandos as an actual kommando leader.

Q. If I sum up your testimony, so you told the Tribunal in essence that Sonderkommando 4-a executed 10 to 15000 people when you were in command of this unit, is that correct?

A. He, that is not correct. I said that the SK 4-a participated in such executions, but that the komnando itself carried out an execution of 10 to 15000 people is not correct.

people. You have further stated that all these executions were justified in accordance with the laws of war, as reprisal against the inhuman and Criminal warfare on the part of the Russian enemy, and as just punishment for grave crimes the perpetrators had committed against the German armed forces. Is that correct?

AAgain, I did not say that. I especially emphasized that retialiation measures for crimes were judged by me apart from the retaliation measures, and that these executions were of 10 - 15000 people were never emphasized by myself, and was never in agreement with measures, but only which I have in time described in my direct testimony. against the carrying out of execution orders.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think that the defendant has testified a great deal on that subject, and that is pretty general.

MR. HOCHWALD: This, your Honor, concludes my cross-examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. The Tribunal will now be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

MR. HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, I offer Document NO-5498, which is the Ruebe affidavit which I just quoted to the witness, and the Tribunal ruled that it will be held in suspense until the Defense decides whether the witness should be called or net. But I would respectfully request that the Exhibit No. 181 should be reserved for Document NO-5498.

THE PRESIDENT: I think by all means when a document is referred to that it should receive an exhibit number, whether it is accepted later or not is another matter. But for the purpose of continuity it would be well to give it a number and that number will be assigned to the document in question.

MR. HOGHWALD: Very well, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will announce that this Tribunal will not be in session next Monday all day, so that when it recesses tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock it will be recess until next Tuesday morning at nine-thirty.

Does defense counsel desire to question any further? BY DR. HEIM (for defendant Blobel): tion by the Prosecution. In the cross examination the so-called Fuehrer order was mentioned, as Streckenbach announced it in Pretsch. I want to ask you about this. Was this order as it was announced in Pretsch already binding for you.... that is, based on the order which was announced, could you start your activity? him in my opinion included the entire order, and I expected certain more detailed instructions about this order. And to me they were given as Dr. Rasch ordered me at Cracow, - to report to the commander of AOK 6 Reichenau and to take orders of lives and his orders were within the framework of this main order the so-called "Fuehrer decree". Commander-in-Chief Reichenau had approximately the same order in front of him, in writing. I would like to ask you about this. This order, as Reichenau had in front of him in writing, was it valid for you in the same form, that is, for your activity. hands of Major Palzhof. It was concerned with the subordination of the Commando of the Security Police and the SS under the army, and described the tasks in the same listing as I have mentioned it in the examination. This referred in particular to this Commando. could you only than become active according to these directives?

or rather the divided SK-4-A, had to go to the army unite, and to work according to the sense, and the sense of this decree is issued with same order the division commander as it came from the AOK 6. order which Jeckeln announced. Based on this order which was announced by Jeckeln did you ever execute Jews merely because they were Jews, even when those Jews had not committed any crimes against war laws?

A. I never gave an order of my own. authority for any such thing, and didn't have Jews executed at my order memely because they were Jews. That never happened.

Q. In the cross-examination you also said that only those leaders of the sub-kommandoes know about the Jeckeln order, who were active in the executive staff. Did I understand you correctly there?

A. The leaders who were active in the executive were familiar with the exact executive directions and when the leaders met the leaders of the remainder of the command (Rst-Kommando), whether administrative leaders or others, it can be understood that they discussed this matter.

Q. During the cross-examination the prosecution mentioned document in which the execution of 1160 Jews were mentioned. In this document it is mentioned that this reprisal action was carried out because ten German soldiers had been murdered. You said - when this subject was discussed that this proportion, or this ratio of 116:1 Seemed rather high to you and you continued to say that the ratio of one to nine, or the to ton seemed appropriate to you. Witness, do you know whether according to the valid International Law a ratio in reprisal measures is prescribed?

A. I don't know that. I only knew that other countries also carried out reprisal measures, and have given orders for such reprisals, about one to two hundred according to the well known order of General Eisenhower.

THE PRESIDENT: You say there is a well known order of General Eisenhower that two hundred were to be executed to one?

A. All the German people know, Your Honor, that an order was given by General Eisenhower that for every one American who was killed, two hundred Germans are to be shot.

Q. You say, all the Germans knew about an order of that kind?

A. It is well known in Germany. Whether all Germans know this, I don't know.

Q. You said that all the Germans know about this order. Now do you say that every German and every defense counsel here know of such an order?

A. Your Honor, I am convinced that many of the defense counsel know of this order.

Q. Can you point out one defense counsel who will make the statement that he knows that General Eisenhower issued an order that two hundred Germans would be killed for any one Allied soldier killed? Will you defense counsel make that statement?

A. Your Honor......

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, may I add something here. This matter so far as I know was mentioned in the proceedings against the Southeast Generals in this courthouse, a few days ago. I know that the Defense in the Southeast Case has requested that General Eisenhower and a French General, whose name I can't remember, be called as witnesses into the witness box, in order to examine both on the subject. Also I learned that in this case a witness, a German witness testified that during internment in Thuringia, at the end of the war or after he saw pesters of the American Power of Occupation, according to which for each American soldier who is killed, I believe, one hundred Germans should be shot as reprisals.

THE PRESIDENT: Will you state this of your own knowledge?

DR. HEIM: He, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Now coming back to the statement of the witness, he said, first, all of Germany Knew about this - ALL Germans knew it. Now, we will retrace our steps. Do you say that all Germans knew of such an order? Answer that yes or no.

THE WITNESS: No.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, then you modified it, and said that many Germans knew of it. I would assume that it would be those Germans who were very intelligent, and who were aware of current affairs. May I come to that assumption?

A. That some Germans know about this, those Germans who read these announcements?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Did you yourself know of such an announcement?

A. In the individual camps like Garmisch.....

THE PRESIDENT: Did you yourself know of such an announcement?

A. I didn't read it myself.

THE PRESIDENT: No. Now you said that many Germans knew of it. In this Tribunal today, in this courtroom, there must be, undoubtedly, many Germans. Can you point out one who knew of this order which you have just stated. Your own counsel has denied that he knew of it. Does any counsel here know of this order?

A. I think the Defendant Ohlendorf for example....

THE PRESIDENT: I ask about counsel, first, the attorneys. Does any attorney here know about the order, yes or no?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Which one?

A. Dr. Heim, for example, read about, it.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim already denied of knowing about an order. Mention the next person.

A. I don't know the other gentlemen as well. I said I presume that people knew it.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, so, therefore, this bread statement that all of Germany knew about it has now been dwindled down to a statement that you just don't know of it, your own counsel does not know of it, and you can not point to one single German in this courtroom who knew about it, outside of the defendants' box. How is there anybody else you can call in all of Germany who can state that he knew of such an order?

A. Your Honor, such orders were announced in the camps as well as by letters of relatives.

THE PRESIDENT: You yourself didn't see the order, or the announcement, that is correct, isn't it?

A. The announcement, yes.

THE PRESIDENT: You say you did see the announcement? Did you See the announcement?

A. I personally didn't see it. I didn't leave the camp.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, no one in Germany can be called by you to state that he saw the announcement. Then you refer to the defendants. Now can you refer to any defendant in that box there who will state that he saw this announcement?

A. Whether anyone personally saw the announcement? Your Honor, as to the people who knew about it......

THE PRESIDENT: I want you to answer that question, whether any defendants here in this courtroom today who can state that he saw this announcement which you mentioned a few moments ago?

A. I'd have to ask each one individually.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will direct a question to all of the defendants. The witness has stated, of course, you have heard what he just stated, that an order had been issued by General Eisenhower that for every Allied soldier killed two hundred Germans would be killed. You heard the Questioning back and forth between the Tribunal and the witness. Is there anybody here now to justify that statement insofar as the defense counsel, or any other citizen in all of Germany. Now, did any of the defendants here in the court ever see such an announcement. If any one did, he will please raise his hand. No defendant has raised his hand, so now we come back to your original statement, that all of Germany knew of this announcement. Do you want to withdraw that statement?

A. If that inquiry by the President to those people show this result, I must say the fact is only known to individuals.

THE PRESIDENT: Will you withdraw that statement in view of the results which has followed your original declaration?

A. I shell have to do that because I personally didn't see it.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, and will you now make an apology for having cast this aspersion upon the name of General Eisenhower, who up until this very time has earned the respect of not only those in his services on the Allied side, but even the respect of the foe?

A. Under those circumstances I have to beg your pardon.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Proceed, please.

BY DR. HEIM:

Q. Witness, during the cross-examination you talked about the collection of the clothes of the people executed in Kiex. Were you present during that action?

A. During that action of collecting clothes I was not present.

Q. Did you not see how those clothes were collected?

A. No, I only heard later that the Ukrainians had to administer these clothes and also distributed them.

Q. Where were you in March and April 1942?

A. At the end of March 1942 I returned to Berlin and until the beginning of May I was in my apartment in Solingen.

Q. Can you tell me whether in March of 1942 you were called to the estate of Dr. Thomas in Charkow and traveled together with a certain man named Harter?

A. That is quite impossible. In March 1942 when I left Charkow Dr. Thomas did not have an estate but he was in Kiev in his office.

Q. Witness, I am referring to Document No. 5384, which has the temporary exhibit number 180. It is an affidavit by Harter. I refer to paragraph 5, executions by Oberfuehrer Erhlinger are mentioned here and executions by Sturmbanfurhrer Platt. Did these two men mentioned ever belong to your commando?

A. Neither Oberfuehrer Erhlinger nor Sturmbanfuehrer Platt ever were in my commando. Oberfuehrer Ehrlinger later on was commander of the security police in Kiev and Sturmbannfuehrer Platt I did not even know.

Q. Do you know how the executionswere carried out at the order of these two men?

A. I never heard about it and never witnessed it when these people carried out executions.

Q. I am referring to document number 5498, with a temporary exhibit number of 181.

The Prosecution submitted this affidavit by a man called Ruebe. I am referring to the Arabic figure 4 on page 2 of the original. Witness, do you have the document in front of you?

A. Yes.

Q. It says here in the second sentence, I quote:

"This Commando was under the leadership of Standartenfuehrer Paul Blobel. It was the task of this commando to destroy mass graves. This work was done by Hauptsturmfuehrer Harter."

Witness, do these statements of Ruebe's reveal that you were the leader of this commando?

MR. HOCHWALD: If your Honors, please, I object to that question. The document speaks for itself. The witness can not recommend whether Harter was correct or not correct, but he can state from his judgment whether it is clear from the document that he was in charge of the commando or not.

Moreover, Dr. Heim has announced here that he is going to call the witness and I do think this is a proper question to put to the affiant when he takes the witness stand but not to the defendant.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, if the Prosecution objects to this affidavit which is not yet admitted, I think I am also entitled to refer to this affidavit on the principle of equal rights of Prosecution and Defense.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Heim, I can assure you that there can be no question about the equal rights between the Prosecution and the Defense. Now if you will specify exactly just what it is you are socking to ascertain, the Tribunal will very happily cooperate with you. Now let us know just what it is you want to find out.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I shall not refer to the affidavit, but merely address questions to the witness without referring to the affidavit.

DR. HOCHWALD: If you please, Your Honor, the Prosecution has not objected that Dr. Heim may put the affidavit to the defendant and and ask him questions.

We have objected against one very specific question which was: "It is clear from this sentence that you were the commander of the Einsatz Commando." I have only objected against this question, not against the fact that Dr. Heim uses the affidavit. He is at liberty to ask the defendant about it and the things which are stated in the affidavit are true or not. Naturally we used it, why should he not use it? But I have only objected against this one very specific question, of Dr. Heim, as not being a proper question to put to the defendant.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, you opened it up first on crossexamination and Dr. Heim is allowed to explore the possibilities of that subject.

DR. HEIM: I will not refer to the affidavit any more but merely want to address a few questions to you about the action 1005 to you: Apart from the experimental plants at Litzmannstadt, did you carry out any burnings yourself, that is, did you supervise personally any burning of corpses?

A. The commandos assigned for this task in Litzmannustadt had been assigned by the commando of the security police of the Inspector in Posen and he supplied these men. The command of the security police or rather the order was handed on by me and the organizational and factual questions were dealt with by the Commando of the security police. He had set up commandos and saw to it that it was carried out and was subordinate responsible personally to the Reich Main Security Office for the carrying out of this task.

Q. Herr Blobel, did you know a commando under Hauptsturmfuhrer Harter?

A. I don't know the name Harter and I don't know any commando of that kind.

Q. Do you know Hauptsturmfuehrer Sekel?

A. I don't know him either.

Q. Witness, upon your order or in your presence were civilians or prisoners ever used for this burning of corpses?

A. In my presence and as far as I have witnessed it during the test burning of corpses in Litzmannustadt German Police, SS men, were used to carry this out and in the Ukraine and in Kiev where I was present myself, Ukrainian militia carried out this task who had been appointed for it. In these eases no civilians or prisoners of any kind were used for it.

Q. Did you hear that in any commandos dealing with this action 1005, civilian prisoners were used to carry out this burning or corpses?

A. I never heard of that because then I would have had to report to Gruppenfuehrer Mueller about it.

Q. Witness, my last question now. Since yesterday have I talked to you at all except here in public?

A. No.

Q. Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, your questioning an document No. 5498 causes the Tribunal to make the observation that the statement in the affidavit that civilian workers were shot after having participated in the exhumation and the destruction of bodies, can in no way, be imputed to the defendant, and the defendant will not be called upon to answer any charge which might scorn to arise from that declaration, because the indictment specifically charges the defendant with crimes only up to July 1943, unless the Tribunal will be corrected by the Prosecution in that respect?

MR. HOCHWALD: Your Honor, I only want to state that it is a fact in the statement by the Tribunal that the Prosecution refrains from offering this document at this time.

THE PRESIDENT: So that you will not be called upon, Dr. Heim, to present any evidence whatsoever regarding the statement that civilians were shot in October, 1943, because that is beyond the limit date specified in the indictment.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, thank you very much for making this statement. On my part I would like to state that under these circumstances I can do without the interrogation of Ruebe, the affiant. On the other hand, I think that the defense counsel of the Defendant Strauch I believe, wants Ruebe to be called to the witness stand.

THE PRESIDENT: If that is true, certainly he will be called. You do want to have the witness called?

DR. MENSEL for Dr. Lick for the Defendant Strauch: in case the Prosecution intends to introduce document 5498 against the Defendant Strauch as evidence.

THE PRESIDENT: We will hear from the Prosecution on that angle.

MR. CLANCY: I wish to assure the Tribunal that the witness Ruebe shall be brought here forthwith as a Prosecution witness and placed at the disposal for cross-examination for the defense.

THE PRESIDENT: That will answer all questions here and he will be available if he is needed he will be questioned and if he isn't needed he will not be questioned, so that, therefore, your rights will be protected from any point of view.

DR. DURCHOLZ: For the Defendant Rasch: questions to the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: You may. BY DR. DURCHOLZ:

Q. Witness, the Prosecution asked you during the examination about the tasks of Strechenbach at Trebsch. I would like to have a few circumstances explained by you: When Strechenbach had announced the tasks at Trebsch, did discussions take place between the persons concerned and about this order?

A. After the short speech which Strechenbach held the leaders went in two rooms of the school and little circles formed, some higher leaders sat down in a corner and discussed this subject, which Strechenbach had just announced and gave their personal views on it.

Little circles stood around to discuss this question.

Q. How many persons were concerned with this order?

A. If I remember correctly, say 25, 25 leaders.

Q. Can I understand the answer before the last that you tried to say that they did not part immediately, but that the participants stayed together for sometime and discussed the order?

A. That is right.

Q. Were the opinions about the contents of the new order, did they differ?

A. Yes, they did differ very much, some understood it one way as totalitarian order, some talked about individual points of the order, how it should be understood. Therefore, it was uncertain.

Q Therefore, it was necessary. No definite line existed?

Q Was Dr. Rasch present during that discussion?

A I remember that I was near Dr. Rasch but that he then together with other leaders went to the other rooms to talk to them, Host of these leaders I did not know.

Q Then the second subject. You said, before that your birthday is on 13th of August, and that on 13 August 1941 you were ill? were ill. Can you state approximately the dry when this order was handed, to Group-C by Rasch? 13th, aid sixteen days after that, certainly.

Q Then a, third subject. You said that in October 1941 the Reichsfuehrer visited Kiev, and that Rasch was disapproved by the Reichsfuehrer, When was it in the beginning of October or the middle of October? absence Hoffmann was in charge of Group-C, and after Rasch's return at the end of October, the commando was finally given over to Thomas. Does this - I understand to mean that after Rasch left for Berlin the commando was actually not taken back by him? Dr. Thomas, This happened at the end of October.

Q Now one more question. You just said that the Reichsfuehrer came at the beginning of the month and that Rasch left for Berlin immediately after the visit of the Reichsfuehrer.

Q And arrived, at the beginning of October as well, then?

Q A fourth question still. You talked about the gas-van of group VI. When did this gas-van arrive?

A This gas-van must have arrived about the middle of October. I think the middle of October.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Thank you.

TEE PRESIDENT: Any other defense counsel wish to question the witness? Witness, are you a religious man?

TEE WITNESS: I was brought up in the Protestant Confession. confirmed, and our whole family grew up in that spirit.

THE PRESIDENT: Are you a religious man?

THE PRESIDENT: Are you a religious man?

THE PRESIDENT: Are you a member of any church?

THE PRESIDENT: Why did you leave the church? the Calvinist Movement in Wermelskirchen in the "Bergische Land", who are a separate sect. They are not tied to a church community of the State.

THE PRESIDENT: You thought you could do better without any connection with a church?

A One could not speak of a better treatment. Perhaps one could move more freely and bad closer contact with the other members.

THE PRESIDENT: So you left the church because you wanted, more freedom, more spiritual freedom? of life.

THE PRESIDENT: You felt that the church in some way hampered your spiritual independence? made.

THE PRESIDENT: Since you left the church in 1936, did you at my time attend any religious services of any character anywhere?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Where? attend church.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, but between 1936 end 1945 you didn't feel that you needed the help end support of religion as you now apparently seen to welcome it?

A No. We also visited church service during that time.

THE PRESIDENT: Between 1936 and 1945?

THE PRESIDENT: You only visited hut not to worship? Land.

THE PRESIDENT: And when was that?

A When was this?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes?

A I don't understand you.

THE PRESIDENT: You said that you visited certain church services, and I an merely asking you when was it that you made these visits?

A. That was during the years after we had left the Protestant Community, and to together with our relatives in the Bergische Land we had close contact on these religious questions, and in this circle we spent many hours of worship.

THE PRESIDENT: You yourself worshipped in church after 1935?

THE PRESIDENT: Well now , there is a difference between visiting and worshipping. One nay visit a church to study the architecture, and to see what is going on, but when he goes to worship he goes with an entire different objective in view. He goes to get closer to the Supreme Being spiritually.

service was, together with wife and children, sofar as they are grown up.

THE PRESIDENT: Then you did worship in church after 1936?

THE PRESIDENT: Then the statement in your personal record that you left the church in 1936 is incorrect?

A Yes. Officially I belonged to the Protestant Community no longer. Officially I had left the Protestant Church, and we had became more acquainted with the Calvinistic Bund in Wermelskirchen. We were together with all our relatives there, and, this "being together included almost the whole local group (Ortsgruppe) in that locality.

THE PRESIDENT: You left one church and entered another church?

A If you can call it a church. You could call it a religious

THE PRESIDENT: Then you never really did abandon religion?

A No, we didn't leave it.

THE PRESIDENT: No, Did it occur to you that before every execution that it might have been consoling and comfortable to the executees if they could have had the benefit of some religious service? the spiritual life of these men in the East.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand you to say that these individuals who were about to be executed were Atheists?

THE PRESIDENT: That most of these individuals who were executed were Atheists?

A Most of the people in this country have no religion. The people know no such thing. The churches were used as storehouses, and I never found that any place of worship existed, and that any religious services were held, but later after the German troops entered, some churches were opened a gain, where part of the Ukrainian population gathered again for religious services.

TEE PRESIDENT: Did you not find any synagogues in your travels through Russia?

TEE PRESIDENT: You never saw a synagogue?

A I don't know how I could have found a synagogue....

THE PRESIDENT: I ma just asking you. You didn't see a synagogue in all the time you traveled in Russia and in the Ukraine?

THE PRESIDENT: In looking at your personal record I find a referennce to various decorations, and I am only asking as a matter of information what some of these decorations mean. What is meant by the decoration "Yuletide Candlesticks". Did you receive that decoration?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, the "Yuletide Candle sticks" is not really a distinction. It is an old Germanic object of cult. It is a candlestick where the Yuletide cnadle is put in and the remnant of the candle of the previous year is put under it so that the light continues to burn, and by the light of this candle all things concerning the family such as births and birthdays are celebrated while this candle is lighted in midst of a family circle. BY THE PRESIDENTS:

Q Well, is this in the form of a decoration or not? I don't know. I am only asking for information. among the leaders and SS men.

Q They were given by whom?

A By the Reich leadership of the SS. Every agency was constantly given a certain amount of Yuletide Candlesticks to be distributed to men and leaders.

Q And was this done during the Yuletide? the personel record if it was so generally done. If everybody got a candle why is it in this record next to the Gold Party Badge and the Deathhead Ring? candlestick and celebrates important dates of the family in the spirit of Yuletide.

Q And you got that too?

QAnd then you got the SA Badge in Bronze. How, what did you have to do to get that? SA within a prescribed sports program, marching, gymnastics, jumping, etc.

Q Yes, and then you got the Deathhead Ring. Now, what sport did you have to accomplish to receive the Deathhead Ring?

A Three hundred, did you say?

Q No, thousands. The records here show,these documents show on some occasions....

A Thousands? Inasfar as it concerned retaliation, measures, it is said that Army units seized these people. As to these retaliation measures certainly there was no interrogation previously "but those were reprisals which, had been ordered by the commander in chief, how long they took in Lutsk, I don't know.

A I couldn't answer to that, Your Honor, Every case, as far as I know, was examined by my leaders and also by those whom I knew personally. the statement you made about the Eisenhower Order?

Q You only heard about here?

Q Very well. How, the original order that Hitler issued provided for the execution of all Jews, that is correct, is it not? the entire Jewry, yes. bach? order, or rather to give such orders myself, I must say that I was fortunate enough, compared to others, to be subordinate to Oberbefehlshaber, a commander in chief. order, is that what we are to understand? importance to the fact that the culprits be seized who did harm to the troops, and within the advance march this Army corps, at the front, such actions could not be carried out; and he did not carry them out either; but later the situation changed when the front did not move any more and the Higher SS and Police Leader, also with his orders, became active besides the command of the AOK/6. Then the Fuehrer Decree came to effect in its entirety.

That is what you told Mr. Hochwald, that Streckenbach didn't mean to kill the Jews, but only to seize them, is that right? shot. This referred to the fact that the Jews were ordered to be shot right from the beginning, and one could see that Streckenbach did not like repeating this order, and that this was one of the worst moments of his life.

Q Very well. How the documents relate how tine after time when your commando was in the vicinity of a certain place the documents show that executions took place of Jews, not spies and saboteurs, but just Jews, For instance, one report shows that on a particular day there were 36 political functionaries, 32 saboteurs and looters, and 4372 Jews. How, when this particular operation occurred, naturally there was no detailed examination of the cases of these Jews. That is correct, is it not?

A Your Honor, I cannot say that. Those are affairs which concern another unit and these are figures which are mentioned for the Kiev territory.

where Jaws ware killed merely because they were Jews that you just happened to miss the train; you got there just as the train was leaving the station; you got there just as the parade went by, or you got there just as the circus tent was being pulled. down; you always got there, a little late. How did you happen to rime this so perfectly?

A Your Honor, this was not done, on. purpose. It just happens like that and it was as I have described here when part of the kommandos were assigned. Thye had to take part and the entire organisation of the SK 4a, that is, in. its two sub-divisions, were carried out at the dates fixed, as I have described. My personal illness has nothing to do with these dates. During these months I dragged along and I had to beg so that they at last recognized that I was ill. various doctors treated me. The same staff physician that treated the commander in chief treated me in Shitomir. The men died of the sans illness fight days later, and then the group physician treated me.

Q Just one final question, fitness. Have you ever had any personal differences with the Defendant Steimle? differences. reference to you as a "bloodhound." Can you imagine why a person who did not know you and had no differences with you, had no reason to dislike, you, would volunteer to make a statement of that kind? Let ms make this very clear that we are not giving any credence to this affidavit. I don't know whether he has any right to say or not. That is not the point and I don't want you to assume that we are underwriting what Steimle said. I am only asking you to make whatever explanation you can as to why a total stranger would go out of his way to use such deprivious language regarding yourself.

A your Honor, I am at a loss myself about this. I thought about it why Steimle should have done this. It may have been from my personal attitude, because I attempted to keep discipline and order end cleanliness in my unit and some people did not like it.

all would call a person a blood hound because he was clean and insisted upon sanitation?

A Your Honor, that is the. contradiction which results and that is what I cannot understand.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, fortunately, we will be in a position to hoar from the affiant himself and perhaps at that time it may be less ambiguous.

DR. GAWLIK(Attorney for the Defendant Seibert) Your Honor, I ask that it be granted that the Defendant Seibert be excused for Friday and Tuesday in order to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, the Defendant Seibert may be excused from attendance in court tomorrow and Tuesday of next week in order to prepare his case with his counsel.

DR. FIGHT(Attorney for the Defendant Biberstein): Your Honor, following the questions which your Honor just addressed, I would like to address another question to the witness. May I?

THE PRESIDENT: Certainly, by all means.

DR. FICHT: As a result of your question.

THE PRESIDENT: Certainly. BY DR FICHT (ATTORNEY FOR DEFENDANT BIEBERSTEIN): Fuehrer Decree that Jews were to be shot, merely because they were Jews in its entirety only had its effect when the fronts did not vove any more. Concerning this, I would like to ask you, did you mean to say only in the territories where the Higher SS and Police Leaders had been assignee or in the operation territory where the Einsatzkommandos were active? personally experienced, the territory of the AOK 6, which was under Reichenaw.

DR. FICHT: I have no further questions which interest me.

DR. HEIM( Attorney for the Defendant Blobel): Your Honor, would you permit me to address another question, following the questions of the Tribunal?

THE PRESIDENT: By all means. BY DR. HEIM (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BLOBEL): carried out under your personal supervision?

DR. HEIM: Thank you. That is all. your Honor, I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: You said in Sokal, and then had he completed his statement?

DR. HEIM: Yes, Your Honor, he said in Sokal.

THE PRESIDENT: You asked him how many executions of the SK 4a occurred under his direction. Then, he says two in Sokal, well, does he mean in all? Did these two happen to take place in Sokal? I don't know whether his statement was finished or not, Q (By Dr. Heim) Witness, do you mean, altogether 2 exeuctions under your supervision?

Q And where did that take place? took place in Sokal.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, the Tribunal will grant me another 5 minutes, I could finish the evidence of Blobel.

I wish to ask the Tribunal's permission chat I may ask that a criminal record be brought from the Defense Center concerning the witness who will be called to the witness box here.

THE PRESIDENT: I didn't quite catch your request.

DR. HEIM: I ask the Tribunal to grant that I may get a criminal record for the witness Hartl, whom I will call into the witness box here.

THE PRESIDENT: You want to present a document of some kind which refers to the witness that you will call?

DR. HEIM: Yes, Your Honor. In Germany, it is like this: Is a certain Court about every person who has been fined, a list is kept in this record, the fines and personal notes are entered.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal authorizes you at obtain and submit that record.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor. Now my last set of questions; During the case in chief of the Prosecution, the Tribunal was kind enough to allow ms, concerning a document submitted by the Prosecution during the case in chief of the Defendant Blobel, to make my final objection. It is an affidavit by a certain Hoess contained in Document Book III-C of the Prosecution, Exhibit No. 134. This document was only accepted temporarily at the time. Meanwhile, from the record of the Pohl case I have had an excerpt made concerning this document and, if the High Tribunal is pleased by this, I would like to read parts of it, which concern this document.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I read from page 6236 of the German Record of Case IV before the Military Tribunal No. II of 3 September 1947. It says:

"MR. ROBBINS: The next document -- I don't have the original hers in Court so that I shall mark Exhibit 196 as document 4498A & B, and. I will offer it as soon as I can get the original. The Document Room has not completed the document as yet.

"DR. SEIDEL (For Defendant Pohl):"

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If Your Honors please, I probably can shorten this a little bit. I have inquired into the whereabouts of this document and into the ruling of the Tribunal in the Pohl case and the Prosecution, submits that this document was rejected by the Tribunal in the Pohl case for the reason, that it is not a sworn statement.

I have in the meantime inquired with the Polish delegation. As the Tribunal knows, this document was made before a Polish judge, before Judge Sane, who is the investigating judge of the Polish Government for War Crimes. Judge Sane was present in Nurnberg, or, is still present, and I have obtained a certificate from the Polish Delegation to the effect that this statement was taken by Judge. Sane himself and that this is riot a sworn statement, but that Judge Sane re quested from the affiant to tell the truth. At the time when Hoess made this statement, he was a defendant in his own case and it is not usual that statements of such persons are taken under oath. It is not usual in Poland. It is against regulations in Czechoslovakia. I do not knew what the current rule is in Germany. the Polish, delegation and I shall submit it to the Tribunal as soon, as it is translated so that I can get translations for the German defense counsel. I would request at this time that the Tribunal may defer its decision on the admissibility of the document until the Tribunal has received this certificate.

THE PRESIDENT: Is that agreeable to you, Dr. Heim?

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I agree that the discussion about this document should be deferred to a later date.

I have now finished the case of chief of Defendant Blobel. At a later date, that is very soon, I shall submit Document Book II for Defendant Blobel. There are only a few documents contained in it.

THE PRESIDENT: Tomorrow morning we will begin with the case of Blume. The Tribunal will now be in recess until tomorrow morning at 9:30.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 31 October 1947, at 0930 hours.)

of America; against Otto Ohlendorf, et al;

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II-a.

Military Tribunal II-A is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Lummert, you are ready to proceed?

DR. LUMMERT: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Blume will be taken to the witness box. as follows: BY JUDGE DIXON:

Q Defendant, raise your right hand and repeat after me: will speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

( The witness repeated the oath)

JUDGE DIXON: You may be seated. BY DR. LUMMERT: data?

A My name is Walter Blume. I am 41 years of age. Before the German collapse I was a ministerial councillor and Colonel in the police in Office I of the Reich Main Security Office. I am married and have five children. that my examination of the defendant Blume, will be subdivided into three main sections. In the first section I shall ask the defendant Blame about his education, about his career and a few general questions.

In the second section we will deal with the 7 weeks when he stayed in the East. The third section finally will refer to Count III of the Indictment, the membership in the organizations declared criminal by the International Military Tribunal. In connection with the examination I shall introduce a few documents as evidence. description of your education? Westphalia as the son of a schoolmaster of a girls' high school. In my home town Dortmund, I went to elementary school for four years and after that I attended Hindenburg High School for 9 years, and the so-called "Abitur" the matriculation, I passed on Easter 1925. After that I studied law for six terms in Bonn, Jena and Muenster, and in 1923 I passed the first legal state examination, the "Referendar" examination at the Law Courts in Hamm. In the following years I received the proper legal training with several legal authorities in Dortmund and in Hamm. In July 1932, I passed the main State examination for law, the "Assessor" examination in Berlin. In 1933 I passed an exam as a doctor of law at the University of Erlangen.

Q Did you have a special aim for your career? state. In particular I aimed to work as a County Councillor. of a County Councillor? The Landkreis county district contains a number of communities and smaller cities which are an administrative district, while the larger towns are independent.

That is, they form their own independent city districts. In the state Bavaria , for example, there are about 150 of such districts. examination of law in July 1932, what did you do after that in order to achieve your aim, that is, to become a County Councillor? to be accepted as a civil servant in the state administration department but as I found out everywhere, in the State of Prussia at the time one had to be a member either in the social democratic party or in the "Centrum" party. Since I did not belong to either party my efforts were in vain at the time. May I add that owing to the idea of the class struggle I objected to the principal of the social democratic party. The Catholic Center Party, I was not interested in because I was a Protestant and thus did not agree with its Catholic principles. the middle of 1932 when your attempts to become a civil servant failed?

A like most legal"assessors" after their first legal state-examination I first was given the position of an unpaid assistant to a Judge at the Court in Dortmund. I kept this position after my examination until the spring of 1933. this field? I knew very well pointed out to me that perhaps now there would be a chance to become a civil servant in the administrative service. He knew my desire to become an officer in the inner administration and he offered to help me to get a position with the Police in Dortmund because he knew the then Police President at the time, the SA Gruppenfuehrer Schepmann personally.

I agreed to this because it would bring me closer to my professional aim. A few days later I was asked to see the Police President. At the time he just needed a lawyer in the Police in Dortmund, and, therefore, approved to my service there. After a few months of training time for which I was not paid, the Police President Schepmann, as he had told me during that first discussion, wanted me to go to the Prussian inner state administration, As a lawyer, therefore, I asked for leave of absence and started to work in the police in Dortmund about the end of March or the beginning of April 1933. I do not remember the exact date. with the NSDAP until that time in the spring of 1933? political party. My general political views were those of a good German citizen and of a man with nationalist views. My father was conservative in his political views. As for myself in the years before 1933, after I had become of age, I never felt any desire to become politically active. My interest in the problems and the political movements at the time was merely theoretical. I had not formed any ideology as yet but I was still searching. For that reason I had not joined any party.

Q Did you join the NSDAP or one of it's organizations or affiliations in 1933? Dortmund, the Police President Sehepmann told me one day the NSDAP had criticized him because he had employed a lawyer who was not a member of the Party.

He asked me to join the Party and I replied to him that I intentionally had not joined any party as yet, because I objected to those many people who joined the party for opportunistic reasons. He replied to me that it was in his interest if I joined the party because he would not then have any more difficulties because of me. For the same reason he would also like to see to it that I became a member of the SA. He would then take me into his group staff, pro forma, I agreed to joining the Party and the SA and on the 1st of May 1933 I became a temporary party member and also a member of the SA, as a sturmfuehrer. That is the rank of a lieutenant in the staff of the SA in Westphalia. you said you became a member of the party and the SA and what were it's aims in your opinion? therefore, joined the party, and the SA I did not do that because I thought I would have an advantage in my profession but at the time I saw the connections between the national and social intentions as the NSDAP; I considered this to be an ideal solution of the very difficult economic and political problems in Germany, which, particularly, since 1930 made things very difficult in Germany. Most of all I objected to the idea of the class struggle which was the policy of the Leftist parties. Instead of this I considered the idea of an community as the NSDAP advocated to be right, I had not Party dogmas. The old and new party members were different kinds of people and the field of activities within the party seemed very extensive to me and to be based on just ideals. The unity in the Party, in my opinion, was the idea of the union within the people, and I realized that it was not the number of party members which would help Germany out of its misery by only the temporary voluntary subordination under one will.

Apart from that I wanted the basic wellbeing of the economic situation in Germany and a good position of Germany in relation to the rest of the world. I was convinced that the NSDAP had wanted to achieve these aims in a legal and peaceful manner. The only difficulty was Russia, and I knew that there would have to be a. critical dispute. I considered this right from the very beginning and I even thought it probable because already then I saw no possibility of settling the differences between the Soviet aims of having a communist world revolution and the aims of the NSDAP concerning the national and social rebirth of Germany. a national-socialist dictatorship in Germany?

A No, I did not think of that. The reason was that I did not expect a dictatorship. I thought the NSDAP would do away with parliamentarism as such -

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, there seems to be a question.

DR. LUMMERT: The translation doesn't seem to follow all of the time. The witness just said that he agreed to the NSDAP, because it wanted to do away with the excesses of parliamentarism, that is the bad side of parliamentarism. It was translated that ha agreed to it because parliamentarism was eliminated. There is some difference. May the witness repeat his statement?

THE PRESIDENT: We understand what the witness intended to say or perhaps did say was that he was interested in seeing that the bad side of what he regarded as the excesses of parliamentarism should be eliminated, not a representative government as such?

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, that is quite right, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The record will show that. BY DR. LUMMERT: Chief of the State in these difficult times should deal with the responsibility and that only one man should have the responsibility. Hitler seemed suitable to me at the time for this because of his personal courageous character as the broad masses of the simple regarded him, and, therefore, he was given the opportunity to eliminate the bad idea of class fighting but personally and as a lawyer I fully approved of a legal state and believed that the NSDAP after a sort of revolutionary temporary period would set up a new legal state; the legal state is the opposite of a dictatorship,

Q Witness, what was your opinion on the so-called Jewish question? Jews in the public life of Germany, in the official positions, in the free professions, and so forth, he slowly reduced to a state of a low percentage in proportion with the total of the German population. I also considered it necessary to stop the increase of immigration of Jews from the last, from Poland to Germany, who had come into Germany since 1916 continuously, and had spread anti-Semitism in Germany. These so-called Eastern Jews culturally and in. their appearance were on a much lower level than those Jews who had always been in Germany. But Army measures beyound those which I mentioned, like expulsion, or extermination, I did not desire, nor did I in these and the following years. In my opinion the articles of the Party program of the NSDAP didn't say anything to the contrary.

Q witness, what was your professional career after that. Please give the Tribunal a short and precise description of this?

AAfter April 1933, as I already . mentioned, I worked for a few months without pay with the police in Dortmund, until about the middle of 1933, the inner Ministry of Interior of Prussia informed me that I would be employed in the Information Service in the Police in Dortmund. From that moment on 1 received the usual salary as a chief assessor. During my test time the Chief of the newly founded Prussian Secret State Police Office in Berlin Oberregierungsrate Dieltz came to Schepmann in Dortmund in order to discuss the set up , a Prussian Police Office in Dortmund with him. After this discussion I was called in by Schepmann: he introduced me to Dieltz, and suggested to him that when having terminated my temporary position I should be put in charge of the police Office in Dortmund. Until than, during the test time, he, Schepmann would deal with the business connected with it, because the State Police Office was formed out of Department I-A, the police presidium. When I had finished my tests here in May or June 1944, I was appointed government assessor in the Prussian service of the inner administration and simultaneously was put in charge of the State Police Office, which had just been set up for the government district at Ansberg, with its headquarters in Dortmund.

Dortmund belonged to the district of Ansberg, and in this position I remained until the Fall of 1934. At this time I was called to the Prussian State Police Office in Berlin as government assessor. There my tasks consisted of compiling out of the reports coming is from all over Prussia from the various State Police Offices, a general situational report, which the chief of the Prussian State Police Office handed on to various offices in Prussia, I worked in this office until June 1935. During that time the SA, in which I had not been active in Berlin either, transferred me to the SS. I had the same rank with the 33, SS-Untersturmfuehrer, that is lieutenant. The external reasons for this was that during a social event in Berlin I had come in White tie and tails and Heydrich, who had been present, had criticised this. The new chief of the Prussian State police Office even, and most of the other members of the Secret State Police, had appeared in SS-uniform. He said at the time he expected the people of his office would appear in the same color, and arranged for my transfer from the SA to the SS in the same rank. On. 6 June 1935 I married. In the same month the chief of the State Police Office for the District of Halle, transferred me to Merseburg, on the Sale River. I worked there for over two years. Then in the Fall of 1937 I was appointed chief of the. State Police Office for the District of Hanover, and was transferred to Hanover, and soon after that I became a government councillor. In this position I remained until the war started. In December I was appointed a Senior Government official for Berlin, and I was promoted a senior Government councillor. In this position I was until May 1941. During this month I was transferred as Personal Referendar to the Reich Security Main Office, that is, the RSHA, as it is usually abbreviated, I joined office I. When I had worked in this activity for about one month I was appointed for temporary security police tasks - as they told me at the time, - and was ordered to go to Pretsch on the Elbe River. Sofar as I can remember this was about eight days before the beginning of the Russian campaign had started on 22 June 1941.

ask you more details. They are the real subjects of the trial here, concerning you personally. Please describe to me your professional career after you returned from Russia in the middle of August 1941? resumed my activity as Personal Referendar in the Reich Main Security Office. My superior was the Office Chief of Office-I, the SS-Gruppenfuehrer Streckenbach. During my activity there I was appointed ministerial councillor. I remained in this position until approximately July 1942. At this time I was transferred to Duesseldorf, as Inspector of the Security Police and the SD. Before I started my work, which was at the order of the RSHA, I had been given a special task in the Upper Ukraine, which took about eight weeks. Then I started to work in Duesseldorf, and remained their until October 1943.

Then I was appointed Commander of the Security police in the SD in Athens, in Greece, and retained these from October 1943 until August 1944. After we left Greece, I returned to Berlin. For a few weeks I was unemployed, because Kaltenbrunner, chief of the RSHA, disapproved of me, and he did not even receive me. Kaltehbrunner said at the time, and told my superior in Athens, Schimana who was in Athens, "Blume has supported the Greek policy, and not the German policy. He can not obey. I shall transfer him to the Reich Ministry of Finance," but this never actually happened. In any case, temporarily, as in 1941 and 1942, I was sent from there to a position in the RSHA, and paid by them, and in the Fall of 1944 the office chief of Office -I appointed me to assist in the customs supervision of the which Ministry of Finance, in the Security Police. My special subject was personnel transfers. Before completing this task in Marcy 1945, I was transferred to Blankenburg in Thuringia, in order to deal with vim censorship of the Wehrmacht there, and to transfer it into the Security Police. There my professional career ended, because the American troops approached.

I did military service for a short while, and on 8 May 1945 I was taken into American captivity in Austria. second main section of your examination, namely, your activity during the -approximately- seven weeks in the Rest. I intend to sub-divide this into three parts. First of all, I shell question you concerning the time during those seven weeks. After that I shall question you in particular concerning some documents, in which the prosecution charges you with certain things. Finally I shall ask you about your views at the time. whether the Fuehrer's Decree concerning the executions was right or wrong, and when conclusion you drew owing to your opinion at the time. Witness, you already mentioned that in June 1941 for about eight days before the Russian campaign, you were sent to Pretsch on the Elba River. This was, as you were told, at the time for a temporary assignment in the Security Police. Please give me all details you remember? purpose of this assignment was not known to me. After arriving in Pretsch I found several leaders who held approximately the same rank as I did; the men and sub-leaders who had been in Pretsch and Duben for several weeks, I found doing military training. They had been formed into companies. The conclusion I drew from this was that it was to assist the Security Police during military enterprise. In the discussions, presumptions were mentioned concerning England or Russia. A few days before the Russian Campaign, suddenly SS-Obergruppenfuehrer Streckenbach, of Office-I of the RSHA appeared in Pretsch, and he told the leaders who were gathered there most of them late because the first leaders of the Einsatzgruppen and the Einsatz and Senderkommandos - that we were going to attack Russia.

He announced the intentions of the Security Police task, and in particular the division in which the Einsatzgruppen and kommandos were formed, and, he explained our relations to the Army. During this speech he announced to us the Fuehrer Decree, which said that during the Russian Campaign the Eastern Jews in Soviet Russia were to be exterminated. These persons who were there were speechless about this decree. Then came the reaction. Those who held the same rank as Streckenbach called out loudly, and other people present in spite of the usual strict discipline were very restless, and remarks were made to the effect: how can this be done, it is impossible and can not be carried out. Steckenbach answered these remarks and said he could understand our reaction of disapproval, but nothing could be done here because it was a Fuehrer Decree, and this had to be complied with. For the Fuehrer Decree he gave the following reasons: First, a necessity of securing the conquered territory against partisan activity which was to be expected, as it was to be expected that Eastern Jews were the natural helpers of the partisans, and, secondly, that the Eastern Jews were the intellectual supporters of World Bolshevism, and this total destruction was necessary, in order to make the victory over Soviet Russia final. Finally Streckenbach pointed out the fact that for our activity in the Einsatzgruppen, military law applied, and he ordered us to instruct the men in our kommandos that each individual was under military law with all its consequences, in case they disobeyed an order; courtmartial or SSPolice Courts proceedings would be used, and possibly death sentences would be pronounced. Apart from that Streckenbach said expressly, that the Fuehrer had instructed the Army kommandos that the fight against Bolshevism could not be conducted under European laws and rules, it was not war in the usual sense, but a worldwide political ideological difference, thus, political police were appointed for the prospective war of the West, and had officially been built into an offical military plan, and that cooperation between the Army and the Security Police would have to be carried out.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I would like here to submit Document Blume No. 1, before I continue to ask the witness questions. In order to explain this, I want to mention that disobedience against the State orders under the dictatorship of Hitler was a crime punishable by death. No matter whether the disobedience concerned military or civilian subjects. This fact is well known. I believe that this Tribunal might like me to compile the laws which applied to the police at the time, and, therefore, also for the defendant Blume. I only chose the most important laws and decrees for this, and ask the Tribunal to take official notice of this. Your Honor, to make the same easier to identify, I submit this as Blume Document No, 1. The document is in Document Book No. 1, pages 1 to 13. It contains first of all a few chapters on the military penal code, which concerns in particular desertion, disobedience, and refusal of obedience, which the Tribunal will find that for all of these offenses in case of war, part I, the death sentence can be passed as well as also other sentences. The second law is the so-called special war decree, which was published at the beginning of the war. It contains sentences which are stricter and concern in particular the subject of undermining the military strength.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, please, I must object at this time to any detailed analysis of law in this case. These are matters which will probably be raised In the closing argument and have no place at this time.

THE TRIBUNAL: I do believe, Dr. Lummert, that we will get into some difficulties if we begin to argue on the law while the witness is on the stand. Now if there is any specific question you desired to put to the witness on the law with which he is personally familiar, that, of course, is entirely in order, but to address an argument of law to the Tribunal in the midst of an examination of a witness might be a little difficult to follow in accordance with the procedure.

Another thing is that it places a rather unusual burden on the interpreters to translate extemperaneously a rather involved legal situation.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I understand this to the effect that the introduction of Document 1, is not objected to, and that only the explanation on this document should take place at a later time?

THE PRESIDENT: Of course there is entirely no objection to the introduction of the document book. On the contrary we recommend the introduction of the book and congratulate you on the speed with which you prepared and submitted it to the Tribunal. He especially want to thank you for the trouble you went to to have it translated on your own motion and through your own energies. The only point we make at this time, Dr. Lummert, is that to present a legal argument while a witness is on the stand is just slightly contrary to the usual procedure in a trial.

DR. LUMMERT: May I hand you Document Book No, I, and I ask the Court to take judicial notice of it.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, and do you wish to introduce it as your exhibit?

DR, LUMMERT: It is only an exhibit for identification only.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, very well. The Secretary-General will note that exhibit.

DR. LUMMERT: I will then take the liberty to discuss the contents of this document after the examination of the Defendant Blume. I now continue with the examination of the Defendant Blume. BY DR. LUMMERT: Streckenbach in Pretsch. I now ask you, what were your personal considerations and feelings when Grupperfuehrer Streckenbach announced this Fuehrer Decree during his speech in Pretsch?

A. I remember very well that already during Streckenbach's speech a whole number of various questions and thoughts and feelings arose. I immediately realized that this was an unusual, even an immense decree, but I presumed at the time that the leadership of the German people and the German Reich had carefully considered this decree and had approved it.

I thought of all the authorities who obviously requested that this decree should be fulfilled, namely, the Fuehrer himself, the Reich Government, the supreme command of the Army, the Reichsfuehrer-SS and the Chief of the Security Police and the SD. At the time it did not even occur to me that all those authorities only had to obey one dictator in this, but for me at the time it was natural that such an important decree had been discussed by all high authorities. Also for me, like for all Germans an order was an ethical conception, and I was convinced that such a law soldiers had to obey unconditionally. the particular importance of the Fuehrer Decree which was law at the time in Germany. For that reason I realized the consequences of not obeying such an order according to the military code and to other codes. I emphasize here that the entire German police since the beginning of the war was considered to be carrying out a special commitment. A special decree had been issued, which my defense counsel has mentioned previously, and the competent regulations of increased severity for the police were also applied for the military forces. civilized people could carry out such an extermination order, and I felt particularly concerned that we who were present at the time all of us were intellectually inclined - had to be given such an order. The execution of such an order seemed impossible to me, although I thought of it that Soviet Russia itself would disregard the usual laws of civilied states neither for their own nationals nor for others. In particular I knew that Soviet Russia had not participated in the Geneva Convention. Added to this was the fact that during my work of many years as Chief of the State Police Offices I had read the interrogations of all people who had returned from Russia, and according to instructions had reported about all that happened; the State Police officers interrogated them about this.

These interrogations confirmed to me that in Soviet Russia no European standards were applied, and that for Europe the Communist problem, was problem No, 1. I know that in Soviet Russia during the last twenty years many millions of people had been killed in order to materialize the ideology of Communism. I also knew that the Jews in Soviet Russia were one of the main supports of the Soviet dictatorship and the intellectual bearers of the idea of Bolshevism. In short, my thoughts and feelings were in a turmoil.

Q. What did you do, owing to these contradictions in your feelings and your thoughts?

A. I looked for a way out. After some consideration I thought I would be able to find this if I was not put in charge of a Hauptkommando, a main kommando in the rear Army territory but rather was put in charge of a small advance kommando, a Vorkommando, with the fighting units. I hoped to be able to remain with the fighting forces and through that restrict my activity and the activity of the subordinate men to combating partisans, whom we expected, and to Security Police assignments, and particularly securing documents of Soviet authorities, in particular of the N.K.W.D., and the study of the general and political situation of the newly occupied territories and the reporting of the findings.

That same day I went to Streckenbach for the reason. I knew him very well because he had been my superior in Berlin. I could fully trust him and I asked him, would he give me a small Vorkommando, an advance kommando, although owning to my rank I could have asked for a larger kommando. I told him as the reason quite openly that I did not want to have anything to do with mass executions and that I hoped as the leader of a Vorkommando to be restricted only to working in security tasks. Streckenbach replied to me that he could fully understand my views and agreed to give me a Vorkommando, Sonderkommando 7a.

Q. Witness, apart from this discussion with Streckenbach, did you get any other instructions about the Russian assignment?

A. Yes, the future leaders for the Einsatzgruppen, for the Einsatz and Sonderkommandos, including myself, the following day or the day after the next, were called to Berlin, to the Prince Albert Palast, the headquarters of the RSHA. There Heydrich made a speech. He took for granted that we knew about the Fuehrer order and based his speech on this and therefore talked about our relation with the Army. He informed us that strict agreements had to be made with the Army chiefs about our assignment and our cooperation and had already been agreed upon and that our tactical orders concerning the advance and so forth, we would receive from the superior Army officers. He also mentioned as Streckenbach had done, that the Fuehrer had ordered that for the expected war in the East no European rules would be applied, but in this fight Germany would have to use the same ruthless methods as Bolshevism had always used in order to achieve its aims. Heydrich was very serious and said that the Security Police in the assignment in the East would have to make a test and prove themselves in their soldierly attitude. In the East, partisan fightings of serious proportions in the roar territory which had been captured, were expected. The rear territory according to the will of the Fuehrer, had to be secured against partisans and their assistants by all means. As was imminent danger Heydrich described at the time, the entirety of the Eastern Jews.

Q. What happened after that speech by Heydrich?

AAfter that we traveled to Pretsch or a locality near Pretsch. We returned, if I remember correctly, to Schmiedeberg. There Heydrich appeared shortly before we left in order to supervise the march of the personnel of the kommandos. namely the speech by Streckenbach and the speech by Heydrich, get any special detailed instructions about the carrying out of the Fuehrer decree? at the time it was left open how it should be carried out in detail. In any case, I myself did not quite know how it would be done. I was moved by the fact that without instructions we were left to our own fate. This moved me almost as much as the actual Fuehrer decree. I could only calm myself a little because I had been given Sonderkommando 7a, and I hoped that because of this I could avoid carrying out the Fuehrer decree because of the immediate connection which I expected with the fighting units. I still want to mention that in Pretsch or Schmiedeberg I heard two other speeches. One, as far as I remember, concerned the Communist World organization, Comintern. The other lecture concerned general measures about the political, economical and military conditions in Soviet Russia, and was as far as I remember given by a younger member of the Ministry of the Exterior. other, from the very beginning, to avoid carrying out security assignments in the East?

A No. As I have already stated, without my knowledge and without my assistance, and without knowing what was concerned, I had been transferred from Berlin to Pretsch. After the fuehrer decree had been announced, owing to the strict discipline in the RSHA and in the entire German police, it was quite impossible, from the very beginning, to ask to be released from participation in the assignment which had been ordered. The written orders by Heydrich existed for all of us.

A special penal code which applied for the police during the war I have already mentioned as well. Any pretense, pretending to be ill or something of that nature, I would not have considered worthy of myself. That never occurred to me. My immediate and almost instinctive reaction was, therefore, only the attempt to avoid myself, and to protect the men under my supervision, from having to carry out this Fuehrer decree and to protect them from a collision.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I would now like to introduce Document Flume No. 4 as evidence. I had the intention, in order to give a complete picture, to ask the witness Blume also about the organization and the personalities in his Sonderkommando 7a, and about a number of other smaller points, but since mostly they are technical details, it probably is not necessary that they all appear in the record. I, therefore, choose to use an affidavit by the Defendant Blume himself about this, and I ask for permission to Introduce it as Blume document No. 4. The affidavit is in Document Bock I, pages 15 to 29. On page 13 there is on index. The first part of the affidavit concerns the personalities in the Sonderkommando 7a, the ranks, the organization, the most important Security Police tasks, the reporting, the medical supplies, and the organization of the group staff of Einsatzgruppe B which was superior to Sonderkommando 7a. with explanations of the channel of command. The third part finally contains a map - that is page 28 of Document Book I - and this map, the record of the march which Sonderkomnando 7a followed in Russia during the time when Defendant Blume was in charge of Sonderkommando 7a. More important cities are mentioned in this map. Also a time plan, a chart for the most important localities is given. I have a few other copies of this, photostatic copies of this sketch, and I ask for permission to give them to the Tribunal in order to make things easier.

BY DR. LUMMERT: Document Blume No. 4, in front of you and whether you know the contents of it?

Q Can you confirm the contents of this affidavit? tells me. berg toward the Best, and where did you go to first? East via Posen, Warsaw, East Prussia, to the Soviet-German demarkation line at the time, and our first point which we were ordered to reach by the Ninth Army was the city of Wilna. I arrived in Wilna with my Sonderkommando with our tracks. We were fully motorized. We arrived there on 30 June 1941 late in the evening.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Lummert, since the witness is now about to relate the events of a certain campaign or itinerary, perhaps we night begin with that immediately after the recess.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, sir, certainly.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

Court No. II-A, Case No. IX.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, yesterday afternoon Dr. Heim, defense counsel for Blobel, objected against Document No-4498B, which is a statement of Rudolf Hoess. The prosecution explained that this statement is an unsworn statement of said Rudolf Hoess and that prosecution has received a certificate verifying the fact that this statement could not be made by Hoess under oath, as he was at that time under indictment and the rules of evidence of Poland do not permit the administering of an oath to such a person. If the Tribunal please, I would like to submit to the Tribunal now this certificate. I however found out that Dr. Heim is not present. Dr. Lummert will be kind enough to hand a copy of this certificate to Dr. Heim.

THE PRESIDENT: The certificate outlines what you have just told the Tribunal?

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: Yes.

THE TRIBUNAL: Very well. It will be admitted.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: May I hand it to you now, Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: Thank you. If Your Honors please, I do not think it necessary that I read this certificate into the record, out if the Tribunal so desires, I certainly shall do so.

THE PRESIDENT: Will it have an exhibit number?

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal desires that I mark it as an exhibit, I will do so. It is a certificate which belongs to an exhibit.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: But I do think it is not necessary.

THE PRESIDENT: Judge Soeight makes this very good suggestion, that you give it the same exhibit number as the exhibit to which it referrs, or, if you wish to add the letter A to that exhibit number.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: I do know, Your Honor, that it is in Document Book III-C on page 17, but as I haven't got the document book with me, I would respectfully suggest if the bench would -

THE PRESIDENT: He would ask the Secretary General to supply that number and see that it is affixed to the certificate which you have presented. It appears that the number is 134, Exhibit 134.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: So Document No-4498C will then be Exhibit 134a.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. LUMMERT (Attorney for the defendant Blume): Your Honor, I am very glad to give Dr. Heim a copy of this affidavit of the witness Hoess. I would merely like to reserve for him the right to raise any kind of objection against this document later.

THE PRESIDENT: That request will be granted in behalf of Dr. Heim.

DR. LUMMERT: May I now continue with the direct examination of the Defendant Blume?

THE PRESIDENT: You may. BY DR. LUMMERT (Attorney for the Defendant Blume): beginning of your advance into Russia and you had testified that you arrived in Wilna on the 30th of June, 1941 late in the evening. May I now ask you what was the activity of your Special Kommando 7-A in Wilna?

Court No. II-A, Case No. IX.

A. Late in the evening when we arrived we put out vehicles on a market square in Wilna. I sent a small detachment immediately to the NKWD building in order to safeguard whatever was in that building. On the following morning, that is to say, the 1st of July, I moved my entire kommando into the NKWD building. Two of my groups searched the building and sorted out and translated the documentary material which was left there. The third group I sent into the city in order to gather information from Lithuanian and Polish leading circles, and in order to establish contact with officers and soldiers of the German army. After I had gathered general information I went to the town commandant and discussed the situation with him; especially, I recommended to him to restrain himself in the setting up of national Lithuanian combat commands since there were strong differences between the Lithuanian and the Polish population. Vilna had always been an object of dispute between the Poles and the Lithuanians. And it was still uncertain what attitude the German leadership would assume towards the Lithuanian ambition of independence. Furthermore, I was thinking that the army command would eventually intend to let me participate with the last detachment of the fighting troops in its advance. This would have conflicted with my intentions about avoiding the execution of the Fuehrer order about the mass executions by a stay in the front line. Therefore, on the same day on which I had spoken with the town commandant I went to the G-2 of the staff of Army Command 9, who was superior to me. The latter showed no understanding for my desire to say immediately with the combat troops. He pointed to the impediments to the troop movements caused by long columns since my special kommando always had 25 to 30 vehicles of various types. Furthermore, he pointed out that the forests were hiding many soviet troops with whom we could not cope, and he refused my request to give me an order to advance with the fighting troops.

After I returned from this conference I made out a teletype to Einsategruppe 7-b -at that time it was still called C -- and in this message I informed them about the fact that I had been prohibited from advancing with the army. I also reported to them that there were armed national Lithuanian partisan bands who had already become active before the German troops came in, and that they had shot, summarily, Communists as well as Jews who has supported these Communists. All this was on the 1st of July. On the next day, the 2nd of July, I heard that a kommando of Einsatzgruppe 9 had also made its appearance in Wilma. At the same time I heard that Minsk had been captured by German troops. In my effort to accomplish my plan of advancing with the combat troops I gave my men orders against the directives of the G-2 to advance in the direction of Minsk on the next morning. On the 2nd of July we immediately began to prepare this advance. I reported the fact of my advance from Wilma toward Minsk to Nebe on the 2nd of July.

Q. Witness, what happened then?

A. Early in the morning of the 3d of July we left Wilna. The road between Wilna and Minsk made a good impression, good European impression, and was not destroyed. Out vehicles kept their prescribed distance because of air attacks. The tempo was set by the slowest truck. We did not take any rest, and therefore we arrived in Minsk on the same day, but very late at night, after it had become dark. The city of Minsk had not been cleaned of snipers. Units of the army gave us a place near the theater, where we awaited the next morning. This, then, was the 4th of July 1941. On this day I immediately occupied the most important building of the Soviet authorities, especially the big house of the Soviets with its two to three hundred rooms.

It was completely undestroyed and contained most of its materials, especially documents and libraries. My three detachments had their hands full of work in order to safeguard this material, and also, to find a scientific institute in the city to safeguard their material, etc.

Q. Were the men of your special kommando 7-a in Minsk exclusively occupied with the safeguarding of material, or did they do anything else?

A. The men not suitable for safeguarding this material were ordered by me to go with the drivers to see that each inefficient equipment was completed, and to replace missing equipment from the military material which was lying around in the vicinity. Thus we received a field kitchen, trailers for out trucks, and tents.

Q. What else is noteworthy about your stay in Minsk?

A. On the 4th of July, in the evening, a part of Special Kommando 7-b also appeared in Minsk. On the 5th of July, early in the morning, I was ordered to report to G-2 of Army Command 9, who received, me very cooley and explained to me that the Chief of Staff wished, to speak with me. After I reported to the Chief of Staff he called me on the carpet because of my independent advance to Minsk. He spoke of lack of discipline and disobedience. I told him in a quiet manner the reasons for my conduct which was against orders. I pointed to the fact that as was well known the Soviets burned their cities when they evacuated them, and that we could only find material then if we would advance with the combat troops. I further pointed out that the soldiers were accustomed to destroy the documents in official buildings when they went through them, and that for this reason we would have to get there immediately with the fighting troops.

Finally, I told him about sucesses in the case of Minsk. During this conversation I managed to gain the sympathy of the Chief of Staff, and his consent, that in the future he would give me orders to advance in time, so that I would get to the important places with the fighting troops. The G-2 was called in, and received his directives accordingly. Furthermore, my Special Kommando 7-a had their hands full with sorting out the material on the 5th and 6th of July in Minsk.

Q. Witness, you are charged with liquidations in Minsk. What do you have to comment on this?

A. On the evening of the 5th of July, to my great surprise Nebe suddenly appeared in Minsk. On the next day his staff followed him, that is, the Staff of Einsatzgruppe B. Nebe already called me on the carpet on the evening of his arrival in Minsk because of my independent action. But I was able to quieten him down by pointing to the success of my conference with the Chief of Staff of the Army Command 9. On the following morning, that is to say, the 6th of July, I received an order from Army Command 9, first to advance from Minsk in the direction of Polosk, which was the next object of the operations of the troops; and second, to advance in the direction of the Witebsk as soon as that city was taken. In that military operation it was a matter of the attack of the Stalin Line which was considered as the last Military fortress before Moscow. I immediately made the necessary preparations for my advance for the next day, that is, the 7th of July. I say Nebe on the afternoon of the 6th of July. I gave him a lengthy report about our findings and information in the house of the Soviets in Minsk. He was very much satisfied by this, out he did tell me very definitely after that, that he wanted to know why my Special Kommando did not attack according to the Fuehrer order so far, and why it had not undertaken executions of Jews.

I tried to excuse my inactivity in this field by giving him practical reasons, for I could not discuss the Fuehrer order itself with Nebe, who was my superior and who demanded the execution of this order. I therefore pointed out to him that measures of my advance kommando would only cause the Jews to flee, and to make them thus join the partisans. Nebe did not see my point of view. He said it was impossible that he would mention the garrison of a kommando in a city in his reports without at the same time reporting about executions of Jews. They expected him, in Berlin, to show activity in this respect, and he would also have to demand that from me.

Also, for temporary actions on the part of my advance kommando reasons would have to be found. He then pointed out that the Jews had set their houses in Minsk on fire when the local combat commander had told them to leave their houses to make them available to White Russians who no longer had homes. Nebe had seen these fires on the evening of his arrival, that is, the night before. This, he said to me, he an excellent reason for a reprisal action. He then asked me who my executive officer was. I answered him that in my special kommando I had formed three detachments. Each of these detachments included men from all branches of the security police. I the refore had not formed a special executive detachment and I did not need such. Nebe now explained to me that he wished, and he ordered, that before I left Minsk a Jewish execution were to take place, namely, as reprisal for the burning of those houses. I told him, therefore, that the officers of two detachments of those three detachments of my special kommando were still young and somewhat immature men who had not even received a military training, and who therefore were not suitable to carry out such an execution. The only officer who was militarily trained was the commanding officer of the third detachment, Obersturmfuehrer Voltis, who personally was a hard soldierly character. Since Nebe clearly realized my basic revulsion against such an execution he left me out of it and told me to get Voltis. This happened. In my presence Nebe gave Voltis the order to proceed with a reprisal action against the Jews on the next morning before leaving Minsk, and to start preparations for that immediately; especially, to set up the execution kommando. He ordered me to convince myself that this order be executed, and to report to him on the next morning that it had been carried out.

After giving these orders he once more told Voltis about the necessity of such executions by pointing to the Fuehrer Order. He then again gave me, as well as Voltis, the basic order for the future to carry out such executions, for even an advance kommando could not exclude itself from such executions. Voltis and I then left Nebe. It was clear to me that I could not get around the order which Nebe directly had given to Voltis that as far as the reprisal actions are concerned only men could be considered, not women and children -- only able bodied men. Outside of that I did not bother for the preparation of this execution, for I was depressed that my hope had come to nothing -namely, that I might not be concerned with execution orders. Furthermore, I felt depressed because Voltis who was my inferior, had been given order directly and I resented it. Voltis carried out the executions ordered by Nebe on the next morning, that is, on the 7th of July. As far as I remember it lasted about one to one and one-half hours. How Voltis chose the men to be executed was, and is, unknown to me. I merely know because I was partly present at the execution that always ten men would be brought there to the execution place at a time with a truck from Minsk. There was a tank ditch. The ten men were put at that ditch and in a military manner were shot by rifles by the execution commando , which included about 40 men. Three men always shot at a victim because a part of the kommando was busy getting the people and blocking off the area. As I said, I was only partly present. No doctor was present because my special kommando did not have a doctor at all. But as far as I was present I convinced myself that the victims were dead. But any way, this was the job of the leader of the commando, Voltis.

The number of victims amounted to about fifty to sixty. I cannot give the exact number. I then told Nebe about the execution of the order as I had been ordered. At the same time I said good-bye to him because on the some day I was to advance in the direction of Polosk. victims in Minsk? kommando. The victims were buried in their things without having had anything taken away from them, that is, they were covered with earth by the men of the kommando. executions there? departure from Minsk, we tried to join the fighting troops directly. How many days we spent on the way towards Polosk I do not exactly remember. At any rate, the roads were partly very bad, and the vehicles had to proceed second gear almost constantly. When we had reached the fighting troops we were about two days in the front lines until the tanks finally passed through the city. I went into the city with my commando immediately, and even before the infantry. Still we arrived too late, for the streets had already been set on fire by the Communist arson units and the NKVD building too, was up in flames.

A (Continued) We were only able to enter for a moment on the first floor. This must have been between the 10th and 12th of July. We only spent one day in Polosk. I had the Ethnic Germans interrogated, whom we found among the Russian prisoners of war and had then asked about general conditions in the Soviet Union. We picked out two interpreters from among these ethnic Germans in Polosk. I did not prepare any executions nor did I carry any out. In order not to yet in a forced situation where I would have to undertake executions I proceeded on the next day in the direction of Vitebsk, which had been captured by the Germans on the 11 July. After my arrival in Vitobsk I wired a report to Nebe about the events in Polosk. In order to obviate his criticism about nonexecutions I emphasized that the city had been completely burned out and that the population was hardly there any more, and that was why I immediately proceeded, but this was somewhat exaggerated. In reality the conditions in Polosk were about the same as those in Minsk, that is to say, a considerable part of the population was, of course, still there, and certainly not all houses had been burned.

Q Witness, when did you arrive in Vitobsk? What general conditions did you find there and did you carry out any executions? commando in Vitobesk. At any rate we spent several days on the road between Polosk and Vitobsk. We probably arrived there about the 15th of July. The general conditions in Vitobsk were already somewhat orderly because the city had been in German hands since the 11th of July. I would have preferred just as I did in Polosk to advance very soon in the direction of Smolensk, but at that time during the advance of the 9th Army between Vitobsk and Smolensk we had been brought to a stop. The Ninth Army had advanced north of the Dnjepr and then waded ahead north of the Dnjepr to the smaller part of the city of Smolensk but could really not get near there, whereas the neighboring army advancing South of the Dnjepr already penetrated into the southern part of the city on the 16th of July.

Even after this, part of the city was still fought over in the following days. Therefore Army Command 9 did not give me permission and an order for the time being to proceed in my advance from Vitobsk. Therefore, in this interval in Vitobsk, I occupied Voltis,who was such an active man, with the forming of a Jewish Council registering and marking the Jews and drafting them for labor service with the army agencies. Furthermore, I kept my men busy with making out SD reports. I gave the order to solve the Jewish question in the white Ruthenian area. The number of Jews in Vitobsk was proportionally quite large. In all the White Ruthenian area about one and a half million Jews were living. We gathered material about the Jewish question with the cooperation of the Mayor of Vitobsk who was installed by us and with other members of the White Ruthenian intelligencia. I went over the entire material and made out a detailed report to Nebe. In this report I pointed out that an execution of Jews by small Einsatz commandos seemed impossible to me of execution. Instead, I suggested that the Jews be collected in ghettos and proposed that they wait there until the end of the war when they would then be re-settled. In this report I again made the attempt, which was not very hopeful, to point to the Fuehrer order in reference to it's impossibility of execution and to try to manage something in that respect. Furthermore, I thought I could find an escuse not to have to undertake executions in Vitobsk. Furthermore, from the situation reports which have become known to me in Nurnberg, I have seen that Nebe used this report of mine in his reports to Berlin.

Q Doesn't the fact that Nebe used your reports contradict his usual strict conduct about executions?

A No, even Nebe would have been glad to be rid of this order. Nevertheless, he continued his pressure on us, the pressure which was applied to him from Berlin.

The use of my report on the part of Nebe was for him either an almost hopeless attempt to achieve a change in the Fuehrer Order or - whatsis more probable - with this report he wanted to excuse the bad execution of the Fuehrer Order up to this date.

Q How did Nebe react towards you as a result of your report? executions. For until his report would have an effect perhaps up on top, a lot of time had to pass by, even considering that such a change might occur, and for this long a time he probably did not dare to remain inactive. At any rate, a short time after sending my report, I received a very severe message from Nebe in which he demanded a detailed report about Vitobsk, and especially about the execution of Jews. I considered it certain that it was just my report which induced him to send me this message, because probably in it he saw a renewed attempt on my part not to have to undertake the executions.

Q What did you do then? lity to evade the execution of this order. I therefore gave Voltis the order to prepare a Jewish action and limited the order exclusively to able-bodied men and I directed that a labor detachment was to be set up and its members were then to be shot. Voltis did not stick very closely to this order, for even before the action which had been ordered and without my knowledge he had a number of Jews shot in the streets in Vitobsk because they had refused to appear at work which had been ordered of them. Voltis in this connection acted on the basis of the order which Nebe had given to him in Minsk. When Voltis reported this execution to me 1 reported to Nebe about Vitobsk by telling him about and announcing the action which I had ordered in order to quiet him down. One or two days later in my presence the announced execution was carried out. As far as I remember about 80 able-bodied men were shot in the same manner as they had been shot in Minsk.

Voltis was the commanding officer of the execution commando. before or after the execution?

A No, this did not occur to me. The Jewish men when they were brought in were shot in their clothing and were then covered with earth by men of the commando. your own inner attitude which you had when you saw that execution in Vitobsk? ing and executing this execution, whereas I merely had to report to Nebe that the execution had been carried out. But in Vitobsk the case was different. Here I was myself under the immediate compulsion of an order on the part of Nebe, and this was because of this radio message. I myself gave Voltis that order to prepare and carry out this execution and differently from Minsk I attended the entire execution which lasted about two hours. By my presence I wanted to show the men of my execution commando that I would not ask of then any more than I would ask of myself. If I am now asked about my inner attitude which I then hold, I can only say that it was absolutely split. On the other hand there was the strict order of my superior about carrying out the Fuehrer Order and as a soldier I had to obey. On the other hand I considered the execution of this order cruel and humanly impossible. My very presence at this execution convinced me of this in a final manner. I still know that I wanted to make the situation easier for my men who were certainly moved by the same feelings. When ten men were shot there was always a pause until the next had been brought in. During these pauses I let my men sit down and rest and I joined them. I still know that I said exactly about the following words to them at that time: "As such it is no job for German men and soldiers to shoot defenseless people but the Fuehrer has ordered these shootings because he is convinced that these men otherwise would shoot at us as partisans or would shoot at our comrades and our women and children were also to be protected if we undertake this executions.

This we would have to remember when we carried out this order." Furthermore, I tried by talking about neutral subjects to make the difficult spiritual situation easier and to overcome it. As for myself personally I did not know any way out of this repulsive situation. Had I refused to carry out the order of Nebe it was clear that I would be put before a Court Martial and would be sentenced to death because of disobedience since it was a specific Fuehrer order. A false report did not occur to me. I would have considered it unworthy of myself. Apart from this my personal altitude about giving a false report, it would- have been discovered very soon and it would have brought the same results as an open refusal to obey, namely, my sentence to death. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Well, witness, you gave us two explanations there. Now on which one do you depend. You said first that you did not contemplate a false report because that was unworthy of you and clashed with your principles, then you say you did not give a false report because they would have discovered it anyway and then you would still be in the same position as you were before. How, these two do not coincide. Which one do you give us as the real reason? which one of those two thoughts dominated at the time, but they were both very close and both faced me barring a way out.

Q But those two reasons can't be reconciled. It is like a person who must decide whether to steal a hundred dollars or not and this is the conflict in his mind: If I steal this money I am being dishonest and I would not be true to myself. It is not correct, it is not moral, that is one reason, and then for the second reason I may get caught and they might send me to jail and if we take the second reason that completely eliminates the first reason because he doesn't consider it upon principle or morality at all.

Q I would assume that already the feeling that a false: report was unworthy of me induced me not to take such a way out. BY DR. LUMMERT: the execution in Vitobsk I ask you to continue. BY THE PRESIDENT: Pardon me, Judge Dixon seems to recall that the witness stated he sent a false report on the fire in Polosk. Did you send a false report on the fire in that town? not a false report. I think my soldierly conscience was not violated very seriously here if I changed the fact that the city was burned and the population had left and colored it in such a form that in it I found an escuse for my conduct.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. LUMMERT: Hay I say something? As far as I remember the witness said that the report was somewhat exaggerated. shocking. When I came back to my office I was seized by stomach cramps and I had to vomit. I , therefore, renewed my earnest decision to avoid a further such situation with all possible means. In this I did succeed with my being recalled which happened about one month later. Vitobsk is the first and last case of an execution which was ordered by me and carried out. It probably took place on the 19th of 20th of July 1941. The total number of men shot in Vitobsk by my special commando amounted to about 100, as far as I recollect. This includes the 20 which were shot by Voltis who had refused to appear for work and the 80 who were shot during the execution about one or two days later.

your special commando 7a then? Commando 9 had arrived in Vitobsk. At the same time I received the news from Army Command 9 that the advance through the railroad station area of Smolensk north of the Dnjepr was close at hand. Therefore, I left Vitobask and with my special commando I was in the artillery field position of the troops for several days. Then with the head of the company we advanced into the northern part of Smolensk where we immediately started to interrogate prisoners as soon as the fighting had stopped. I remained in Smolensk only one dry . Smolensk was then under heavy artillery bombardment, and since the public buildings were located in the southern pert of the city and therefore belonged to the area, of Special Commando 7b I was not competent there. I, therefore, limited myself to report to Nebe by radio that I had only undertaken temporary security measures. Later I heard that on the same day men of the advance commando Moscow were already in Smolensk. I now received from Army Commando 9 a mission for partisan counter-intelligence for the area Northwest of Smolensk and I stationed my commandos at a large lake, at Lake Loswitha, at a former estate. On order of the Army Commando 9. a short time later, I had to send a sub-commando to Welish where strong partisan units had set themselves up in the vicinity. I gave this independent mission of gathering intelligence about partisans to Hauptsturmfuehrer Voltis, the only trained officer of my commando.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I think this would be an excellent time to recess.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until 1:45.

(The Tribunal adjourned for the noon recess).

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. LUMMERT (Attorney for the Defendant Blobel): Your Honor, I would like to continue with my examination of the Defendant Blume. Sonderkommando 7-a advanced and went to Loswitha Lake, which the Tribunal can firm in the map I gave them as being northwest of Smolensk. The witness reported that from the Loswitha Lake he met Hauptsturmfuehrer Foltis and gave him the job of doing partisan reconnaisance with a part of the Sonderkommando at Welisch. Welisch is north east of the lake. BY DR. LUMMERT (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BLOBEL): Lake. for about ten days and then was given the job of doing band reconnaisance in the large wooded territories north east of Smolensk. The AOK-9 asked me to move there. I remember the localities Sloboda and Baklanowa, because the kommando was also stationed there close to beautiful lakes and I still have photographs of these, which I took during one of these transfers of the Kommando, when I once mere got in closer contact with Foltis after carrying out the reconnaisance mission in Welisch. Foltis reported to me that before he left he had carried out an anti-Jewish action and had dot about 50 to 60 able bodied men in Welisch. This was not to my like and I had not asked Foltis to do anything of the kind. My order, as well as the instructions of the AOK-9 merely referred to partisan reconnaisance, but Foltis by his execution, in Welisch-acted following the order which Nebe expressly had given to him in Minsk, and apart from that of course of the basis of the Fuehrer Order.

Q Did you report about the executions is Welisch? Did you report

Q What was the population of Smolensk when you stopped there?

AAbout the 20th. Smolensk was lost on the 16th, the southern part of the city, but the northern part of the city belonging to the competency of my army was not reached immediately. North of the Dnjepr River the Germans only arrived a few days later, and arrived at the outskirts of the city. population? time following that. tarried long enough to care for the civilian population? north of these. Q Just a moment, perhaps I can clarify this. You told us of how you and your command interested yourselves in the affairs of the civilian population.

Q Yes. Now, I want to know which civilian population this was.

A Those were the farmers in the country around there. For example, after they had heard about our presence and it was talked about, Russian farmers traveled, or rather rode on horseback all day in order to ask us for some decision, for example, for differences about the distribution of cattle of the individual collective farms.

Q How long were you there?

Q How many were there in your command?

A Not days. I remember one occasion when I was told that a farmer rode all day, ever since early in the morning, in order to be present in the afternoon at our troop which had an interpreter and an officer, he wanted to be there to get a decision.

Q And what was the decision which you rendered? early in the morning, and he came to you for a decision. Now, you remember all the details, how far he travelled and what time he got up in the morning. Certainly you would remember what the decision was. collected by some men.

Q By what man, by some Germans? land it be required that this ox be given to that group of partisans, and I made an investigation about this and we found that they weren't partisans at all who wanted to have this ox. Because of its good quality they particularly keen on having this particular animal. They were men of another collective farm further away who wanted to utilize the situation in order to be able to get a really good ox. They were, of course, forced to return the ox, and apart from that I left them, the persons concerned, to fight it out between them.

to Nebe? carry out any kind of anti-Jewish action? What other activity did Sonderkommando 7-a carry out? in the country, did not order or carry out any Anti-Jewish Action. Apart from the band reconnaissance, I only did what which I had always done in my life. That is, I did administrative work. The agriculture was set going again. I had asked at the AOK 9 that the local inhabitants be asked by leaflets which were thrown down, by planes to carry out the harvest. The cattle running around loose in the woods was distributed among the Kolchosen.

The harvest work was organized and small factories started to work. Education and schooling, religious life, medical care of the population, family life, etc., was reported on. Apart from that, within a short time, as the only authority in the whole district, the population, even asked us to deal with their private differences, particularly concerning the distribution of cattle. An officer with an interpreter for that purpose had to be at their disposal every day. asked my men to behave in the most correct manner. The inhabitants on the Loswitha Lake, for example, brought me all kinds of fowl, etc., and did not want to be paid for it and emphasized that it was a point of honor to them to be able to give me such presents. They also asked me to permit them to give me the harvest reef, and this happened.

During these weeks occasional individual shootings occurred. These were only armed partisans and Communist agents who had asked the farmers to destroy the stores of the harvest. In all, during the approximately four weeks for the entire Sonderkommando 7a at the most twenty partisans and saboteurs were shot, and the shooting, apart from actual fighting, was only done after detailed interrogation and examination of the subject matter. These shootings, I considered them end still consider them to me to be fully justified. Apart from that the interrogations often had the result that the persons concerned, were released because either it was proved that they were innocent or it was proved that the evidence against them was not sufficient. the town of Smolensk, until I was transferred in the middle of August. In the previous weeks, that is from Wilna to Smolensk, no such shootings occurred because at that time we had 'not been assigned to fight against partisans. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q What is the population of Smolensk; what was it at that time?

had been taken by some Russians, is that right? to come to you for a decision.

A Oh, I only understand now. The farmer did, yes.

Q Yes. Now, you dropped everything, forgot all about the war, and started out to find this ox, is that right?

Q All right. Now, did you find the ox?

Q There did you find the ox? this pretext, end we made investigations about this.

Q And did you find the people who had taken the ox?

Q And were they Russians or not?

Q They were Russians?

Q And they had in effect stolen this ox?

Q Yes, and what did you do to the Russians?

A I already said, I left them to fight it out. I left the two groups to fight it out.

Q Well then, you didn't render any decision?

Q But you left it between them to fight it out, you say?

A Well, I didn't have a prison. What could I have done with the people?

Q Then you didn't render any decision?

Q All right, what else did you do for the civilian population? You told us that you helped the civilian population. This is one kind of case you told us about, about finding an ox, and then you left it to them to fight it out. Now, what else did you do for the civilian population? could survive the winter. Two things were necessary for this, a house and something to eat.

Q Well, they had a house; they had their house.

A Partly. Some houses had been destroyed owing to the war.

AAnd these people do not act without orders. It was like this. If a Russian lost his house, he did riot have the courage to go into another house which had been vacated by people who-let us say - had fled.

These men had to try to get a decision from some authority to permit them to move into these houses. These people came to us. Another casehouses which had. been abandoned?

A Yes. They were not satisfied until they had this decision in writing.

Q Yes. You would make up the decision in writing?

Q You were authorized to do that?

Q All right. And you were there ten days? and oxen?

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

THE WITNESS: However, on the Loswitha Lake in particular, if I may add this, I had also shootings carried out. There was a troop of men who had come from the Russian side, the East side, and had been sent to ask the farmers not to bring in the harvest and that the harvest be destroyed in order to make it difficult for the troop to feed themselves. In this case, after a detailed examination by experts, When the facts had been established, these three men whom we had seized I had shot.

THE PRESIDENT: Was this also during this ten days?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: So that you didn't devote all your time to making decisions for the population; you also continued your regular job?

THE WITNESS: Of course, your Honor, I said that before.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, proceed.

In these two places did you carry out the same activity? conditions were such that it was not possible. imately after your leaving Smolensk your Sonderkommando 7a altogether at the most had about 20 partisans and saboteurs shot, and you then said that in the previous weeks, namely between Wilna and Smolensk, no such shootings occurred, because at the time you had not been assigned to do partisan combatting. May I now ask on one occasion during these five weeks were there any shootings?

A Yes, there was a spy. It was concerning one we found in Witebsk.

Q At the time was there a detailed interrogation before the shooting?

Q And, the spy was found guilty? stay in Russia? commando in Baklanowa northeast of Smolensk. There the activity of the partisans could have been fortified by fully armed Cosack units who filtered through the front line and they had increased to such an extent that we could not move any more, so that with a few telephone operators of the Army we had to settle down in one locality. The situation in the middle of August had the result that the ALK/9 ordered my kommando back to Welisch where strong partisan groups as well existed? but where regular Army units were at our disposal to fight them. Almost simultaneously I got a very urgent radio message with the order to return to Berlin immediately when my successor came. My successor was Sturmbannfuehrer Steimle according to this radio message. That same day I radioed Nebe and asked him even before my successor arrived to be allowed to leave, because the reasons for the urgent recall were not obvious to me, and I Add not want to start a new task, namely the task in Welisch. Nebe wired that he agreed to this and appointed as my deputy Obversturmfuehrer Foltis whom we knew from Minsk and who was the senior in rank and also a well-trained officer, and therefore was the only one suitable for this. where the road to Smolensk and Welisch divides. From there the kommando and Foltis continued to Welisch and I traveled to Smolensk with my driver. beautiful lake during those four weeks approximately after leabing Witebask until my recall, I consciously used in order to let myself and people get over the unworthy impression of the shootings in Minsk and Witebask. I felt exactly that the members of my kommando would be grateful 31 Oct 1947_A_MSD_16_3_Hoxsie (Juelich) to me for this, and also that no executions would he carried out.

They were particularly grateful for this. We started every day with sports. In the evenings I had songs sung at the campfire. I talked with him about the complex of questions, shootings and morale effects on the men of the execution kommandos. He agreed with my view but he mentioned that Nebe was already dissatisfied with me because of staying close to the beautiful lakes and was ironical about it. Soon after that I was recalled.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment. Doctor. BY THE PRESIDENT: the mission, what did you do to ease their minds and their spirits. Q There was nothing else that you did?

A No. On the whole I merely tried to establish a good spirit of comradeship in order to avoid any other differences. BY DR. LUMMERT: Welisch and Smolensk you separated from your Sonderkommando 7a and you yourself traveled on to Smolensk with your driver. What did you do there and where did you go to after you got to Smolensk?

A In Smolensk I reported to Nebe that I was leaving. He treated me in a reserved manner without stating anything about the reasons of my recall. I remained in Smolensk overnight and was mostly together with Regierungsrat Ehlers whom I know very well, who, as far as I remember, was the Chief of Department IV in the staff of Nebe, and he told me that he did not like Nebe at all. He asked me to mention in Berlin that Nebe made fantastic reports of imagination, adding zeros to the numbers of executions, etc. He, Ehlers, had disagreed very strongly with Nebe about this. The following day I left Smolensk and went to Witebask. I 31 Oct 1947_A_MSD_16_5_Hoxsie (Juelich) stayed there overnight.

The following day I traveled towards Wilna. The distance to Wilna I covered in two days, and from there I traveled to Kowno. There we had to repair my car, and on the second day of our stay we travelled on to Koenigsberg. I stayed there overnight for the last time before going to Berlin, and thus reached Berlin on the 9th day after my departure from Baklanowa. This was approximately on 25 or 26 August. Security Serbice in the East? fuehrer Streckenbach. He did not tell me in a very clear manner why I had been recalled so suddenly.

31 Oct 1947_A_MSD_17_1_Biolsi (Juelich) He first talked a great deal about work but then indicated that Nebe had not been satisfied with me. I told him about my work in Russia, and, most of all, talked with great concern about the disadvantageous effect of this shooting order, and about the moral results which the executions had caused among the men in the kommandos. I also reported to him about the things Sturmbannfuehrer Ehlers had told me about the untruthfulness and incorrectness of Nebe's reports. Streckenbach did not say much, but seemed very depressed. In Berlin I took up again my work as personal referent in Office I of the RSHA. which the prosecution charges you and Sonderkommando 7-a. On the other hand, you sometimes did not mention executions with which the Prosecution has charged you. I now ask you... Can you assure us expressly that concerning the executions by your Sonderkommando 7-a, you have said the full truth, and did not leave anything out?

A Yes. On oath I assure you that during my time with my Sonderkommando 7-a I did not command any executions apart from those I mentioned.

DR. LUMMERT: address a few questions to you which concern documents which the prosecution has used as evidence, not numbered, the socalled Situation Reports. Before I do this I would like to introduce two documents and evidence. They are Documents 5 and 6. I would like to give some explanations about these documents. The Prosecution has charged thedefendant Blume according to a number of Situation Reports numbered USSR, of the Chief of the Security Police and SD, and has introduced those documents. It is difficult to get an impression, and you can only get a survey if all the situation reports of that time are used and lo ked at; and concerning the defendant Blume the Situation Reports from the end of June until the beginning of September 1941, that is, the Situation Reports Nos. 8 31 Oct 1947_A_MSD_17_2_Biolsi (Juelich) to 73 - at least 20 of them have been used as exhibits by the Prosecution against various defendants here.

The other 40 reports I offered as exhibits myself. A small technical difficulty had to be overcome here, because those Situation Reports which the Prosecution did not introduce have only come to the Defense in one copy to look at, in Room 219 of the Palace of Justice. For that reason, in order to simplify matters, in Document Blume No. 5, I give excerpts of these more than 40 Situation Reports. All these parts which might be of importance in judging the Sonderkommando and its leader at the time, the defendant Blume, might be of importance here. When discussing the matter with Mr. Ferencz I assured myself that the Prosecution has no objections against this. Of course, we agree on it that when introducing the Document Blume No. 5, the Situation Reports mentioned in there be used in their full extent, and for that reason that every party concerned may refer to any part of the Situation Reports, not only to those parts and excerpts which I have mentioned as excerpts in the Document Blume No. 5.

I now ask the Tribunal to look at Document Blume No. 5 in the manner as I have offered it, and to accept it. The document is in Document Book I, pages 30 to 60.

The next Document, Blume No. 6, is the one of real interest. In it all the Situation Reports Nos. 8 to 73,-- everything is complied with in a clear manner which, on the one hand, the Prosecution and on the other hand the Defense - wants to prove concerning the defendant Blume. I ask the Tribunal to note the notes on page 61 of Document Book I. It will not be necessary, I presume, that I read these preliminary remarks into the record. It is particularly important to mention No. 4 of the preliminary remarks. This preliminary remark says that those parts of the reports of events which the Prosecution quoted as incriminating evidence against defendant Blume, in the Document Blume No. 6, are indicated with a blue line, and are numbered, 31 Oct 1947_A_MSD_17_3_Biolsi (Juelich) in blue, 0 to 6. The evidence of the Prosecution concerning these points is indicated with red figures, 1 to 6. I now ask the Tribunal to accept, Document Blume No. 6. It is in Document Book I, pages 61 to 86.

Q (By Dr. Lummert) Witness, I now come to my next question. The Prosecution has put it to you, that Sonde kommando 7-a killed Jewish and Communist party functionaries on 3 July in Vilna. This is Document No. No-4537, Exhibit 116, mentioned by the Prosecution in the English record pages 154 to 155, in the German page 160. The Quotation mentioned can be found by the Tribunal in the Document Blume No. 6 on page 3 at the bottom, Document Book page 63. It is indicated with a blue figure "1". Book in front of you?

Q Witness, what can you state about this charge? Minsk. My Sonderkommando 7-a could have carried out these shootings only on 1 or 2 July, but I can only testify again under oath that I did not order or carry out any such shootings in Vilna at the time. Only two explanations can be made to this report: Either there is a mixup with a report of Einsatzgruppe 9 which was in Vilna at the time -- the mixup may have happened through Nebe, who was in Berlin when the Situation Report can be explained in the following manner, and I think it is more probable: his superior, Heydrich, the Chief of the RSHA, and tried very hard to follow all his orders and to comply with them. For that reason he made these reports to Heydrich himself, and altered the reports of the subkommandos insofar as he thought it necessary in order to make a good impression in Berlin. Regierungsrat Ehlers told me about this. When I 31 Oct 1947_A_MSD_17_4_Biolsi (Juelich) returned to Germany in the middle of August via Smolensk, as I have already stated, at the time I had reported to Nebe from Vilna that Lithuanian national units already before the arrival of the German troops had shot Communists and Jews with Communist views.

Nebe probably wanted to report something positive about Vilna concerning executions by Sonderkommando 7-a, and for that reason simply said that my kommando had carried out the shootings in Lithuania --shootings of Communists and Jewish Communist functionaries. This was all imaginary. In any case, such an exception of party functionaries in Vilna I would certainly remember. They would have been the first functionaries of that kind whom we came across. We would have indicated them in detail, and I would have made a report about it. All this did not happen. Apart from that Vilna was a large city which was not destroyed. It had normal life so that shooting of people and getting rid of corpses would have been a difficult problem, the solution of which I certainly would still remember. I can only repeat, and certify again, that I and my Sonderkommando 7-a did not carry out any such shootings in Vilna.

Tribunal the figures in red, figure No. 1 in document Book Blume No. 6 on page 3, notes 3 and 5, document pages 62, 63 and 65. On page 62, it says:

"That attempts of anti-communists and anti-Jewish circles to clear themselves had been intensified." intensifying? shootings which the Lithuanians had carried out already before the arrival of the Germans, also about other police measures taken by us. The expression "intensify" is a typical Nebe expression.

Q May I return to document book No. 6, on page 63, the points indicated in I in red show that Einsatz Commando 9 was already in Vilna at the time and that Sonderkommando 7 a became free owing to the arrival of Einsatz Commando 9 in Minsk. Finally page 65 shows that the Einsatz Commando 9 already on the 29 of June moved on to Vilna, that is at the end of page 65. Einsatz Commando 9 at the latest must have arrived on the 30 of June or 31 July, that is about the same time when Sonderkommando 7a arrived. Therefore, one could only draw the conclusion that Einsatz Kommando 9 carried out executions of communists for this area in so far as Nebe has invented them. I now refer to document No. 2937, Exhibit 57 of the Prosecution, as mentioned in the English record on page 155 to 157 and in the German record on page 160-162. The Tribunal will find the quotation concerning the document Blume No. 6 on page 9, document No. page 69. It is indicated with a blue "two". Since the quotation concerns two different points I have noted 2a and 2b.

I first deal with point 2b because this point still concerns Vilna and I quote from the bottom of page 69:

"In Vilna the Einsatz Commando there liquidated 321 Jews up to the 8th of July." Witness, what do you say to this charge of the Prosecution? kommando 7a had nothing to do with these 321 shootings. I had left on the 3rd of July very early in the morning. I left Vilna on the 8th of July. I was already on my way between Minsk and Polosk. However, during those days and already since the end of June or since the first of July the Einsatz kommando 9 bad been in Vilna as the local Einsatz Commando there. This execution can, therefore, only have been carried out by Einsatz Commando 9. Tribunal's attention to the red figure "2b" in document Book Blume No. 6, on the pages 262-263-264-265-266-267 and also 71, 73, and 77. This shows that from the end of June until the end of July Einsatz Commando 9 was the local Einsatz Commando in Vilna. The case is so obvious that I believe the record will not have to contain any further details on this. I now come to point 2a and ask the Tribunal to open page 9 in document book Blume No. 6 again, that is document book 69.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Lummert, before we enter into this other discussion which I presume might take up some time I think it might be well to announce the recess. morning at nine-thirty o'clock.

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the courtroom will please find their seats.

Military Tribunal II is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: For the information of all concerned, this Tribunal which has heretofore been known as Military Tribunal II-A is now Military Tribunal II, this designation, resulting from General Order No. 100, dated 12 September, 1947. The original Tribunal II having yesterday completed Case No. 4 and being dissolved, this heretofore Military Tribunal II-A will be and is now Military Tribunal II. All records and all reports will now carry the designation Military Tribunal II. You may proceed.

DIRECT EXAMINATION - (Continued)

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, last Friday I had asked the Witness Blume about his education and his professional training and about his professional career in addition, and after that I asked him about the activities during the seven weeks of his assignment in the East. At the end of this session on Friday I had arrived at a number of questions in accordance with the situation reports which the prosecution used as evidence material against the Defendant Blume.

May I make a short remark here? The interpreter interpreted the word "Ereignismeldung" with "situation report", whereas it should have been "operation report". This is what I would like to say. In my opinion, it is the only correct translation. It should report events.

The translation which is used in the document books themselves "operational situation report" is not quite correct. There is a mix-up between activity, "Tatigkeit zum Lagebericht" which is activity, and situation reports, which also are contained in some reports. These activity and situation reports were issued monthly, but the reports of events were issued daily. I would suggest that the word, "Ereignismeldung" or the term "Ereignismeldung" should be translated "reports of events".

On Friday I had arrived at Count II-A of the indictment. I would ask the Tribunal to look at Page 9 of Blume document, No. 6, which is in Document Book I, page 69. If the Tribunal will be so kind as to read a few lines which indicated in blue, II-A, then I will not read this into the record. This particular sentence is on Page 69 of Blume Document Book I, It is marked in blue II-A. It is a report of events of 13 July, and the prosecution has charged the Defendant Blume with having participated in the shooting of 1050 Jews in Minsk.

THE PRESIDENT: What do you attempt to establish by this explanation of II-A?

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I intend to put a question to the Defendant Blume immediately in connection with this II-A, and I only want to explain this. I want to give a preliminary explanation. The charge of the prosecution is to the effect that the Defendant Blume had taken part in this shooting of 1050 Jews in Minsk, as well as in other daily executions. These executees had been taken from a civilian internment camp, which the Einsatzgruppe, so it says in this report, interrogated, together with the regular police. BY DR. LUMMERT:

Q Witness, what have you to say to this? by saying that Nebe talked to me on the 6th of July, in the afternoon, and that until that day I had never executed Jews, and that he gave the direct order to Obersturmfuehrer Foltes to carry out an execution the next morning as a retaliation measure against the burning of houses by Jews, and that he ordered me to report to him the carrying out of the execution.

It is not necessary that I repeat my previous testimony to that effect. In any case I certify and I confirm that I had nothing to do with this civilian internment camp and with other executions, that, as I say, I had nothing to do with them. On the 7th of July, after this execution, I proceeded from Minsk in the direction of Polosk. which are in Blume Document No. 6 on Pages 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, and 72 of the document book. I particularly want to draw the Tribunal's attention to the following points. On the bottom of Page 4, it is 64, Nebe reports about his arrival in Minsk on the 5th of July. On Page 66 in the center it shows that the staff of Einsatzgruppe B, which was at that time still called "C", had been in Minsk from the 6th of July. The other reports of events of the following pages show that the Einsatzgruppe B remained in Minsk. The reports of events of the 13th of July which were quoted and cited by the Prosecution on Page 69, blue II-A, speak expressly of the Einsatzgruppe. The Special Kommando 7-A, according to the wording of this report, is not concerned. Finally the execution, which was carried out by Foltes on the order of Nebe, is also mentioned. In the preceding report of the 12th of July, the sentences I mean are red II-A on Page 68. On Page 68 the burning of houses is mentioned, and it says there, I quote, "a number of Jews were liquidated". According to the last reports of the Einsatzgruppe B, wooden houses in the western part of Minsk were set afire. It is at the bottom of Page 68 until the top of Page 69. As the Defendant Blume left Minsk after the execution, in which, as he says himself, 50 to 60 people were shot, he has nothing to do with the further executions which took place.

These executions were ordered by the Staff of Einsatzgruppe B, and Einsatzgruppe B made use of the Secret Police for the carrying out of the executions.

ed there a number of weeks. It also took over the carrying out of executions in Minsk. I shall come hack to this Blue 5b later on. This point also concerns the town of Minsk. The points 2a and 5b belong together. 117, which was mentioned by the prosecution. It is in the Bullish Book on page 175, in the German Book on page 162. The sentences that are concerned here are in Blume Document No. 6, page 13. This is no. 78. It is marked blue and it is marked 3. There it says that 27 Jews who had not appeared nor turned up for work were shot in the streets of Witebsk in order to deter other people, and than an extensive execution would be carried out. It is on page 78, Mr. President.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you.

Q. Witness, can you comment on this?

A. In my former testimony I have already declared that I ordered an execution at Witebsk by order of Nebe and I also gave details about this; especially, that I ordered Foltes to carry out the execution and that before the execution ever took place, he had, without my knowledge, shot a number of Jews in the streets of Witebsk, because they had not turned up for work. This operation on the part of Foltes is meant in this report when it says here that 27 Jews were shot who had not reported for work.

DR. LUMMERT: I would like to draw the attention of the Tribunal to the fact that the executions which were ordered by the Defendant Blume in Witebsk on the higher order of Nebe are not contained in the reports of events. Only the execution of the 27 Jews is mentioned, which Foltes carried out independently.

I now come to Document NO-2949. It is Exhibit No. 118. It is cited by the prosecution in the English Book, page 157, in the German, page 162. The quotation I am referring to is in Blume Document No. 6 on page 19. It is Document 79. It is marked in blue 4. There are thirty names of localities and villages, and it is said that executions were carried out in these villages.

Q. Witness, may I ask you, have you the Quotation here in front of you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you participate in executions in these mentioned villages or localities?

A. I did not take part in any executions in any of the mentioned localities, with the exception of Witebsk. I have already given testimony referring to this.

Q. At the end of this page 79, it says that Einsatzgruppe D until the 31st of July, 1941, had carried out liquidations of 11,084 people. That is at the bottom of page 79. Witness, what have you to say as to the participation of Sonderkommando 7a and your own participation in the execution of this number of people?

A. The execution carried out by Foltes on orders of Nebe in Minsk concerns 50 to 60 persons; in Witebsk Foltes had these 27 people shot who had not reported for work. The execution ordered by myself on higher orders by Nebe concerned 80 people, about 80 people. I have already said this. If we add these numbers, there about 160. If I add a number of people, a few others which were shot in individual cases, as determined partisans or for sabotage acts, we arrive at the number for the Sonderkommando 7a, that is from July 1941, of about 156 to 170 executed people and I only participated myself in about half of these.

DR. LUMMERT: AS for this point Blue 4, I would like the Tribunal to note that in former reports of events, I have marked red 4 those villages which have been mentioned before these. This red 4 concerns only villages which were not on the record of Sonderkommando 7a. A part of these 30 villages do not appear in former reports of events.

I now come to Document NO-3847, Exhibit No. 58, in Prosecution Document Book, of the English, 157 to 158; in the German book -- I beg your pardon, in the German transcript 163.

This is the report of events of 29 of August. The Quotation is Blume Document No. 6. It is on page 22. It is Document 82. It is marked 5a and 5b, blue. I start with 5b. There it says that in Minsk another 650 people were liquidated in the course of the combine-out action in the civilian prisoners camp.

A. Witness, what can you comment on this?

A. I had nothing to do with this execution. I left Minsk on the 7th of July. This report is dated the 29th of August.

DR. LUMMERT: I think I only have to mention a few more details here. I refer to Red numbers 5b, Document Blume No. 6, page 73, 77, 80, 83 and 84 of the Document Book. Furthermore, I refer to the testimony of the witness and what I said myself concerning this point 2a which also concerns the town of Minsk. I have already mentioned that Einsatzkommando 8 arrived in Minsk in the middle of July and remained there for a number of weeks, as the red numbers indicate, the red numbers 5b, at least, to the end of August, that also in Witebsk the executions of the Jewish intelligentsia were continued.

Q. Witness, what have you to say to this?

A. I have already given testimony as to the executions of Special Kommando 7a in Witebsk. It was the only execution which was ordered by myself on order of Nebe. It took place on the 19th or 20th of July. At the same time I moved and left Witebsk and proceeded in the direction of Smolensk. I had nothing to do with the further executions in Witebsk.

Q. I may refer again to Red Numbers 5a on page 22 and 24 of Blume Document No. 6. It is on page 82 and 84 of the Document Book. They show quite clearly that at that time the Einsatzkommando 9 was stationed in Witebsk. Sonderkommando 7a, however, had left Witebsk five or six weeks before. Finally, I come to Document 2844, which is Exhibit No. 61. It is cited by the prosecution in the English records, page 159 and in German 164.

The quotation I refer to is in Blume Document No. 6 on pages 24 and 25, document book 84 and 85. It is marked Blume 6. Here the total figures are mentioned for Einsatzgruppe D from 20 August 1941, the total executions, that is. The Vorkommando 7a has a figure of 996. Witness, what is your explanation of this figure?

A. For the period until the end of July 1941, I estimate the number of executions carried out by Sonderkommando 7a, according to my best knowledge, at from 156 or 170, as I have already said.

Q. 156 up to 165 --- to 170?

A. If I add for the first event of August until I left Baklanova and went back to Germany, if I add, as I say 10 to 15 people which were executed as determined partisans or arrested saboteurs, and, if furthermore, I include the shooting of 50 to 60 people which Foltes carried out without my knowledge in the first part of August in Welisch, I arrive at a figure of about 230 to 240 people. There are no more. The number 996 I can only explain by the fact that Nebe intentionally gave a wrong and excessive figure, because he did not dare to report that low number to the office in Berlin. I refer to what I have already said about the incorrect way of reporting on the part of Nebe.

DR. LUMMERT: I would like to draw the Tribunal's attention to the fact that the Special Kommando 7a in this report for the first and only time has been called Vorkommando, that is Advance Kommando 7a, or Van Kommando. The figure 996, apparently, even was too low for Nebe and he wanted to invent an execution and he called therefore the Sonderkommando 7a, he called that a Vorkaommando, an advance Kommando. He did the same, as a matter of fact, concerning the Special Kommando 7b. the fact, although it is not a very important point, that the figure 996 covers the period until the 20th of August. Of course, while the Defendant Blume had already given up the command of the Sonderkommando 7a on the 16th or 17th ofAugust and had already left. He had turned it over to Foltes; as the witness has already said, Foltes was very active , and very ruthless, and very brutal; and it is very possible that after the Defendant Blume had been transferred, he added to the figures of executions.

"In Grodno and Lida, first of all, during the first days only 96 Jews were executed. I gave orders that considerable intensification was to take place there. The activity of all kommandos developed in a satisfactory manner. Above all , liquidations were brought into smooth running order and are being carried out daily at an increased rate. Anyway, the carrying out of the necessary liquidations is guaranteed under any circumstances. " Here we find the favorite word of Nebe, which is "intensification" and he says that in the carrying out of the necessary liquidations, he can guarantee it under any circumstances.

This corresponds to the fact that a few days before this report he forced an execution in Minsk, which Foltes carried out according to the order and which furthermore corresponds to the fact that a few days after the report of the 13th of July, this teletype message to the Defendant Blume forced this execution at Witebsk, which the Defendant Blume has already mentioned.

I now ask the Tribunal to go to the next-to-the-last page. It is page 72 of the Document Book below the center of the page, and it says in the report of the 23rd of July, Iquote: "The town Polosk had been systematically set on fire; all Party and administration buildings are completely destroyed; hardly any population is left. The Einsatzkommando therefore proceeded to Witebsk." That is the end of my quotation. one day in Polosk and left for Witebsk immediately, in order not to be put in the position of having to carry out an execution in Polosk, and that he signed a corresponding report to Nebe from Witebsk, which was slightly exaggerated. The Tribunal will remember that the witness stated that he believed he could justify this small exaggeration and that he could reconcile it completely with his soldier's attitude.

This report of events of the 23rd of July, which I have here is mirrored in the report of the Defendant Blume. again. That is page 74 of the Document Book. There it says that it quotes the same report of the 23rd of July. It is about the center of the page. That is 74. I quote; "The solution of the Jewish problem during the war would, apparently, be impracticable, as , in view of the huge number of Jews, it could only be achieved by a large-scale expatriation. However, measures have been taken by Einsatzgruppe B, whereever it has taken up its work so far. " That is the end of my quotation. temporary measures on assigning Jews to labor, or at least measures which were recommended. The defendant Blume has stated that from Witebsk he sent a report to Nebe concerning the Jewish question in White Ruthenia, in which he tried to effect a change in the actual Fuehrer Order. Nebe compiled his report from this, and it was contained in his reports to Berlin. This becomes evident from the report of events of the 23rd of July, which I just quoted and which I have just summarized. The report of events of the following day, that is, the 24th of July, presents this report again as a special supplement. Book and I quote from the lower part of the page. "In the appendix please find the report of Einsatzgruppe B concerning the Jewish question in the White Ruthenia Settlement Area. " That is the end of my quotation. interesting. I quote from the center of page 76: "From the District of Witebsk Sonderkommando 7b reports in addition that most of the farmers on the collective farms are not working , as they are fighting for directives and instructions. If the peasants are not ruled and if no further directives are issued I think there is a danger of a large part of the harvest being lost.

The Army Group has been urgently requested that the Commissioner for the camp economics issue a directive at this time and approve the dissemination of leaflets by airplanes ." This statement again is based on a report by the Defendant Blume. Last friday, the Defendant Blume talked about his administrative activities at the Loswitha Lake, which was not far from Witebsk and Smolensk, and he mentioned that he had leaflets distributed by air and had other measures taken for sake of the harvest.

If this report speaks of Sonderkommando 7-b it is a mistake. It should read 7a. Special Kommando 7-b never operated in the region beyond Witebsk, but only south of the Dniepr River. It becomes evident from the report of events. This obvious mistake is an example that the reports of events are not always reliable.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Lummert, you say the witness testified to leaflet bombing. I confess to not recalling any such statement by the witness.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I remember that the witness mentioned this on Friday.

THE PRESIDENT: That he used airplanes to drop leaflets on the population?

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, your Honor. The witness stated that he caused the Army Group to throw leaflet bombs by which the population was requested to continue with harvesting work.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. I think we do now recall it.

DR. LUMMERT: We can now leave Blume document No. 6, and in addition, and as a supplement, I offer Blume Document No. 7 excerpts from the German Army reports of the summer of 1941. They come from the newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter. The purpose of this document is merely to show when the three towns, Wilan, Witebsk and Smolensk fell into German hands: Wila, on the 24th of June; Witebsk on the 11th of July; and Smolensk on the 16th of July 1941. Furthermore, the excerpts show, as far as the town Polosk is concerned, that the fighting in this area took place on the 10th and 11th of July. This shows, and confirms, the statement of the defendant Blume. I would like to have the witness Blume testify to two documents which have been submitted by the Prosecution as evidence against him.

The first is an affidavit of the defendant Steimle. It is in Document B ook III-D of the Prosecution, in the English page 39, in the German 64. Document NO-3842, Exhibit No. 119. The Prosecution has the document in the English record, page 158, in the German 163.

Steimle was the successor of the defendant Blume, as the leader of Sonderkommando 7-a, and in this affidavit he states that the defendant Blume, in White Ruthenia, apart from combatting partisans also had Jews executed, and that from June until September 1941 he -was in charge of Sonderkommando 7a.

Q. (By Dr. Lummbert) Witness, what do you have to say to this?

A. As far as the shooting of Jews is concerned, the affidavit is true because on the order of Nebe I carried out a Jewish operation in Witebsk. I have already given testimony as far as this is concerned. It is incorrect, however, insofar as concerns the time, the period September, because I gave up the command of Sonderkommando 7-a on the 16th or 17th of August. I turned it over to Foltes. Steimle chose September as indicating the exact date, evidently because he himself was entrusted with the command of Sonderkommando 7-a in September 1941. I myself would like to draw the attention of the Tribunal to two other points in the affidavit of the defendant Steimle. First of all, in Document III-B, page 41, in the center. There Steimle says, concerning Blume, I quote:

"Character soft and bureaucratic." Furthermore, I would like to note in the following affidavit, NO-4458 , the same Document Book, III-B, page 44, at the bottom of the page, -I would like, as I say, the Tribunal to note this sentence in which Steimle reports that Nebe told him in October 1941 that the Special Kommando 7a until then had not shot any women and children, but the soft and bureaucractic character" of the defendant Blume means that the defendant Blume tried to avoid, actually avoided, these executions, and that he basically refused to shoot women or children, I shall examine the defendant Steimle in addition to this when he is in the witness stand. page 44, at the bottom.

The Prosecution has this affidavit in the English transcript, pages 151 to 152, and in the German pages 157 to 158. The Prosecution says there that this affidavit concerning the executions contains those points which the defendant Blume could not deny. The affidavit is dated 29 June 1947.

Q. (By Dr. Lummert) Witness, may I ask you first... When were you examined? when did Mr. Wartenberg take down the affidavit... Was it on the 28th or 29th of June?

A. On the 28th of June. That was the day before I signed the document.

Q. Witness, Mr. Wartenberg answered my questions explicitly, during the cross examination, that the interrogation was on the 29th of June. Which is the correct date? Perhaps you can give us some details, how your interrogation took place, and how it came about?

A. On the 15th May 1946 I was released from an interment camp as a prisoner of war. Under my right name, I stayed in Bielefeld or in the vicinity approximately one year, and worked on a farm with a farmer. On the 24th of June 1947 I was arrested and I was taken to a prisoner camp, Eselheide, and from there two days later I came to Nuernberg.

Q. Witness, may I interrupt you, and may I ask you... Is it correct that after your arrest in Detmold, and upon your interrogation there you were, as one says, ill-treated and brutally beaten?

A. Yes, that is quite correct. I was beaten by the interrogator in the region of my kidneys, and on the back of my head, and my face, so that I bled, and the traces of it were visible for days.

Q. Is it correct that you tried to commit suicide on two occasions at Eselheide? Did you do that because you felt guilty, or for what other reason?

A. I did not try to commit suicide because I felt guilty, but because my pride had been hurt during the interrogation. If I could have beaten back while I was interrogated probably I would have been shot, because while the interrogator boat me two others held two pistols pointed in my direction.

I did not dare to hit back, because I have five children. But in thinking about this, and the fact that I did not resist when I was ill-treated, and that ill-treatment would probably continue when I was interrogated again-- these thoughts, as I say, I found so unbearable when I was in Eselheide that I decided I would commit suicide. For that purpose I used my bandages, but the bandages tore and therefore the attempts failed.

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Where was this? Where did this interrogation take place? Where?

Q When did it occur?

Q What year?

Q And who was it that beat you?

A The interrogator. I was under the impression that it was the authoritative interrogator because he was the man who signed the records.

Q What nationality was he?

Q Was he an officer?

Q Do you know his name? because his name appears in the record of the interrogation.

Q You say he beat you over the kidneys?

Q With what did he strike you?

Q And is that the only place he hit you, in the kidneys? face. He stopped when I began to bleed.

Q Were these very severe cuts on your face?

A My lip opened, it broke open, and I had a wound. It was not severe.

Q Where were you bandaged? What part of your body was bandaged?

A No bandages were necessary. It was only my lip that had burst.

with your bandages.

A No, that is a mistake your Honor. They were bandages for my legs. Leggings.

Q Oh, leggings! I understand. You say two men stood by with a pistol at your head?

A Yes, your Honor; one was in uniform and one was wearing a civilian suit. One was sitting, and the other was standing. while the third struck you with his fists?

Q What were they trying to have you say? during this interrogation I had told the truth, and I said that I had been an officer in the Security Police. That, apparently they had not known until then. In any case, this report caused the perpetrator to beat me and to maltreat me. The interrogation then was over. The man who maltreated me only arrived after the interrogation was over. told your story, then this person who was not even there when the interrogation took place struck you with his fists?

A Yes. This ill treatment had no influence on my statements in my statements in my testimony at this time. against you?

A In any case it happened, I don't know in detail what the reasons for it were. But it must have been -

Q You weren't beaten very badly, were you?

head. I felt it. as the blows landed?

Q Well, you didn't feel any pain after the pummeling had ceased? not been so badly beaten that I could not actually walk, or that I could not answer questions. isn't that about what it was?

A Yes; there was no reason for the wrath

Q I am not trying to justify it, witness ... I am only trying to get at the facts. The reason you tell us this man gave you a punch or two was because he was angry at you. Isn't that what it was? or hatred?

Q You really didn't feel any ill effects of it after the actual striking? You didn't feel any ill affects after it was over, did you?

A Not of a special kind. The general pain one feels... so far as the results were concerned, to permanently disable you?

Q You didn't have to have any medical treatment, did you?

A No. In the camp at Eselheide I immediately reported to the doctor in order to inform him about it, and to show him the burst lip.

Q And did he treat you? happened to you, and made that the basis for a suicide attempt, didn't you? that the psychological pain of the situation moved me very much. and you having been a soldier all those years -- that because of this temporary humiliation in the hands of an enemy that you wanted to commit suicide?

A Your Honor, it was not only one or two blows; it took quite some time.

Q Well, whatever they were, they weren't bad enough to cause you to be hospitalized, or to receive any medical treatment. Now, do you want to tell us that you, a bigstrapping follow who had been through a war, had fought, and encountered all kinds of difficulties, would want to commit suicide just because someone struck you with his fists this ill-treatment, after the interrogation; I was, of course overwhelmed by the fact that when questions were asked as to names of comrades, and I thought that I would be thus put into a forced situation, and I was, afraid of all this. some information which might implicate your comrades. Is that what I understand?

A Yes; I thought I would not be hard enough, perhaps, to bear it in the long run .

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

( A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the court room will please find their seats. The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. LUMMERT: attempt to commit suicide and I now ask you were the marks of this attempted suicide still obvious when Mr. Wartenberg interrogated you here in Nuernberg on 28 June? neck which the prison physician saw too. Mr. Wartenberg. Is it correct, in particular, that you would have had to agree to the executions mentioned by you?

A No, that is not correct. At the time I explained to Mr. Wartenberg voluntarily in reply to his questions and without any duress, approximately the same about the executions as I have testified here on the witness stand. He did not make any remonstrations to me which would have caused me to make a confession. The two executions of Minsk and Vitebsk I mentioned on my own accord and have testified this was carried out because of the direct orders and the insistence of Nebe. Herr Wartenberg took this into the record in shorthand. That was on the 28th of June and the following day he came to me with a prepared affidavit and asked me to sign it. When reading through it I found that the affidavit contained mistakes and most of all that they had left out all of that which I had mentioned upon my discharge, in particular, Nebe's orders. When I objected to this Herr Wartenberg told me he had no time to make these additions, I could make a written statement and give to him and state in that written statement everything I wanted to add. For that reason I only confirmed or corrected those things in the prepared, affidavit that was absolutely necessary in order to avoid gross mistakes and the same day, on 29 June, I wrote a letter to Herr Wartenberg and gave it to the guard with the request to put it into the prison box.

DR. LUMMERT: In this connection I ask to be allowed to offer Document Blume VIII. It is Document Book I, page 91, It is a draft of the letter which the witness just mentioned, and which he wrote to Mr. Wartenburg at the time. It is page 91.

Q. Witness, I submit to you the original draft of this letter. Is this the draft of the letter which you wrote to Herr Wartenberg?

A. Yes, at the time I just made a draft of this letter, and tins is the draft, I then wrote the proper letter and gave it to the guard with the request to forward the letter. On the draft which, retained I mentioned at the bottom, "Have had it mailed today by the guard in the prison."

Q. Did you hear anything further about it as a result?

A. No, I didn't hear anything from Mr. Wartenberg.

Q. Why did you not remind him?

A. At the time as a result of my attempted suicide which had not succeeded I was in a state of not caring.

THE PRESIDENT: You quoted Document I, Did you mean your own Document Book I.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, page 91. BY DR. LUMMERT:

Q. Witness, please repeat the reply?

A. At this time as a result of my suicide attempt which had not succeeded, I was in a state of not caring. A few days later I received the first indictment, dated 3 July, and soon after that I had my first discussion with you, as my defense counsel. At the time until 10 July I told you about it all, and handed you a draft of my letter to Mr. Wartenberg.

Q. Yes, that is right.

DR. LUMMERT: May I mention that I want to introduce this COURT II CASE IX draft of the letter as evidence, because in it the defendant Blume already made the exact statements which he has testified to here on the witness stand.

It will not be necessary for me to read the letter into the record -- But I ask the Tribunal -- he wanted me to translate not "asked" but he wants "Request the Tribunal" in that the translation was not correct. I request the Tribunal to consider the letter in the case of the defendant Blume, and may I mention the following: When I asked Mr. Wartenberg during his cross examination at my request the Tribunal asked him to find out whether the original of the letter of the defendant Blume of 29 June perhaps might not be with the Prosecution after all, and I was to be informed about it. This is in the English Transcript, page 352, in the German page 354, and the reply has apparently been omitted by mistake. I would, therefore, like to ask the Prosecution to reply to this within the next few days if it is possible for them to do so. I now come to the last part of this second main section, other section.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Lummert, I see no reason why the Prosecution should have a couple days to reply. Let them reply immediately, they should be able to, whether they ever received the original of that letter.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, may I add that at the time Mr. Wartenberg had then a folder before him on the witness stand in which the shorthand minutes of 28th or 29th of June was contained, and, also minutes which were probably taken in Detmolt. He said at the time that he had no other documents, and for that reason I requested at the time to look in the other documents of the Prosecution to see whether this letter might be among them.

DR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I do have a typewritten copy of the letter under discussion. I have not found anywhere the COURT II CASE IX original of it.

I don't know whether it was in Mr. Wartenberg's file, or whether it is in the document room here in the building. It may be In the original document room. However, I do have a typewritten copy of it, but I have no objection at all to defense counsel introducing it in evidence.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. LUMMERT: Therefore, it leaves no doubt that the letter of the defendant -- with this the statement of Mr. Ferencz it leaves no doubt that this letter of the defendant Blume of 29 June was received by the Prosecution, because this copy can only have been made iron the original. Mr. Wartenberg could not remember at the time to have received that letter. I now come to the last section of the second main portion in the examination of the defendant Blume. These few questions concern the defendant Blume, how he judged the Fuehrer Order concerning the shootings in the year of 1941, whether he considered it to be right or wrong, and what consequences he thought it would have in his opinion at the time. Witness, before I ask you about this in detail, please note the following: I am not asking you for your to-days opinion about the Fuehrer Order, but I am submitting to you purely witnesses questions, that is, questions about the facts at the time, which you are to answer to the best of your knowledge and belief as far as you remember. I therefore, ash you for the moment to forget everything that has happened since the bummer of 1941, and which might perhaps prevent you in some way to testify on this point. Please forget, therefore, completely that at a later period American and English airplanes destroyed the German Main cities, and hundreds and thousands of German women and children were killed. Please forget the atom bomb and its results.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I must object to, this type of question by the defense counsel; the atom bomb, and bombing of German cities are well known, there is no necessity of putting it in the form of a question for the witness. It is obviously being mentioned for the sole purposes of prejudicting either the answer, or the Court, and has no relevency in this case.

DR. LUMMERT: I may reply something to this. Other Defendants, I remember one case at least replied to this question that they were not willing to testify because those things happened later. For that reason I would like to have a reply from the witness, and, I, therefore, ask that he imagine himself back in the year of 1941. I, therefore, ask the witness -

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment.

DR. LUMMERT: -- to imagine -

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, Just a moment, please.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: In the first place you asked the witness to become a superman and to perform magic, you asked him to forget what happened since 1941. How you know as an educated person that it is absolutely impossible. If I tell you to forget what happened yesterday, with all the willpower in the world you can not forget, what is engraved upon the mind, remains there. If anything is forgotten, it is forgotten because of the natural evolution of time, but you can not by ordering a man have him forget something which is already there, so that question is absolutely without any meaning or sense. Now if you want him to say or describe what happened in 1941, then ask him: "what happened in 1941?" but don't tell him to tear up the calendar, and the almanac, because the archives of the memory can not be destroyed.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I beg your pardon. I probably COURT II CASE IX did not express my intentions very well, I merely asked the witness about things he thought at the time in 1941.

BY DR. LUMMERT:

Q. Witness, when at the end of June and July, 1941, you moved to Russia with your Sonderkommando-VII-A; did you at the time consider the Fuehrer Order concerning the destruction and elimination of Eastern Jews in the Southern Territory -to be right or wrong, and, what personal conclusions did you draw from this?

A. If I try to imagine myself back completely into the year of 1941, I must stop for a moment to mention Streckenbach's announcement to us about the Fuehrer's Order in Pretsch. I already testified last Friday that on that day my feelings and thoughts conflicted, and that finally I tried to find a way out by asking Streckenbach to put me in charge of a small Sonderkommando. I need not repeat my testimony on this in detail. If you now ask me whether I considered the Fuehrer Order right or wrong at the time, I must say that at the time I did not concentrate my thoughts on the three words, that is, "right or wrong," but according to my opinion at the time the Supreme German leadership was responsible for this order, and particularly concerning the laws of war, and International Law: Insofar at the time I did not allow myself any criticism on the order, but I merely said to myself that the Supreme German leadership would have considered every pro and con of such an important order, and they could judge the situation better than I could in my inferior Sonderkommando position: insofar as this was an order of the State, that is, of the Supreme Commander of the State, and as the Supreme Command of the State was beyond good or Evil for me. On the other hand it seemed cruel and impossible for me from a human point of view, simply to shoot defenseless people, and en masse, and I followed my inner-voice when I COURT II CASE IX tried at the time not to carry out this order personally if possible, and thus personally and with human sense I rejected the order at the time.

I considered the order wrong in the sense, not in this sense, even as concerned men of military age, and most of all concerning the shooting of women and children. Owing to this view I carried out this order only in one occasion, namely, in Witebsk, when Nebe forced me to do this through his immediate order.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please. I didn't quite understand the witness' statement that he thought that the execution order was wrong insofar as it applied to men of military age, and women and children. Did I understand that correctly?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I said that in my personal opinion I didn't consider the order to be right, also not as far as it concerned men of military age, and, in particular, concerning women and children.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, did you think it was all right for those who were not of military age?

A. No. In particular not so: I said that owing to this, my inner-conviction, I only carried out this order on one occasion, namely, in Witebsk, when Nebe ordered me through his immediate order to do this, and at the time I limited the shooting to men of military age. I have already testified to all of this previously. When I said previously that this order, as an order of a Supreme Commander of the State, was beyond good and evil for me. I must add a word about my personal relation to the leader, Adolf Hitler, I must confess that I believed in the Fuehrer to such a degree as one could possibly believe in a person. I considered him to be a great, intelligent man; as a political leader of Germany he had overcome the terrible crisis of the year of 1932. He had done away with unemployment, and had established a wonderful order in Germany. He had joined Austria and the Sudetanland with Germany, and these were not invasions, as I know myself that more than 95% the Austrians and the people from the Sudetenland were enthusiastic about it, to be accepted into the Union of German Reich. After all, war until then had led to success only and, in particular in the middle of 1941, at the time the order was given, Hitler was at the height of his power. sidered unavoidable for many years. When in June 1941, it was made known in Germany that beyond the Soviet Border large armies had been marched up, and that a German attack was only to be first before the Russians attacked us, I considered the war against the Soviet Russia quite justified, and, of course, naturally also wanted the German victory over Bolshevism.

According to all I had heard about Soviet Russia in previous years, and particularly when interrogating people who returned from Russia, I was also fully convinced and am so even now, that Jewery in Soviet Russia played an important part, and still does play an important part, and it has the especial support of Bolshevitic dictatorship, and still is. If now the Supreme German Command in this position issued an order for extermination, headed by Hitler, who was at the height of his power at the time, and whom I trusted deeply and admiringly, it can be understood that at the time I accepted the order as one takes any other order, or any other law by one's Supreme Power of the State; but independently of this I personally rejected the shooting of defenseless people, and for that reason I instinctively avoided this order. Through my report on the Jewish question, in White Ruthenia, I even tried through some other regulations the settlement of it, about which I already had testified last Friday. If I may summarize my opinion at the time, I would like to say the following: At the time there was a collision between my duty to obey, and my personal humane demands of my conscience. On the one hand I had a very bad conscience because I did not want to carry out the Fuehrer's Order if I could help it, and, on the other hand I could not bear the idea to carry out this order, and insofar as I did carry it out, I only did this because I was immediately forced by orders - which did not leave me any other way out.

DR. LUMMERT: At this point I would like to introduce Document Book Blume's No. IX. The witness testified at the time that in 1941 he believed in the Fuehrer as a wonderful great statesman and human being, and an outstanding man, whosoever expresses this conviction nowadays is mostly not understood, and especially in, the case of foreigners who do not understand this, who found it very difficult to judge the conditions as they existed, the conditions which existed in the decade since 1933 in Germany.

I considered it now my duty as defense counsel to submit at least one document to the Tribunal, instead of a hundred, or a thousand, which could be introduced, to support this testimony of the witness Blume. I request the Tribunal to consider this document as a kind of "window" through which you can get a view of the psychological condition of Germany under Hitler at the time. This document concerns Austria, the annexation of Austria, and it contains the statement of an Austrian Catholic Bishop, which wan given at the time in March 1938. The document is in Document Book page 95.

MR. FERENCZ: May it please the Tribunal. The document which is now being offered is as an opinion expressed in 1938 concerning the joining of Austria to Germany, The charges against the defendant Blume are very specific. They charge him with murder, mass murder, in the years following 1941. It is submitted that his opinion on anything in 1938 concerning the plebescite of Germany and Austria has absolutely no relevency in this case, and, we, therefore, object to the admission of the document.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, may I reply to this. I believe the document is very relevent. The witness mentioned that the joining of Austria and Germany in his opinion was one of the great acheivements of Adolf Hitler, which improved his position in his opinion. In 1941 this still had effect, of course, and I intend to ask the witness now in detail about this statement by the Bishop, and on the joining of Austria.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Lummert, I just want to show you what difficulties you are going to get into with this kind of a document. You are asking the witness to express himself on the joining of Austria to Germany, You are going to ask him whether it was morally justified. If we permit this question then I am going to ask the witness several questions. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Witness, did you believe that in 1940 it was justifiable to bomb London and other cities in England which brought about the destruction of women and children? Did you believe that was correct? Did you believe it was morally correct for airplanes to fly over cities in England and drop bombs killing women and children?

A. According to the way the propaganda put it at the time, nothing was described to us which made us conclude that in the enemy territory targets were bombed which were not of military importance.

Q. Then you do not believe that women and children were killed in those air raids over England which included the destruction of Coventry which was razed to the ground?

A. No, your Honor, of course I cannot say that. I merely wanted to say the destruction......

Q. Please answer the question. Did you believe that was just?

A. I did not know it, your Honor.

Q. Very well. You knew that Germany marched into Poland. Did you believe that was just?

A. Yes, your Honor, I believed that this happened because the Polish attitude toward us forced us to do this. I am now speaking of the attitude and the idea we had at the time, owing to the way it was explained to us.

Q. Did you believe that it was proper to bomb Rotterdam killing thousands of women and children? This was all prior to 1941.

A. I heard about this. I heard that Rotterdam had been previously asked not to defend themselves as an open city and that they did not do this.

Q. And you believe, therefore, it was proper to bomb that city killing thousands of women and children?

A. Your Honor, if an enemy defends a city........

Q. Will you answer that. You believe it was proper then, that is your answer, yes.

A. If it was defended by soldiers, yes. Then it is a fortress.

Q. You believe that it was proper to make war on Norway which had not declared war on Germany?

A. Your Honor, I can only repeat that at the time it was explained to us quite clearly and we believed this.

Q. You believed it was proper; you believed it was proper?

A. Because we believed......

Q. Now, please answer that question.

A. We would be first this way.

Q. Well, regardless of what was told you, you believed it was proper to invade Norway?

A. Only because of what I was told.

Q. You believed it to be proper in view of what had been told you?

A. Yes.

Q. And you believed it was proper to invade Denmark and Holland and Luxemburg?

A. All this was connected with the statement that we had to carry out this in order to avoid that they attack us.

Q. Well, you believe that it was proper?

A. From that point of view, yes.

Q. You believed it was proper to invade Greece?

A. At the time there were differences already.

Q. But you believed it was proper. That is the only thing I want to find out.

A. Yes, your Honor.

Q. You believe it was proper to invade Yugoslavia and Belgium?

A. Yes, we were told at the time.

Q. Yes, now, do you justify all those invasions today. Do you think today that it was proper to have invaded all these countries?

A. Your Honor, I have no possibility to study history here.

Q. Do you believe today it was proper to invade Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Luxemburg and the other countries?

A. I can't reply to this, your Honor.

Q. Very well.

A. Because I cannot judge this.

Q. Then how can you judge whether Austria was proper annexed to Germany?

A. At the time we heard how enthusiastic they were, and we were in Austria.

Q. Well, you were in Belgium; you were in Holland; you were in Norway; you were in Greece; and you were in Yugoslavia. You were in all these other countries too.

A. No, your Honor. I personally merely wanted to give the impression which the annexation had on the people in Austria at the time.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, Dr. Lummert, I am going to ask you a question. You have seen that the witness is unable or refuses to justify the invasion of all these countries, but he stands upon the annexation of Austria to Germany. Now, what has that got to do with what happened in 1941? If you intend to show that everything which Hitler did up until that time was proper and correct, then it is not in order to show what he thinks about Austria, but you must take all that history and not one specific episode.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, may I add something about this? I am afraid that I have not been completely understood. The witness testified that he believed in Hitler, that he worshipped him, and that for that reason the order of 1941 concerning the executions had special importance for him, and simply as one example on what this special belief in Hitler is based, he mentioned the annexation of Austria, and in this connection, that is merely to support the testimony of the witness, I wanted to introduce this Document No. 9. I believe that in this connection it could be considered relevant.

THE PRESIDENT: You said you would offer this affidavit as a window. We are perfectly willing to have a window, but we don't want to have the view shut off from the one who is looking through the window, and if we look through a window we do not only see Austria, but we see all the other countries which I have mentioned.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I certainly did not have any such intention.

MR. FERENCZ: The explanation offered by defense counsel who is offering this document as it will explain why the Defendant Blume adored Hitler. The prosecution is ready to concede that the defendant adored Hitler and that in his opinion he had good reason for it.

THE PRESIDENT: With this concession on the part of the prosecution as to the reasons for the adoration of Adolf Hitler by the witness, it doesn't seem that this affidavit has much probative value. However, the Tribunal is willing to give you every possible latitude, Dr. Lummert. The objection of the prosecution is overruled, and you may introduce the affidavit.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, may I point out the fact it is not an affidavit but it is a statement which the Austrian Catholic bishops published at the time and which appeared in all German papers in facsimile.

Q. (By Dr. Lummert) I now ask, do you remember this statement by the Austrian bishops?

A. Yes. I remember the days in March 1938 because they Were the most beautiful days of my life and I know that many other Germans felt the same way. The statements by the bishops and the statements of many other authorities who all agreed to this at the time were, then, a confirmation for me of the fact that Adolf Hitler had a great mission for the German people.

DR. LUMMERT: The Document Blume No. 9 is in Document Book I, page 95 to 99. I will now read a few lines of the bottom half of page 96. I quote, page 96 - just below the middle:

"We, the Austrian bishops, after exhaustive deliberation, in view of the great historical times through which the Austrian people have lived, aware that in these days the thousand-year-old longing of our people for union with the great German Reich will find its fulfillment, have decided to make the fallowing appeal to all our faithful." ment on page 98 of the Document Book. I quote:

"Solemn Manifesto: We, the Austrian Bishops of the Austrian diocese declare, with serious conviction and of our own free will, on the occasion of the great historical events in German-Austria, we gladly recognize......."

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Lummert, it isn't necessary to read the manifesto. If you desire to sum it up in a few phrases we will permit that, but certainly we shouldn't take time to read this manifesto issued in 1938 on a subject which is not involved in the indictment.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, Your Honor. I then request that I may just refer to this statement. I think it is not necessary for me to summarize the contents.

Blume on the witness stand. This section concerns Charge 3 of the indictment. That is the membership in organizations declared criminal by the International Military Tribunal. Only the time after 1 September 1939 is concerned here. 3, I first deal with the membership in the SS.

Q. (By Dr. Lummert) Witness, in your testimony you talked about your professional career and you mentioned that in June 1935, when you appeared on a scoial case in a civilian suit, Heydrich arranged that you be transferred from the SA to the SS in the same rank, namely in the rank of SS-Untersturmfuehrer. Untersturmfuehrer is the same as a lieutenant. Please give me further details now about your SS membership, in particular whether you did service in the SS.

A. I was never active in the SS but as a police official I was merely a formal member of the SS, no real or active member of the SS. Already before 1936 certain relations existed through Himmler between the SS and the police. These became closer when Himmler, the Reichsfuehrer-SS in June, 1936, became chief of the entire German police in the Reich Ministry of the Interior. zations which served for the special protection of the state would be united, in particular the SS, the SD, and the entire police. This idea of the state protection corps was not realized until 1945. Only a few odd measures were taken concerning this. Concerning these measures, or some of them there was a sort of equivalent protective corps of the police with the SS about which a special decree was issued by Himmler in the year 1938. On the basis of this there was an assimulation of ranks since 1938. According to my promotion in the police service I was always promoted to the corresponding SS rank. Therefore, an Regierungsrat I became Sturmbannfuehrer. That is a major. As Oberregierungsrat I became Obersturmbannfuehrer. That is Lieutenant-Colonel. Finally as Ministerialrat, Standartenfuehrer. That is a Colonel. But these were only SS ranks. Official positions I did not hold in the SS, and as I said, I was not active in the SS either. Only in the last eight days of the war, approximately, I was drafted into the Waffen-SS.

DR. LUMMERT: In this connection I offer the Assimilation of Rank Decree of 23 June 1938 as evidence Blume No. 10. The document is in Document Book, Pages 100 to 105. The listing of the corresponding rank is on Pages 101 to 103. In section 1 of this decree, Page 100 of the document book, it sags that members of the Security policy, upon request, be received into the SS. That means voluntarily, apparently. Witness, how about this voluntary effort?

A. Since the assimilation of ranks of the members of the police and the members of the SS confirmed the wish of Himmler, it was put in practice. It was fixed that every member of the Security Police should make this application if he fulfilled the conditions required in the decree.

Q. In Section 3 of this decree, Page 103 of the document book, it is said, and I quote: "The employees of the Security Police will be put into that SS rank which corresponds to their rank as civil service members of the Security Police. Incorporated into the SS they will be assigned to the units of the Security Service of the Reichsfuehrer-SS according to the more detailed instructions of the Chief of the Security Police and of the Security Main Office of the Reichsfuehrer-SS." The quote was on Page 103 in the center. Witness, what was the sense and the meaning of this instruction?

A. Although Himmler ordered that the members of the police would be given a rank in the SS, on the other hand he did not want these members of the police to be subordinate to the SS Main Office. He, therefore, decreed that these police members, concerning their SS Activity, should be subordinate to the Chief of the Reich Main Security Office of the Reichsfuehrer-SS, that is the later Chief of the SD, and that formally they would be assigned to the units of the SD. The police members with SS ranks were, therefore, not subordinate to the SS-Main Office, but were subordinate to the SD-Main Office, and since the SD-Main Office was subordinate to the Chief of the Security Police and the SD, the whole matter more or less remained within the police. Thus is shown particularly clearly that the whole SS assimilation of ranks was only a formal matter because in reality the police members did this service according to their assimilation of ranks in the same manner as before, and only served in the police and were active neither in the SS nor in the SD. personal files for the persons who were assimilated in rank in the police, only, as far as I remember, in the year 1943 or 1944. These are files which the Prosecution has used against a few defendants, including myself; by the way, those personal files contain a great deal of inaccuracies. The SS-Personel Office could not find out the personal details at this stage of the war to such an extent and in such detail.

Q. Witness, I do not intend to ask you about these small inaccuracies in detail, because in my opinion this is not the important point. You said that you were never active in the SS apart from a very few days at the end of the war when you were drafted into the Waffen-SS. Please give me some details about this.

A. At the end of April, 1945, I was drafted in Salzburg in the normal military drafting order and had to join the Waffen-SS. In Salzburg it was the branch, the Ausweichstelle of the Reich Security Main Office. From Blankenburg I had retired to Salzburg.

THE PRESIDENT: One moment plese. Mr. Ferencz, are you charging the witness under the count in question with the subject matter of his present testimony, namely his membership in the Waffen-SS in 1945.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, we are charging the witness generally with membership in the SS after 1939.

THE PRESIDENT: Up to and including the day of surrender?

MR. FERENCZ: That is right.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Dr. Lummert) Witness, please continue with your testimony.

A. There the Reich Main Security Office released me from military service because they could not find any other work for me. I, therefore, received the normal drafting order to the Waffen-SS, which I had to follow like any other drafting for military service. Before the war I had had military training twice for eight weeks at a time, with the Fourth Antiaircraft Regiment in Dortmund and had been promoted to be a corporat and as a reserve officer. For that reason, when I was drafted into the Waffen-SS I was given the corresponding rank of an SS-Rottenfuehrer. Already, eight to ten days, Germany capitulated and I was taken prisoner of war.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, "Gefreiter" has just been translated as corporal. I don't know whether that is quite correct. I believe the translation is Pfc., Private, First Class.

THE INTERPRETER: I beg your pardon, your Honor. That is the English translation.

Q. (By Dr. Lummert) Witness, we now come to the membership in the SS. The indictment says under Count 3, Figure 13b you had been a member of Offices 3, 6 and 7 of the Reich Security main Office. Does this apply and were you active in these offices?

A. No, I never had an official position in these offices, and I was never active in those offices either. If it says so in my personal files, which, as I already said, were started in the years 1943 or 1944 in the SS personnel office, it means merely a matter of form which was based on my SS rank which was assimilated. In reality I only worked as an official in the Security Police.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until 1:45.

(A recess was taken until 1345 hours.)

(The hearing reconvened at 1345 hours, November 4, 1947.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. RIEDIGER (Attorney for the Defendant Haensch): Your Honor, I would like the Defendant Haensch to be excused for this afternoon and tomorrow morning in order to be able to prepare himself for his examination. I would like him to be brought to Room N. 57 now, if that would be possible.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Haensch will be excused from attendance in court this afternoon and tomorrow. He will be taken to Room 57 under guard immediately.

(The Defendant Haensch was excused.)

DR. LUMMERT: May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, certainly. BY DR. LUMMERT (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BLUME): of the defendant in organizations which were declared criminal by the IMT. I had finished the questions referring to the SD and SS and I now deal with the membership in the Gestapo. Witness, the indictment says, referring to Count III, under No. 353C, that you had been a member of Office IV of the RSHA, the Reich Security Main Office. Is this true? In May and June 1941 and then again from the end of August 1941 to July 1942 I was Personnel Office Chief of Office I of the RSHA. Since my return from Greece, that is from August, 1944, I was again a member of Office I of the RSHA. This position did not change even when in March, 1945, I was detailed to Thuringia by the Office Chief of Office I in order to deal with personnel and organization of the censorship and to transfer it to the Reich Security Main office.

This activity in Blankenburg was ceased after ten days, because the American troops were approaching. Incidentally, during those ten days, the activities were dissolved, because there was no longer any mail. Had I remained there longer it would have been probable that Kriminalrat Mueller who had been detailed to Blankenburg Office IV of the RSHA would have taken over, and, in this case, I would probably have been transferred to Office IV from Office I of the RSHA, but it never came to that.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I have now finished the direct examination of the witness, and I would now like to ask you to permit me to submit the documents 1 to 3 as exhibits. Document 1 I have already submitted on Friday for identification. I do not know whether it would be agreeable to the tribunal if I deal with the legal points, and if I would explain them --those points which are contained in Document No. 1. Perhaps the Tribunal would prefer it if I would just inform them of the content of the matter, I would like to comply with the express wishes of the Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: It is enough if you indicate with a phrase or two the purport of each document which you submit.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: However, if you come to some document in which appears a paragraph or more which you regard of extremely vital importance and want to read that, of course, you may.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, Your Honors, In the proceedings on Friday I already mentioned that in Document 1, the most important points have been collected which concerned a more severe punishment because of refusal to obey, especially in police organizations, in special assignments.

I had also mentioned last Friday the first paragraph, the concerning paragraphs from the military penal code and the second paragraph, the so-called Special War Penal code and I have quoted from this paragraph. In accordance with this special decree, I would like to make the following remarks. It was published at the beginning of the war and contained more severe punishment regulations. Especially, it concerned the socalled undermining of military strength. The reason I mention this here is that during the later years of the war in Germany the utterance of a more doubt of German victory or just a more doubt that the Fuehrer was right was deemed undermining German military strength and was punished with death. October 1939 by which special legal jurisdiction was being granted-

THE PRESIDENT: Where do you have the decree you just referred to, namely that the expression of doubt in the Fuehrer's perfection could result in a death sentence?

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, does this mean '2 or '3?

THE PRESIDENT: You have just said, Dr. Lummert, that in the latter days of the war that even an expression of doubt in the Fuehrer's infallability could result in death. Now where is that decree?

DR. LUMMERT: This is not a decree, your Honor, but this I remember as I was active as a lawyer during the war.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, are you, in effect, taking the witness stand now, Dr. Lummert?

DR. LUMMERT: No, no. Your Honor. That was neither a witness' statement nor a legal argument, but it was just an explanation to paragraph 5, No. 1, on page 6 of the Document Book.

This paragraph was used in this particular sense.

THE PRESIDENT: What is meant by paragraph 3 on page 6, which reads: "In addition to the death penalty, a penitentiary sentence is also admissible." Did they put the corpse in the penitentiary?

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you catch my question, Dr. Lummert?

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't think you did.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, Your Honor, the sense of it is, in addition to the death punishment also the property can be confiscated.

THE PRESIDENT: No, no. It says in addition to the death penalty a penitentiary sentence is also -

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I am very sorry. There is a mistake here, a typographical error. It should read, instead of "In addition to the death punishment and the penitentiary sentence" -- "Or the penitentiary sentence, confiscation of property is also admissible."

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. LUMMERT: The third paragraph,of Document 1 concerns a special jurisdiction which also applied at the beginning of the war for members of the SS and members of the police, and other who were active in special assignments.

military law and with military jurisdiction, There was only just one difference. This difference was mentioned by the defendant Ohlendorf when he was on the witness stand. I may perhaps remind the Tribunal that the defendant Ohlendorf said -- it is in the English record 523, in the German 533 - "if war jurisdiction was very severe so the jurisdiction of SS was even more cruel." No. 6. That is page 3 in the center of the page. There it says that the SS and Police jurisdiction also concerned itself with police institutions in special assignment. The Einsatzgruppen whom we are dealing with here in these proceedings, and the Einsatz- and Special Kommandos were such police institutions employed in special assignment. I may mention here that this special assignment, this term is sometimes translated "on special, assignment" and sometimes "on special tasks," Both translations are correct and they mean the same. In German it is always "im besonderen Einsatz."

The next regulation which is No. 4, is on page 11, supplements the third decree and provided a special court in Munich as Highest SS and Police jurisdiction authority. contains a decree of Himmler as Reichsfuehrer SS and Chief of the German Police of the Spring of 1940, This decree was to the effect that the entire German police for the duration of the war was employed in the sense that has been mentioned before. The point therefore was that since 1940 the Special SS and the Police jurisdiction was valid for the entire German police, no matter whether the police was acting inside or outside Germany, Therefore, the severe penal regulations were valid for the police since Spring 1940 without restrictions of time or place. 2 and 3. I can deal with them in a very short way. Document 2 is an affidavit by the witness Soechting concerning a remark made by Heydrich which he had made in the year 1937.

He was then Chief of the Security Police and the SD. Heydrich on that occasion said and now I quote from page 14 of the document, "Nobody ever leaves the Security Police unless we don't want him any more. In such a case, however, he may leave through a concentration camp." This remark was the answer to applications of members of the Security Police,especially of the Intelligence Deportment,who had asked to be released, from a speech of Himmler of 1943, in which he responds and refers to former remarks. The document was introduced as evidence in the IMT Trial. Himmler on that occasion said, I quote, page 16, center of Document 1: "If within the sphere of your knowledge should there be anyone who is disloyal to the fuehrer or to ourselves even if it is only in thought, you must see to it that this man is thrown out of the organization and we will see to it that he departs this life." That is the end of my quotation. "that obedience must be carried out without reserve and blindly." These words of Himmler, of course, only refer to members of the SS, but Himmler was at the same time Chief of the German Police and in the year 1938 already had established a close contact between the Police and the SS.

I should also like to refer to Blume Document No. 10.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Lummert, by the introduction of these documents which tend to show that it was impossible for one to disobey an order or in any way to modify it, do we understand that you submit that your client did obey the order?

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, it is correct-

THE PRESIDENT: That he did disobey the Fuehrer Order?

DR. LUMMERTT: Your Honor, these quotations are merely meant to show that the defendant acted under force.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, that then he did obey the order? Witness, we will put the question to you. There have now been introduced in evid ence various documents which are copies of official decrees of the hierarchy in Germany during the war. These decrees all tend to show that if one disobeyed or qualified an order that serious consequences would follow. Do we understand that you did follow the order so that you would not come into conflict with these decrees?

THE WITNESS: Yes, Your Honor, in Vitobsk, for instance, as I described.

THE PRESIDENT: You did executes the Fuehrer Order?

THE WITNESS: Yes, however not to its full extent, but-

THE PRESIDENT: Well, now, just a moment. Then you did not execute the Fuehrer Order?

THE WITNESS: Not to its full extent.

THE PRESIDENT: Then why are you submitting all these documents as to the great difficulty you would incur if you did not obey the order. extent indicated by that order?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then, according to these documents, you should be dead right now for having disobeyed an order?

THE WITNESS: The modified way which I gave this order odd. not come before an SS and Military Court or Police Court, It did not come to any proceedings.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then, these decrees in no way disturbed or affected you, is that right?

THE WITNESS: Of course, without this duress which was behind me I could, have followed my own intelligence and I would not have had carried out any shootings.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, please listen to the questions and answer directly. You received a Fuehrer Order which called upon you to perform certain executions.

Bid you execute that order?

THE WITNESS: Hot to its full extent.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, you modified the order which was given to you?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT:You did not execute the order which was given to you?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE PRESIDENT: Then according to this decree you should have been court-martialled and shot, is that right?

THE WITNESS: If the matter had come before the court it would have been possible that the court would have drawn such conclusions, but I acted in a manner which one can call evasive, so that in such an action I would have been able to defend myself.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, so therefore all those decrees in no way distubed you, did they? You weren't court-martialled?

THE WITNESS: I said Your Honor, that there were particularly favorable circumstances so that nothing came of it.

THE PRESIDENT: I asked you whether you were court-martialled?

THE WITNESS: No,

THE PRESIDENT: Then these decrees in no way took hold upon you?

THE WITNESS: They were never used, Your Honor,

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, so far as your case is concerned, all these documents are irrelevant, is that right?

THE WITNESS: No, Your Honor, because I knew them and knowledge of these facts caused me to act in cases where I could see no way out to evade a direct order I remind you of the case of Vitobsk, for instance, where I tried to postpone the carrying out of the order until I got a new order by teletype message and, of course, now I had the last alternative, which, before I had evaded temporarily by joining the front troops.

THE PRESIDENT: You were ordered to execute all Jews, isn't that right?

THE WITNESS: Yes, that is right.

Q. And according to your statement, you did not execute all Jews?

A. No.

Q. So, therefore, you did not follow the Fuehrer Decree?

A. No, not to that extent.

Q. You were very fond of Hitler at the time, weren't you?

A. Yes, your Honor.

Q. You adored Hitler?

A. Yes, your Honor.

Q. Then, why did you not follow out his order which was very expressly given to you?

A. For the first time, I was confronted with the fact that all my thoughts and my feelings could not follow the order of the Fuehrer.

Q. Then you had sworn undying allegiance to Hitler, hadn't you?

A. Yes, your Honor.

Q. And according to this oath which you took you were not permitted to change or modify any order... isn't that right?

A. No, your Honor.

Q. You were not permitted to change any order which was given to you by Hitler?

A. According to this oath, not.

Q. No. Then you were not faithful to Hitler when you changed his order?

A. I have had a baa conscience too, your Honor.

Q. You we re not faithful to Hitler when you did not obey his order. Answer that question.

A. Yes, you can call it that.

Q. You lied to Hitler?

A. Your Honor, I tried to find a way out-

Q. You did not obey the order that Hitler gave you?

A. In an advance kommando there were possibilities of following the Hitler order without being confronted with immediately an alternative. And this is what I tried, I tried to find consolation in the thought that I was doing my duty after all, without carrying out this special order.

Q. But you told us you did not follow out the order as it was given to you. How, you either must stand by that, or not. You told us very clearly you did not execute the order as it was given to you. Now, please give me that answer again. Yes or no. Did you follow out the Hitler order to execute all Jews?

A. No.

Q. Very well. Then to that extent you repudiated Hitler?

A. Yes, and I was suffering from a bad conscience, because I did not do my duty.

Q. All right, And you lied to Hitler, You did not follow out the oath which you took to Hitler?

A. Your Honor, the assignment was not only to shoot Jews.

Q. Answer that question, now. You have told us that you did not follow out the order. So that when you did not follow out the order, you lied to Hitler, you did not follow the oath. Answer that.

A. I did not feel it in this manner.

Q. You did not follow out the oath?

A. I deviated from the actual duties which were mine in Russia because I was still thinking that I was doing my duty, because in advance kommandos-

Q. Yes, we have heard all that... We got your explanation. But I an making it more simple. You took an oath to follow Hitler, to obey his orders explicitly...

Now, you have voluntarily told us, from the witness stand, that you did not obey that order completely. You attempted to modify it; you tried to get into a situation where you could change it; you tried to evade it. You told us all that. So, therefore, you did not follow Hitler implicitly?

A. Yes; it was the first time that I deviated from a Fuehrer order.

Q. Yes, Therefore, you were not true to the oath which you made to Hitler?

A. Yes, in this particular moment I deviated from the path of my duty.

Q. You lied to your adored leader?

A. Your Honor-

Q. Please answer that question. You told an untruth, by your deeds, to your adored leader. By your actions, not by words... but by your actions you told a lie, an untruth, to your adored leader, Adolf Hitler... Answer that!

A. One can formulate it so, your Honor.

Q. Yes so to that extent you repudiated Adolf Hitler-to that extent, that little bit.

A. Yes.

Q. Yes, So, therefore, Adolf Hitler to you was not infallible?

A. Yes. That was the first feeling I had.

Q. Now, how do you feel about Adolf Hitler today? Do you still think he was the perfect man you believed him to be before you lied to him?

A. The results of politics speak against it, your Honor.

Q. You had told us that when you marched into Russia you believed it was entirely justifiable because you thought Russia was going to attack Germany?

A. Yes.

Q. And you thought that all these other countries which I enumerated to you... Poland, and Holland, and Belgium, - and all the other countriese... you thought they were going to attack Germany?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you think that the little country of Luxembourg was going to attack Germany?

A. No; but it could be a territory of combat for other powers.

Q. So you thought it was entirely justifiable for Germany to march into Luxembourg?

A. Yes, your Honor.

Q. So, therefore, you justified everything which Hitler did up until June 1941?

A. Yes.

Q. So you believed in Hitler, in everything, with the exception of part of this order which he gave you?

A. This was the first doubt, yes.

Q. Yes. So the only time you disagreed with Hitler was when it might in some way affect you, your own fate?

A. The motive, your Honor - was not only my own fate, but the reasons for my behavior were the psychological and moral doubts which had to come up when carrying out this order.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. LUMMERT:

Q. Your Honor, in conclusion, Document Book III. I only want to say that what Himmler said regarding the SS was also equally valied for the German police.

May I make a suggestion, your Honor. The ten documents in Document Book I, Blume, have not yet been numbered, they have no exhibit number. I would suggest that the exhibit COURT II CASE IX numbers be the same as the document numbers, which is the most simple way - which was also used in the proceedings before the IMT.

THE PRESIDENT: That system will be followed.

DR. LUMMERT: In that case, your Honor, I have no further questions in the direct examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Defense counsel may now cross-examine the witness. BY DR. ULMER (for the Defendant Six):

Q. Dr. Blume, when and where did you meet Dr. Six after the outbreak of the Russian campaign?

A. On the 6th or 7th of July at Minsk.

Q. What were you told about the tasks of Dr. Six?

A. My Kommando was moving towards Moscow. When I said good-bye to Nebe in Minsk, the Kommando was just about to cross the last resistance the so-called "Stalinlinie", and thought they would march to Moscow. For this reason, Nebe, when I said good-bye to him informed me to the effect that the so-called Kommando Moscow under Standartenfuehrer had been created -- the task of which was the safeguarding and maintenance of evidence material and documents in Moscow. Therefore, I did not have to prepare for this special purpose. He also cold me that the kommando had received special interpreters, and departmental experts, who knew circumstances and conditions. I remember this because I informed my men about these facts - the fact that we had competitors now, and that I expected that they would do everything in their power to arrive in Moscow before this advance kommando.

Q. How can I understand this? What do you mean "competitors?" Do you mean another Einsatzkommando, or do you mean only competitors as far as speed went?

A. I am only referring to the speed in reaching the aim.

Q. In your direct examination, Dr. Blume, which has already been read by the Prosecution, you used a term which I would like you to explain . In your examination, your testimony, you spoke about the sector , or the territory Six, or the sector or territory of the Advance Kommando Moscow. I would like you to tell us what you mean by this expression.

A. I would like to state first that this does not concern testimony but the transcript which were not signed by myself.

It was aremark which I made, and it referred to the fact that I rejected a reproach of the interrogator that I had stayed at Smolensk during this advance. I said that I had only remained at Smolensk for one day; and as I knew that the Advance Kommando Moscow took over with the safeguarding and maintenance of files and other materials in the Soviet House at Smolensk, after I had been there, I tried to express -- that Six was the competent authority at Smolensk, for the neighboring army, there can be no doubt , was the Special Kommando 7-b. I do not know anything about the local competence of the Advance Kommando Moscow.

Q. And you never learned about the competence, or, shall we say, the parallel or lateral competence of the Advance Kommando Moscow , in the sphere of tasks of an Einsatzkommando?

A. No, I never heard anything about it,

DR. ULMER: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Any other defense counsel wish to cross-examine? BY DR. MINSEL(Assistant to Dr. Gick, for the Defendant Strauch):

Q. witness, during the time of the drafting of Strauch to Latvia, and also later during the time of his transfer to White Ruthenia, you were personal Referent in the Reich Security Main Office. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it also correct that Strauch, after he had been appointed commander of the SD and the Security Police in Riga, that he rang you you upon the RSHA at Berlin and he said that he hadbroken his arm a short while ago, that the fracture had not been healed yet, and he was still receiving ambulant treatment, so that he could not occupy his position yet?

A. Yes, I remember this telephone call. Strauch asked for postponement of his being on duty, because his arm fracture had not not healed yet.

As the period he asked for was very short, I granted it to him that he should take his time , let us say a week, until he would have to take over his office.

Q. Witness, can you say anything as to the further circumstance of the transfer of Strauch from Riga to Minsk?

A. I only know that as far as this transfer of Strauch is concerned, considerable confusion was prevailing. He had hardly arrived in Riga, when, for reasons that are no longer known to me, the necessity came up to transfer a certain Dr. Lange in his position and recall him to Minsk; and Strauch broke his arm again when this plan was to be carried out, and in my opinion Streckenbach then decided that Strauch should have his arm healed definitely now -- he should do that at home, before he was to take over his office.

DR. MINSEL: I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Any other defense counsel wish to cross examine? If not, Mr. Ferencz will take up the cross examination on behalf of the Prosecution. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q. Defendant Blume, there are, first , a few points I would like to clarify. You stated in your direct examination that when you were interrogated in the British zone, you were beaten by some of the people who held you in custody? Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever make any statement under duress?

A. No.

Q. Has anything been introduced in this Court which you did not voluntarily give, without any force or violence?

THE PRESIDENT: Please repeat the answer.

A. I said that in my direct examination this morning by my Defense lawyer I have emphasized the fact that the statements I made to Mr. Warten berg were not made under duress.

Q. By Mr. Ferencz) Inother words, there has not been introduced in Court here, any statement which you did not voluntarily make?

A. No. Everything was given voluntarily.

Q. Do you think it was an American authority who beat you while you were in confinement?

A. No. I know that it was not an American authority.

THE PRESIDENT: He did say that it was a British subject.

Q. (By Mr. Ferencz) You have told us that you were present in Duben and Pretsch when the Hitler order to kill all the Jews was passed on to the kommando leaders, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us, please, which of the defendants in this case you heard protesting against that order?

A. Yes. I have already said that the office chiefs themselves who were in the same official relations with Streckenbach, shouted while this lecture was given, and Ohlendorf was one of them. Furthermore, I also tried to give a general, impression which I had. I cannot of course, remember the individual people who expressed their disaproval.

Q. You do remember Ohlendorf shouting disapproval? Do you remember what he shouted?

A. During my interrogation I tried to express that I believe I have heard shoutings of that kind, cat-calls, saying, "How is this to be done!!! that is impossible!!! - -

Q. You say you believe that Ohlendorf shouted, "This is impossible". You are not sure that you heard him say that?

A. I can only emphasize again that the impressions of the situation then, are just general impressions, and as such they are not in front of me now in detail.

Q. Then you do not remember specifically any of these defendants protesting the extermination order?

A. I said already, that in the case of Ohlendorf Ican confirm it -- or, I believe I can do so because the number of those who had this particularly high rank was very small.

Q. You don't remember anything specific about any other . Is that correct?

A. I can give no details.

Q. You stated also that the general task of extermination was explained , but the details were left to the kommando leaders. Is that correct?

A. As far as the carrying out goes, yes. We did not get any detailed instructions as to the carrying out.

Q. You say there that the kommando leaders themselves must be responsible for how these general orders were actually carried out. Is that correct.

A. I have said that we were left to our fate -- that is, I want to express by this that the general order was passed on to us, but unfortunately, we were not told how this order was to be carried out in detail.

Q. Therefore, it was the responsibility of the Einsatzkommando leaders as to how they carried out this Fuehrer order. Is that correct?

A. Yes, unless they did not get any special orders from their group leaders.

Q. You stated in your direct examination that in several localities you were kept busy collecting archives and documents for the purpose of study. That's correct, isn't it.

A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. Was that part of the task of all Einsatzkommandos?

A. Yes, certainly . We had to take care that interesting and relevant Communist material would be seized and used.

Q. Why, then would there be any need for a kommando whose special function it was to collect archives?

A. You are thinking of Advance Kommando Moscow?

Q. Yes.

A. Apart from what I have stated before concerning the individual details of Vorkommando Moscow I have no knowledge, but the expression "Vorkommando" Moscow, shows that it means the seizure of very important material. Material in Moscow, the Communist capital. That does not change the fact that, of course, every kommando had the task of collecting Communist material which it found, and to safeguard it, to translate it, and to report things to the RSHA which might be of interest to

Q. Are you able to state as a fact that you know that Vorkommando Moscow had the sole function of collecting archives?

A. I have already said that apart from the statement of Nebe which I just mentioned, I never heard anything about the Advance Kommando Moscow. I must ask you to be satisfied with this as I have nothing more to add.

Q. Then you actually don't know what the function of Vorkommando Moscow was?

A. The statement Nebe made to me dealt with this particular assignment but all I know about it is from what Nebe told me as I have already said.

Q. Do you recall meeting with Nebe and Six and some other persons in Warsaw?

A. No, nothing about this is known to me. A conference there is not known to me.

Q. Do you recall meeting there in the presence of a Police Commissioner named Muller?

A. I take it that it must be Police Kommissar Muller who has been talked about here before?

Q. That is correct.

A. We then went to Warsaw for assignment and in passing through Warsaw in the evening we were received by the named Muller. He invited us and we sat at his fire place and we talked a little. I think that happened the only evening when I was in Warsaw.

Q. Who else was present at that meeting?

A. I don't remember any details.

Q. Was Nebe there?

A. Yes, I think he was because Nebe was there at the same time I was there.

Q. Was Six there?

A. Six, I did not see.

Q. Isn't it a fact that the Vorkommando Moscow was part of Einsatz Gruppe B?

A. I cannot say it, apart from this discussion which I reported about I never had anything to do with Vorkommando Moscow and I never was in contact with it during this short time.

Q. In that discussion with Nebe, didn't he say Vorkommando Moscow is part of my Einsatz Group? How was it he talked about it if it was not a part of his Einsatz Group? other conclusion. I only received knowledge of the existence of this Kommando and the information that I would no longer have to deal with the safeguarding and maintenance of material in Moscow, and with this my interest ceased. As to questions of subordination I did not trouble about because they were not very interesting to me or at least not at that time.

Q. You mean he came to you and told you about Vorkommando Moscow which was a completely new name to you and you didn't ask him what it was, who it was attached to and what it was doing around there, is that what you are trying to say?

A. Nebe told me what assignment it had to deal with or at least insofar as I considered this new assignment concerning myself. This was all that interested me.

Q. You stated in your direct examination that in Wilna you went to G-2 of the Army Command and requested permission to advance with the troops, is that correct?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And you stated that the permission was refused and your superior officer ordered you not to advance, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. You also stated that you violated that order of your superior officer and did in fact advance on 2 July, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you ever court martialed for violating the order of your superior in time of war?

A. No, I have already explained the further development, as I have said myself, I reported to the Chief at Minsk who asked me to come to see him, for, of course, I had admitted, these reproaches were justified, but I could point out to him that I had been very successful at Minsk, and that I had many reasons for my decision on this particular point and I put them over so convincingly that he was very friendly to me. your military superior in time of war and nothing happened as a result except he became very friendly to you?

A. The disapproval of my request came from the G-2, who was a major. I myself was an Obersturmbannfuehrer, therefore, according to the military standing I was a Lieutenant Colonel and therefore, I decided for myself and later on I had this decision of mine sanctioned by the superior officer of the G-2.

Q. Now I asked you just a few moments ago whether you refused or violated the order of your superior officer and did in fact advance, and your answer was "yes". Are you now changing that answer and saying it was not your superior officer?

A. No, when I gave this answer I was trying to draw your attention to the disobedience, of course, the G-2 was not a superior officer in his rank as a major.

Q. In other words, you now change your answer from what you gave me a few moments ago to my question. My question then was that the permission was refused and your superior officer ordered you not to advance; and you said "yes" and I then asked you whether you violated that order of your superior officer and you said "yes" and now you tell us it was not your superior officer. Are you then changing your answer to the two previous questions?

A. I cannot see any change in this. I just wanted to emphasize a certain point, referring to the main point about which we are debating now.

Q. You stated also in your direct examination that you reported to Nebe about events in Polosk, and in this report you emphasized that the city had been completely burned out and that the population was hardly there any more, is that correct? Did you make that report to Nebe?

A. Yes.

Q. You also stated that in reality a considerable part of the population was still there and certainly not all the houses had been burned, did you also state that?

A. Well, I don't know whether I used the expression "considerable", but in any case I said there were sufficient people who would justify the stationing of a Einsatz kommando of the Security Police there.

Q. Therefore, in an official report to your superior officer you reported one thing when you knew the opposite to be true, isn't that correct?

A. I said yesterday when the President dealt with this problem that in my opinion it was not a false report but that it was only colored with a tinge, which I thought I could justify in my own conscience.

Q. You regard that as just a coloring or a tinge, when the facts of the situation are that the city is not burned out and you say it is burned out and the population are largely still there and you say it is not hardly there any more. You don't regard that as anything more than a coloring or tinge, is that what you say?

A. Yes, that is what I said.

Q. Then if you make an official report to your superior officer in which you report one thing and you know the opposite to be true, you regard that as merely a coloring and a tinge?

A. I can only point out again that sharp contracts and the formulations which you are using at the moment, Mr. Prosecutor, do not describe the proper situation.

I must ask you to look at it as I formulated it yesterday, that is, I gave them a slight coloring in order to evade the psychological pressure of a possible execution.

Q. I am giving you your own words as I get it from the official transcript, and the way I read it you reported one thing when you knew the opposite to be true. Now do you deny that? Let me repeat it and make it more simple. You said the city had been completely burned out, was the city completely burned out in fact?

A. Not completely but to a large extent.

Q. Then your statement that the city was completely burned out was false, isn't that so?

A. No, not as far as this is concerned.

Q. Just a moment, you said in your report that the city was completely burned out; you tell me now that the city was not completely burned out, and I ask you, wasn't your report then false and what is your answer?

A. It is the same, that was mentioned by the President already yesterday and the President was satisfied with my statement that I did not regard this as a false report but only a coloring, which was considered justified because of the special situation.

THE PRESIDENT: Well now, witness, I am glad you are happy in thinking I was happy with your answer, but suppose you answer the Prosecutor's question. Now he puts it to you very simply, namely, you reported the city was completely burned out, and in point of fact you say it was not completely burned out. Now he asked you if your report to that extent was not false? Now please answer that.

WITNESS: I do not like to use the expression "falsify" or "false". I would like to say, "slightly exaggerated".

THE PRESIDENT: Does that make you happy, Mr. Prosecutor?

MR. FERENCZ: No, Your Honor, but I think the answer is quite clear.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think we will all be happy if we have a little recess of fifteen minutes.

(A short recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. MAYER: Dr. Mayer for the defendant Steimle. Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Steimle be excused tomorrow afternoon from session, so that I may prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Steimle will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow afternoon in accordance with request of his attorney.

DR. MAYER: Thank you, Your Honor.

DR.HOFFMANN: Dr. Hoffmann for the defendant Nosske. Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Nosske be excused for tomorrow all day in order to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Nosske will be excused from attendance in count all day tomorrow. BY MR. FERENCZ: You suggested or stated in your direct examination that you were not a member of the SD, is that correct?

A Yes. Not a fulltime member of the SD.

Q Were you a member of the SD after 1939?

Q Yes or no? Can you answer a very simple question. Were you or were you not a member of the SD after 1939? personnel file of the SD. One could not describe it in a different way. That is why one can not answer yes or no.

Q The question is, were you a member of the SD after 1939? Is your answer yes, because you were a Police Official too, or your answer no, because you were just a police official and not a member of the SD in any form? What is your answer? It is a simple question, and I would appreciate a simple answer.

DR. LUMMENT: Your Honor, may I raise on objection against this question. The Prosecutor should at least explain what he understands by SD.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I am sure the defendant knows what SD means. If he does not, I will be glad to give him a copy of the IMT judgment to study tonight, but I am quite sure he must know what SD means.

THE PRESIDENT: The witness will answer the question. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q Were you or were you not a member of the SD after 1939? organization was analyzed, only the question of fulltime membership was raised, the fulltime membership in the SS, or of the Security

Police, or of the General-SS, or of the Waffen-SS. That was the only question under debate. Court to Document Book III-B, page 24. It is Document No-3245. Here you will see at the beginning of the year of 1935, going through the year of 1941, there are six times listed your rank followed by the notation "Leader in SD Main Office." Do you say that all those six reports covering six year period are false?

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor,I consider this question irrelevant for the following reasons: Before the afternoon recess I asked the witness on this vary question, and he gave a detailed and clear reply to it. It is possible that the reply may not have been noticed by Mr. Ferencz, but actually the witness could only repeat exactly what he said this morning, and for that reason I consider the question irrelevant.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, the objection stated on the ground of irrelevancy , however, should be quite apparent as not well founded as to his membership in the SD, inasmuch as it has been charged in the indictment as a very relevant point.

THE PRESIDENT: If it was relevant in the direct examination, certainly, it is relevant in the cross examination. The witness will answer the question.

BY MR. FERENCZ: is inaccurate in reporting six times, over a period of six years, that you were a lender in the SD Main Office?

A The manner in which it is written is misleading. The reason is a group leader - Gruppenleiter, in the SD Main Office, as mentioned in the document before us, is a fulltime SD leader, but in this Main Office, which is called SD Main Office, has the tasks of a group leader. He is paid by the SD, therefore, by the Party, and SD officials are his superiors and take care of his promotion. Deviating from this description which I just gave here, all police members who within the assimilation-system received ranks in the SS of equal grade. This was merely shown in order to enable them to keep a personnel file in this SD Main Office. The purpose was that the Chief of the Security Police who simultaneously was the Chief of the SD, would be given the possibility to promote SS personnel, and to promote these police officers in the SS at the same time. Therefore, I have known SS leaders in SS Main Offices which had nothing to do with theSD and the police, just the same way the personnel files were kept of these police members in the SD Main Office, which gave this misleading idea that I was Gruppenleiter in Office I of the Reich Security Main Office, therefore, a State Police authority. you to be a leader in the SD, they are incorrect or misleading?

Q Do you recall an interrogation you had by Mr. Wartenberg on 29 June 1947?

Q What did you tell Mr. Wartenberg about your Gestapo membership at that time?

general?

Q What did you tell Mr. Wartenberg about your membership in the Gestapo when you were interrogated by him on 29 June? Therefore, if you want me to repeat it I can do this briefly. Brief activity with Gestapoleiter in Drotmund; after that Gestapoleiter activity in State Police or rather activity in the Prussian State Police Office; after that for two years active to the State Police Chief in

Halle on the Sale River; after that for about two years State Police Chief in Hanover; and then office as State Police Chief in Berlin; after that -

Q That is adequate. I shall ask you the questions more specifically. Didn't you state that in 1954 after the Roehm revolt, that you went into the Prussian Gestapo?

A Shortly before the Roehm revolt?

Q Yes, you went in the Gestapo shortly before 1934. is that correct?

A Shortly before the Roehm revolt; I think it was in June 1934.

Q Didn't you also state in the interrogation that at the beginning of the Russian War, you went as Personnel Referent to Gestapo Headquarters, and remained there until July 1942 with the exception of a short time that you were commander of Einsatzkommando-VII-A? 1942, is that correct?

Q Didn't you also state in the interrogation that in 1945, Ants-IV, or Gestapo sent you to Bad Blankenberg?

A I was sent by Office-I, if one wants to be quite correct. The censorship office which I was supposed to take over there was a matter which was part of Office-IV, the Reich Security Main Office.

Q That was the Gestapo, was it not, Office IV?

A Yes. I myself as I explained this morning, after my return from Greece I had my position in Office I of the Reich Security Main Office.

I also emphasized that Kaltenbrunner's attitude of dislike towards me had the result that they tried to transfer me to the Reich Ministry of Finance. During this time of indecision this transfer to Blankenberg took place, and because of this state of indecision my fulltime job was not transferred. The censorship agency was to become part of OfficeIV; it also employed army officers who were also paid by the Army. All of this opened the question I was supposed to solve, and I already said this morning, if I may conclude, that if I had remained there longer, and if I would have incorporated this censorship office into S-IV, then probably Office-I would have transferred me to Office-IV of the RSHA. not fully explained, and I shall begin with Document Book II-B, page 27; page 29 of the German, Document NO-2844. Here you will see that the total figures of persons liquidated by Vorkommando VII-A up to 20 August were 996. You have told us that you were the commanding officer of Vorkonmando VII_A until the 15th or 17th of August,is that correct? inaccurate, is that correct? page 30, Document NO-2937. You will notice here that it says that the civilian prisoner camp was built in Minsk by the first troops, and almost all male inhabitants were placed in the camp, and the Einsatzgruppe B combed the camp and liquidated over one-thousand Jews, and they continued with daily executions of other Asiatic officials, and so forth. Now you have stated that you were in Minsk from 4 July until 7 July, is that correct?

papers, and collecting archives, is that correct? inhabitants of the town, and putting them into the camp,and the execution by Einsatzgruppe B of over one thousand people?

Q You don't know anything about that; you were in Minsk during the month of July, during the period while this was taking place, but you don't know anything about that?

A I don't know whether this happened during that time. The term "by the troops who first passed through there", this expression might mean a time which starts at a period when I had already left. In any case, I don't know about the civilian prison camp which was combed out by the Security Police or by the Group during those three days while I was in Minsk, I don't know anything about that.

Q Would you turn to Page 28 of the same document book. I don't know the German number. It is Document NO-4537 (B). You will notice under Einsatzkommando 7a -

A I beg your pardon, I haven't got it.

Q It is the next to the last page of Document NO-4537 (E) , which should he just a few pages before the document we have just been looking at.

A Do you mean page 32?

Q I don't know the German page. It is the report of 3 July 1941 under Einsatzkommando 7a, Document 4537 (E). time, were you not?

A You are talking about the report on Wilna? the Communist Party were liquidated. That was done under your command, was it not? ed particularly that I considered this report to be wrong. I also tried to explain it.

your command and you said "Yes". Do you change your answer?

A No. I always emphasized and made it very clear that my kommando did not carry out any shootings in Wilna. out executions in Wilna is wrong? Blume Document Book, page 63. I don't know what page it is of the German, but it is a report of 2 July. It is page 63. It is the report of 2 July at which time you were in command of Einsatzkommando 7a, and it it says that operation started for the arrest of Communists and Jews, and approximately 8,000 Jews in Wilna. Does that mean that 5,000 Jews in Wilna were arrested? report does not talk of the arrest of 5,000 Jews, but the figure, 8,000 obviously is, according to the German wording, an objective statement of the figure of the Jews living in Wilna. Concerning the first sentense where it says that Sonderkommando 7a carried out an operation of arrest against Communists and Jews, I want to explain it like this Already this morning I described - or was it Friday - that I visited the local kommando in Wilna, I talked to this man when discussing security questions with him. I pointed out to him that in the interest of security the arrests of Communists in Wilna should he carried out and arranged by him, and that it was necessary that the Jews living in Wilna be put into ghettos and supervised there. I reported about this to Nebe and he formulated it as is written here. Wilna, and that they be put into a ghetto, is that correct? it was done because he was remaining there and he had under him the Secret Field Police for this purpose.

that correct?

A "Order" is not the right expression because he was not subordinate to me. I merely informed him that this security measure was expected of him. kill all the Jews, did you not? into a ghetto, you knew that they would all be killed in accordance with the Hitler order, did you not? modify the Hitler order. in Wilna. That is, I did what I thought was possible in order not to evade the Fuehrer order very much. Anything beyond that I could not avoid. and put them into a ghetto, and yon knew at that time that there was an order outstanding to have all the Jews killed?

Q Didn't you know that in ordering them to be arrested and put into a ghetto you were assisting in the murder of defenseless people? the actual carrying out of this order would never come about or that at least it would be rescinded. My attempt in Vibosk proves this. why did you go out of your way to instruct somebody,who, you say, was not your subordinate, to arrest all the Jews. Why didn't you just let them escape?

and I only tried to evade the order to such an extent as I personally considered it intenable.

Q In other words, you didn't care if somebody else killed the Jews and if you helped them to do it as long as you didn't have to carry it out yourself, is that correct? draw that conclusion. I would have been glad if there had been an other possibility. kill the Jews or if the Jews were not killed, yet you instructed somebody who was not your subordinate to arrest them and put them in a ghetto.

A Well, I tried to explain it before: in carrying out the order I did what I considered justifiable. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Witness - Pardon me, Mr. Ferencz. In answer to Mr. Ferencz's question as to why you did a certain thing in Wilna , well, you did there what you did in Vitobsk, but Vitobsk followed Wilna. You were in Wilna in the early part of July or latter part of June and didn't reach the other city for another two weeks. That is true, isn't it?

Q Yes, well, then you couldn't use What you did in Vitobsk as a precedent for what you did in Wilna since it followed in point of timee. to believe this, what my ideas were, from the very beginning. Of course, this report by me on the Jews was only made in Vitobsk. My emphasis is merely to point out what feelings and ideas led me from the very beginning.

QWell, I don't think that you have answered Mr. Ferencz's question which was very specific, namely, if you did not want to see defense less Jews executed and you wished to evade that part of the Fuehrer order why did you in Wilna go out of your way to instruct someone who was not subordinate to you to arrest Jews end place them in a ghetto where, being isolated, they could very easily be subject to the Fuehrer order of execution.

Now, please answer that question directly and don't refer us to Vitobsk.

That part of the Fuehrer Order which I considered right and possible, I thought I had to carry out here. If I had not done anything, it would have been an absolute and complete refusal to obey which I could not do and which I did not do. place where there could be no doubt as to their identity that they could become subject to the Fuehrer Order which ordered their execution. hopes for a alteration of this order existed as ever. extent of having them collected, hoping that after they had been collected that then through some chance they might not be killed? BY MR. FERENCZ: Sec. Is that the same place as is shown in our documents to be Lachowicze?

A In my document?

Q No, you referred to your Kommando being in Loswitha See. The documents refer to a place spelled L-a-c-h-o-w-i-c-z-e. Is that the same place?

A I cannot say that. I only know the lake under the name of Loswitha Lake, L-o-s-w-i-t-h-a, but may I ask you which documents you are referring to? from the top, there is the word, Lachowicze. Is that the same place as what you described as Loswitha See? Is thus the Russian spelling for it, or is that another place?

A I still have not found the report. I hardly think so, because that is a completely different word. It doesn't say there is a lake. There is a locality that is named - and saboteurs were shot by your kommando, is that correct?

A No, I did not say that. I talked about the fact, that during the time of my command after Smolensk, approximately 20 partisans and saboteurs were shot by my kommando. There not only the time on the Loswitha Lake is concerned. had told the farmers not to bring in the harvest. Do you recall that ? think so, is that correct?

Q Tell me, what sort of a trial did these men have? selves and also through wetnesses who were questioned. I then personally judged then end sentenced them.

Q How long did the trial last? omitted. Of course, it depended on where those men had stopped the farmer's from bringing in the harvest.

Q How long did the trial last? shot under your command? decision.

Q what did the accused say in their defense? witnesses proved the opposite. Apart from that , they could not prove where they came from. Obviously they had been sent over by the Russians.

Q Tell me with what crimes were those men charged? make them destroy the harvest; that is, only to keep back as much as they needed for their personal consumption. In other words, they wanted to make impossible for the German Army to get food from the country. their countrymen not to assist an aggressive invader? That was a crime which you deemed punishable by death? helped in seizing such men.

Q Answer my question, please. My question is: These men were charged with trying to have their countrymen refuse to assist an aggressive invader, and you consider this a crime punishable by death?

It was an appack on the possibility of the German Army to carry out the Russian campaign successfully.

Q Are yoy familiar with the rules of war? which decreed that saboteurs and functionairies were to be shot. the Nazi invaders as a saboteurs, because he refused to help the Nazis and that was worthy of the death sentence which you invoked?

Q Are you familiar with the rules of war? Order. That was my war Law.

Q You don't know any other war law than the Fuehrer Order? You followed none other, is that correct?

A You are thinking of the Hague Convention?

and disregarded any other rules of war? Convention would allow such a possibility, but according to the situation in the East and the attitude of most of the people themselves

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, are you leaving this incident?

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: I just wanted to ask one question. Witness, when you related your episode before you said that the crime of the men was that they had told the farmers not to bring in the harvest. Did I understand you correctly?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I ordered it.

THE PRESIDENT: So that whatever they did, it was confined to what they said? It was a matter of what they said?

THE WITNESS: Of course, people were threatened too and in the manner of the partisan combatting in Russia, one could expect that partisans who could not carry out their orders, because the population refused to help them, could be used as reprisals.

THE PRESIDENT: You told us when you volunteered this story that these three men had told the farmers not to bring in the harvest. Now is that what you told us on Friday?

THE WITNESS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, and do you still stand on that?

THE WITNESS: I want to extent my statement by saying what I just said.

THE PRESIDENT: But whatever they did,was confined to a speech. They themselvesdid not set fire to any harvest or in any way destroy the harvest?

THE WITNESS: No, they merely asked for this under threats.

Q (By Mr. Ferencz) I call your attention now to Document Book II-B, page 24 of the English, page 24 of the German. Here is says which 74 persons were shot. Was that once under your command? out during my time.

Q In that event, we'll turn to some things you admitted yesterday. You stated in your direct testimony that on about the 7th of July members of Einsatzkommando 7a, which was under your command at that time, executed about 50 or 60 persons in Minsk, is that correct? is that correct?

Q. Describe, if you will, what you saw while your subordinated were shooting down these 50 or 60 people.

A. On Friday I gave a detailed description of this occurrence.

Q. Did your men use whips?

A. No.

Q. Here the victims all males?

A. Yes. Only men.

Q. Did they resist in any way?

A. No.

Q. Were they singing, as Ohlendorf told us the people were doing, whom this kommando shot?

A. No.

Q. In other words, they went along like sheep to the slaughter, without resistance, without comments, without struggle of any kind. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And 50 or 60 persons were shot at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Yesterday you mentioned also that in Witebsk, as shown in the reports 27 Jews had been shot for not coming to work; and they were shot by Einsatzkommando 7-A, which was under your command at that time. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You say that Foltis did that on Nebe's order, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is Nebe?

A. Nebe is dead.

Q. Where is Foltis?

A. Foltis was killed in the war.

Q. Did you reprimand Foltis for this action - shooting defenseless people down in the streets?

A. No, I already mentioned that I even reported this event to Nebe in order to calm him down.

Q. In other words, you used this to your own advantage, rather than checking it, and reprimanding it as being something wrong?

A. It was impossible for me, after the scene in Minsk, to inform a leader subordinate to me about carrying out an order and to reprimand him about carrying out an order of a superior.

Q. In other words, you did nothing to reprimand Foltis, or to indicate your displeasure at his action in shooting down defenseless people?

A. That I, as a man, did not feel inclined towards this, Foltis certainly knew - but I had not the possibility of reproaching him.

Q. Now, you stated also that in Witebsk on the 13th of July you personally ordered the execution of about 80 people. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you were present during the whole time, when these people were being killed, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew at that time, did you not, that innocent people were being shot?

A. I knew that these shootings were part of the Fuehrer decree, and therefore I had to order it. I know that the individual could not be proven to have committed any crime. The general reason given here for the shooting order was the only reason I knew and the only one I had heard of.

Q. In other words, you did know that you were shooting innocent people, did you not?

A. I know, as I have already said, that none of them could be proven to have committed any crime.

Q. Then they were innocent and defenseless people?

A. The Fuehrer decree had given a reason...... That was the only thing we thought of, and I said, myself, that it was not sufficient as a reason for me, personally.

Q. Why don't you answer my question, Blume? I am asking you...... I am asking you if you knew that innocent people were being shot, people who had committed no crime, people who had done nothing wrong against anyone, and they were being shot because they had Jewish blood, or because you thought they had Jewish blood.

A. Jewish blood was never mentioned. All that was mentioned in the Fuehrer decree was they they were bearers of the Bolshevist idea. That was the only thing we realized.

Q. Were they all Jews?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make any investigation of any kind to determine whether they were Communists, or opposed to the Communists, or whether they had taken any political action at any time?

A. No.

Q. Then you assumed, by the mere fact that they were Jewish, that they were bearers of Bolshevism, and that they should be killed. Is that correct?

A. I have already stated that the Fuehrer decree maintained this as a motive for the order given to us. As part of this order, and pressure by Nebe, I have carried out these shootings.

Q. Were children shot at that time, and by your Gruppe?

A. I explained expressly, that women and children were never shot by me.

Q. In other words, you did not agree, and do not agree, with Ohlendorf's view that children had to be shot inasmuch as they constituted a future security threat to Germany? Do you agree, or did you agree, with that view?

A. No, or else I would have done it. I just could not do it.

Q. And at this execution in Witebsk which you ordered and supervised, were there any beatings?

A. No.

Q. And 80 people again walked like lambs to slaughter quietly, and were shot?

A. Yes.

Q. And you described the methods you used to relieve your men of the mental strain...... You say you sat with them, and you told them this was necessary, you were protecting the German women, and you tried to divert their minds from their work....... Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do to ease the minds of the people who were about to be murdered?

A. I did everything I could. That is, I made them realize as late as possible what was going to happen to them, and then carried out the shooting as quickly as possible.

Q. Did you go and talk to them, and tell them...... People, you are going to be shot, but this is for the Fuehrer....... Did you say anything to them? What did you do?

A. No.

Q. In other words, you were very busy trying to cheer up the murderers, but you did nothing to help the victims? And that is the extent of your humanness?

A. I believe that I could not have done more for the victims.

Q. You mean you could not have done more than nothing except to shoot them?

A. I did it in as humane a manner as possible.

Q. You say you were so sick afterwards that you had to go home and vomit at the thought of the executions which were carried out under your command......is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. Isn't it also true that later, in Kadari, you had a concentration camp under your command?

A. Yes. As far as administration work.

Q. Isn't it also true that you received an order when you were Security Police commander in June 1942, you received an order from Himmler to execute whole clans, or relatives, of anybody assisting the Partisans?

A. No. I did not got any such orders.

Q. Let me refresh your memory. We will just be a few moments, your Honor. I will show you the order from Himmler, saying that you are in charge of a group, and that if anyone assists partisans the whole.....all the relatives are to be killed. That order, which you have before you now, states, in paragraph 8, that SS Standartenfuehrer Blume will be in charge of certain security police actions, and on the next page the inclosure says that the men of a guilty family, in many cases the whole clan, are to be executed on principle. The women are to be arrested and taken to a concentration camp. But the children are to be removed from their homes, etcetera.

Do you remember that order now?

A. Yes. But may I explain and emphasize that you talk about Kadari, and not of Feldes. I therefore thought of Greece, and not of Feldes.

Q. I am talking of two different places. I am sorry you were confused. But in spite of the fact that you had to vomit at the sight of murders which you ordered, you still received from Himmler additional orders to carry out executions of defenseless people, and were the commander of a concentration camp, is that true?

A. This activity in Feldes I am very proud of. The reason is that here, for once, I succeeded in stopping the carrying out of this order and modifying it.

Q. We are not charging you with any crimes in Feldes. And I am just asking you......is it true that you received such an order......and what is your answer? Is it true that you received such an order, did you or didn't you? An order from Himmler...... and it has your name on it.

A. Yes; I do not remember the order in detail, but I know the measures which had been ordered in Feldes, and if it suits you I would like to describe briefly how I reacted to this.

Q. I have only one more question. Is it correct to say that under your command, units killed 50 to 60 innocent people in Minsk - 50 to 60 in Wellesch - plus 27 on the streets of Witebsk plus 80 in Witebsk - under your supervision, giving a total of about 200 people killed by units under your command while you were in command?

A. Yes, I agree to this.

MR. FERENCZ: No further questions, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning at nine-thirty.

(The Tribunal recessed until 0930 hours, 5 November 1947.)

Otto Ohlendorf, et al., defendants, sitting at Nurnberg

THE MARHSAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal No. 2.

Military Tribunal 2 is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

DR. MAYER (Attorney for the defendant Steimle): Your Honor, after the witness Blume, who is now on the witness stand, it will be the turn of the defendant Sandberger, who is ill at the moment. Next would be the defendant Seibert and I am the defense counsel for Steimle. I have a request to make of the High Tribunal, that I may take the case of Steimle next, because Steimle took over Sonderkommando 7a from Blume and therefore this case would follow the present line.

THE PRESIDENT: Do we have a report from the prison that Sandberger is ill and unable to appear in court?

And what is the report on Seibert?

DR. MAYER: The defendant Seibert belongs to another Einsatzgruppe, while the defendant Steimle belongs to the same Einsatz group as the defendant Blume.

MR. FERENCZ: If your Honors please, the prosecution has no objection to the suggestion of the defense counsel.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, Dr. Mayer, the Tribunal will then hear the defendant Steimle when the defendant Blume will have left the stand.

DR. MAYER: Thank you very much, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You are very welcome.

DR. SCHWARZ (Attorney for the defendant Jost): Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Jost be excused today from the session. He just told me that he is not feeling well.

THE PRESIDENT: In view of the report made by counsel, the defendant Jost will be excused from attendance in court today on account of illness. The Marshal will see that he is taken from the court room.

DR. SCHWARZ: Thank you, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You are welcome.

(The defendant Jost was excused from court.)

DR. DURCHHOLZ (Attorney for the defendant Schulz): Your Honor, I take the liberty to ask that after having examined the defendant Blume, I should like to hear a witness. It is the witness, Dr. Lane. He arrived here a few days ago and has to go away on official business. The examination will be very short.

THE PRESIDENT: Your request is granted.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Dr. Lummert.

DR. LUMMERT: Attorney for the Defendant Blume. I ask to be allowed to address a few questions to the witness in redirect examination.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. LUMMERT: had partisans shot, or saboteurs, after having examined these persons closely and finding them guilty. Mr. Ferencz asked you in this connection whether you knew the International Laws and the laws of warfare. You yourself pointed out the Hague Convention. In your reply you then said that you acted following a Fuehrer Order. At that point it was not quite clear which Fuehrer Decree was meant. Could you give an explanation about that, please? which, in view of the partisan fighting which was expected in Russia, and saboteur actions, and political activists, permitted and ordered that every officer of the German Army be allowed to shoot saboteurs and partisans on their own authority and sentence them to death. I thought of that decree.

THE PRESIDENT: This may have been an inversion of order on the part of the interpreter, or it may be this is the way the witness stated it, but the way we got it was that every officer was permitted to shoot partisans and then authorize their execution.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, may I add that the translation into English out of German has such great difficulties, because the verb in the German is only at the end and we have to guess it, while in the English, it is at the beginning of the sentence. In this case I noticed exactly that the translator imagined the word to be shot beforehand and then the witness used another word, and that is why the word "sentence" came after "shot."

THE PRESIDENT: The correction and the explanation will appear on the record. BY DR. LUMMERT: at the time told that saboteurs and partisans could be sentenced to death and how were they told about this?

A Such announcements were made by posters in cities. Leaflets were dropped by plane over the flat land. this Special Fuehrer Decree?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Witness, were leaflets dropped to inform the Jews that they were going to be executed? THE WITNESS: No, your Honor. They only mentioned saboteurs and partisans in these leaflets.

DR. LUMMERT: Now, your Honor, I have one more question about the point Mr. Ferencz raised at the very end of the session yesterday. Mr. Ferencz gave the witnessra document and last night when I talked to the witness he told me that he did not have sufficient time to look at the document very closely; that he was not even able to determine whether his own name appeared in the document or not. I have no doubt about it, because Mr. Ferencz said so yesterday however it is not certain exactly where the name of the witness appears whether it was in the middle of the text or in the address.

I could not find that myself yesterday either and before I am able to put further questions in the redirect examination I therefore wanted to ask Mr. Ferencz to let me have this document for a short moment to look into it, if he would be so kind.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I have just sent for the document. I do not have it with me. It was just shown to the witness for the purpose of refreshing his memory on a very collateral point and I don't think we should go into a lengthy examination of it, inasmuch as I do not intend to introduce it as an exhibit. I can assure the Tribunal that on page 1 Nauman is mentioned as Commanding Officer of a certain Group and the second part which I showed him was an Enclosure describing what actions should be taken against partisans. I showed the defendant the enclosure and asked him a question concerning that and that was all.

DR. LUMMERT: Mr. Ferencz just mentioned the name "Nauman". I presume that it is a mistake. He meant Blume.

I do not want to take the Tribunal's time unnecessarily. Perhaps it is not necessary of all that I address further questions to the witness, particularly since the document was not submitted as an exhibit, and therefore has not become part of the record, Perhaps it may be a good way out if I put the question aside for the moment and request from the Tribunal, after having seeing the document, to come back to this point.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal is always disposed to assist counsel in the presentation of its case and will leave it to Dr. Lummert to decide whether he wishes to examine on this or not. If the document will be here in a matter of a minute or two, we would prefer that the examination on that subject be finished now. If it is a matter of ten minutes or more, then we could come back to it later.

DR. LUMMERT: Yes, your Honor, At the moment, I have no further questions of the witness and ask that the document be handed over.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

DR. LUMMERT: Apart from that, may I mention the following? I had the intention of having a witness Radl called to the witness stand yesterday.

The Tribunal had granted me this witness. He arrived here in Nurnberg last Friday and our information center informed me that the witness must absolutely leave Nurnber today already and that this term could not be prolonged. At any rate, since there was no possibility yesterday to call the witness I took an affidavit from him last evening and the witness left this morning and I ask for permission that I may introduce this affidavit later on in Document Book II. Document Book II is not completed yet. It has not yet been translated. I shall also submit a few other affidavits by witness and will add them to Document Book II and will submit them later. These affidavits I have not got as yet. the witness stand. The name is Krugmayer. This witness has not arrived in Nurnberg as yet, and I therefore ask for permission that I may bring him here later on the witness stand, after he has arrived here.

THE PRESIDENT: I might say, Dr. Lummert, and to all defense counsel that if any of you find yourselves in the situation that Dr. Lummert found himself in yesterday with a witness whose stay was limited to a day that you should inform the Tribunal here in open court or even in chambers of your difficulties and we assure you that we will make every effort to see to it that the witness will be heard or proper documentation made of that fact that he is here in Nurnberg ready to testify; in some way or other we ought to be able to accommodate your requests along that line.

DR. LUMMERT: Thank you very much, Your honor. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Witness, in your affidavit there appears a paragraph which I don't quite thoroughly comprehend: No. 5, which says, "I received all orders regarding executions, directions and duties of Sonderkommando 7a which was subordinate to me in Dueben or in the Prinz Albrecht Palais in Berlin. During the campaign I never received any further orders". Did you not receive orders elsewhere? orders about the extermination of the Jews, but not the instructions given by Nebe later on.

Q I see. In referring to the executions themselves, you also say in this affidavit there was no physician present, but that the leader of the execution party was responsible for the completion of the job and had to make certain that the victims were actually dead. Did this mean, since the victims fell automatically in the pro-dug grave that the officer would have to get down into the ditch to make the examination after the firing had ceased? and only after the shooting the men of the Kommando put them into the grave.

different from that used by the defendant Blobel?

A Your Honor, at the moment I cannot remember Blobel's description. ditch and that as they were shot from the rear they fell into the ditch. They fell into the grave already prepared beforehand. That was the way he described an execution. to that, as they were shot from the front, as during any military shooting and the men were so far away from the grave that they did not fall into it immediately.

Q Yes. Were the executees blindfolded?

Q I see. Yesterday you indicated that the Jews were very active in Bolshevistic Russia politically; that they supported the Communist regime; that they were very active supporters then and now. Do we take from that that you believed that the Jews were a very formidable threat to the security of Germany because of their political allegiances?

A Yes, Your Honor. I believe and the investigations carried out in Peacetime gave me that impression that the Jews in the East, in Russia played a special part concerning Communist interests.

Q Were you in Russia prior to 1941?

A No, Your Honor. I already said that we had to examine and interrogate all those who had been active in Russia and who then returned to Germany. conditions in Eastern Russia. Did I understand you correctly? to get political information about the Russian territory. you, is that what I understand?

A No, Your Honor, it was like this. At the time the Russians had hired many German experts and engineers in order to build up their economic sphere. These men returned after some time when the Russians believed that they could continue their own economy on their own accord. The National Socialist State realized this opportuState Police agencies were asked to interrogate these people who returned. the Jews were a threat and a menace to the security of Germany? regime. this threat to the security of the German Reich that they should be exterminated? necessity of the security measures were more limited and I would not have drawn this consequence if I had been able to give instructions myself. menace and therefore had to be eliminated? instead of extermination I suggested that the Jews be gathered in ghettos and be resettled after the war. That was what I, as a small private person, would have ordered, if I had been able to give orders.

Q Well, then, you did not agree entirely with the Fuehrer Order?

Q At the time, did you have this reservation, or has that come since? sequence of this order, as I have already described raised all these feelings within me immediately.

order and reject part. You rejected that part which called upon you to exterminate indiscriminately men, women, and children Jews? Hitler being as wrong? Hitler as a murderer? first collision of my feelings with one of his orders, my reaction was not so strong that I would have allowed myself to think in that manner.

Q. Well, the reason you refused to accept that part of the order is because you regarded as wrong to strike down women and children entirely innocent of crime, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you would regard that kind of a killing as murder?

A. I beg your pardon. Would you please repeat that?

Q. You would regard the killing of innocent women and children as murder?

A. Well, now, I imagine it like that, of course; at the time, the Fuehrer was too great for me that I should have had such thoughts.

Q. Now, please answer my question. I will make the question more specific. You heard this order and the call for the extermination of all Jews. You said to yourself......"I will execute part of this order which calls for the liquidation of able-bodied Jews, but I will not execute that part which calls for the slaughter of innocent women and children because that is murder." Is that right?

A. This last conclusion I did not draw at the time, and could not have drawn.

Q. Then you did not regard the killing of innocent women and children as murder?

A. At the time, I certainly did not imagine it.

Q. You therefore at the time thought to kill women and children who had committed no crime as a perfectly proper procedure, and did not include murder?

A. No, your Honor.

Q. Well, why, then, didn't you follow out the order to kill women and children?

A. My consideration fought with the weight of the order, and my misgivings were so strong that I looked for a way out.

Q. Now, just a moment......did you regard the killing of women and children as proper?

A. No, your Honor.

Q. What was improper about it?

A. That the reason given did not convince me to that effect, or extent, that I would have found strength to carry out such an order.

Q. You regarded the killing of women and children as improper .......I come back to that........do you agree with that?

A. Yes.

Q. The Fuehrer had said that it was proper to kill them?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, you disagreed with the Fuehrer?

A. No, I fought against this conception, innerly.

Q. Now, please answer the question. You got this order. You agreed with it, so far as killing the men was concerned, you disagreed so far as killing women and children was concerned. The killing of women and children was improper, according to you. Is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, what law did the killing of women and children violate that caused you to conclude that it was improper?

A. My feeling arose against this.

Q. Well, now, your feelings must be based upon some principle. One doesn't feel vacantly. That law was being violated which Caused you not to execute that part of the order which was very specific?

A. My general humane feelings, which I had. But I could not make them concrete.....could not form a judgment.

Q. Was it the moral law?

A. That is what I wanted to say, your Honor.

Q. Then you believed that it was legal, but not moral?

A. I was just trying to say, your Honor - moral, already, is a judgment somebody makes about feelings or actions which he has or does, and at the time I did not come to a judgment because the man who had given the order was on such a high level for me that I did not take the liberty to pass a judgment about his order owing to feelings and actions which I, as a small commando leader, had.

I think that is the best way of expressing what I felt.

Q. Suppose a woman had been brought before you because of being a saboteur and a spy, and it was proven to you conclusively with plenty of evidence that she had been a spy against the German forces and had committed acts of sabotage. Would you have sentenced her to death?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes, because she would have committed a crime?

A. Yes, she would have committed a crime.

Q. Yes. Right. Now, let us suppose a woman had been brought before you who had committed no crime, and had you had this order of the Fuehrer saying that she should be shot because she was a Jewess....... Would you have shot her?

A. I would have to imagine myself back into that time.

Q. Well, imagine yourself back because your attorney told you yesterday to imagine yourself back in 1941, and to forget everything that happened since then.....so imagine yourself back. Here is a woman brought before you, and at the same time there is presented to you the Fuehrer order that this woman must be shot because she is a Jewess, but she has committed no crime......she is absolutely innocent. What would you do? Would you shoot her?

A. If I had had the order immediately before me, I probably could not have avoided following this order, but I didn't......

Q. Now just a moment. Then you would have shot her if you had this order?

A. I would have had to, yes.

Q. You would have shot her? Well, now, didn't you have this order all the time?

A. It was not in front of me in this immediate consequence. I would have had a way to escape, to get around it.

Q. But you had this order in your mind.......you never actually had it written out on paper, did you?

A. Yes, but my inner contradictions were so strong that the situation in which I was at that time won, so that I could not carry out this order.

Q. You have just said that if a woman had been brought before you, entirely innocent of crime, and you were informed at that moment of the Hitler order that all Jewesses must be killed, that you would have had her shot. Do you go back on that answer?

A. No, your Honor.

Q. Very well. All right. Then the Tribunal accepts your answer. So therefore that completely eliminates all that you said yesterday about not agreeing with Hitler on the execution of women, at least.

A. It was translated "included"......."Eingeschlossen", which I do not understand.

Q. Now let's give another illustration. Suppose a child had been brought before you - let us say a boy ten years of age and absolutely innocent of any crime, wrong-doing or mischief and they present you with a Fuehrer order which says that this boy must be executed because he is a Jew, he is the son of Jewish parents, he is a full-blooded Jew. Would you execute that order? Would you shoot this ten-year-old boy? Let us say there were 100 ten-year-old boys and you had this order. Would you execute them, these children?

A. In that case I would have committed suicide. I don't think my conscience would have stood this, because if I imagine how a small incident like this ill-treatment had brought me to such a state, which caused me to commit suicide, I don't think I could have possible carried out such a thing.

Q. Then you make a distinction between a woman who is absolutely innocent of crime and a child. You are a little more tender-hearted about children, is that right?

A. Yes, your Honor, I have 5 children myself. But I believe that a constant increase of impressions in examples which you gave, also in figures, had to come about, and that there is a limit somewhere, where a person in whom feeling is prevailing at it is the case with me, and who consequently stands up to it, Will get into a state where the connection between reason who commands and feeling who contradicts will bear and that he either goes mad or commits suicide.

Q. So you make a distinction with regard to numbers. If it is only one person it does not strike you as being too hard to accomplish; if there are a number, then the cumulative fact of the horror would cause you to hesitate in executing the order?

A. I would like to say it like this: The order which in itself is holy to me, in itself.

Q. The order was holy.......the Fuehrer order was holy to you.........is that what I understand you to say?

A. Which is sacred in itself, yes, for every German - had so much power that it needed a lot of upheaval either to vary it or not to obey it at all. And this strength of shock depends mostly on the impression which one has in such a situation; and, therefore, I mean that the number plays a part because there is a difference, of course, whether I shoot one person, or whether I have to do this repeatedly, and shoot many people. At one time there will be a moment when one's mind breaks. Even if one is ever prepared to obey.

Q. Since you were so prepared to obey, and you believed this Fuehrer order to be holy and sacred, then if only one child were brought before you, and you were presented with this order.... then you would have executed that one child?

A. I don't think, your Honor, that I would have been able to do it.

Q. Well, then you would have refused to obey the Fuehrer order?

A. Well, I probably would not have been able to do so. I would have had to commit suicide. And I consider all that possible according to the experience I had with the reaction of the human conscience.

Q. If Hitler had told you personally, standing at your side, to execute this ten-year-old boy, would you have followed his order?

A. I don't think so, your Honor - that the authority would have been so strong that I would have overcome my feelings.

Q So, then, you didn't adore Hitler to the extent that you would have committed murder?

A Surely the allegiance would have been broken. In any case, that would have been the beginning.

Q You would have executed a woman, but not a child?

A I really don't know, your Honor. I only said that I imagine that easier, but whether I could really have done this I cannot say now.

Q Now, Jews have been executed for burning houses, is that right? weren't they?

Q All right. We understood you to say that you had a bad conscience for only executing part of the order. Does that mean that you regretted that you had not obeyed entirely the Fuehrer order?

A Yes. This feeling of guilt was within me. The feeling of guilt about the fact that I, as an individual, was not able, and considered it impossible, to follow a Fuehrer order. you would have felt more at ease if you could have gone along with the entire order? received an order which I could have understood, or its consequence, and results, and thought it to be absolutely necessary, because then this order would have been supported by my feelings so that my rejection could have been overcome by reason and by feelings, just like it is with a soldier who also has to kill.

Q Well, now, you don't compare the duty of a soldier to kill in battle with the function that you were called upon to perform, do you? for the moral conflicts and strain, which could become so great that one had to try to evade the order.

had not lived up to the full extent of the Fuehrer order?

A Yes. The order was so forceful as an order for me. regrets to Hitler that you were unable to execute the entire order which he had given to you? the reasons which caused no to do so. allegiance to him? allegiance which you had made to him? would never have been convinced that this relation which seemed ideal to me would have brought me into such conflicts. him? not obey him to the full extent.

Q Yes. But in spite of this modification in your mind you want on from 1941 to 1945, still being faithful to him?

A That is in development, of course. Criticism awoke slowly owing to this first event, and solely criticism was expressed.

Q By you?

Q Were you criticising Hitler after 1941? order which I considered wrong.

Q What order was that? this order. That was in 1944.

Q But you went on still being faithful to him, did you not?

Q Well, you still were faithful to Adolf Hitler? it was my conviction that Hitler was as important as the German fate, and also when adoration and love began to vanish, I still had the feeling that I had to do my duty. did you not?

A Yes, your Honor; I did not lose that feeling immediately. victory to Germany, as he had up to 1941?

Q So you still had an admiration for him, up until the and?

Q I am speaking generall, now... You still had a great admiration for him as a leader and as a statesman? suicide and left you and the rest of Germany to face the problems alone?

Q Did that admiration still continue for him...did you still regard him as a great man?

A Concerning this action, no; but concerning all that had happened before, what he had done, and achieved, that remained. And when one comes to think of it, -- what other way out could he have found?

Q Well, then, you agreed with what he did.. to leave you and all your brother defendants and all of Germany to face the problems which were upon Germany, without his great assistance as a statesman? have helped any more, your Honor.

Q So that your admiration still went on...because he was up against a situation that he could not overcome?

ings decisively. Only a factual investigation of everything that happened could clarify matters for me. I would have considered it my duty to consider what I thought and felt, at the time, based on what has become generally known, to examine everything in my mind, and surely I would not try to revise my judgment and to change it, if I was convinced that I had followed an idol. luck, but he was still a great figure in your mind and heart? thing that happened is the logical consequence of positive and negative matters.

Q Now, please answer this one question. Did you still admire him after April 1945, or not? could not have happened, not even concerning Hitler.

Q Well, then, you did not admire him after he committed suicide?

A There are some things, your Honor, which remain... and must, in my opinion be recognized as an achievement.

Q Well, then, you still do admire him? things which he did.

Q Yes; you still regard that he was a great man and had done a great deal for Germany? have opportunity to examine everything that has happened. now... you went through the war, you lived in Germany, and you had two and one-half years to reflect on what has happened. Now do you still regard Adolf Hitler a great man on the stage of history, and that he did accomplish many wonderful things for Germany, and, therefore, falls into the category of a great man?

Do you believe that today? become more critical of events which occurred... I can only give a judgment when I have looked into things.

Q Well then, you can give one of three answere: one, you do admire Hitler as a great man, a statesman and a leader; two, you do not admire him as a great man, a statesman and a leader; three, you have your doubts as to whether he was a great man, a statesman and leader. Now, which one of these three answers will you choose? which purported to be an excerpt from a newspaper published on 29 March 1938 regarding the annexation of Austria to Germany. You are familiar with that newspaper, are you? cardinals? was represented by these ecclesiastics, favored the union between Austria and Germany? its opinion on this political matter?

Q And you had faith in the church?

A I myself was neutral. I was not a member..... church?

A May I have that again, please? I beg your pardon, your Honor, I did not quite understand. regarding union between Austria and Germany. You were very much pleased with this statement. You had faith in the church in expressing this statement of approval?

Q Yes, and you had a great deal of respect for the church?

Q Well then, why did you leave the church?

A I had left the church before, your Honor. The reason was that my religious ideas I could not combine with the dogma of the Protestant Church. it expressed a political judgment which agreed with your political judgment ?

A No, your Honor. My step was a private and personal step. As the functions and tasks of the church and their meaning for the education of the people and for the moral attitude of human beings was never doubted by me, I, therefore, believe that the declaration by the bishops in Austria was very welcome, because I realised that in the Eastern Territory, the Ostmarks in particular, the influence of the church towards the moral attitude of the people was a very strong one and that, therefore, the development of the state and the annexation could only be guaranteed if the church assisted. you because this is entirely a political matter. not avoid taking an interest in this.

Q It was a political act on the part of the church. It had nothing to do about a man's soul and his answerability to God, did it? the soul and a church should and can take an interest in this.

Q But you didn't think enough about the church for you to remain in the church. You left it yourself, didn't you? was like this: formerly the Protestant Church, to which I had belonged, for example, had among their principles a host of great spirits. For example, I had a clergyman who confirmed me who considered art and natural feelings very important and in his sermons he touched on all the great minds in German literature and philosophy.

That was a world where I liked to live. Later on the church developed to the opposite and became very orthodox and then I could not follow any more.

Q Therefore, to that extent you condemned the church? convinced-

Q You withdrew from the church? was when the church of Austria, insofar as represented by these bishops, approved of the annexation of Austria by Germany. important to me even then.

Q Now, just one final question. He asked you of your estimate of Hitler today, and we concluded from what you said that you entertained great doubts as to whether he was a great man or not. If he were here today, if he were in this courtroom, would you express that to him, that you have great doubts about his having done any good for Germany?

THE PRESIDENT: That is all. The defendant will be withdrawn from the witness stand.

DR. LUMMERT: I beg your pardon, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Unless you have some further questions.

DR. LUMMERT: In the meantime I have looked at the document which Mr. Ferencz gave me, and I request that I may be permitted to ask him which is the section of this document which he read out yesterday?

Mr. Ferencz just told me that he did not read anything out of this document but that he merely showed the entire document to the witness, but I believe Mr. Ferencz has given the contents of a part of this document. That is what I understood, is that right?

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I believe the defense counsel was here during the cross-examination when I asked the witness whether he had received an order from Himmler concerning the execution of whole families of persons who were believed to be partisans, and I showed him this document to refresh his memory.

DR. LUMMERT: In that case, may I address a short question to the witness? May I state first that this document is not expressly addressed to the Defendant Blume, but thedocument contains an order by the Reichsfuehrer--SS Himmler of 25 June 1942 and is headed, "Order for the Suppression of Band Activity in the Territories Oberkrain and Untersteiermark." At one place the name of the Defendant Blume is mentioned. There it says, "SS-Standartenfuehrer Blume," Under the command of the Security Police, there was a certain General Roesener. His name was mentioned before. Under his order Blume was in charge of the Security Police tasks at the time during this partisan combating, and then the order says here, as Mr. Ferencz told us yesterday, that they were to act without consideration even against family members of any man and that the second aim was that the population who meant well be relieved of the pressure of the hands and to give them a feeling of security under the German Reich. BY DR. LUMMERT: the time you got this order about the treatment without consideration of family members, in particular of children, whether you carried this out or whether you did not carry it out, or what way cut you found. that I am very proud of my time in Slovenia. May I give the reason very briefly? The wording of this order I do not remember any more, but I knew the task I was given at the time, namely, to fight with all means at my disposal the band activity in Slovenia, inasfar as it meant the Security Police section. I did not interpret this order to this effect, that I had to carry out measures of suppressing people, but I considered it necessary immediately to find out the reasons why these people who had greeted our soldiers with flowers when they arrived, had brought them into the mountains with arms, chasing them there.

I found the following. These Slovenians, who until then had lived in a Serbian state centrally governed, had expected from the Germans, at least, a certain autonomy, but certainly cultural autonomy instead of this, that part of the country around the capital of Laibach had been made part of Italy, incorporated in Italy. Cultural autonomy was never mentioned, but rather they tried very hard to make them German.

And now came the decisive fact. In order to Germanize these people successfully, the Higher SS and Police Leader had arranged for the resettlement of all Slovenians of the territory near the border, fifteen kilometers wide along the entire border to the north of Laibach, and actually brought it about. He had the illusion that such resettlement and that settlement of Germans in that territory around the border, the two Slovenian parts, namely, the new Italian and the new German part, would be separated that way, and that the part belonging to the Reich would then become Germanized in peace. These measures had causedthe determined resistance of the population. This again caused the Germans to make reprisals, and therefore a continuous development resulted which caused a state that was something like civil war. The most impossible order which I found was to the effect that the children of band members who had been shot be taken from the remaining families and be brought into German families to be Germanized. They were to be taken in separately through the Security Police in the internment camps. I objected very strongly to this policy which I considered quite impossible. could not influence, being a political action, but in spite of great differences with my superior, the Higher SS and Police Leader Roesener, I managed directly and indirectly to influence all agencies in order to bring about a change. The settlement of the children away from their families I prohibited immediately and reported about it to the Reich Security Main Office with the request that the order be rescinded which Himmler must have given under some mistaken opinion. In the interests of calming down the situation as I stated in this report, I would have caused a preliminary change of the actual situation.

The Gauleiter, Dr. Reiner, was on my side. The Higher SS and Police Leader prohibited me to talk to him alone. Under some pretense I traveled to Berlin then and saw to it that the Reich Security Main Office supported me, who also approached the Reichsfuehrer.

Apart from the Gauleiter then, according to my suggestions, the resettlement of Slovenians from the whole territory was stopped, and instead of the reprisal shooting a proper legal system was announced. The Gauleiter announced this new line of German policy, during a spread in Kreiburg. I am convinced that I have saved the lives and the homes of thousands of Slovenians. That is what I did as a result of this order.

DR. LUMMERT: May I conclude my evidence with this?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Dr. Durchholz for the defendant Schulz. Your Honor, I ask that I amy address a question to the defendant Blume in connection with the document which the Prosecution used in the cross-examination of the defendant Schulz. It is Exhibit 177, Document No-4957. I would like some explanation here. On Page 1 of this document, as of 9 November 1941, Himmler owing to special merits, promoted the defendant Schulz to SS-Oberfuehrer. May I remind you that a promotion of other defendants came about at the same time, as the documents presented show. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ: tives which Himmler gave concerning promotions, can you tell us anything about it?

A Yes. After the beginning of the war, Himmler gave an order that suggestions for promotion within the Security Police were only to be submitted to him if they showed quite clearly that the person to be promoted had proved valuable in his assignment. If not, a statement was to be given why he had not been active on an assignment as yet. The term Assignment Einsatz, meant any activity as part of the German Wehrmacht or as part of the Security Police in any of the occupied territories. The result was that in the personnel department of the Reich Security Main Office any suggestion for promotion was stopped for a while if it did not fulfill these requirements.

It was always the task of the person submitting the promotion to complete this. Q Can you tell me now when a promotion in an SS rank,of a policeman was effected, a man who was a professional police official, was he then regarded a member of the SS? system of officials, on special holidays, as for instance, the 9th of November. Q The last question. Was the Russian campaign of special significance for this promotion which was proclaimed on 9th November 1941, would the promotion also have been pronounced if the person concerned had been in another campaign? any occupied territory as part of the Security Police and the Army.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: No further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Will you have your witness available?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: The witness is outside and is waiting to be called in, but I suggest perhaps after the recess so that it is not interrupted.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, I would only have one question. It is in connection with the question of Dr. Durchholz. BY MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: November, 1941?

Q At that time had you seen the application for the defendant Schulz? own knowledge, is that correct?

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: No further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: During the recess the defendant will be returned to the defendants' box and the Schulz witness will be placed in the witness box so that we can begin with that witness when we reconvene in fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. WOLFGANG LAUE, a witness, took the stand and testified as follows:

JUDGE SPAIGHT: Witness, raise your right hand and repeat after me. I swear by God, the Almighty and Omniscient, that I will speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath.)

JUDGE SPAIGHT: You may be seated.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your honor, Dr. Laue is a character witness, but also an eye witness who can report about the conduct of the defendant, Schulz in the last phase of the activity of the defendant as a high police official and officer. I will give the tribunal facts through the witness which will show the character of the defendant in situations in which another man certainly would have acted differently than the defendant did. BY DR. DURCHHOLZ: person.

A My name is Dr. Wolfgang Laue; and I was born on the 23rd of July 1905 in Mainz; I am a German citizen; and I live in Muehlthal near Rosenheim in Upper Bavaria in the U.S. Zone.

Q Witness, what official position did you hold lest? Regierungspresident with the Reichcommissioner in Salzburg. by the IMT?

A No. I was a member of the National Socialist Party since May 1933, and I held an honorary rank in the SKK, but I did not belong to any organizations declared criminal by the IMT, therefore, on the basis of the automatic arrest of higher officials, I was interned; and after this automatic arrest order had been revoked in July 1946 5 November 1947_M_MSD_8_2_Spears (Lea) I was released from the American internment camp at Ludwigsburg.

Q How long have you known the defendant Schulz? day after the invasion began.

Q What position and what rank did Schulz hold in Salzburg?

A Schulz was BDS, that is, commander of the Security Police; he was also representative of the higher SS and police leader Roesele for the jurisdiction of the District of Salzburg. In the last weeks a change in the organization took place whereby Herr Schulz became SS and police leader for the Reichdistrict of Salzburg.

Q Do you know that on the ocassion of the attempt on Hitler's life on the 20th of July 1944 any arrests were made in Salzburg?

A No. I know nothing about whether on the 20th of July 1944 or immediately afterwards arrests were made in the District of Salzburg on the occasion of this attempt.

Q How did Schulz act in the matter of the Officer Corps?

Herr Schulz had a friendly and good and even cordial relationship with the officer corns. conducted himself on the 20th of July, 1944, and immediately afterwards, as far as the officer corps is concerned? the officers of the General Command during the time of the 20th of July, 1944. Later too nothing changed in the cordial relationship between Herr Schulz and the Officer Corns. He always protected the honor of the Corps on every occasion, even after the 20th of July, 1944, I do not know of a single case in which Herr Schulz interfered in any job of the Army or exerted any pressure on they Army.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Durchholz, just what is the theory behind your story of the great cordiality between the Defendant Schulz and the Officer Corps? Just what do you intend to establish by that?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, the Defendant Schulz was the highest police officer in the District of Salzburg, and, after the attempt of July, 1944, the Police leaders had rather great power concerning the arrests after this attempt. Through this description of the relationship between Schulz and the Officer Corps I would like to prove that he did not make use of this power which we held.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, are you endeavoring to implant the thought or idea that Schulz to that extent approved of the attempt on Hitler's life or, at any rate, did not want to participate in any punishment of the group that was responsible for the attempt?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: I want to prove by this that the Defendant Schulz protected the Officer Corps which had been severely attacked on the part of the Party.

THE PRESIDENT: I wish you would give very specifically just what you are attempting to establish, how this affects Schulz's character and what it has to do with the charges against him.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: It is supposed to prove the conduct of the Defendant Schulz, namely, that he did not make use of his full power as a police officer in the sense that the Party wanted him to. In other words, he did not misuse his power.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: One moment please. The prosecution has submitted that we are not charging the Defendant Schulz after November 1, 1941, with having obtained criminal knowledge or having criminally participated in crimes committed by one of the three organizations of which he is indicted with having been a member, so that for this reason the questioning of the witness on these lines is completely immaterial.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, the point which just came up has already been answered. I shall come to other points, but I would like to ask that I be permitted to continue the questioning of the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Durchholz, we will certainly permit you to question the witness. What we ware only hoping to learn was just what objective you were aiming at from this testimony.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: I only wanted to prove by means of this witness what the Defendant Schulz has already told us about these events. Then in my final plan I want to make statements that the Defendant Schulz from the beginning of his police career to the end of his activity in Salzburg conducted himself on the same level and that there ware many instances in which the Defendant Schulz in his capacity as High Police and SS Officer never acted in the way in which the indictment charges him as a member of that organization. From this conduct I shall draw conclusions for his conduct in Russia. That is the purpose of the interrogation.

THE PRESIDENT: Do we understand then, that during this period of turmoil following July 20th, 1944, that the Party hierarchy was eager that all Higher SS and Police Officers arrest indiscriminately and condemn the Officer Corps but that the defendant refused to go along with that demand on the part of the Party?

Is that what we understand your object is?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. DURCHOLZ:

Q I am coming now to a different point. Witness, did the Defendant Schulz have anything to do with prisoners of war in Salzburg? second part of the year 1944 the Higher SS and Police Leader at the same time became commander for the prisoners of war. Since Herr Schulz was the representative of the Higher SS and Police-Leader and since the Higher SS and police Leader never spent any time in Salzburg, he conducted the affairs concerning prisoners of war in the District of Salzburg.

Q Could you tell us how many prisoners of war were there? war,camp Pungau, now St. Johann in Pungau, there were many thousands of prisoners of war. There might have been about 30,000 prisoners of war in the District of Salzburg, all told. these prisoners of war?

A. Yes, I know a number of such facts. In the repeated conferences in which Schulz and I participated, representations were made that the work performed by the prisoners of war was not sufficient and that the prisoners of war were being treated too well; that the prisoners of war during an air alarm were merely-brought into the air raid shelters and that they took away the scarce space from the civilian population. I still remember exactly what Schulz answered against these very severe representations. He referred to the Geneva Convention which he insisted on keeping. Herr Schulz saw to it that the prisoners of war would continue to go into the air raid shelters and that no changes were allowed in their good treatment.

treated in the District of Salzburg? as was true for the prisoners of war. There was an order to take the foreign workers from the so-called Alpine Fortress. By Alpine Fortress they meant the mountainous area south of the City of Salzburg. I do not know exactly what agency was supposed to handle this evacuation. Perhaps it was the police, because this was the only agency which was competent for this job. At any rate, no foreign workers were evacuated and Herr Schulz had objected to that. Salzburg? police? 1945 two enemy airmen who had bailed out and had jumped into the Salzach River were saved by members of the police. I remember this exactly because this conduct of the police had been criticized by the Party. events which lead to the non-defense of Salzburg in his capacity as High police Officer? decisive manner: the surrendering of Salzburg without defending it. I can give detailed testimony about this, because I had collaborated with Herr Schulz very closely in this question and I think that I can ask for the same recommendation in this matter for myself. I would like to testify between the following phases: First of all that he induced the city not to defend itself....

MR. HOHLICH HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, the Defendant Schulz in the witness-stand has explained the story of the surrender of Salzburg in detail.

I do not think it necessary that the witness just repeat what the Defendant Schulz had said. The prosecution is willing to concede that what the Defendant Schulz has said about the surrender of Salzburg is true.

THE PRESIDENT: with that acknowledgment on the part of the prosecution, Dr. Durchholz, you can see that it is unnecessary to continue this line of questioning.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, after the prosecutor has explained that the considers the statements of the Defendant Schulz about these points correct, I think I can.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, correct.

DR, DURCHHOLZ: I think I do not have to have the witness confirm these facts. I merely wanted to prove to the Tribunal that the statements of the Defendant Schulz are correct, even in this point.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: I have no further questions to out to the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: Any cross-examination?

MR. HOHLICK HOCHWALD: No cross-examination by the prosecution.

THE PRESIDENT: The witness will be escorted from the witness box and excused.

(The witness was excused.)

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mayer are you ready now?

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Steimle will be taken to the witness box.

JUDGE DIXON: Defendant, raise your right hand and repeat after me:

"I swear by God, the Almighty and Omnicient, that I will speak the pure truth, and will withhold and add nothing."

(The witness, repeated the oath.)

JUDGE DIXON: You may be seated. BY DR. MAYER:

Q. Dr. Mayer for the defendant Steimle. direct examination. The examination will be divided into three main parts. First, the brief biography and then the Russian camp assignment chronologically; secondly, a discussion of the documents; and third, the activity of the defendant in Office VI of the Reich Main Security Office.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. MAYER:

Q. Witness, may I first remind you to speak slowly and to watch that the questions have been completely translated before you begin your answer to them.

A. My name is Eugen Steimle.

Q. Please give a short biography.

A. I was born on 8 December 1909 and the seventh child of a small farmer in New Bulach in the Black Forest. I attended grammar school for four years. As a result of some efforts on the part of my teacher, and made possible by the financial support of an older brother, I got to attend high school and in the year 1929 I graduated. Since my father was not in a position to send me to the university I had to rely on scholarships and extra work during vacations and on aid during my student days.

From 1929 to 1935 I studied history, German history, French language and literature. In 1935 and 1936 I passed the two prescribed State examinations for teachers at higher schools. I married in the year 1936 and I have three children.

Q. Please describe briefly your political career down to your joining of the SD?

A. Already during my time in school I was very much interested in politics and history. I watched domestic and foreign events closely at the end of the 20s and after 1930. As far as one can speak of a political opinion at such a young age I had such an opinion. I was an adherent of the foreign policies of Stresemann. Domestically I did not have any set opinion, that is in the sense of rejecting the Republic. I was not in favor of returning to a Monarchy. At the time National chauvinism was not considered right in our family. Nevertheless, I as well as the major part of my generation was moved by the domestic political split, the weakness and economic distress of Germany as well as the decreasing prospect of Germany to overcome the Versailles Treaty. An almost Nihilistic realism became evident in my generation. We saw no absolute values any more and a pessimistic resignment was very common. A State without life, an economy without any prospect for recovery, the class struggle within our people - these are matters which moved us very deeply at that time. We suffered especially from the struggle between the great number of parties and we judged the Weimar Republic by the unemployment prevailing at the time. I personally from my political interests observed the increasing strength of the Communist party and I busied myself with those ideas. This was especially possible during my studies at the University of Berlin in the years 1931 and 1932. I arrived at a complete rejection of International Communism perhaps because of the tendency which existed in my home. On the other hand I was in favor of every social thought in the sense that it should be achieved, that every human being was to get as great a benefit as possible from the economic property of his country.

My thoughts led me to believe that in a poor country one could not adopt a "Laisser faire" attitude to overcome distress but that poverty can only be overcome by plan and for this we needed National unity. This was the necessary premise which changed such a condition. For these reasons I became a National Socialist, less so under the influence of any particular National Socialistic personality but rather by way of theoretical thinking through of this idea. When I joined the National Socialist Party in May 1932 I believed in the possibility that if all National forces are gathered together in the interest of social improvement that the German economic distress could be overcome. In this sense I also believed in revision of the Versailles Treaty.

Q. I would like to interrupt you.........you mean a peaceful revision?

A. Yes, a peaceful revision. However, I joined the Party on the first of May 1932. My activity was restricted first to paying Party dues. In October 1932 I was asked to join the student union as a Party member which happened SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH JOINING THE students SA. I served as an SA man until in March 1933 I suffered a short accident which forced me to take a leave from the SA for an extended period of time. After that I belonged to the staff of SA Standarte without doing any service there but I was active in the National Socialist Student Union in which I held the rank of student leader at the University of Tuebingen. Later I held the position as Student District Leader in Wurtemberg. I was called to these positions without previous knowledge. Both of these functions were on an honorary basis, that is, without remuneration. I worked in these offices merely out of my enthusiasm as a student and out of patriotism.

Q. How did you come to join the SD?

A. I met Dr. Scheel in my student work. Dr. Scheel was leader of the SD Sector Southwest in 1936. This sector comprised the districts of Wurtemberg, Baden, Halls and Saar. Dr. Scheel suggested to mo that after I passed my examination of assessor, I join the SD and that I take over a position to be determined later in the district of Wurtemberg. I held several conferences with Dr. Scheel about a job with the SD. Up to that time I had had no contact with the SD and did not know its jurisdiction. Dr. Scheel described the SD to me as a function of the SS whose job it is to observe the political development in domestic and foreign respect in order to be able to inform the leading agencies about what was going on. It was clearly evident that this was not police work of individual cases and not of the prosecution of individuals but that it was supposed to give a survey about the tendencies in all branches of public life. Personally I was especially interested in building up a foreign information service which at that time was in a very embryonic stage.

Q. When did you join the SD?

A. First of April 1936.

Q. Was that connected with your membership in the SS, too?

A. Yes, I was taken into the SS a few weeks after the beginning of my activity in the SD. I became a member of the SS within the SD. I did not become a member of the General SS, the Allgemeine-SS.

Q. Did you have to go through any training in the SD before taking up your position?

A. I was active to get Information in the above mentioned Southwest Sector of the SD. I did not get to know the SD Main Office at that time. My membership in the SD depended entirely on my cooperation with Dr. Scheel.

Q. Did you have the intention of pursuing your SD work as a career?

A. No. I had myself furloughed from school service temporarily and had the intention of returning to that later on.

Q. Did any financial consideration play any role in your membership in the SD?

A. No, my starting salary in the SD was either the same or less than that of student assessor.

Q. What motivated you then to join the SD?

A. As I have already stated I was very much interested in politics from my early days on. At that time the SD seemed to me a good opportunity to get to know in detail the domestic and foreign political problems of Germany. As seen from the Stuttgart circle I believed that via the SD I could exert positive information on the political development of the German State. The other positive criticism which was the SD's function was often used and we made use of such criticism. My political tendencies which moved me to join the SD were supported by my disinclination to take up a civil service career at the age of 26.

Q. What functions did you carry on in the SD?

A. From April 1936 until September 1936 I was Staff Leader of the SD Sector Stuttgart which at that time occupied 12 people full time. From September 1936 until my transfer to Office VI of the Reich Main Security Office in February 1943 I was leader of SD Sector Stuttgart.

Q. Of what did your activities consist as leader of this Sector, especially after the outbreak of the War?

A. As I have already explained the job of the SD was to observe all branches of public life such as culture, economics, etc. May I make reference here to what my co-defendant Ohlendort has already stated?

Q. As SD leader in Stuttgart did you have anything to do with foreign information service, too?

A. Yes, especially after the outbreak of the War. Then the Reich Main Security made an attempt to build up a functional foreign political service. In this matter a department of my sector was entrusted with the job.

Q. How many SS leaders were subordinated to you as department chiefs?

A. Until the outbreak of the War my sector had about 20 full time department chiefs. Waffen SS or Army or were just taken away. They were replaced by people on War emergency status.

Q. What was the area for which these 20 leaders were competent?

A. This area comprised the province of Wurtemberg with about 3-1/2 million inhabitants.

Q. Did you or your SD sector during the War occupy yourselves with combating so-called State enemies?

A. No, as already stated this was not the job of the SD.

This is clearly evident in the organization of an SD sector which had no department or no expert to combat enemies of the State.

Q. What was the relationship of the Gestapo in the district of Wurtemberg to your sector?

A. The two organizations were completely independent of each other. Whereas the SD sector was under Office IV for the domestic service or under Office VI for foreign service the superior agency for the Gestapo was Office IV, the so-called Gestapo Office.

Q. Could the Gestapo give instructions or directives?

A. No, just as little as I could give directives to the Gestapo.

Q. Did you or your collaborators have the power to conduct interrogations or make arrests?

A. No, this was not within our job.

Q. Could the so-called reports of yours result in arrest?

A. No. These reports did not deal with individual people but with events - objective events.

Q. Can one designate the SD as an auxiliary organ of the Gestapo?

A. No. Both organizations were active in entirely different fields and locally in Wurtemberg, completely independent of each other.

Q. When did you hoar of the so-called assignment of the Security Police and SD for the first time?

A. Some time after the campaign in France, units were activated in Stuttgart which moved into France and which were composed of State Police, Criminal Police, and SD. As far as I know this was the first organizational get-together of all those three units in the person of the Unit Commander whereas the branches worked independently of each other under his direction.

Q. According to what you know then were these Einsatz units given now jobs which went beyond the jurisdiction of what was known to you to be the job of the State Police, Criminal Police, and the SD?

A. No.

Q. When did you receive the order to go to Russia?

A. At the end of August 1941.

Q. Where were you at that time?

A. In Stuttgart.

Q. Do you know how this order came to be given?

A. Yes. As the order was given to me by teletype I also found an explanation why I received it. In the years 1939-1940 I tried to in various ways to join the combat troops.

My applications were always refused. I was very unhappy about this because as a young man I did not want to stay at home -- whereas a brother of mine, who was 10 years older, was at the front. I was assured of myself before my family, and I was afraid of being called a slacker. I considered it my duty to be a soldier, and I considered my job in the SD as one fit for 4-F. For this reason in May or June 1941 I made another attempt to get away from the SD and to be able to join the troops. I went to Berlin, to the Main Security Office, and reported to Streckenbach, the Chief of Office I. I did not know Streckenbach personally -- just as little as I ever got to know Heydrich. I expressed my wish to him. Streckenbach rejected it Categorically, without any discussion, and he explained to me that I would soon have an opportunity to prove myself at the front. I could not find an explanation for this answer at that time, but when I received my marching order to Russia it was clear that this was what Streckenbach had meant.

Q What were the contents of this order? Commando 7-a, and that I was to report as soon as possible to Brigadefuehrer Nebe in Smolensk. The necessary equipment was to be gathered up in Berlin. Commando?

A No. I first heard the expression "Special Commando" at that time, and I could not imagine what that could mean.

Q Did you find any clarification about your mission in Berlin?

A No; while passing through Berlin I merely reported to the Quartermaster and received my equipment there.

Q Why didn't you report to the Chief of Office I when you passed through Berlin?

A There was no cause to do that. The report read definitely to report to Nebe in Smolensk.

Soviet state and its regime?

A Yes. In about the year 1927, distant relatives of my family had returned from Russia to Germany. From their reports I got an idea about the Soviet state as a regime of an absolute wilfulness of the Communist party. A member of this family had been killed without any reason, aid others had been sent into exile. This impression about Russia became stronger during my student days, when I made the acquaintance of a Russian student who had left Russia about 1930 on a Finnish ship, and who had told me very much about his experiences. After all this I had to arrive at the conclusion that Bolshevism did not respect any human being if it was a matter of having its way about the world revolution. The Communist party in Germany, for example, the uprisings in Hamburg, etc., gave sufficient proof of this. From the statements of the German government at the outbreak of the war with Russia I further had to assume that Russia, by making use of the international situation, would try to spread Comnunism in order to find further basis for a world revolution. would not feel bound by international law in the war against Germany? it was very decisive for me that during my stay in Stuttgart in August 1941 I received an authentic report which was filled with photos, which showed the slaughter of a Wuertemberg infantry battalion which had become prisoners. After the battalion had been taken prisoners the men were undressed and the soldiers were tortured to death in individual groups. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q When did that occur?

Q In June 1941?

Q Where were you in the latter part of 1939?

Q You didn't get to the Eastern front at all during the Polish war?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

A (witness continuing) As a result of the fact that another battalion fought its way free a short time later and found a few survivors as witnesses, this data and its circumstances could be confirmed by witnesses and by photographs.

THE PRESIDENT: Perhaps my interruption caused the witness not to complete the description of the episode. He was at the point where he said an infantry battalion had been undressed. I don't know whether he completed that story or not.

WITNESS: I said that the soldiers were undressed after they had been taken prisoners, and were killed in groups. BY DR. MAYER: Continue.

A (by the witness) This incident was no rumor for me. It was reality.

QWhen did you arrive in Smolensk? you get any directives from him?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mayer, you are just about to open up a new field of discussion. Suppose we recess now until one forty-five.

(The Tribunal recessed until 1345 hours).

(The hearing reconvened at 1355 hours, Nove. 5,1947) The Tribunal is again in session.

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Continued) DR. MAYER: Dr. Mayer for Defendant Steimle.THE PRESIDENT:

Proceed. BY DR. MAYER: ordered to report to Nebe in Smolensk and you told us that on 4 September 1941 you arrived in Smolensk. I non ask you, did you see the Chief of Einsatzgruppe B, Nebe, there, and did you get instructions from him?

A The day after my arrival in Smolensk I reported to Nebe. Nebe told me the following on that occasion: the activity of the Einsatzgruppe and the Einsatzkommandos and the Sonderkommandos in the Army territory is based on a Fuehrer order. It is the task of these units to look after the security in the rear Army territory and in the rear of the fighting troops. This had to be done by ruthless fighting, against all Communist forces which appeared, and their resistance. According to the experience gathered so far the Jews were to be considered as the main bearers of Bolshevism. Nebe did not leave any doubt that active Communist forces and also partisans were to be shot for the sake of security in the territory. He also told me that leaders and men were under war law during the assignment. gypsies, so-called Asiatics of nationally inferior people and asocial elements?

A No, I do not remember any such order. I don't think I ever received such an order.

security order concerning the shootings? not known him. Therefore, I did not know his attitude. Apart from that at that moment I was so confused about the contents of this information that I could not adopt a definite attitude at that time or at least I could not express my feelings. order known to you?

A No, only later did I realize how important the order was. I believed to understand from it that only Jews who were active opponents were to be shot. I did not understand that this meant the killing of all the Jews. Apart from that I assumed at the time that the details of my now task would be told me by the commander leader who would instruct no about it when the kommando was handed over to me.

Q Why were you so impressed by the order then? police importance to which I neither felt inclined nor was I trained for this. In my career until that time I had never carried out an arrest or examination. Such things were quite strange to me. To make decisions about life and death of human beings touched a sphere of life which was quite strange to me according to origin, inner attitude and education.

Q Did Nebe give you further instructions? securing interesting and important document material of the Soviets when advancing and utilizing then and sending them to the Einsatzgruppe to be utilized.

Q During your discussion did Nebe talk about reporting of the SD?

A Yes. He said that would give me all the information on this reporting.

Q Did you do this?

he told me that the necessity of police security seemed to be more important than the security in the SD work. He asked me, since I had been SD section chief, to help him with the SD reporting. achieve? was a decisive factor for the security of the territory to realize clearly contents and meaning of Bolshevism. Only on the basis of such knowledge could the right measures for the security of the territory be established.

Q Can you give us an example for this conception? An objective questioning and inquiry had to find out how the system worked. In view, for example, of the harvest, it had to be determined how, what effect the system had on the country people, whether the system was approved of by the population or whether they did not like it, whether the farmers just wanted changes or whether they wanted to abolish the system altogether. Only after clearing all those questions one could come to a decision suitable for that territory, and the same system, in order to realize the necessity of the territory, had to be used when judging educational questions and schooling and similar set-ups which we came across in the Russian territory.

Q When did yea start being in charge of Kommando 7a? 7a? 1941.

Q Who handed the kommando over to you? the kommando over to me. He had been in charge of it as deputy because my predecessor had already left for Berlin some time ago.

Q Where did you take over the kommando? stationed. Another subkommando was in Welikie-Luki. This city is about 150 to 200 kilometers from Welish.

Q Where were you stationed?

A I was in Welish. But about 15 September I visited the headquarters in Welikie-Luke and stayed there for about two days.

Q How strong was Sonderkommando 7a? composed of officials of the State Police, the Criminal Police, and a few SD members, also Waffen-SS reserve men and a number of active Waffen-SS men and drivers. about the situation in which the kommando was? kommando Welish made reconnaisance and fought partisans at the order of and in cooperation with the Army.

Q Why was the combating of partisans the most important?

around Welish and the city of Demidow near Beij partisans had been very active and, according to Folte's statement, this had not occurred in the territory of the Ninth Army before.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mayer, will you please indicate on the map about where this is taking place?

DR. MAYER: Yes, your Honor. It was the territory northwest, northeast of Smolensk and south of this lake, to the right of Staraya Rusa.

THE PRESIDENT: Would it be on the Volga River?

DR. MAYER: No, between the Dnjepr and the Volga, in this territory.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. MAYER: And north of the railway from Smolensk to Moscow which is not mentioned on this map.

A (Continuing; According to Folte's statement, in the Army territory a number of heavy attacks were made daily on individual vehicles and small convoys, and also sabotage acts against bridges, cables, and other equipment of the Army, In Smolensk I had heard about this already. During the journey to Welish they had given me a escort vehicle because it was too dangerous that one vehicle alone should travel.

Q. During such actions were any German soldiers killed? casualties occurred. Communists and Jews as well? His explanations made me understand that according to experience so far the Communist party was the bearer and organizer of the partisan movement and that this was conducted by the functionaries.

Communists? was the organization of the partisan bands. Of course they reported about and collected information regarding the troops. of the Jews? of the Fuehrer decree which he knew that during the advance a number of Jews of military age had been shot. He emphasized particularly that Jewish women or children had never been among them. This last remark, which I remember distinctly, struck me, of course. Until then I had thought that Jews had to be fought in the came way as Communists and partisans, if they had taken an active part in the resistance movement, but this could not apply in general to women and children end the discussion with Foltes advised me completely as to the extent of the Fuehrer decree.

Q When did Foltes report this? in Welish or the following day. Fuehrer decree? be approved of from a humane point of view. Inwardly I rejected it and my conscience was very worried. Simultaneously, however, I know that this order was binding for me and open refusal towards my superiors or an order to the opposite effect towards my subordinate would have been useless.

All I would have achieved by this would have been that the order would have been repeated to me, and then if I did not carry it cut a courts martial would have been the consequence, and no doubt the result would have been terrible.

Q Did you see a way out of this false position?

possibility by making the assignment of my commandos slightly different. Under consideration of the situation in the territory of the Ninth Army to evade carrying out this order, or at least, in the case of Jews, to delay carrying out the order by emphasizing the importance of partisan combating which actually was the most important thing at the moment, and owing to the fact that I tried to keep the commandoswith the fighting troops all the time as my predecessor before me had done. The small forces of the Commando had to be utilized to such an extent that for any other activity there was no time left. This could be justified any time.

QHow did your activity as Commandofuehrer develop? for two or three interruptions I remained until the 8th or 10th of October. That is about four weeks in all.

Q What interruptions were there?

A I was at Welikie-Lucki once or twice. Each time for two days. At the end of September or the beginning of October I visited the G-2 of the Army which had been transferred from Welish in the meantime in a small village near Tochowchina. Welish?

A The Kommandos in Welish consisted of about 30 to 40 people. The executive tasks I left to Obersturmfuehrer Voltes. Already previously he had been troop leader of an independent platoon.

Q What do you mean by executive activity? intelligence, arrests, interrogations, and if necessary, executions. in being in charge of this Sparte?

to be carried out? to make such decisions. Leader exclusively to make all the decisions as the only competent person, out the division of the Kommandos, into sub-Kommandos automatically brought it about that the sub-Kommando Leaders decided on their own authority.

Q Did such sub-Kommando Leaders act as they wanted to?

A No. The sub-Kommando Leaders in my case were informed better about their tasks than I was. During sever al personal discussions, I told than in connection with the communist and partisan question which concerned us, and I told then my opinion and ordered them always to examine everything carefully and to be conscientious in their decisions. I actually made tests and examined their decisions when I visited the sub-Kommandos; but I must emphasize again that I had neither been trained militarily; nor did I have police experience, and therefore experts had to deal with these subjects in the subdepartments. For example, as a replacement for Voltes, an elderly criminal commissioner was appointed.

Q Of what did Voltes' activity in the Welish area consist? Russian ausiliary police ; also in connection with the auxiliary police, a number of agents had been appointed. The entire activity was aimed against the activity of partisans already described, against parachutists, and agents. particularly endangered? which. are very suitable for partisans. According to reports by Russians in these territories, terrorists and partisans had stayed

In what manner was this carried out? aries that is, at least in the territory of the 9th army, the carrier of the partisan combatting. The Communist functionaries and its active supporters had withdrawn into the woods and the smaller villages after the Red Army had withdrawn in order to carry on Guerilla Warfare from there. This was done in such a manner that in some villages bases here established and attack units stationed themselves in the woods. The securing of the territory against Communist resistance was identical with the partisan combatting. recognize them as Communist functionaries? territory, the Kommando found the papers and the records of the Communist Party and of the NKWD.

Q Did these documents contain specific material? of some leading personalities in case of invasion of the enemy and of the resistanee to be formed.

The corpses were thrown under the trucks by the partisans and the trucks were then get afire. Such incidents occurred continuously in the territory around Welish.

Q Why was Voltes particularly active in the combating of partisans? important security task in the Welish territory. For that reason, it was natural that the Army had given the Kommando orders to combat the partisans. It was necessary, in order to fight these partisans, to have a reconnaissance service, and this service occupied the time of Voltes and his people completely.

Q When happened to the results of the reconnaissance? the nearest Army unit.

Q Was what the entire activity of your Kommando?

A No. On the basis of the reports given to the Army and their units the Army ordered actions wherein Voltes and the Kommando took part by way of fighting and interrogations.

Q Which Army units carried out these assignments?

A That depended on the extent of the assignment. There were assignments in which two divisions took part. Also the army had a special unit which dealt with partisans, the so-called Eingreifgruppe, whose only task was to fight partisans. After arranging with the Army, Voltes with his own forces helped them personally and together with the Russian police he carried out small actions.

Q Owing to such actions, were there any shootings carried out? be shot? group could be established. Also in a few cases people suspected of partisan activity were shot. Among then were people of whom it could at least be proved that they voluntarily had been active by assisting the partisans, either by giving reports to them or by assisting them in some other way.

Q. Who established this during the investigations?

A. In common assignments together with the army, members of the secret field police and officials of Sonderkommando 7A conducted investigations and made written records about this. Based on these records, an army officer together with Foltes after listening to the accused person, passes the sentence.

Q. Who carried out the execution by shooting?

A. I cannot answer this question concerning all the actions because I am not sure of this.

Q. Howwas the procedure handled when Foltes acted independently?

A. Foltes only carried out a few assignments on his own, but the investigation was handled in the same manner. He passed the sentence after discussing it with the officials who had conducted the interrogation and listened to the defendant once more. During the examination the chief of the Russian Security Service was always consulted. The shooting was done under Foltes' supervision. The operations were not carried out in the city of Welish but in the territory around Welish.

Q. Did you yourself take part in such operations against partisans?

A. No.

Q. Why did you not do this?

A. Foltes was a very independent and energetic person. He was a soldier throughout, and formerly he had served in the army as an officer. I myself neither had a military rank nor any military experience. The rank in the SD only meant a rank as intelligence officer and not a military qualification.

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Did you know Herr Foltes when you took over the commando?

A. No, but my predecessor. Dr. Blume, in a letter had mentioned him and the fuehrers of the commandos and described them to me in the letter.

Q. And was he recommended to you as a very good soldier?

A. At least, he was recommended as a very clever SS official Who had high qualifications and higher qualifications than some of the other leaders. Another judgment about Foltes I could form after staying there a short time because the army had given him a decoration for his work against the partisans. This had not been applied for by me or my predecessor, but the army did this on its own initiative because of their cooperation.

Q. Here you thoroughly satisfied that he was reliable?

A. As a soldier, as far as I can judge this at all, and according to statements by the army authorities, he was a man who was suitable for this partisan combatting.

Q. Did you have a report on him when you took over the command, and was it because of this report that you were entirely satisfied that he was a man who could be depended upon?

A. I have already said that Dr. Blume was my predecessor, and he mentioned in a letter that he was reliable; and according to the evaluation by the army prior to my time - also because he was given a decoration, I presumed that as a soldier in this partisan combatting he had distinguished himself.

Q. Did you talk with any others of the command about Foltes?

A. One of the leaders of the commando who was a liaison officer of the army and also knew Foltes, sometimes discussed Foltes with me. A further judgment of Foltes consisted of the fact that he was a member of the so-called executive service. He therefore was a man who was qualified according to his activities and his attitude.

Q. You are thoroughly satisfied from all the reports you received that he was entirely reliable and dependable?

A. At least, I could expect that he would carry out his orders according to the instructions of the army.

Q. And Dr. Blame had recommended him highly to you?

A. He had given a description of him which justified that among all. the leaders of the commando he should be given this job, and he was the most suitable man among the leaders.

Q. And you talked with others about Foltes?

A. I cannot remember at the moment having discussed it with anybody else.

Q. You said just a few moments ago that you carried on a conversation about Foltes.

A. Yes. Apart from the discussion mentioned, I did not talk to anyone.

Q. Well, didn't you just say a few moments ago that you discussed with someone else Foltes' reliability and his dependability and his virtues?

A. Yes, Your Honor, and my reply was that apart from this discussion, with the liaison officer whom I mentioned, this liaison officer for the army, I did not discuss Foltes with anybody else but him.

THE PRESIDENT: Just as a matter of information, we will ask the gentlemen of the. prosecution and of the defense counsel whether Foltes is the man that Blume accused as having shot 27 jews on the streets.

DR. FERENCZ: Yes, Your Honor, that is the way the prosecution understands it. It is the same man to whom Blume referred. He said the execution of the 27 was done by Foltes. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Did you consider that a very highly commendable action on the part of Foltes of shooting these Jews on the street without any trial, without any hearing, just shooting them down because they had failed to work?

A. But this action which was mentioned during the examination of the defendant, Blume, I heard here for the first time.

Q. And Blume recommended him to you without any reservation?

A. He described the men whom he gave the commando temporarily, the man we had executive power in the commando.

Q. And he recommended him as to his attitude?

A. I cannot define this so exactly. He gave me a description of all the leaders of the commandos and the positions which they had under him.

Q. You used the word "attitude" just a moment ago in commenting on Foltes?

A. The letter expressed that Foltes was the suitable man to be in charge of the commando temporarily and to carry out the executive activity in the commando.

Q. Yes, Everyone was pleased with Foltes because he carried out the Fuehrer order?

A. I cannot say it like this because he did not refer to the fuehrer decree at that instance.

Q. That is what you were out there for, executing the fuehrer decree, isn't it?

A. The fuehrer decree also contained several security tasks, and in this special, field where Foltes was in charge temporarily, namely; in the Wacish area tasks of that kind were as important as the combatting of partisans, and Foltes, as former army officer among all the SS leaders there, he had the best practical military experience.

Q. And aid you ever have any occasion to be disappointed with him when he was working for you?

A.During the time when he was with me, that lasted for about 4 or 5 weeks, he exclusively dealt with the combatting of partisans, and as the documents can prove in detail, the army ordered him to these actions.

Q. Would you please answer my question, during the time that he was with you, were you ever disappointed with him?

Q Would you please answer that question. During the time he was with you were you ever disappointed with him? out. ing shot down 27 Jews or 21 Jews on the street because they had not turned up for work? stated, that the Kommando carried out shootings of Jews.

A May I have that repeated please? would have allowed him to remain as a sub-kommander, even though you had known of this episode? Witebsk would have meant the same as an open objection against the order given.

Q Will you please answer the question. If you had known of this episode, would you still have retained him as a sub-kommander, because of the circumstances in which you found yourself? would have been no way of having him dismissed.

Q Yes, would you have said to him: "Now I learned that you killed 21 or 27 Jews on the street and I don't approve of that kind of activity. From now on, do not execute anyone unless there is first a trial." Would you have told him that? I attached importance to it that the investigations....

Q Now, just a moment, please, Please listen to the question. Here you are out in the field and Foltis is under your command. It has come to your attention that he killed -- Oh, first let me ask you this question: Would you have executed 21 Jews on the street just because they were Jews and had not worked?

Q Please answer that question: Would you have shot them just because they were Jews who did not work, having in mind this Fuehrer Decree? Would you have shot them down?

Q If you would not have found a way out, you would have shot them? security, rather than shoot 27 Jews, theoretically speaking, I would have carried out the order.

had this Feuhrer Decree that all Jews were to be executed and you found these Jews before you, you would have executed the decree and you would have shot,the Jews, even though they had had no trial? kommando.

Q Well, all right, how would you have circumvented the order? Here are these 27 Jews in front of you. They are Jews and the order says you must kill all Jews. How would you have circumvented that order?

A Because I also had other tasks and could give them priority. I could leave a place where there were Jews because the Army advanced and, therefore these Jews?

Q All right. Now, did you tell Foltis, if you had known of this episode, would you have said, to Foltis, "Now, listen, Foltis, when you can avoid killing Jews, please do so, because I don't like that idea of killing Jews without a hearing," Would you have told him that?

Q You said Foltis was far away from you. You gave him independent control. He didn't come and ask you each time he was going to shoot a Jew or anybody. He had to know beforehand what your attitude was and before you sent him out in the field, did you say to him, "Now, I don't agree with this Fuehrer order in all its extent, and don't you shoot anybody unless you first have a trial." Did you tell him that?

Q Foltis was with you all of the time? for the few days when I visited the Sub-Kommando Welikie-Lucki, and I conscientiously recommended anti-partisan combatting to him because Foltis on his part preferred to be active as a soldier against partisans and not to shoot Jews.

Q Well, you said here in your testimony just a few minutes ago: "you left it ot Foltis to determine what shootings were to take plac." You left it up to him, didn't you? accordingly I was forced to leave the decision up to him.

Q You left it up to him whom he was to shoot? ing.

Q You left it up to him to determine whom to shoot. He was to decide whether they were partisans or not, is that right? determine this in such a form as I have described during my direct examination . He was to determine whether to shoot or not?

A In the cases, and at least 80% of the cases it was the question of joint operations with the army in which officials, and the Field Police, not Foltis, carried out an investigation.

Q Well, take those cases where the Army wasn't there. You said in 80% of the cases. In 20% of the cases did he decide whom to shoot?

A In the rest of the case's he decided, but, after that, he reported to me orally and also in writing, so that I was informed.

Q After he did the shooting, he advised you what he had done? carried out.

Q Please answer the question. After he had conducted the operation, he reported to you what he had done?

Q Yes, so he did have some independence of judgement? way? Did you tell him "Now shoot partisans; shoot spies; shoot saboteurs, but don't shoot Jews, just because they are Jews, or just because they won't work." Did you tell him that? examine conscientiously and conduct examinations.

Q And then you let him decide what to do? been assigned.

Q. You at no time told him not to shoot Jews, just because they were Jews? leaders, that is what I tried to reply in the direct examination, I did not revoke this order.

Q The Fuehrer Order said to shoot all Jews, didn't it?

Q All right, now did you tell Foltis not to obey that order?

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mayer, before you begin your direct examination the Tribunal will make the following announcement. When the Tribunal recesses on Friday afternoon, at the usual hour, it will not reconvene until the following Wednesday morning. Tuesday, November 11th, is an official holiday, a national holiday and Monday will also be a holiday. So that therefore anyone who wishes to make any arangements for that rather long week-end is now advised that he may make those arrangements.

DR. MAYER: I shall continue with my direct examination. of documents were the basis of the finding cut who the active Communists were among the partisans, and I have asked you the question ... Do you mean to say that, that in your Command it was no reason to shoot anybody if that person was a member of the Communist party before the invasion by the Germans? concerned, for that no one was shot.

Functionaries of the Communist party, through the orders that had been announced by Stalin and the Russian war leadership, had been obligated for active resistance behind the fronts. Of these functionaries were found to have offered such resistance shootings were carried out. This is not a persecution for political reasons, but The punishment for crimes against the occupation power, and its directives.

Q What directives do you mean by this? public everywhere, it was announced both in the Russian and the German language, that the Communist party was dissolved, and every type of activity on its part, as well as participation, and assistance in partisan warfare would be punishable by death.

and in the investigations and judgments? given about anti-partisan warfare, that I gave a Foltis free hand in this field, but, during personal discussions I told him my point of viewnamely, that he should treat all cases justly. In the same manner I had a long conference with the director of the Russian service for the maintenance of order in order to tell him the same things. After Foltes had left, about the 15th of October 1941, when his successor dealt with few cases which were still under way I always made tests in the cases which were still being dealt with by his successor, to see whether they were being treated justly.

Q Were you convinced of the legality of the measures adopted?

A Yes. It corresponded with the directives of the army, and it was a question of punishbale resistance against the German occupying power. territory of your Commando. What happened as far as this question is concerned, in the area of Welish? any action against Jews. Other leaders, too, of my Commando, no such operations. reference to the Jews was neither carried out by you, nor by any of your subordinate offices?

Q For what reasons did this not happen? partisans and the breaking up of Communist resistance, Through this activity this Commando was so busy, and had been given orders concerning partisan warfare by the Army directly, the Jewish, question was pushed into the background.

The order for the execution of Jews, only because they Were Jews, was considered by me as humanity impossible. Of course, this opinion was not valid for those cases in which individual Jews or groups of Jews had committed crimes. In such a case I would, of course, have approved measures against Jews because like every inhabitant of occupied territory, they were under German jurisdiction and subject to German laws. order in the area of Welish? to my office, and as it has been carried out in some cases that I did not revoke this order - but I did not renew it, for my part, nor did I issue it again.

Q Could you have revoked the order? punishment, namely an obvious punishment for refusing to obey the order of the chief of state. give the order or renew it? that I did not insist on the execution of this order. execution of the order? no Jews, or very few Jews. This was possible on the basis of Army instruction which I had. This was valid for the area of Moscow, with the exception of the city of Moscow itself. Because in this area up to the revolution of 1917 the settlement of Jews had been prohibited by the Czarist government.

Q Did you see any other ways of evading the order?

I could keep the Commando busy with fighting partisans, so that if my superior would ask me about it I could point out to this activity of my Commando. And the final possibility was that I might move the Commando so near the fronts that the execution of the order would be impossible. For this reason I did so in the following period. in Wellikie Lucki? spent about two days with it.

Q What was the security position in this area? of the sub-commando, the city was relatively quiet. As far as I remember, there were hardly any Jews, or no Jews at all. On the other hand, in the vicinity of Welikie Lucki a partisan movement had been formed and the commando had accomplished several missions there.

Q During your stay in Weliki_Luki did you give any orders for executions or did you confirm the orders already given, or did you demand that these orders be executed expressly?

A No. as far as this kommando is concerned. I asked that every individual case he thoroughly investigated and tried justly.

Q Were you later in Weliki_Luki again? that at the end of the month of September I was once more there for two days. kommando in Weliki_Luki carried out an anti-Jewish operation? and partisans? sent to me.

Q What were the following garrisons of your kommando? leadership of Foltis during the battle of Vyazma, moved toward Vyazama with a tank unit. with a mission to secure the documents in Vyazama. The kommando remained there for several days, about until the 15th of October Subkommanaos remained in Welish and Welikie_Luki at that time.

Q Where did you yourself stay in the following period of time? to discuss the advance of my kommando with the G_2, corresponding to the military Voperations as they had been laid down. of finding important documents, Secondly, the advance on Kalinin was considered a part of the operation against Moscow, the capture of which was expected. Thirdly, by moving my kommando up to the front troops, I hoped, as I just said, to evade the execution of the anti-Jewish order. about executing this order?

A Yes. After I returned to Welish from the G_2, after this conference which I have just mentioned, I found the news that Foltis had been recalled to Berlin, As a result I immediately had to go to the kommando in Vyazma. I did not know itsgarrison at that time but I had to go there to relieve Foltis. Therefore, I ordered the kommando Welish the order to bring in the subkommando in Weliki_Luki as soon as the road to Vyazma, was free, and to go there and to find out where the garrison was then I personally started the trip with twp vehicles, and since I went via Smolensk where Brigadier-General Nebe had his headquarters, I reported to him, and I informed him about my intention of advancing. On this occasion, Nebe came to talk about the prospective activity of the kommando in Moscow and he told me, among other things, that the kommando 7a had thus far not shot any Jewish women and children, but the Fuehrer order referred to all Jews, and the other would have to be carried out accordingly.

Q Did you object to Nebe about carrying out this order?

A No. After I clearly saw that this order had been given to this extent by the highest authority in the State, I considered expressing my opinion directly to Nebe impossible, impossible because of my tactics which I had started, I considered such an opinion as dangerous insofar as the order then certainly would have to be executed. knew that your kommando had not executed any Jews during your time? or my subordinate officers. He, therefore, could have only judged by 5 November 1947_A_MSD_22_3_Hoxsie (Lea) the experiences which he had made with my predecessor.

Q Did you go back to Welish or Weliki_Luki, after this conference? on this clear order of Nebe's to your subordinate offices?

A No. I did not pass it. on.

Q How did things develop after that? command of the subkommando Vyazma from Foltis who had now returned to There I set up a head quarters and moved to Kalinin with a small detachments of the subkommando in the last days of October, and in the early days of November. As far as I remember I reached Kalinin about the 7th of November. Up to my final departure from the kommando on the 10th of December, since approx. middle of November, Rshev and Kalinin were the garrisons of this kommando.

Q What happened to the subkommando Welish and Weliki_Luki? connections had been completely interrupted by partisan action. There fore, the end of October, beginning of November, they proceeded toward Rshev separately, Since a period of muddy weather had made the roads impassable and since a great number of vehicles got stuck because of this, the arrival of these subkommandos was delayed until the middle of November, Part of the time some detachments had spent some time in Smolensk with the Group. Kalinin? 27th of October, we were busy setting up a headquarters, end I also think I can remember that we made the beginning of setting up an auxiliary Russian police force. When I left for Kalinin its work had not yet started.

5 November 1947_A_MSD_22_4_Hoxsie (Lea) That happened whenever I reported to the Army Staff which was still a little further back. in Rshev?

A No, I don't remember any such details, I don't know whether executions were carried out there. Rshev? never heard of any, but if such an action had taken place I would certainly have hoard about it.

THE PRESIDENT: Then your answer to that question is that no execution did take place there?

THE WITNESS: That is right. As far as I was informed no such execution took place.

Q (By Dr. Mayer) What did your kommando do in Kalinin? front situation there were extraordinary conditions there. The front went along the northeastern border of the city. Therefore, during the entire time the city was under the artillery bombardment of the Russians. The German division staffs, for example, were still west of the city. The first house which we wanted to use as headquarters had to be evacuated because of direct hits.

The kommando suffered some casualties during this attack. The activity to secure the city area, which was always interrupted because of the front situation, was concerned exclusively with Russian espionage and with frequently appearing sabotage detachments. Here too we made an attempt to set up an auxiliary Russian police force, and at the request of the town commandant we picked out Rusian personalities and investigated them, who would be used for the preparation of the city.

Q Did any executions take place during that time? attacks.

Q Were any Jews living in Kalinin?

Q Did executions of Jews take place?

A No. Because of the immediate proximity of the front area, which was connected with the immediate action by the enemy, this question did not actually come up for the missions of the kommando could only consist here of fighting espionage and partisans. Every superior would have had to see this point of view.

Q How long were you in Kalinin with your kommando?

A The kommando was there from about the 7th of November. May I correct myself? I personally was there from the 7th of November to about the 7th of December. During this time I was absent from there about two weeks - although not consequently - once in Smolensk and a few times in Rshev.

Q When did you personally leave Kalinin for the last time? Rshev in order to go to Germany on furlough.

Q Did you have permission to leave your kommando?

A Yes. I had gotten the consent of my superior, and with his consent I had handed over the kommando to a deputy.

entire activity as a kommando leader. As a kommando leader did you ever attend, an execution?

Q Did you ever order such an execution in individual cases? investigated or made check-ups on measures carried out by my subordinate officers, this investigation sometimes would confirm such an order. made of them?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mayer, I didn't quite understand his answer. You asked him if he ever ordered an execution. He says generally not. Now, he either did order an execution or he did not, 'Generally not' to me signifies that he did order some executions even though that was not his usual practive. Now, did he or did he not order executions?

THE WITNESS: Your Honors in the following sentence I said that in those cases in which I investigated. Some cases handled by my subordinate officers and in which I had one of these officers submit to me one of those cases, and when his decision was to execute, then by examing the case I confirmed such a decision and thereby ordered such an execution.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, you did order an execution?

THE WITNESS: In a few individual cases which I examined myself I ordered executions, yes.

Q (By Dr. Mayer) during your activity was a current list of executions kept? the kommando nor was such a list kept during my time. listed in these documents originate from, where do they come from?

A I don't know. At any rate they were not listed by my kommando.

The documents submitted to me which show these total figures cannot possibly he correct in my opinion. May I come hack to this when I discuss the various documents?

Q On what was you collaboration with the Army based? Order which has been mentioned here before was assigned to the Ninth Army. On this the cooperation with the Army is based and the orders given by the Army to the kommando.

Q What did this order mean to you? tasks in the roar area of this Army and then safeguard important documentary material, furthermore, that that kommandoo as far as supply is concerned, was under the Army, and that for operational reasons the Army could exclude the activity of the kommando in certain localities.

Q Did such exclusions take place?

Q Were you only active in the rear Army area?

A No. When I received the order to go to Vyazma, Rshev and Kalinin I got the G_2's consent to use my kommando in the operational area, that is in the front area, as this had already been granted to predecessor. of the 9th Army?

A Yes. After my arrival I introduced myself to the G_2 of the Army, or rather I was introduced there by their liaison officer, and during my activity I had frequent conferences with the G_2.

Q Why did you just keep contact with the G_2? liaison with kommando. agencies?

A Yes, especially with the G_2 counter intellegence officer. That is with the officer working on counterintellegence under G_2. Other agencies were field commands and town commands and divisional staffs. influence on your activity? the 9th Army, in view, of the partisan question, carried with it the fact that the kommando during my time worked almost exclusively under the direct order of the Army or under subordinate units of that Army. The executions mentioned in the documents can be traced back to. direct orders by Army agencies, or they are the results of such order.

Q During your presence in your kommandoo what was your work? already mentioned, I devoted myself to SD reports, and I tried to give as exact a picture as possible of the area of the Soviet Union in which I found myself.

Q But what did you report in these SD reports? system and collected documents about the position of the Russian church and Bolshevist state.

Q How did you acquire the documents of such reports? in their fields, and I had them report to me partly orally, partly in written form then I inspected a collective farm, and I had them give me documents about the size, the harvest about the quota of harvest, handed over about the machinery, etc. then I sopke to the workers in the collective farms by means of an interpreter, and also with former real estate owners. I then collected these impressions in a report. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Where did this all take place?

Q And how far away was that from the front? the time fixed until the time of October.

Q Now, you say that when you were up close to the front you didn't have time to consider the Jewish question, but you had time to go around collecting statistics on farms and crops and agriculture, and finding out how things grew, and did not grow, and you completely forgot about the Fuehrerorder which demanded immediate and complete action? periods, the area Welish-Welikielucki, on one hand, secondly, the area Rshew-Kalinin, on the other hand. In the area Welish-Welikielucki, the described partisan activity was cause for orders, on the part of the army. weren't you?

Q And "Einsatz" means "action"?

Q You were sent into the field for action? Jews, that was the purpose of Einsatzgruppe, wasn't it? the countryside, looking over farmland, and leisurely writing up reports, which you sent back, what about this order which you had? even with the Einsatzgruppe staff were such that next to the chief of the Einsatzgruppe there was an officer of SD reports, a Leader 3 and Va Leader 4, who was competent for police executive measures. These two items were both mentioned in this report. activity quiet also?

Q They were active? and wheat,and land and so on, if the partisans were active? partisans to Foltis and militarily trained leaders, and according to my activity which I had carried on before the Russian campaign, I was devoting myself to SD reports. this Fuehrerorder was purely academic, you were just a country farmer, and a little tout, and that you weren't engaged in fighting partisans or killing Jews, you were just on a nice, little jaunt, gathering up these reports and sending them in, is that what we are to understand?

Q Well then you didn't have anything to do with shooting at all while you were in the field in charge of an Einsatzkommando? I carried out personal investigations. none? to the front in Kalinin, and to maintain contact with the army agencies.

Q Who appointed you to the Einsatzkommando?

Q Did Streckenbach know that you were gun shy? wildering to me how they could put you in charge of an active unit when you say that you didn't do any fighting against partisans, you didn't execute the Fuehrerorder to kill Jews, and you merely sat at a desk and wrote up reports on farms and confirmed reports which were sent to you by your subleaders. made check-ups, that I visited my subcommandos in the Welikielucki once or twick, and that I spoke to the subcommand officer about his activity. That I didn't lead a platoon of active SS men into the forests was due to the fact that I was not militarily in a position to lead such an expedition in the military manner, and as it had become evident 5 November 1947_A_MSD_24_4_Spears (Lea) in the documents, when two army divisions comb through a territory, clean out a territory, and the commando is supposed to furnish interrogation detachments, then I, as a commando leaders, who knew nothing about the interrogations until then would hardly be able to lead a tiny platoon of 5 interrogators in an Army unit.

Apart from that in the firs two weeks.... nothing about partisan fighting, you knew nothing about the military, you knew nothing about actively conducting a platoon, and you could just as well have remained in Stuttgart, couldn't you, insofar as carrying out the program of the Fuehrer was concerned?

Q Where did you lead them to? to Kalinin at the moment when Foltis left.

Q You led them in an automobile?

Q Well, you were in a motor vehicle, weren't you?

Q You never led them into any action, you didn't lead them into any fight? so we will take you back to the farm, all right, Dr. Mayer. BY DR. MAYER:

Q Didn't you have an SD expert for these jobs that you described After he was transferred to Germany there was no such expert any more in my commando. Soviet State?

A Yes. I found an edition in the German langauge, published in 5 November 1947_A_MSD_24_5_Spears (Lea) Moscow, of Stalin's speeches.

From this I made excerpts and sent them to the Einsatzgruppe.

Q Why didn't, you return to your commando after your furlough had expired? Reich Security Main Office to relieve me. Thereupon a certificate by a dentist was demanded which I submitted.

Q When were you relieved?

Q Where were you then sent?

Q When did you receive your renewed order to report to Russia?

Q How did this new order come about?

PRESIDENT: Now, if it is a lengthy story, I suppose we should hear it tomorrow morning. What did you wish to say, Dr, Gawlik?

DR. GAWLIK: Could I ask that the defendant, Seibert, be excused tomorrow morning in order to prepare the defense?

PRESIDENT: The defendant, Seibert, will be excused from attending court tomorrow morning in order that he may prepare his defense with his counsel. Do you have anything further, Dr. Mayer, to present?

DR. MAYER: No, Your Honor.

PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be recessed until tomorrow morning at 9:30.

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II.

DR. RIEDIGER (for the defendant Haensch): Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Haensch be excused from today's session of Cour and that he be brought to Room 57 for the purpose of preparing his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Haensch will he excused from today's session of Court and will be taken to Room 57 in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. HOFFMANN (for the defense Nosske): Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Nosske be excused from tomorrow entire session, in order to prepare for his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Nosske also will be excused from today' session of Court.

DR. MAYER (For defendant Steimle): Your Honor, I would like to be permitted to continue with my direct examination.

DR. HOFFMANN: I beg your pardon .... my colleague has drawn my attention to the fact that the translation said the Court has excused my defendant for today.I meant for tomorrow.

THE PRESIDENT: The correction will he made in the record. The defendant Nosske will not he excused today, but from tomorrow's session of Court. BY DR. MAYER:

Q. Witness, we come now to your two commands for Russia. The question is, when did you receive your new order to report to Russia?

A. About the middle of August 1942.

Q. How did this order come about?

A. There is a lengthy story connected with this order. Since the beginning of the war I was in contact with Office VI, the Foreign Information Service, and I maintained foreign contacts for this office from my Stuttgart office. Within this activity I had gotten in touch with Schellenberg, the Chief of Office VI. After my first return from Russia, Schellenberg tried to transfer me to his office as a deaprtment chief. This was not successful because Streckenbach objected to it. Who, for reasons unknown to me, refused this request of Schellenberg's. When in August 1942, on my trip to Russia, I reported, to Schellenberg in order to have my renewed order to report to Russia revoked and to seek a support for that, he said that such an effort would probably be in vain. He knew that this order came about in order to prevent me from joining him as a collaborator. Nevertheless, on the occasion of the stay in Berlin Schellenberg continued to make efforts to have this order rescinded, and the then chief of personnel Schulz - tried this too but Streckenbach kept on refusing.

Q. After this refusal of Strechenbach, did you see any other possibility of evading this new order to report in Russia?

A. No. I would have had only the way of an open refusal to obey orders, with its clear and obvious consequences.

Q. What kommando was given to you this time?

A. The Special Kommando 4-a.

Q. During what time did you command this kommando?

A. During the end of August 1942, until the 15th of January 1943.

Q. To what Einsatzgruppe was 4-a subordinate?

A. The Kommando belonged to Einsatzgruppe C, and was subordinate to the commanding officer of this Gruppe, Gruppen Leader Thomas. The latter had his headquarters in Kiev. At the same time he was commander of the security police and SD in the entire Ukraine.

His jurisdictional area, therefore, extended from the Polish border to the Valga River.

Q. From whom did you take o ver command of this Kommando 4-a?

A. My predecessor was Dr. Weinmann, who handed over the command to me.

Q. What was the situation in 4-a when you took over?

A. The main part of the kommando. which was not so strong as the Kommando 7-a, was in the area of the 6th German Army which at that time was advancing toward Stalingrad. Further: a liaison staff was with the Hungarian army. Sub-kommandos were in the sees of the Second German Army.

Q. Where were you, yourself?

A. The situation brought about such a spreading about of the kommando; because of the tremendous distances it was impossible for me to maintain contact with the entire kommando. Those were distances of about 800 kilometers. Therefore, I maintained the regulations set down by my predecessor, namely, that the small subkommandos in the Second German Army area would remain subordinated to the local field commands, and that the kommando would furnish a liaison officer to the Second German Army. The latter also maintained contact with the Hungarian Army.

Q. What was the relationship to the Hungarian Army, and how was it regulated?

A. The small staff there was to guarantee the exchange of information within the entire German liaison staff. It did not have an activity of its own since the area was under the Hungarian sovereignty.

Q. Describe your activity in the area of the Sixth Army.

A. The sequence of my garrisons were: Tschernishewkaya, NishnitsShirskaja and Kallarth on the Don River. The first mentioned place was a small village on the steppes of the Don River. As far as the other two are concerned, they are also small towns.

Q. Why did you pick these places?

A. In order to be near the army staff.

Q. Was any activity carried out in the sense of your orders in this area?

A. No. The territory showed no Jewish inhabitants.... was very sparsely inhabited.... one could drive for hours without finding a single village; as far as I remember, active resistance was only met in one individual case. This was a staff of a partisan movement which was just begining to develop, which was betrayed to us by a deserter. Otherwise, the area gave no cause for partisan marriage. There were hardly any forests. During the advance towards the above mentioned group there was a fight during which the partisans were killed in the course of the fighting.

Q. Didn't they surrender?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. What did the other activity of your kommando consist of during this time?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mayer, the witness stated that rather abstractly. There was a fight. We know partisans were on one side. Who was on the other side? Does he mean that his kommando fought the partisans? That is a little unclear.

WITNESS: I mean to say by this that this partisan unit was fought by my kommando.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

BY DR. MAYER:

Q. Witness, I repeat my question. Of what did the other activity of your kommando consist during this time?

A. During the period of September and the beginning of October -the kommando was almost completely idle. The army already fought in the suburbs and the southern parts of Stalingrad, and we awaited the capture of Stalingrad. In view of this I had several conferences with the G-2, the Quartermaster of the Army, and the town commandant who was to command Stalingrad.

Q. What were the contents of these conference?

A. The activity of my kommando after the capture of Stalingrad.

Q. Was your kommando active in the area of Stalingrad?

A. No. This was impossible, considering the combat situation. There were only small parts of the city in the hands of the Army. At the end of September I personally was in this city for only one day. The kommando or parts of the kommando were never there. And no town commandant was installed there either at that time.

Q. When and why was your kommando relieved from the Sixth Army area?

A. After I received an order from Thomas, in the end of September, to take up contact with the Italian army which was being committed in the Don area, so that my competence was distributed to four armies, expressed justified misgivings to this distribution of the kommando in a radio message. I could not even take a semblance of responsibility for the kommando. Gruppenfuehrer Thomas, therefore, visited me. During this visit I suggested to him that he take my kommando out of the Sixth Army area because another kommando, namely, 4-b, was also marching on Stalingrad from the south with a tank unit. Thomas approved this, and he ordered that I join the Second Army. This was the area of Kursk. The liaison staffs to the Hungarian and Italian armies were to be continued to be supplied by me. After this decision I put the kommando under the leadership of my deputy and had it proceed toward Kursk. I personally handed over my headquarters to the Kommando leader of 4-b, and introduced the kommando leader of 4-b to the several army agencies.

After that, I installed the liaison staff with the Italian army, visited the leadership staff with the Hungarian army, and reached Kursk about the end of October 1942.

Q. What activity was your kommando engaged in, in Kursk?

A. I must say here that at this time Kursk had been in German hands for more than a year that a Russian auxilliary police force existed there, and German civilian administration was already active in many, varied fields. During my time cases of attacks against army members, carried out by illegal Communist activities were being dealt with. Furtheremore, I know of cases of Bolshevist agents and a very extensive case of sabotage. In two cases anti-partisan operations were carried out.

Q. In what manner were these cases dealt with?

A. The investigation was carried out partly independently by officers of my kommando, partly in collaboration with the secret field police; very frequently the Russian auxiliary police force was used in preliminary investigations because we had confidence men among them. My deputy, Sturmbannfuehrer Schmidt, made the conclusive investigation and proposed the sentence. If these cases involved Wehrmacht units in the area of the city of Kursk itself, I, or my deputy, submitted the case to the town commandant. In other cases, I confirmed, when I was present, the judgment by reviewing the case myself.

Q. During your activity in Kursk, were executions carried out of Jews, Gypsies and so-called social elements?

A. No; an execution of Jews was neither ordered by me, nor was it carried out by my kommando in Kursk. An order to shoot Gypsies or a social elements was not known to me at any time.

Q. In your affidavit you stated that your commando....

THE PRESIDENT: Pardon me, Dr, Mayer ... I am sorry to interrupt. I dodn't quite understand the answer of the witness to the effect that the killing of Jews, Gypsies and a-socials were not known to him at any time.

Does he mean by that that he was not familiar with the Fuehrer order which specifically ordered the executions of peoples in those categories, or does he mean that he was familiar with the order but that no executions of those peoples occurred, to his knowledge. It is not clear.

WITNESS: My answer is to the effect that I knew the order about the treatment of Jews, but that this was not carried out in the area of Kursk. On the other hand, at no time did I know of any order to shoot Gypsies or a-social elements.

THE PRESIDENT: You did not know that that was included in the purport of the original order?

WITNESS: No, not as far as Gypsies and a-socials were concerned.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. Witness, in your affidavit you stated that your kommando IV A had a gas van? What is you comment on this?

A. Among the vehicles there was a so-called gas van. I did not speak of gas chambers during any interrogation, exit is claimed by the Prosecution. I heard of the existence of such a van in Kursk by the officer of the motor pool. He told me on the occasion of a conference that there was a so-called "G*van" among the vehicles which he had used as a transport-vehicle. The car was no longer usable for the original purpose, because it was being used for transportation purposes. I don't know whether this happened, because it had been reconstructed, or whether it was just being used for transportation.

Q. Thus during your activity as kommando leader, you never killed or had any one killed by means of this van?

A. No, I never did so.

Q. Were you never reprimanded by your group chief because of lack of activity?

A. Apart from the fact that my kommando took care of the matters currently, Kursk was so far away from Kiev, and Thomas was so busy with the activity in his wide area, that he did not even bother about my kommando. I merely saw him during a conference about the order for my kommando to leave Stalingrad.

Q. Didn't you ever receive any decisive orders from him?

A. The orders for example to proceed to the area of the Second Army; then once during the period of Kursk I once received the order that I was to furnish a number of officials and drivers to the commanding officer of Charkow, so that the kommando IV-A in Kursk still had five officials, several dirvers and a number of regular policemen.

Q. Were there any other factors which determined your activity in Kursk?

A. In the month of December typhus epidemic broke out in my kommando, just as well as it did in the prison, which stopped for weeks. Then in December in the southern sector of my area the fronts began to waver, i.e. in the Hungarian and Italian sector.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mayer, pardon me, but when I interrupt you please understand it is purely to get information. I don't want in any way to impede you in proceeding with your case. The witness has stated that typhus broke out, and this made work impossible for weeks. Now, just what work were they engaged in at the time?

A. Investigations were currently carried out in those cases of which I spoke. The officials took out the arrestees, and put them into offices, to be interrogated there. Since they were mostly large complex questions, the interrogations lasted for weeks. Thus, if in the prison and in the house typhus broke out, the interrogations were interrupted and discontinued for medical reasons.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, BY DR. MAYER:

Q. During your stay in Kursk, what were you engaged in?

A. Aside from supervising police activity I made a extensive report on the school question of the Soviet Union. Furthermore, I dealt with captured material, which came from the NKVD in Rostov, which was found by the Kommando IV-A. On the basis of this material I made out a report about the system of work of the NKVD.

Q. At what time and why did you leave your Kommando?

A. On l5th January I started a furlough which had been granted by Thomas. After I arrived in Stuttgart, I informed the chief of Office VI Schellenberg, of my presence in Germany, and I asked him once more to try to have me trasferred into his Office VI. This time I was successful. In the meantime, on 30 January Kaltenbrunner had taken over the Reich Main Security Office. The former chief of personnel, Schulz had become chief of Office I, and thus my transfer to Office VI became retroactive 8 January 1943, and, I, therefore, didn't return to Russia.

Q. Did you mean to say January or February?

A. I mean, 8 February.

DR. MAYER: Your Honor, I now am to speak about the documents, which refer to this witness, and to his activity in Kommando VII-A. in as far as I must make reference to certain places in these documents which are not contained in the extracts submitted by the Prosecution, I shall submit these documents to the Tribunal. BY DR. MAYER:

Q. Witness, please lock at Document Book II-B, prosecution's Exhibit No. 64, Document No. NO-3143, page 42 of the English Text, page 47 of the German Text, it is operational report NO 92 of 23 September 1941. I ask you now, when you took over the Kommando, did y you know how many executions had been carried out by the Special Kommando VII-A, by that time?

A. In this operational report 7077 executions are listed for special Kommando VII-A. This is supposed to have been as of 13 September 1941. I must state in general here---

THE PRESIDENT: We don't find that figure. On what page does it appear?

DR.MEYER: Your Honor, the list is on the last page----

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Thank you, very much. It is on page 53.

BY DR, MAYER:

Q. Please repeat your answer, witness?

A. This report lists 1011 executions for Special Kommando VII-A.This was supposed to be as of 13 September 1941. I must state in general here that during my command of Special Kommando VII-A, no numerical compilations were ever made which referred to executions. I saw such compilations when I took over the Kommando. During my time various individual figures were reported, which were evidently then compiled by a different agency. About the circumstance that the figure 1011 is supposed to represent the figure as of 13 September 1941, I would like to point out that on 7 September I took over the Kommando, and, accordingly I was then one week with the Kommando when this figure was al report No. 108, dated 9 October 1941, on page 17 of the English text.

The excerpt about the Special Kommando VII-A might be understood thus as if your Special Kommando had delivered to prison every male person between the ages of 15 and 55, Can you comment on this?

A. I can remember a large action against partisans at that time, which took place in this area of Demidow by the Army. One part of Special Kommando VII-A participated in this action. The excerpt here gives t the situation in an er roneous fashion.

I, therefore, ask for permission to be able to read the complete text, relative to the matter as it is stated in the photostat.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mayer; did I understand you to say that this report indicated that the witness' Kommando had executed all those between the ages of 15 and 55? The report does not say that, It merely says that they were arrested.

DR. MAYER: Yes, Your Honor, it looks as if the Kommando had arrested all persons between the ages of 15 and 55, and put them into prison in the Camp Demidow. The witness would like to explain what was the situation?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. I understood you to ask him to explain why the report had said that all of those males between these ages had been executed. The report says they were arrested, not executed.

DR. MAYER: That is right.

DR. FERENCZ: May it please the Tribunal. The prosecution has not charged the witness with this particular crime, and if I may bear out some time to point to the fact that we made no mention to it in our case in chief, and have no intention of discussing this problem at all in the case against him.

THE PRESIDENT: Please make very specific then, Mr. Ferencz, your admission that the Prosecution does not charge him with any crime as could be possibly drawn from any certain document.

MR. FERENCZ: Yes, Your Honor, we do not charge him with crime for any of the event described in NO-3156, Section II.

THE PRESIDENT: You have heard that very specific reference, Dr, Mayer, that the present witness, or defendant Steimle is not charged with any crime arising out of Section II of Document NO-3156,

DR. MAYER: Your Honor, May I point out that subsequent to this Section II, there are dots, which means that there is a place where words have been omitted, which are to be found in the original document. The next sentence then reads: "The SK-VII-A was able to find 18? partisans and communists." Then from the same page more dots. Then there is another paragraph which ends by saying: "The remainder of the partisans were shot." This whole operation is, of course, described fully and is also described in the context in the original. It would now depend on whether the Prosecutor explains that, he does not charge the defendant with the entire report. Otherwise, for the sake of understanding the context of the entire report would have to be discussed.

MR. FERENCZ: No, Your Honor, we do not withdraw or fail to charge him with other crimes committed as shown in otherparts of this document, We have not made any mention of the arrest of males in the prison Camp Demidow, but I understood that the defendant was going to make a long explanation of it, so I wasjust trying to save some time.

THE PRESIDENT: I think Mr. Ferencz and Dr. Mayer, that in a situation of this kind, where a report weaves in and out of alleged criminality and not an alleged criminality, that it may be simpler to have the witness explain the entire situation, because other wise you may get into difficulty in trying to determine just what the witness did explain away and what he did not.

MR. FERENCZ: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: So I think Dr. Mayer, it will be entirely in order for you to proceed asyou had originally intended, and let the witness explain in any way he sees fit this particular report.

DR. MAYER: Yes, Your Honor.

Coutr 2, Case 9 BY DR. MAYER:

Q. Witness, please continue?

A. This report is included in the number of executions of Special Kommando VII-A, and the report was based on the following; The Army made up a report from the numbers given it by the kommando, and I ask for permission to cite briefly the original text of the operational report." Special Kommando VII-A had repeatedly determined that in the dense forest southeast of Demidow, a great number of plunderings and attacks on the part of partisans had been carried out This caused great restlessness in that area, and endangered the through fares. There were reports according to which one could court she strength of the partisans from 800 to 2000 men. The Army High Command furnished two divisions to clean up this area. Every male person between fifteen and fifty-five years of age was put into the prison Camp Demidow for screening. The various mopping up operations resulted in the arrest of 693 persons, 438 persons, mostly collective farmers, could be rebased asnon-suspects. 72 former Rod Army men who lived in this operation area were brought into the prison of war camp. 183 partisans and Communist were determined by Special Kommando VII-A. Five partisans admitted to have killed fourteen German soldiers. One German soldier was asphyxiated when he tried to get some eggs, and the others were shot. Hand granades were thrown into passenger cars and in trucks." End of quotation. The compilation of this report shows fights with partisans, and of the taking of prisoners of 693 persons. It shows that extensive interrogations were carried out. On the basis of the document as far as I remember I can say that in the course of the use of Special Kommando VII-A.in this document, it was based on orders of the Army. Any action against these partisans took place under the leadership of the Army. The action lasted from ten or twelve days, if I remember correctly, including the interrogations carried out. The interrogations were not carried out only by Special Kommando VII-A but jointly with members of the Secret Field Police.

The sentences were not imposed by Foltis alone, the leader of the Sonderkommando, but after the review and investigation, the sentences were imposed after a deliberation by Foltis and army officers.

I do not know myself who carried out the execution. The document does not say anything about that either. I assume that members of my kommando, as well as parts of the Army, participated in this. This same report of the 9th of October also shows that the number of executions of the kommando increased to 1252. That is from the 13th of September an increase of 241 executions are shown. It seems necessary for me to cite two statements which are also contained in the original document. On page 7 of the original the document says - this report is not in the document book - that Special Kommando 7a, in connection with the arrest group of the Army Command, did, on several days and in several localities, carry out several actions against partisan groups in that area. Furthermore, some more localities were cleaned out. During these actions all in all, 7 partisans were arrested and liquidated." End of quotation. At another place the report contains another reference according to which eight persons were arrested and executed at another locality. I cite these events to show why this number of executions increased from beginning of September to the end of September and to explain this increase. of the German, page 14 of the original, the fact which is emphasized by the prosecution is mentioned here, according to which Special Kommando 7a executed juvenile communists because of their intention to destroy a railroad bridge. The document here lists a repetition of one event in two versions, one after the other. One time it is reported, and I quote: "Special Kommando 7a reports of juvenile communists who were liquidated because they intended to destroy a railroad bridge which had been almost finished. Explosives had already been acquired and had been made available." Then the text continues: "In Wilikie Luki too, there were a group of youthful persons who were rendered harmless who intended to blow up a railroad bridge. The leader of the group had persuaded its members to participate in this."

have been carried out by EK 9. Then in the action mentioned in Point 5, there again Mogilew is mentioned as the garrison for the Einsatzkommando 8. Then the following paragraph of Point 5 refers to the location of a garrison at Asmoni. This village Asmoni is again mentioned on page 17 of the original of this report, but it says Esmoni here with an "E", "Esmoni" and I quote, "It is 40 kilometres to the north west of Mogilew". Mogilew is, as I have already mentioned, the garrison of Einsatzkommando 8. The EK 8 is also charged with executions against Jews which are mentioned in this third paragraph. It is further mentioned in this report that Gorki is northeast of Mogilew. The next location, which is Mistislawl, is said to be 80 kilometres to the east of Mogilew. The further operations refer to Mogilew. From these locations it becomes quite evident that 7A did not participate in these operations and did not carry them out. December 1941. It is in Document Book II-B, Exhibit 62, Document NO2824 on page 30 of the English and 31 of the German. Did your kommando participate in these individual actions mentioned here? Naumann, who mentions the locations which are mentioned in this particular report and he made statements concerning these locations. He said that none of these villages were within the field of actions of Special Kommando 7A at that time. This is correct. Without much difficulty I could, using the names of villages, confirm and establish which kommando Court No. II, Case No. IX.

was in charge. I could find out by using the names of the locations which are mentioned in this document and if the Situation Report of 3 days later of the 22d of December is used, it is easy to establish this, which is on page 15 of the English Document Book III-B and on page 17 of the German. Apart from this remark, I can only repeat that my kommando had nothing to do with these executions which are mentioned in Document NO-2824, Exhibit No. 62 and in the Report of Events of the 19th of December, 1941. events, No, 154 in II-A, 162 in Volume III-B and l68 in Book III-A. No. 154 is Exhibit No. 51. It is Document No-3273. It is on 105 of the English Document book and 113 of the German. The Report 162 is Exhibit No. 122, Document NO-4784, on page 53 of the English Document Book and page 82 of the German Book, and Report 168 is Exhibit No. 107 and Document KO-4533 on page 45 of the English Book and 63 of the German Book. All these reports name you as the leader of Special Kommando 7A. They are of January and February, 1942, and do not carry any reports of Einsatzgruppe B. Please, will you comment on this briefly? 10th of December 1941, I went on leave, from which I should have returned on the 15th of January normally. During this leave, I asked for relief via the SS and Police Leader in Stuttgart, who was my immediate superior. The reasons I gave were that my teeth had to be treated. This request for relieve was not complied with, because I had to submit a certificate by a dentist. This I did. The long channel caused my prececessor to be prevented from arriving immediately and, therefore, automatically my name was mentioned as the leader of Kommando 7b. I should like to emphasize again that after my return from Russia to Stuttgart on the 20th of December, 1941 - that is, I arrived on the 20th of December, 1941 in Stuttgart - I did not return to my kommando. This was by permission of my superiors.

the Reich Security Main Office. In what position and how long were you employed in the Office 6 of the RSHA? was active in this office until the end of the war. I was in charge of Group 6b and from August 1944, apart from this activity, I took over a department Mil B -- that means Military Office B. That means the military office of the RSHA.

Q What were the assignments of Office 6? task to deal with political reporting in enemy occupied and neutral territories.

Q What do you mean "political, report", "political information service." ities of war importance of enemy, neutral, and occupied territories. This I did just like any political information service for any other state: to receive news on secret, political and other matters of war importance. One could describe this activity as political espionage.

Q Witness, when was Office 6 in existence?

A I think since 1939. It had no tradition and no experience. There were no experienced people with any knowledge of foreign countries as collaborators and because of the war such assistants could not be found. There was a lack of understanding on the part of the Chiefs for the tasks of such an information service. Hitler refused to recognize our activity at times because he did not want to be irritated by the adversaries. Ribbentrop refused to recognize it because it was not under his leadership. special operations? Portugal.

Q How was your service organized? ordinated to me and in the countries themselves we maintained organizations who dealt with information services and people who were employed in these services. tried to change the Spanish foreign policy, a political and economical Spanish-English treaty was brought about. In this case the collaborators of the service succeeded in receiving secret information and through this they obtained the exact wording of the contract. utilized? situation in these countries and were passed to competent German authorities, and individual reports were immediately submitted to the authorities. German political refugees abroad, to watch them and to fight against them?

Mil, what was this?

Q What was this office? tion Service be created. This meant an organizational combination of the military espionage service which had been up to that moment under the OKW, which was called up to than Counter-Intelligence with the Political Information Service of Office 6. That is a cooperative Counter-Intelligence. Military espionage from this point on became the military office in the RSHA and was combined with the Office 6 as The German Secret Information Service. That is what it was called. Schellenberg who was the office chief of Office 6 took over this office Military, so that these two offices had a personnel union. In this development I became Department Chief in Department B of this military office and I remained at the same time Group Chief of 6 B.

Q What were your tasks as Chief of Mil B? leadership of the military espionage service against the Western Allies. Excluded from this field of activities was the so-called frontal enlightment, that is, Military Intelligence in the enemy operational territory. This was the task of another individual organization, while my department only dealt with territory behind the front lines. vice within your office? Service. According to your statements, you already dealt with these matters when you were in Stuttgart. How was that?

A I had always been very interested in foreign policy. There fore, it was obvious that I was very much attracted by foreign information service. Therefore, after war broke out and when my Stuttgart SD Department was officially joined to Office 6, I devoted myself to this task.

Q I am now thinking of the years 1939 to 1942. Did you, during that time have a personal conception and idea of foreign political problems? European disaster. I nver believed that it would ever come to war with Poland either. According to this, my attitude, after the beginning of the war with the aid of this foreign information, I tried to find ways and means to maintain peace and to have peace negotiations.

Q Did you actually concretely bring about such negotiations? I had through liaison men connections with English circles. I had established such connections and I reported about these to Berlin.

Q What was your aim? tact between one German and one English personality and it seemed to me it should be aimed at to bring about a political understanding between the Western powers. In 1940, after the Western Campaign, it was quite obvious that an understanding with England could be achieved, if it was brought about cleverly. By this modification, I mean the bringing about of a loyal peace treaty with France. In 1942, however, I hoped for a union on an Anti-Bolshevist basis.

Q Did these discussions actually take place? came about, because Hitler or Ribbentrop prohibited getting in touch with the enemy at that time. period of your activities in Office 6?

chief tried himself to go to find this particular way.

Q Did you discuss this attitude of yours with other authorities? dealing with France, I expressed this attitude. Also my office chief made us of the material which was brought in by me and the oral and written reports. still be able to work in this particular way, that is, to bring about able compromise? so far. First of all, the success of the invasion on the German part meant that there would be a two-frontal war which they could not possibly stand. Furthermore, the Western Allies with their success had a strongly fortified position. The possibility was given now to Germany, of course, to keep the Bolshevist Army from the German borders with sacrifices.

Q. What caused you to believe in a possibility of an understanding with the Western powers at that time?

A. From our work dealing with foreign news the increased tensions between Russia and England were well known. Also the facts that there were American circles who were reserved as far as the question of unconditional surrender was concerned ... from our work dealing with foreign countries. the tensions which became stronger between Russia and England was well known to us. Also the fact that there were circles in America who took a doubtful attitude towards unconditional surrender.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I don't want to impede the Defense in any way. However, of this is going to continue much longer this line of questioning, I would like to point out that what the defendant did to improve relations between England or France or the Western powers as against Russia has absolutely nothing to do with this case.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, that is in the nature correct, Mr. Ferencz, but the Defense has the right to submit whatever evidence it has, and whatever line of reasoning it cares to present, in an attempted exculpation of the charges brought against it, and if the defendant believes that by establishing what he was attempting to do to bring about peace, that this tends to fortify his denial that he had anything to do with executions, it would be relevant and the Court will permit it. The objection is over-ruled.

DR. MAYER: Thank you, your Honor.

Q. (By Dr. Mayer) Did you have contacts which could have led to negotiations?

A. Yes, but those negotiations never came about because the final victory of Germany became the bible of the German people, so that any remarks as to the actual position became senseless and any foreign political attitude and thought were encircled by the two mottoes of unconditional surrender of the Allies and the final victory on the other side... that was the official German motto. For a political information service regarding this particular position there was no way out, and nothing could be done.

DR. MAYER: Your Honor, I have reached the end of my questioning within the direct examination of the witness. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Witness, you made one statement with regard to your attempts to bring about peace with England, and the phrase that we captured through the translation was that this peace could be achieved...this end could be achieved...if you went about the operation cleverly. Did you regard the attempt of Rudolf Hess as a clever movement? Would you put that within the category of the cleverness of program which you referred to?

A. I don't know the actual reasons for Hess's flight, but if this flight had an official or inofficial aim to start peace negotiations without any preparations, then, of course, I cannot regard this as a very reasonable attempt, the manner which it was done.

Q. Did you know anything of it before it took place?

A. No, I did not.

Q. What was your rank during the time that you were chief of Office VI in the RSHA?

A. In June 1944 I was promoted to Standartenfuehrer.

Q. What is the equivalent in the military field... what rank?

A. If a comparison is at all possible, it is the rank of a colonel.

Q. Yes, While you were making all these efforts to bring about peace with the Allies, was there any resentment on the part of Ribbentrop that you, only a colonel, would attempt to usurp the functions which undoubtedly he was very jealous of?

A. I was merely an information service activity which would show that there was a possibility of confidential negotiation, and this fact does not necessarily need an attitude, although in this particular case there was an attitude and it was passed on the authorities, not by myself but by my office chief.

Q. The Foreign Office, then, was entirely satisfied that you conduct these efforts?

A. No, it did not go via the Foreign Office from our own office, but our office chief passed it on to Himmler, as far as I know, and Himmler decided.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Any defense counsel desire to cross examine the witness? I understand you are finished with the direct examination, Dr. Mayer?

DR. MAYER: Yes, Your Honor. BY DR. SURHOLT (for the defendant Dr. Rasch):

Q. When did you join the Eastern assignment, witness?

A. As I have already said yesterday, it was in the first days of September. It was then that I arrived in Russia.

Q. Who was your Gruppe chief?

A. Brigadefuehrer Nebe was in charge then.

Q. How long was Nebe your Gruppe chief?

A. During November the position changed.

Q. And who took his place?

A. Naumann.

Q. Do your know whether, in the meantime, Dr. Rasch had been Gruppe chief or whether he was not Gruppe chief?

A. During the time when I was in Russia I never heard that Rasch was a leader of my Gruppe.

Q. As kommando leader of Gruppe B, therefore, you only knew that Nebe was in charge of the Gruppe, when you came and Naumann took his place later on?

A. Yes.

DR. SURHOLT: Thank you.

COURT II CASE IX BY DR. FRITZ (for the defendant Fendler):

Q. Since when do you know defendant Fendler?

A. Since the fall 1943.

Q. Where and under what conditions did you meet him?

A. Office VI was looking for a departmental chief, a Referent in my Gruppe, 6-b, and Fendler was assigned to Office VI, it was part of my own Gruppe, and he was subordinated to me directly within the Gruppe.

Q. You said in your direct examination, witness, I think, that the Gruppe dealt with countries of western and south western Europe.

A. Yes.

Q. And what countries did Fendler deal with?

A. Fendler was "Referent" for the sub-department 6-b-4 which dealt with Spain and Portugal.

Q. You have already explained generally in your direct examination the task of Office VI. I would like you to tell us now what special tasks were the tasks of a Referent, as Mr. Fendler was.

A. A Referent in a Gruppe had to obtain information ab out the country with which he was dealing. In the case, of Fendler, it was Spain and Portugal. He also had to have the necessary technical qualifications, and he had to get the technical information and other informational material, and he had to compile such material. The office material was then evaluated, and was passed on. As far as information which he received concerned the country he dealt with, -- in this case Spain and Portugal -- he had the responsibility as a Referent for a Spain report which he had to compile. If information was received concerning other countries, they were passed on to the responsible Referents of other offices. These reports were submitted to the Office Chief, the Gruppe COURT II CASE IX Chief, who passed them on to competent authorities or to the Reich agencies.

Q. And who signed these reports?

A. That depended entirely on the receiver of the report. It depended on by what agency it was received.

Q. What authority to sign did Fendler have?

A. He had the authority to sign all reports which went to his own office, or his subordinates. All reports to his chiefs and superiors had to be signed by the Gruppe chief or by the proper office chief.

Q. Did Office VI, or the defendant Fendler - apart from receiving information from foreign countries have also tasks dealing with active foreign policy?

A. No, no.

Q. Did Office VI have to deal with assignments of a political or propagandistic nature in the foreign organization of the NSDAP?

A. No.

Q. Did the defendant Fendler have anything to do with observation or supervision of persons or groups in foreign countries with the aim of persecuting them, either politically or by police?

A. No, that was not within his sphere of activity in the department, Fendler had nothing to do with it.

Q. Can you tell the Tribunal whether, in the subdepartment 6-b-4, there were only members of the SD or the NSDAP or the SS, or that they had to be members of the NSDAP?

A. No. Within the sub-department it was of ho significance, of no importance, whether anybody was a member of the Party of the SS for instance, there were emergency conscriptions into the office, civilian employees who, some of them, were not even members of the NSDAP; and, of course, many of them were not members of the SS. Qualifications for COURT II CASE IX the passing on of foreign information was the most important thing.

Some of them were members of the Wehrmacht, who had been detailed for such work.

Q. Was the defendant Fendler, while he was employed in Office VI, was he active in the Party or any one of the departments?

A. I know nothing about it. According to my knowledge he was fully employed in the office.

Q. Was defendant Fendler a member of the General SS?

A. No, he was a member of the SD. He was a member of the SD.

Q. Was he a member of the armed SS, the Waffen-SS?

A. That was only a formal matter. At the end of 1944 he joined the so-called "Training Institution" Konitz, but he remained in the Office VI, and he went on with the assignments of Office VI.

Q. Is it correct that the defendant Fendler received the order from you -- it was in 1944 -- to take part in establishing negotiations with the Western powers and technical requirements, and that he carried out these tasks?

A. It was contained in the program which I mentioned before, that Fendler worked on this task which had been given by the Office Chief, and in various cases he submitted reports which were to this effect.

Q. Do you remember what rank the defendant Fendler held when in 1943 he joined the Gruppe?

A. According to my memory he was Hauptsturmfuehrerbecause during the period he was employed there he became Hauptsturmfuehrer -- Regierungsassessor -- when he joined my office.

Q. Do you remember when Fendler was promoted to SS Sturmbannfuehrer?

A. I cannot say with certainly, but that was at the COURT II CASE IX end, shortly before the collapse.

Possibly in January 1945. I do not exclude the possibility that it was only in April 1945. It was at the end.

Q. It is supposed to have been in January 1945.

A. It is possible.

Q. It is possible?

A. Yes, it is possible.

Q. Did the Referent for 6-b-4, and there also Fendler, did he have any executive power?

A. No. There were no executive tasks contained in the foreign service, and therefore Fendler did not hold such an assignment.

Q. I have two conclusive questions concerning the personaltiy of the defendant Fendler. Do you know him as a brutal, and fanatic personality?

A. No, Fendler was not brutal, and he was not fanatical.

Q. Did he have tendencies to disregard authority?

A. No, Fendler was an independent personality who always did his duty in office VI.

DR. FRITZ: Thank you. Your Honor, I have no further questions. BY DR. VOGEL (for defendant von Radetzky):

Q. Witness, if I remember correctly, you were, from the middle of August 1942 until the middle of January 1943... you were active in SK 4-a.

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. What were the assignments of the defendant von Radetzky in your Kommando?

A. When I took over the kommando he was liaison officer with the Second Army, and it was also his task to maintain contact with the Hungarian Army.

Q. Is it known to you that von Radetzky, before your Court II Case IX arrival to the SD 4-a, was the deputy of the kommando chief?

A. No, that is not known to me. And I don't think it is very likely... because at that time there was a Sturmbannfuehrer and Regierungsrat, Government Councillor, in the kommando who, if there had been such a thing as a deputy, he would have been the deputy.

Q. Is it known to you that the defendant Radetzky attempted to be relieved from his activities and his assignment in the kommando?

A. He discussed the question of his release, or the question of his attitude and assignment in the kommando, with me. At this time he attempted to join a combat unit. Shortly after my return to Berlin in the year 1943, Radetzky visited me, and he told me that he wanted to try at Office I to be relieved from this war emergency assignment.

DR. VOGEL: Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Any other Defense counsel desiring to cross examine may do so now. the Prosecution may be prepared to take up the cross examination after the Tribunal reconvenes at one forty-five.

(The Tribunal recessed until 1345 hours) (The hearing reconvened at 1345 hours, 6 November 1947)

Q You mean that he treated them well?

THE PRESIDENT: Pardon me, I did not quite catch that last answer of the witness. Will you repeat it, please. The interpreter can repeat it?

THE INTERPRETER: The witness was asked whether he meant that Blume treated his men well, and he said, yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Is that what you mean by being "soft" because he treated his men well? characteristic.

DR. LUMMERT: Your Honor, I have no further question.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY MR. FERENCZ:

Q Steimle, didn't the men in Sonderkommando VII-A also tell you that Blume was murdering Jews before you arrived? that the defendant Radetzky came to you while you were the commanding officer of Sonderkommando IV-A and tried to get out of Sonderkommando IV-A, is that correct?

A I can not give the exact date for that. At least he was not present when I took over kommando.

Q Didn't you ask the men in your kommando, where is your leader, or when did he leave? he left, but today I no longer know what the period of time was between his departure and my arrival.

Q You say today you do not know. Isn't it a fact that you know, or at least you expressed an opinion on it not long ago in the interrogation? or even longer.

Q You said that in your interrogations, and why don't you say it now. You say now, you don't know?

A I just said that at that time I didn't have a definite idea which I can give about the period which elapsed between his departure and my arrival.

A I can not remember at the moment? the defendant Naumann? Smolensk.

Q When was that?

A I can not give you the exact date. It was before he visited me, and it was in the month of November. and I can count back from this visit. It may be about eight or ten days between our meeting in Smolensk and his visit to me in Kalinin. He was in Kalinin either in late November, or in the first days of December, it can by only that he met me about the 20th or 25th of November, or two or three days earlier. I can not give you the exact date.

Q Isn't it true that in the interrogations you said that you met Naumann about the middle of November? because, for instance, I included the 20th November in this period of time, namely, the middle of November. with any more exactness as to the date, and you think it was towards the end of November, as Naumann stated in his examination? beginning of December he had visited me, and our meeting was about eight to ten days before this visit.

Q. In other words he told you and passed on to you as his subordinate the Fuehrer Order, is that correct?

A. He again confirmed to me this Fuehrer Order which I already knew.

Q. He passed it on to you then as your superior officer? If he said that here is a Fuehrer Order to kill all the Jews didn't he then pass on the order to you?

A. The Fuehrer Order existed for me because I had received it from Nebe, and from my experience in my kommando. This conference was merely a renewed confirmation that the order read that way.

Q. You mean that you didn't raise the question with him in order to try to get away from carrying out that order. You just raised it in a conversational way about killing Jews in there and anything he said was on a purely friendly personal basis, is that what you are trying to say?

A. The conference dealt with the misgivings which I and Nebe expressed about this. You can see this form the fact that he said he had spent sleepless nights about it; the order was of the type that one had to have misgivings about it.

Q. Then isn't it true that what happened is that you said, here we have this Fuehrer Order to kill defenseless people, and Naumann replied yes, I spent many sleepless nights over it, but it's a Fuehrer Order, and we have to carry it out. Didn't he then pass on the order to you in that sense at least?

A. If I can say it in one word, he confirmed it to me that it had to be carried out.

Q. You heard the defendant Naumann testify that he never discussed the killings of Jews with you, didn't you?

A. I didn't hear this in that form.

Q. In what form did you hear it?

A. I thought that he said that he talked with his officers about it.

Q. When I questioned him on whether he had passed on the order to you he denied it. What have you got to say in that connection?

A. He didn't pass on the order in that sense, because I already knew it, but he confirmed it to me once more, because it came from Berlin, and he had received it from Heydrich as he told me.

Q. Then he clearly at least implied that you too were to carry out that order?

A. That was clear that I had to carry it out.

Q. When did you become a member of the regular SS?

A. I only was a member of the SS within the SD in 1936.

Q. Isn't it true that in an interrogation on 7 July, you were asked if you were a regular member of the SS and SD, and at that time you answered, yes?

A. I was a member of the SS as far as the SD was an SS unit.

Q. Will you answer my question, please? I am asking you whether you were asked on 7 July whether you were a regular SS and SD member, and you answered, yes. Now is that correct?

A. Yes, I am. Yes, I am.

Q. And when did you become a member of Amt-VII, which was declared to be a criminal organization by the IMT?

A. Did I understand you correctly, Office-VII?

Q. Amts-VI?

A. Amts-VI. I joined Office VI by an order of 8 February 1943.

Q. Why were you hiding under an assumed name as a farmer after the end of the war?

A. I didn't hide under an assumed name, but the passport which I had been using since '43 as an intelligence officer I continued to use in order to look after my family in the French Zone, and as long as I could not get there I registered myself with the police under that name, together with two other comrades who were department chiefs in Office VI and registered under their correct names, so there was no question of hiding.

I had no civilian papers in my name of Steimle but before my imprisonment I tried by all means to find out about the fate of my wife and children, and I wanted this information because shortly before the end of the war I heard through a rumor that my wife and my children had been shot during the advance of the French troops, but this was not true. Then when I got the pass, I agreed with my two comrades that after we had visited our families, we would report to the American authorities as soon as possible and we would register with them as members of Office-VI. When I was interrogated I gave my entire personal data without being asked and to the surprise of the interrogating officer.

Q. What name were you using when you were working as a farmer?

A. The name of Bulsch, which I already used in my office.

Q. What were the dates when you were in command of Sonderkommando-VII-A?

A. 6th or 7th of September 1941, until my furlough on 10th December 1941.

Q. You have seen the documents, have you not, which list you as commanding officer through 13 February 1942. Have you seen those?

A. Yes.

Q. You say that is a mistake, the document are wrong?

A. I explained this in my direct examination that during my furlough I asked for my transfer, and I submitted a certificate by a dentist, and, therefore, the formal transfer was possibly delayed sometime.

Q. Who made the reports for you to Einsatzgruppe-B Headquarters, or did you make them yourself?

A. No, they were made by the commanding officers of the subkommandos.

Q. You mean there was no report sent from Sonderkommando VII-A as a unit to Einsatzgruppe-B?

A. Certainly, the various individual reports were compiled and sent to the Einsatzgruppe.

Q. Who compiled them?

A. The reports were not compiled but reports were sent on together, so far as I remember.

Q. Did you read them?

A. Certainly, I read those reports so far as I was present.

Q. And were the reports that were made in Einsatzgruppe-B the consolidation of reports from the Sonderkommandos within the Einsatzgruppe-B?

A. I didn't get the question.

Q. You say you sent reports to Einsatzgruppe-B. Isn't it true that Einsatzgruppe-B sent those same reports onto Berlin?

A. I assume that Einsatzgruppe-B used these reports in making out its own reports.

Q. Do you know that the commanding officer of Einsatzgruppe-B exaggerated these reports when he sent them to Berlin?

A. At my time I didn't hear anything about this.

Q. When did you first learn of the functions of Sonderkommando VII-A?

A. What do you mean by functions? Do you mean missions?

Q. I mean, missions?

A. When I was informed about it by Nebe in Smolensk.

Q. When was that?

A. In September 1941.

Q. What did he tell you was the mission of this Sonderkommando that you were about to take over?

A. I explained this in my direct examination. He told me about the mission against Communist resistance movements and their helpers, the Jews. That is what he spoke about, and he also spoke about the making out of reports, and he also mentioned that important documents were to be collected.

Q. He told you then that at least part of your mission was to kill all the Jews and Communist leaders, is that correct?

A. He told that the active Communist forces and their helpers, Jews, are to be killed. At that conference I understood it to mean that resisting forces, whether they be Communist or Jews, are to be shot.

Q. In other words, in September you didn't know that all Jews were to be killed, but you thought only those who actively resisted were to be killed, is that correct?

A. I believed this until I heard of the complete order from Foltis, and then I also understood what Nebe meant.

Q. What did Foltis tell you?

A. I told that in my direct examination. He said that during the advance various adult and able-bodied Jews had been shot; that the kommando had not shot women and the children, and he spoke of the Fuehrer Order.

Q. You say that he spoke of the Fuehrer Order. Do you mean that he told you that there was an order that was issued by Hitler passed on through the channels that all Jews were to executed?

A. I had heard of the Fuehrer Order as such from Nebe; the extent of the Fuehrer Order was to be gathered clearly from Foltis statement.

Q. In other words, Nebe first mentioned the Fuehrer Order, but didn't go into told you that the order meant to kill women and children just because they were Jews, is that correct?

A. In this sense, yes, that is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, I would like to get the chronology of these various discussions of the Fuehrer Order. The defendant spoke with Naumann, he spoke to Nebe, he spoke with Foltis. Let's get the order of it and what he ascertained at each discussion about the Fuehrer 6 November 1947_A_MSD_16_1_Hoxsie (Lea) September 1941 with Nebe - when Nebe mentioned it but didn't go into details, is that correct?

Q You said you discussed it with Foltes after that. When was that?

Q When was that?

Q you would say it was about the 10th September? is that correct? that it was a general execution order for Jews, at any rate I was able to see from Foltes' statement what Nebe had actually meant. had passed on to you an order to execute all the Jews? execute the Jews?

Q And you didn't go into great detail there either. You expressed your regret at having such an order. Naumann expressed his regret at having such an order, but there was nothing that anyone could do. Naumann said, "It is a Fuehrer Order, and that is all there is to it." is that correct? a matter of an order. Jews, that such an order existed and that it had been decreed.

Q Didn't you tell Naumann at that time that you had managed to 6 November 1947_A_MSD_16_2_Hoxsie (Lea) evade the order?

You noted his regret at having to carry it out.

A I didn't get the question; I didn't get the first part of the question. nights over it. Didn't you tell him that you had managed to evade the carrying out of this order?

A No, I didn't tell him that. by having to carry out this order? that you had in fact carried out the order?

Q And he didn't ask you any questions whether you had or whether you had not carried out the order?

Q And he didn't ask you any questions whether you had or whether you had not carried out the order?

A I don't think that he asked me that. at any time when you discussed this order with your superior officers, did you express any dissatisfaction with the order? soldier without questioning it in any way, without indicating any disapproval?

A I expressed my misgivings to Naumann. Otherwise I did nothing.

Q What did you say to Naumann?

Q You say you expressed your misgivings. What do you mean by that?

Q Did you say to him "I can't carry out this order; it is too difficult or it is too inhumane?" Naumann, but I don't know the details any more. I merely know the one thing, that the conversation dealt with these misgivings. Otherwise Naumann would not have said that he had spent sleepless nights about it, and I remember definitely that he said that. order? Jewish problem, I asked Naumann for a furlough.

Q I didn't quite understand your answer. You say that not in connection with the Jewish problem, you asked for a furlough. Do you mean to say that you did not try to get out of carrying out this order, at least insofar as the Jews were concerned? because I wanted to evade the order.

Q Do you remember why you wanted a furlough?

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment please. We understand the witness to say that he talked with Naumann about a furlough but this had nothing to do with the order. Did you say that just one minute ago?

THE WITNESS: I said that in connection with this discussion I asked for a furlough.

THE PRESIDENT: And then you added, "but had nothing to do with the order." Did you say that a minute ago?

THE WITNESS: No, I didn't add that, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Miss Reporter, can you locate in your shorthand notes the answer of the defendant to a question by Mr. Ferencz about the 6 November 1947_A_MSD_16_4_Hoxsie Lea) furlough?

All right, let's have it in German then. German or English.

German Reporter: I asked him in this connection or during that conversation to give me a furlough because I wanted to evade the order.

THE PRESIDENT: But he just said, a minute before, do you have that? Well, just look for it. witness which you read to us?

The record was read by the reporter as follows: "A. During this conversation, but not in connection with the Jewish problem, I asked for a furlough from Naumann.") BY THE PRESIDENT: you asked for a furlough but it had nothing to do with the Jewish question. In the last question put to you by Mr. Ferencz you have given us a modification of that. Now, do you stand on what you said originally, did you tell us the truth when you said that in asking the furlough it had nothing to do with the Jewish order?

Jewish question that I did not say, as a result of a conversation about the Jewish question, I didn't say at that moment, "I want to go on furlough." but this had nothing to do with the Jewish order. Now, that is the answer you gave us and it is on the record. Do you now want to change that, and do you tell us that you did not mean what you very specifically stated in so many words.

Q Please answer the question directly. Do you want to change that very specific answer?

Q Did you say that; is the record correct?

6 November 1947_A_MSD_16_5_Hoxsie (Lea) that you mean something else, is that what we are to comprehend? clear words, is that correct?

A These clear words don't express what I wanted to say.

Q Very well. Then you used language which did not express your thought?

Q Very well. Now give us language which expresses your thought. me once more that for any length of time it was not possible to avoid the execution of the Jewish order. My request for a furlough was conditioned by that. That is what I wanted to say. And these two things, the discussion about the Jewish question and my request for furlough, took place during the same conference. furlough it did have to do with the Jewish order?

Q. Therefore, it is just the direct contradiction to what you said just a few minute ago?

A. I wanted to say before that when I asked Naumann for a furlough, I did not give the Jewish question as a reason for the furlough.

Q. We, therefore, understand that you modify and alter your original answer, that when you said that you asked for a furlough but it had nothing to do with the Jewish order, what you really meant to tell the Tribunal was that when you asked for the furlough you did not tell Naumann that you wanted it to evade the Jewish order, but that is the reason you had in your mind. Is that what we are to comprehend?

A. Yes, your Honor. That is right.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, proceed. BY MR. FERECZ:

Q. In other words, you were deliberately trying to evade your duties as a soldier?

A. I wanted to avoid it. This special duty I wanted to avoid.

Q. Now, you have noticed the documents which were introduced against you. Particularly you have noticed one of 13 September showing that 1011 people were killed by Sonderkommando 7a. You have noticed one of 14 November showing that 1517 persons were killed by Sonderkommando 7a. Now, you were in command of that unit during that period, weren't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And the reports show that more than 500 people were liquidated by you kommando during at least part of the time of your command, is that correct?

A. The reports show this, but they also show that this concerns executions because of partisan activity, and that these fights were not only carried out by my kommando but in 80 percent of the cases in cooperation with Army units. When two divisions are named, then the twenty-five men who participated cannot be the decisive factor, but they were merely auxiliary means. The figure appears in my kommando's report Court,II Case 9 but it also probably appears in every report of every Army unit that participated, and that is the same way with all the other reports when it is mentioned which Army units participated in any particular mission.

Q. You say then, that although these reports show that 500 people were killed by your kommando during the time of your command, you had assistance in this job from the Wehrmacht, is that correct?

A. My kommando was used to support the Army, not that I called in the Army to support me.

Q. Do you say that all 500 of these people who were killed were partisans?

A. At any rate, as far as I know it myself, and as far as I can see in the document, yes.

Q. What happened to the Jews in your area?

A. Nothing than what, for example, happened in Rshev where a Jewish Council was installed, as I can see from the document.

Q. What do you remember personally as having happened to the Jews in the area under your command?

A. I know that even before my arrival my kommando had installed a Jewish council in Welisch and I can see from the documents that a ghetto was installed there too. I know that in Rshev a Jewish council was installed and probably the Jews were obliged to wear the Jewish insignia. The same probably was the case in Kalinin.

Q. What did you do as the commanding officer as concerns the Jewish question?

A. I didn't do anything in this respect.

Q. You didn't even have the Jews arrested, is that correct?

A. I had no Jews arrested.

Q. Did you know that there were Jews in your area?

A. In Welisch where the Jews were already in the ghetto I knew it, and Rshev and Kalinin I undoubtedly that there were a few Jews in these towns.

Q. And you knew that Hitler had ordered the Jews to be exterminated yet you did nothing to the Jews who were under control, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you violated an order from Hitler, did you not?

A. I didn't carry the order out immediately after it became known to me.

Q. Did you carry it out later?

A. No, later I wasn't there any more.

Q. Then you violated an order of Hitler inasmuch as he had ordered the Jews to be executed and you had Jews in you area and you did not execute them, isn't that correct?

A. The order did not say at what time the Jews would have to be executed.

Q. Are you trying to say now that the Hitler order, as you understood it, meant that the Jews were to be given special care of some kind and saved for the future to be executed?

A. No, the order did not have that content, but in its execution it could be modified for a certain time if one, for example, was busy, as my kommando was, with fighting partisans.

Q. Didn't you know that the order said specifically that all Jews were to be killed?

A. Yes, I heard that this order referred to all Jews?

Q. And as a soldier when you get an order to kill all Jews, do you interpret that as meaning to save them for the future, for somebody else?

A. One can have two or three orders at the same time -

Q. I ask you what you did, how do you interpret that as a soldier?

A. I relegated the order because I had a more important order for my area, namely, the security against partisans.

Q. What do you mean, you relegated the order?

A. I didn't carry it out at that time.

Q. Then weren't you violating an order from your superior officer?

A. I simply tried to and did pigeon-hole the order, and if you consider this a violation of the order one can consider it that way.

Q. Nebe told you Vyasma on the 10th of October that you had better start shooting women and children too, did he not?

A. He told me that in Smolensk.

Q. Then he told you in Smolensk that you had to shoot women and children too. Now, did you obey that order to shoot Jewish women and children as well?

A. He didn't tell me that I had to show him execution reports about that two of five days later.

Q. I am asking you, did you obey that order from Nebe who was your superior officer, to execute Jewish women and children?

A. No, I did not obey this order.

Q. Then twice you have violated orders from your superiors. Were you ever court martialed for violating your orders?

A. No, but I always had proof that the security measures were urgent in my area because of conditions there.

Q. So that you were, as a Sonderkommando leader, able to avoid carrying out the Fuehrer Order without any action being taken against you in my form, is that correct?

A. I could make the attempt temporarily to evade this order because of the conditions, and the special conditions were that in the first four weeks my kommando was kept busy by the acute attacks of the partisans, that in the third period when I was in Kalinin one always had the excuse that under the bombardment of Russian artillery one could not undertake large-scale Jewish operations. These were the possibilities which remained open to me.

Q. Then you succeeded in violating the orders of your superior officers without any evil consequences to yourself, is that correct?

A. Every Einsatzgruppe leader who knew the activity of my commando would certainly have recognized that the missions accomplished could be justified.

Q. Will you please answer the question--the questions was you succeeded in violating the orders of your superior officer without any evil consequences to yourself, now, is that correct?

A. I evaded it without any consequences, yes.

Q. Now, do you know that all the other commando leaders and Einsatzgruppe leaders had partisans in their zones, too?

A. But not to the extent as it was true in my commando area. Also in the other areas the commando leaders were in cities where there were a lot of Jews. This was not true in my area.

Q. You have told us that there were Jews in your area, that there was a ghetto full of Jews?

A. I said that in Rshew and Kalinin there were only a few Jews.

Q. Didn't you tell us that there was a ghetto?

A. I said that I read in the documents here that in Welisch there was a ghetto. I do not know how many Jews were in that ghetto because the ghetto had already been installed previously.

Q. And the first time you knew there were Jews in your area was when you read it in the documents given to you here in Nuernberg?

A. No, but I did not know that there was a ghetto in Welisch, but I knew that there were Jews.

Q. How many Jews would you estimate were in Welisch?

A. I cannot say that because I did not see the ghetto.

Q. Now, you have told us that you were the expert on SD reports and you spent all your time making these careful reports to send back to Berlin. Weren't you interested in the Jewish question, or were you just interested in the farmers?

A. I did not report on the Jewish question.

Q. Now, how is it that you as an SS Colonel experienced and used to making security reports and in possession of an order to murder all the Jews, spends his time making reports and takes no interest in the Jewish question?

A. The SD reporting the way I carried it on in the Reich, was not concerned with the security question but with the problems of domestic life, with domestic problems.

Q. Was the SD the security service?

A. SD means security service.

Q. And does that mean worrying about domestic problems or is that concerned with studies of those persons who threatened the security of Germany?

A. May I have reference to the many statements made here already that the SD work actually did concern itself with domestic problems, not about reporting of enemies.

Q. So that you say that you were not at all concerned with the Jewish problem, and you did not know how many Jewish persons were in your area, and you did not do anything with them although you had an order to murder them?

A. I said that ghettos were installed by my Commando during my time and that the towns established Jewish counsels.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, I would like an amplification of this answer about the functions of the SD. The witness has stated that it was not concerned with security, but only with domestic problems. This answer followed a statement that SD was security police. It is difficult for me to reconcile those two answers. Would you please endeavor to have that illucidated? BY DR. FERENCZ:

Q. Witness, you have heard the question from the Tribunal. Would you please explain why it is that the security service was not concerned with security questions?

A. It has already been attempted here to keep those two concepts apart, the one concept is in the security service, and the other in the security police. The security service as a branch was occu pied, under the leadership of Ohlendorf, with reporting about domestic problems, about the economy, about culture, religion, etc.

The security police dealt with police security against the enemy, but both are combined in a single formation in an SS manner which finds its expression in the SD ensignia which these people wear on their sleeves, the man who deals with domestic problems as well as the man who does police work; in one case it is an SS unit where both branches are united under the same uniform, and in the SD it is a matter of an information function, an organization reporting on domestic trends. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Did you function in both capacities, both in security police and security service?

A. I always belonged to the security service, the SD.

Q. You never had anything to do with the security police?

A. I had nothing to do with the security police outside of the fact when I was commando leader in Russian, before that I did not have anything to do with it, later not either.

Q. well, you say outside of when you were in Russia, that is what we are talking about. That's like saying, you never had anything to do with the war except between 1939 and 1945. You were in the Security Police when you were in Russia?

A. Yes. All branches were together. That was a new combination which we did not know in the Reich; the SD and security police were now combined in one unit in the assignment, but both functions within this unit remained intact and had to be carried on. Therefore, the Einsatzkommandos had a police mission as well as an SD mission.

Q. Yes, so while you were engrossed in writing up these reports on collective farming and crops and other domestic things, you occasionally gave an ear and an eye to security for the German forces, didn't you?

A. Yes. That is when I already said in my direct examination when I used my commando to fight partisans the way the army ordered it.

That is when my commando worried about security measures.

Q. You told us yesterday , and it was very interesting, that you were studying the collective farming plan. Did you intend to import that into Germany, that plan?

A. No, I did not have that intention, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You may continue, Mr. Ferencz. BY DR. FERENCZ:

Q. Was there anybody in your commando who was concerned with the Jewish question?

A. During the time I was there the Jewish question was not treated in the sense in which you mean it.

Q. Was it so treated before you arrived.

A. Dr. Blume already described this, that on the order of Nebe he had some Jews executed in one case.

Q. Then your unit was actively engaged in carryingout the Fuehrer order before you arrived. Did you rescind that order?

A. No I did not revoke the order, I already said that.

Q. And your men just stopped being concerned all by themselves?

A. The men carried out the order which was given to them continously by fighting partisans.

Q. I am talking now about the Jewish question. You told us that they were carrying out the extermination of Jews before you arrived and that you did not rescind the order, then why did they stop?

A. Under Dr. Blume they did not carry the order out either, if he had not expressly received the order from Nebe in the cases cited.

Q. But they did carry it out, you told us they did, and Blume told us they did.

A. He said that in the one case he had ordered it-one or two cases he had ordered it

Q. I am asking you why did you men who were engaged in exterminating the Jews before you arrived stop carrying out an order given to them by Nebe, by Hitler, or anybody else?

A. For a lengthy time, by order of the army, their job was to fight the partisans in this area. This was the first question which occupied them continually. The documents show this.

Q. What orders did you give to this commando which was under your command?

A. I did not give any orders in detail but the orders were given for the partisan warfare from the reports, from the conference with the army via the liaison officer and the missions which were then carried out against the partisans.

Q. You said the army gave those orders. I am asking you what orders you gave as the commanding officer who was there supposedly to be giving orders?

A. The commando was divided into detachments, and I can't remember this case, but if the army tells me on such and such a day an extensive action is to be carried out in the area of Demidov and that the special Commando 7A is to furnish so and so many men for interrogation purposes, then I passed this order on to my subordinate officers or I went to the G-2.

Q. Pardon me, Steimle, I am asking you specifically, not what you would have done, but what orders you actually did give.

A. I, for instance, gave the order that the commando in such and such a strength was to advance to Wyazma with such and such a tank unit.

Q. Did you know the purpose of this advance?

A. Yes. I gave the order and I told the army the reasons, to join the troops there and to safeguard the documentary material there, and to await the arrival of the rest of the commando there.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, would you mind breaking at this moment for the afternoon recess. The Tribunal might indicate at this time because it never occurred to us to say it before, and this is without any reflection of any kind on the defense counsel or prosecution counsel, that when any witness isunder cross-examination and a recess intervenes that that witness may not talk with counsel.

Of course, that same rule applies to prosecution witnesses.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. ULMER (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT DR. SIX): Your Honor, I am about to submit my document books and I would like to have them finished over the weekend. I would like to be able to talk to my client for one afternoon. Therefore, I would like to ask the Tribunal to excuse him from court tomorrow afternoon.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Six will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow afternoon that he may confer with his attorney.

DR. ERICH M. MAYER (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BRAUNE): Your Honor, I should like the Defendant Braune to be excused tomorrow afternoon in order to be able to prepare his examination on the witness stand.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Braune will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow afternoon in order to prepare himself for testifying in court.

DR. MAYER: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Mr. Ferencz): Steimle, you have been telling us about all the things you didn't do. You have seen the documents showing that 500 people were killed by your Kommando during only a part of the time that you were in command. Would you please explain in chronological order the executions which you know took place by the units under your command, giving us how many people were killed, when they were killed, where they were killed, and why they were killed.

A. I can only mention, with the aid of the documents, those events which I remember. They are shootings, the figures of which I do not remember, which took place in Welisch. They were shootings of partisans. These executions were connected with orders of the staff of the 9th Army, or the G-2, Counter-Intelligence Officer, or by order of the competent local commander.

Q. When was that?

A. During the months ofSeptember and October.

Q. How many people were killed?

A. I do not remember details. I can only according to the documents repeat the figures contained in the documents, I mean, as far as the territory of Welisch is concerned. It must have been about 200 to 250 people.

Q. Continue please. What is the next execution that you remember?

A. It is not an individual execution, but there are a number of assignments, and sentences; in connection with these assignments other executions were carried out. In the territory around Velikki Luki, I do not know how many executions were carried out. Furthermore, I know about executions which I ordered myself, partly, in Kalinin, during the time that I was present there.

Q. Now, one at a time; back in Velikki Luki, what type of people were killed? Were they also partisans?

A. Without the slightest doubt they were Communist functionaries, active either as partisans or working as Communists illegally. Furthermore, the event mentioned in the reports, this event of juveniles -

Q. And when was that?

A. That, according to the Report, must have been in September.

THE PRESIDENT: What is meant by a Communist working or someone working as a Communist illegally?

THE WITNESS: By this I mean a man carrying out Communist Party works by collecting circles in order to raise a resistence movement against the occupying power. This offense was prohibited through a decree by the occupying power. The Communist Party was dissolved and its illegal continuance was punishable, but I have already said that the Communist functionaries were under duty to resist with all means at their disposal and this resistance was expressed in partisan fighting and sabotage.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then, it was considered that a man belonging to the Communist Party should be regarded as an enemy and as a partisan?

THE WITNESS: No. No, Your Honor. Only when he continued his activities in the sense of the order by resisting behind the lines. In that case it was an offense against this decree.

THE PRESIDENT: Then it wasn't because he was a Communist that he was executed; it was because he was resisting?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. (By Mr. Ferencz) And approximately how many people would you say were killed in September in Velikki Luki?

A. That I cannot say. I have no idea.

Q. Was it more than 100? Was it less than 100?

A. I don't know. I think it must have been less than 100.

Q. Well, you say now that you know that in September you shot people in Velikki Luki and you have no idea of how many people it was. You just remember shooting people.

A. I was only in Velikki Luki once or at the most twice.

Q. And when was the action in Kalinin which you personally ordered?

A. I did not carry out any operations there in Kalinin. I was in Kalinin from the 7th of November until the 7th of December with interruptions and during this time, if I was present, I received the reports, that is, the minutes of interrogations and I confirmed or changed the sentences which were suggested in these reports. There might have been five or there might have been 15 or even 20 shootings.

Q. What type of people were they who were shot in Kalinin?

A. I remember one case in which an active spy, a female spy, was shot where Wehrmacht troops were active in the town and these small Russian groups, who had the order to carry out terror actions against part of the Wehrmacht and so on, threw grenades at the local kommandatura.

Q. Now are these three actions or those three locations the onlyplaces where units under your command executed people?

A. Those three places? In Rzhev there was also a kommando.

Q. Did the kommando in Rzhev carry out any executions?

A. I don't remember, but I assume that also there were executions carried out.

Q. In other words, you assume that one kommando carried out executions in Rzhev too. Do you have any idea when that was?

A. I must assume that it was so. It could only have been in November, or, perhaps, it could have been in December after I had left.

Q. I am only interested in while you were there. And how many people do you think were killed by your Kommando in Rzhev in November?

A. I don't remember the number, because I wasn't informed about details. Any large scale shootings were not carried out in Rzhev. That depended on the resistence which was carried out in this area.

Q. And in Rzhev too you just shot partisans, is that correct?

A. We shot those who resisted or who carried on resistance in any form whatsoever, any form of resistance against German Wehrmacht units.

Q. And is there any other location where units under your command either in Einsatzkommando 7a or 4a carried out executions?

A. I already pointed out this morning that in Kursk executions were carried out.

Q. And when was that?

A. That could have been in October or November 1942.

Q. And about how many people were killed there?

A. I don't know. Individual cases were dealt with which I don remember. How many there were, however, I do not know.

Q. What do you estimate? Was it more than 100? Was it less than 100?

A. My estimate could be wrong, because I have no idea concerning these executions in Kursk.

Q. Are executions such an ordinary thing with you that you remember where they took place and when they took place, but you do not know or can't even estimate how many people were killed?

A. I did not investigate these cases, the individual cases. I only assumed it in some individual cases which came to my command, but if I tell you that there were 20 cases, I might be wrong, just as wrong as if I said there might have been 30. In any case, not many executions were carried out in these kommandos. It only depended on what cases of resistance came up or what attempts had been made on Wehrmacht units; the number of shootings depended on this.

Q. And there again you just shot persons who resisted, is that correct?

A. Yes. Resistance in the form I mentioned.

Q. Now are there any other places that you can remember where units under your command carried out executions?

A. I mentioned this morning that when we marched towards Stalingrad we shot and destroyed a partisan advance group.

Q. Where was that?

A. That was in Kallatsch-Nichnichevskaya.

Q. And when was that?

A. That must have been in September, 1942, during the march towards Stalingrad.

Q. And about how many people were killed there?

A. There were killed in combat a small group of 6 to 8 people.

Q. And again they were persons who resisted?

A. Certainly.

Q. Are there any other places you remember where units under your command executed people?

A. No.

Q. In other words, executions were carried out by units under your command in Welisch, Velikki Luki, Kalinin, Rzhev, Kursk, towards Stalingrad, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And in all you estimate about 300 people were killed in 400 people were killed?

A. I spoke of my first kommando and I said that the number mentioned in the documents may have amounted to 500 and that these figures to a large extent were due to actiona -

Q. Just answer my question.

A. May I ask that the question be repeated?

Q. I was just looking at the figures you just gave me. It was about 300 to 400 people that were killed, is that correct?

6 Nov 1947_A_MSD_22_1_Biolsi (Hildesheimer) hundred, of the Special Kommando 7-a, if all those are included who were shot in connection with units of the Wehrmacht or other such individual actions. order? order them. If investigation results would be submitted to me I would confirm or modify them. How many there are, I do Not know. The figure can't be very high -- but I don't think this is the question in this case. I did confirm judgments and sentences after I had the chance to examine them. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Let's get this clear, now. Did you ever order an execution?

Q How many did you order?

Q Was the number so many that you can't recall?

Q Then why don't you remember? Is the matter of an execution a pretty serious business?

Q Please answer the question. Is the matter of an execution a very serious business?

Q Is the matter of snuffing out the lives of people serious?

Q All right. Now, you say you don't remember the number. And it isn't because the number was so great. You exclude that. a grim and serious business. Why, then, wouldn't you remember how?

6 November 1947_A_MSD_22_2_Biolsi (Hildesheimer) many executions you ordered? Honor, or the number of judges' sentences examined by myself.

Q We asked you if you ever ordered an execution. You finally said yes. do so. I can't say with certainty that I ordered 20 or 25. In the case of Kalinin, for instance, I can give the exact number - perhaps, because approximately I ordered about 5 or 10 executions there.

Q When were you apprehended after the war?

Q When?

Q You have been two years awaiting this trial. That's right, isn't it? You have been reading from your statement, already prepared. Did it not occur to you in those two years' time, or at least during the last month or twoo after you had actually received the indictment, that a question would be put to you as to the number of executions, and did you not try to recall the exact number? think about it. I can have examined and confirmed 20 to 25 judgments.

Q All right. Then you ordered 25 exectuions...not less than 20, nor more than 25. Is that correct?

A I cannot say that exclusively, your Honor; it must have been approximately this number, at least, of orders given by me personally... orders given for execution. All other cases-which you can square with your conscience, and your oath to tell the 6 Nov 1947_A_MSD_22_3_Biolsi (Hildesheimer) the exact number -- the number must be between 15 and 25, possibly 30, cases which I personally investigated; investigations which led to an order of execution.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Ferencz, the witness has stated that the number of executions was not less than 15 nor more than 30. Proceed from that point. BY MR. FERENCA:

Q You told us where executions were carried out. I would like you to explain now where it was that you ordered these 15 to 30 executions. You have stated that 5 to 10 were ordered in Kalinin. Where did you order the others? Velikkiluki.

Q How many there?

A I don't remember. It might have been 4 or 5 cases submitted to me for investigation. Furthermore, most cases were submitted to me during my stay in Kursk. It might have been another 10 to 15.

Q Ten to fifteen in Kursk. Any Welisch?

A No, I can't remember at the moment, but there might have been a few cases there for my decision.

Q Any in Rzhev?

Q Any towards Stalingrad?

A No. The mentioned group was shot in combat, but not after an investigation.

Q Any in Tshernishowskaya?

Q Didn't you once state in interrogation that a group of people were killed under your command in Tschernishowskaya?

A I spoke of the partisan kommando... this partisan advance kommando, kommando head, was near Kallatsch or in Mishnitz-Shirskaja, not in Tschernishewskaya.

6 November 1947_A_MSD_22_4_Biolsi (Hildesheimer)

Q Now, what did you say about Tschernishewskaya? I have here an interrogation where you said that a group of partisans were killed there. Do you now change your statement concerning that?

A Either the statement was mistakenly concluded... I never had the possibility to speak of Tschernishewskaya. It must have been a mistake if I did. This partisan group was in the neighborhood of NishnizShirskaja or Kallatsch. Czernitschewkera -- C-z-e-r-n-i-t-s-c-h-e-w-k-e-i-a?

Q You think they made that up?

A I don't think so. If so, I must have made a mistake in that case. your answer. You said that a group of from seven to five people wanted to form a partisan group, were found, and itwas discovered through a girl in the village who gave you the information about it, and you said that some of the men were shot in combat, and some of them were than "shot by us", and that "bei diesen Erchiessungen war ich dabei" -- which means "by this execution I was there" -- do you remember that?

A You mean the execution of the partisan heads?

Q You just said you don't remember anything about shootings in Tschernishewskaya, it wasn't in Tschernishewskaya. You are saying that the place is wrong... that the stenographer -

A It was on the road between Nishnitz Shirskaja and Kalatch; that is, on the route to Stalingrad. I do not say that the event as it is here actually took place. were present? Let me give you your interrogation, you read it, and then please explain it to the Court. Please the whole answer first, slowly and carefully, and then you may explain it in any way you see fit.

6 November 1947_A_MSD_22_5_Biolsi (Hildesheimer) tioned, here I have nothing to say about executions except about a very small Einsatz assignment which was carried on in the territory of Tschernishewskaya," where a group of five to seven people were raided who were about to form a partisan group. Through treason on the part of a girl--"

THE PRESIDENT: Is the defendant reading, or commenting? We don't know.

MR. FERENCA: He is reading, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, he is reading. Very well.

A (witness continuing) "...given away by a girl. The village was found out. A few of the men were shot in combat, and a few were shot afterwards. I was present at this execution." statement in an interrogation, when now you tell us it is not true? is the same event about which I made statements in my direct examination, and this afternoon. It is a matter of raiding a partisan advance head. It was in the territory of Nishnits-Shirskaja and Kallatsch, but not in Tschernishewskaya.

Q Now where is this place in which you say it took place? You listed six places where executions took place. But you did not list Nishnits-Shirskaja or Tshernishewskaya. Now..... There was a partisan advance head which was destroyed, and these men were shot in combat.

Q Was that near Welisch?

Q Was that near Welikiki Luki?

Q Was that in Kalinin?

Q Was that in Rzhev?

Q Was that in Kursk?

Q Was that on the way to Stalingrad? executions on the way to Stalingrad. Do you now change your story? that on the way to Stalingrad there was no active resistance of any kind except in one case where, by treason of a woman, we succeeded in raiding one partisan group and we shot them in combat. of a kommando... I myself did not reach the location where the fighting took place because by accident we came across another group at this partisan place.

Q Now, let's get your story straight. How many groups did you kill there? us.

actually tried to fight us.

Q. How many were killed without combat?

A. Those were the ones who were shot after an interrogation.

Q. Now there were two groups. One group was killed in combat, and one group killed after an interrogation, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You listed executions in both cases?

A. The first one was not executions.

Q. You listed executions in the second place?

A. Yes.

Q. You just told me when I asked you if you ordered any executions around Stalingrad, and you said, no, and now you told us, yes. Now which one is true?

A. I said just now that those who were taken prisoners, there were three girls among them, were shot after having been interrogated, and that had been ordered by myself.

Q. I went through the list of places and I asked you how many were killed in Welesch and you said, one or two. I asked you how many in Uelikky Luki and you said four or five. I asked you how many in Kalinin and you said five to ten. I asked how many in Welisch and you said, none. I asked how many in Kursk and you said from ten or fifteen. I asked you how many towards Stalingrad, and you said none. Now I ask you again how many were killed in the area towards Stalingrad under your command?

A. Partisan group of 4-6 men, and the three girls belonging to this group.

Q. In other words, 4-6 men plus the three girls, that is about nine people -- seven or nine people; you are now telling me that seven to nine people were killed by your order in that vicinity towards Stalingrad, is that correct?

A. No, the first group I said were actually killed in combat.

Q. How many were killed under your command not in combat?

A. Three.

Q. Why did you say none when I asked you that question the first time?

A. I had not remembered the details of this event at the time.

Q. In other words--

A. I have no reason to keep it back, as it was absolutely a justifiable shooting.

Q. You say that you didn't reveal it the first time because you had forgotten about it, but it was absolutely justifiable. You said in your interrogation you have just read, that these men were shot because they were about to form a partisan group. You regard that as absolutely justifiable?

A. Yes, they were not killed abter being made prisoners and then shot, but they were in a little forest which was encircled, and when my kommando arrived, or at least part of my kommando, there was fighting, and the men did not give up but they threw grenades and fired at us, and because of this fighting they were killed.

Q. You just said after an investigation, the interrogations you rodered they had to be shot. Did you interrogate them while they were throwing grenades? later on.

Q. You shot the three girls later on after an interrogation?

A. They were shot after an interrogation.

Q. After they formed a partisan group, is that correct?

A. They were participants in a partisan group, yes.

Q. You said they were about to form a partisan group, and that is why they were shot?

A. Yes.

Q. Now you say the three girls who were about to form a partisan correct?

A. Yes, that is the fact of the case as true out in the eximation.

Q. How long did the trial last of these three girls who were about to form a partisan group?

A. The three girls were first in protective custody, and then

Q. How long did the whole trial last?

A. I don't remember but it could have gone on for about eight

Q. Is that eight days for each girl, or eight days for all three girls?

A. The examination and investigation of the whole case took a

Q. What were you doing during those eight days; were you pre sent all the time supervising this?

A. No.

Q. When did you get any information on the execution?

A. This event was reported to me. I read the whole minutes

Q. You studied it all very carefully?

A. Yes, I read it all.

Q. You forgot all about it when I asked you a few minutes ago, but now you remember all the details?

Q. Tell me, what was the charge against these girls who were trying to form a partisan group to resist an aggressive invader?

What was the crime these girls committed?

A. They were members of an illegal organization , and they were in contact with another group which was in possession of arms.

The girls were not only a part of a formal company, but they were about to build up an information sabotage service, and also the girl who gave them away was a girl who knew about all the preparations for such things.

Q. Now when you witnessed the execution, will you please describe how it to the Court. How many men were present at the execution; were they shots were they beatened; were they hanged, what happened?

A. They were shot.

Q. How many men were present at the shooting?

A. About ten men were present.

Q. Who gave the order to fire?

A. One of the leaders.

Q. And you were present all the time?

A. At this shooting, yes.

Q. Did the girls resist in any way?

A. No.

Q. Was the same procedure followed in the case of all partisans who were caught?

A. I didn't participate in other partisan actions, but the procedure was always the same. I have already mentioned on direct examination that the individual cases were examined, as becomes evident from the records.

Q. In other words, you would have us believe that five-hundred people were killed as partisans by having a trial lasting about eight days, and that every one had their individual files examined, and then you passed sentence on them is that correct?

A. I said quite clearly that the sentence was not my own when these cases were tried, as becomes quite evident in the documents, and I must point out the document in which the situation becomes quite evident For instance, this one gives in it 180 partisans who were shot; that two divisions of the Army were assigned to the transport of prisoners to the camps, and that these divisions, or regiments, or companies, had prisoners who had been captured in the actual fighting, and, therefore, had been, made prisoners, because they were active partisans, and belonged to partisan movements.

Then the whole case was investigated for about a few weeks, by the secret constabulary, and the official document shows quite clearly that one-hundred people were released because they had no connection Whatsoever with this partisan movement.

Q. Steimle, what did you do when you found a man who was a Communist functionary?

A. If he was---

Q. Say he was a plain ordinary Communist functionary, head of a collective farm, or a Communist official, aaptured, doing nothing but sitting in his office reading Communist literature, what did you do with him? part in any activity, he was freed. Possibly he was even employed by us as a liaison man in a confidential position.

Q. In other words, although you were at war with the people, concerning most of Communism and Bolshevism, if you found a Communist who was an official not doing anything, you gave him a job, and that is what you did to him?

A. He was prepared to work for us, we used him.

Q. And if he was not prepared to work for you, then what?

A. Nothing happened to him, if he himself was loyal.

Q. You sent him home again?

A. Yes, certainly.

Q. And you expect us to believe that?

A. I can only say what is true.

Q. Did you hear Ohlendorf say it was necessary to kill all Jewish children because it was possible that they might become Communist later on, and represent a future threat?

A. Yes, I heard that.

Q. And you did not regard Communist officials as a threat to German security at all.

You just sent them home, that is what you is the truth?

A. I can assure you that there were not many who were found out to be Communists functionaries.

Q. Although they were Communist officials, if you didn't catch them doing something against you, you just sent them home and forgot all about it?

A. Yes, but there were few such cases, because others would part of them had become quite clearly partisans, which is obvious if you study the document.

Q. You told us you had a gas-van in one of your kommandos, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And that you never used it except to transport German soldiers around is that correct?

A. No, not to transport German soldiers but supplies.

Q. You didn't use it for the purpose of killing women and children, as it was directed, did you?

A. No, I didn't use it for that.

A. No, I did not use it for that.

Q. You didn't use it for the purpose of killing the Jews who were in your area, did you?

A. No, I did not use it for that either because I did not kill Jews in this sector and because I do not know whether I could have come, to the direction to actually use the gas van for this purpose.

Q. Tell me now, if you were such a good National Socialist and good SS man, tell me why was it, although you knew the Fuehrer policy as regards Jews and Communists, you didn't kill any Jews and Communists in your area?

A. I did not say that I did not kill any Communists in my kommando activity, but we killed all the Communists who actually resisted the German occupation-power, and as far as the killing of Jews is concerned, as I have already mentioned today, I tried to evade this order because it seemed to me impossible to carry out.

Q. You say you did not kill Communists just because they were Communists, and you did not, of course, kill Jews just because they were Jews, is that correct?

A. I diet not speak about Jews, but I said that I tried to evade the Jew order concerning the Jews because from the moral point of view it seemed very hard to carry out.

Q. Did you know at that time that it was the established policy of Hitler and your Government to exterminate the Jews and eliminate Communism?

A. I only knew the order concerning the Jews, which I talked about today. The killing of all Jews as an entire program I did not know.

Q. You did not know about the killing of Jews as an entire program? Did you forget about what you said this morning?

A. I made the difference just now between the order valid for Russia as such contained in the Barbaressa Order, the Fuehrer Order, and the effort of the German Government to eliminate all Jews. I made a difference between those two. The first was an order which was passed on to me. The second I never heard about.

Q. Or was it because of your great friendship for the Jews that you tried to evade Hitler's order to exterminate them?

A. I already said that this is due to the fact that my kommando in these sectors was so busy with other security tasks that it was quite possible to relegat this order into the background or oven not to carry it out at all.

Q. I am trying to find out why it is that you, an SS-colonel and a good National Socialist, did not want to carry out the Fuehrer's Order to exterminate the Jews.

A. Because humanly I thought it was a very heighty, difficult decision to carry it out.

Q. It was not because of any friendship for the Jews then?

A. I said that the carrying out of an order and the purpose reached with it would have given reason for serious misgivings, not the question whether I myself would carry out the order or not, but the manner in which the Jewish solution of the question is handled, and the carrying out of the Jewish problem from this angle.

Q. My question was, then, you refused to carry out this order or tried to evade it, not because of any friendship for the Jews as such?

A. I tried to evade this order because the solution of the Jewish question just by shooting them, by the actual physical elimination I did not think the right human solution, and also politically I considered it wrong.

Q. Did you think it was better to beat the Jews than just to shoot them?

A. No, I would have considered it more proper to find a solution which, in fact, the world has not found up to this day, to establish a Jewish national state.

In fact, there were negotiations concerning this question between agencies of the Reich Security Office and the Jews abroad prior to 1939 in order to find such a solution.

Q. Did you ever do anything to help the Jews?

A. Yes, individual Jews I did help.

Q. Did you ever participate in any actions against the Jews?

A. No, I did not participate in any action against the Jews.

Q. I want you to think very hard about it, and in order to refresh your memory I will give you the date, 13 July 1939, and I repeat my question.

A. What was the date?

Q. 13 July 1939. Did you ever participate in any action against the Jews?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall a letter concerning you, sent by the Security Service of the Reichsfuehrer-SS of the 14th of July 1939, concerning disciplinary action taken against you because of excesses in connection with the Jewish action?

A. I know what all this is about. It does not concern my own person, but it concerns my own staff leader.

Q. Tell us what it is about.

A. In connection with the events of the 8th or 9th of November, 1938.

THE PRESIDENT: '38 or '39?

THE WITNESS: 1938, your Honor, acht und dreissig.

MR. FERENCZ: '38, your Honor, is correct for the action.

THE WITNESS: I was in Belgium during those days. I was in Belgium which has been noted in the records which were confiscated.

After I returned I found in my office, near my office, two or three cars. Also they contained files of the Jewish cultural community office. These files were secured by my then referent Haushann from the Jewish synagogue and were returned to the Jewish community. My staff leader kept these vehicles, and I tacitly gave my approval of this. They were to be turned over to the Secret State Police. In connection with this there also was an amount of money which my staff leader held, and as I covered this man, I got a reprimand. I did not participate in any Anti-Jewish action on my own part. That's what I remember of this matter.

Q. Now, you say because you stole all the Jewish money when you should have been writing reports you were disciplined?

A. No, because I covered my superior, my staff superior.

Q. What do you mean, you covered him......you took the money and divided it?

A. No. I did not give the order to hand this vehicle and the money to the Secret State Police.

Q. Where is the offense there that you are trying to tell us which would warrant the SS taking disciplinary action against you? Was it because you took the Jewish money and gave it to the SS?

A. Yes, because it had not been submitted to the State authority but it had been given to the SD.

Q. In other words, you are telling us that disciplinary action was taken against you by the SS because you stole Jewish money and gave it to the SS?

A. Because I found the money at my staff leader's and becasue the vehicles had remained in the SD, I got a reprimand from Heydrich. That is as I recall it.

MR. FERENCZ: No further questions, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, this is all certainly left in midair.

MR. FERENCZ: Your Honor, I realize it is being left in midair, but there is no use pursuing a line of questioning on a Collateral matter when the answers are of the nature they have been.

THE PRESIDENT: I see. Very well then. at nine-thirty.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 7 November 1947 at 0930 hours.)

Otto Ohlendorf, et al., defendants sitting at Nurnberg Germany, on 7 November 1947, 0930 hours.

Justice Michael A. Musmanno, presiding.

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the courtroom will please find their seats.

Military Tribunal II is now in session. God save the United States of American and this Honorable Tribunal.

DR. NEIF (Dr. Neif, for the defendant Steimle:) Your Honor, there are a few brief questions which I want to ask the defendant in redirect examination.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. NEIF: cross examination asked you whether you ever took part in actions against Jews. There upon you said, no. the date of 13 July 1947. I would like to ask you now what you understand by Jewish actions, if you disregarded the Fuehrer Order which was only valid sofar as you are concerned in Russia? in Germany. which are contained therein, can they be called such Jewish Actions?

A No. These are not Jewish Actions, but it is a disciplinary procedure which was carried out against my staff leader, and in connection with this I was charged with having neglected my duty, and I was reprimanded. This was an event which was only within my office, but sofar as the contents of the procedure are concerned, was in connection with the action of 8 November 1938. If you want me to do so I shall explain, and I shall give further detail about this event.

Q I would like you to do so, because I don't know the contents of the letter.

A I don't know the letter the Prosecution quoted yesterday, but sofar as my name is mentioned in this in connection, it can only be the following fact. During the time of 8 November 1938, and in the following days, I was journeying in Belgium; when I returned later from this journey, these events had already happened, in which my SD Section had not actually participated as such. The operation was under the leadership of Goebbels, and in the Gau (Districts) the Gau propaganda leaders were the leading agencies. During the course of Spring 1939 my staff leader came to see me, and told me the following. That he had in connection with the safeguarding of the Jewish property a matter which was then dealt with by the State Police, discussed the matter with a minor official of the State Police to the effect two vehicles, or trucks should be kept in the garage, which was not part of my own office. These two trucks were Jewish property and should have been turned over to the State Police to be made use of, which agency either sold this property in order to put money at the disposal of the Jewish Community for immigration or here I am not quite sure, though whether it could have been used for another purpose, for instance, for a fine, which was imposed by on some Reich Agency. The Jews, he said he had done this in order to secure these vehicles for the office, and, he suggest to me that it should be tried that these vehicles should receive a police number plate. He said he had paid the expenses for the garage from funds which had been in Jewish documents, which however a few days after 8 November were turned over to the Jewish Community, that is, the documents. After this had been reported to me, I hesitated a few days, to move that my staff leader, whom I essemed, investigated. However, I tried through a personal discussion with the State Police Leader to clean up the matter by asking him to have these vehicles taken over by the Secret State Police. This event was found out by my superior, of the SD, the Oberabscnittfuerer, Chief of the Department.

My staff leader was immediately sent on leave of absence as the suspicion arose that he himself tried to gain by this action.

I myself asked for my personal leave of absence which was not granted. A disciplinary action was taken against me, because of carrying out my office supervision in a bad manner and, because I had tried to clean up the matter directly with the State Police Leader. The offense was considered by my covering up the actions of my Staff Leader. After the proceedings had come to my staff leader was transferred as a punishment. A small place in the center part of Germany. He was barred from being promoted for four years, and I personally got a first reprimand. The only disciplinary punishment which I ever received. secution with a clear conscience, whether you had ever taken part in a Jewish action? were you on 9 November 1938?

AAs I already stated I was in Belgium. I heard about the events in Germany on the morning of 9 November 1938, in the Belgian papers in Brussel.

DR. NEIF: Your Honor, I have no further questions. The redirect examination of the defendant Steimle is thus concluded, and, with the permission of the Tribunal I shall submit further a few documents at a later date.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Witness, your attorney has called your attention to a subject which was under discussion yesterday afternoon just as the Court recessed. Immediately before this subject was taken up, the one which you have now related in some detail this morning, we were discussing the partisan action in the woods in which partisans were killed, and, then later an execution took place. Now I understand this was on the road to Stalingrad, is that correct?

Q About when was this?

Q Yes. I understand this took place in a forest, in the woods?

A The actual seizure of the partisan group took place in the forest; that is during the fighting in which the male participants of this partisan group were killed during this action three women were captured.

Q Yes. Let's take up first the fighting. The fighting took place in the woods?

Q How many men did you have with you in this fight? into two or three groups in order to seize these pieces of forest which had been betrayed by a female deserter. Actually in the fight only one group took part, whereas the other groups arrived at a later point. sans?

Q What weapons did the partisans have? grenades. One of the partisans, for instance, who was arrested pretended that he had a gun when one of my men approached, and he used a hand grenade.

Q Were any of your men killed in this action? by the woman, was seized so that there was very short fighting that took place, and they were practically taken immediately.

Q Were any partisans killed in the action? in actual combat?

Q About how many men were there in the partisan group?

men?

A Thirty men had been assigned to this fighting at this road: there was only one group which actually took part in the fight, one group of my thirty men.

Q Yes, when you seized the girls, were they actually fighting?

A No, they didn't fight. One of the women was slightly injured in this fight.

Q One of the women was fighting, you say?

A No, she was just injured by the fight that took place. She was in this particular territory where the fighting took place.

Q Yes. Now you were able to seize three girls after you fought with these partisans? three girls? taken to our office.

Q Where was your office?

Q Then you conducted an investigation which lasted how long? approximately eight days, including the examination and investigations, as also witnesses were heard.

Q Was all this written up?

Q Was this done on a typewriter?

Q And were the records kept? we advanced or when a large number had been accumulated, they were destroyed.

Einsatzgruppe? tained an information service at Kiev, which could be proved; that was the reason why these women were shot.

Q Then you did make a report to the Einsatzgruppe Headquarters? they were shot eight or nine days after they were seized, is that correct?

Q And the executions was done by your own men?

Q How old were these women or girls?

A They must have been women in the age group between 25 and 35. I remember that one was a school inspector, the other one was also a teacher. I don't remember the profession of the third one. them?

A No. One came from Stalingrad, the other one Dnjepo, and as for the third, I don't know where she came from.

I myself wouldn't have bothered.

Q You are not a religious man yourself?

A No, I am not a member of any church. Personally I have disputed the religious question with myself. My education was very Christian, and until this very day I have been on good terms with my very Christian family. I have always had great respect of religious conviction. woods ? kilometers from Nishnits-shirskaja. place? away from the forest where the partisans were killed.

Q How many men did you have in your firing squad?

A Ten men took part in it. Three or four men shot at one woman.

immediate?

Q Did you give the command to fire yourself? gave it, but I was present myself.

Q And you saw to it that it was done in a military, humans fashion?

Q Yes. Now, you witnessed this execution from beginning to end, didn't you.? death of them? was the leader of one of the groups, by group which approached from another direction, arrived too late at the place of fighting and at that moment the fight itself was over, but I arrived at the place. against the partisans?

Q Yes. Now do you have a pretty good memory? the execution and about the fight with the partisans. Yesterday afternoon, or the day before yesterday, between the hours of four o'clock and four-fifteen, and I will specifically refer to the transcript as Take 23, Page 1, this is what the English transcript says.

"Q I still have a few questions to ask of you which concern your entire activity as kommando office leader. As a kommando leader, did you ever attend an execution?

"A No."

Were you telling the truth day before yesterday; are you telling us the truth this morning?

which was a conclusive question, after I had explained my first - my activity in the first kommando.

THE PRESIDENT: I have taken the trouble to have this dialogue looked up in the German copy, and I have handed it to the interpreter. The interpreter will please take out the German record and read that question and answer as it appears in the German transcript.

(Thereupon the German interpreter read the above question and answer in the German transcript to the witness.)

THE WITNESS: Yes. BY THE PRESIDENT. compared it with the English text, and the texts agree. The question was. "Did you ever attend an execution?" That was all embracing And your answer was "No." Now, you have given us in precise particulars the story of an execution which you not only attended but directed. Now your answer is, do I take it, that you misunderstood your attorney's question?

A Yes. In discussion ofmy first kommando 7a. I answered the question of my defense counsel, while this event we have now discussed took place during my second assignment in 4a. The question has already been put here before. He put the question about the Army to which my kommando 7a was also assigned, and only very much later, after this question had been asked, the question of my second kommando was taken up by my defense counsel. Therefore, from the text it is quite evident that the question as meant by myself, and probably also by my defense counsel only referred to my activities during my first kommando.

DR. LEIF (For Defendant Steimle): hay I say, your Honor, as an explanation, that the witness is correct in this particular thing, that in the direct examination in our case it was built up so that first his activities in Kommando 7a were discussed, and as conclusive question for this particular subject the question was put to him, if I may repeat it now, "I have another few questions to you which refer to the entire time as the kommando leader.

Did you, as a kommando leader, ever take part or were you present at an execution?" This was the conclusive question referring to his activities in Special Kommando 7a.

THE PRESIDENT: All right. Now, let us see if he is referring to the same thing in this other matter. This morning he gave us a very detailed description of his participation in a fight with the partisans. The day before yesterday he made this statement. "Your Honor, I said that I spoke with my subordinate officers about these machines, that I test the activities." Apparently I was questioning him about his activities in the SD work. And then the witness goes on, "And I have also explained why I, as a militarily trained man, did not participate in these partisan actions. The documents show this action clearly, how they were carried out." Then later on when it seemed rather extraordinary to the Tribunal that this man who was in charge of an action group did not take part in any action, he was questioned further, and he said, "I didn't lead a platoon of active SS men into the forest." Then carrying the matter still further, we put this final question to him. "You never led them into any action; you didn't lead them into any fight?" And the answer is, "No."

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, these questions were put in connection with the explanation of my first kommando where these partisan combats were carried out under participation of and on order by the Wehrmacht, and my statements referred to this activity during this time, and I here also referred to the documents. They all refer to this first activity of mine, the first kommando 7a, and this answer is still valid for this particular activity even now. BY THE PRESIDENT: police work?

the SD work was of much more importance to me. work of the police work? Service of the SD, but my SS duties, I thought more important.

Q And you devoted more time to that than to the police work?

Q And did your superior officers know this? the information service and they were satisfied. work? work in the partisan warfare during the time when, for instance, Foltes was there, was guaranteed; also the work which was carried out by myself, of course, and which I have already mentioned, as, for instance, the using of NKWD files at Kursk. That concerned mainly police work, and therefore it was approved, and it was looked upon with interest by my superiors. devoted considerable time, or more time to SD than the police work?

Nov-7-M-MJ-4-1-Hoxsie (Hildesheimer)

A. I don't know whether they were very pleased about it. I didn't hear any utterances of disapporval, and certainly not during my second kommando where I was on very good terms with my superior.

Q. Didn't your superior officer ever tell you that you should devote more time to the police work than the SD work?

A. No, I was not told that as in my kommando there was also always somebody who was dealing with the police work.

Q. All right. Now, we will refer to your testimony of day before yesterday. You are talking with Nebe and this is your answer. "He told me that the necessity of police security seemed to be more important than the security in the SD work."

Q. Did I state that?

A. Yes, that is what you said.

Q. Nebe?

A. Your answer is, "He told me" - this is Nebe speaking. That is, it is your testimony. Nebe "told me that the necessity of police security seemed to be more important than the security in the SD work." Now, which statement are you going to stand on, the statement you made day before yesterday or what you are giving us this morning?

A. I can only just remember to have said that Nebe, when I was on my way to Moscow, and came to see him, that Nebe in fact, then told me that he had to ask me that as far as Jews are concerned children and women also have to be killed. A comparison between police work and SD work I cannot remember, and I can only imagine that it might have been a mistake in the translation, Your Honor.

Q. Then you challenge the correctness of the transcript in that respect?

A. No, I can find no other explanation for it, because I cannot remember having said it in this particular phase.

Q. Then you challenge the correctness; a mistake occurred in the translation or in the actual transcription, that is the only ex planation you can offer?

A. It could have been a misunderstanding, Your Honor, yes.

Q. You say that you yourself did not utter these words which I have read to you?

A. I cannot remember really, Your Honor.

Q. Now, the reports which have been submitted here in the document books show very clearly that this kommando of which you were the leader, 7a, conducted many executions, As of 13 September the execution total is given as 1011. When you were asked about that you said that you only know of eight who had been executed, but you did not know whether they were killed by your predecessor or by yourself.

A. Of these eight people I spoke in this connection, and I said that between the report of the 20th of August, which says that 996 executions were carried out, and up to the report of September which mentions 1011, there is, in fact, an increase of about 15 executions. In connection with these 15 executions I said that of these, eight can be found in the document books as people who were shot in partisan warfare. I did not speak about the remainder of the people.

Q. I am asking you if you did not remember whether these eight were killed by yourself or your predecessor. Did you so testify?

A. I said approximately that. Whether they were shot in my absence or whether they were shot after the 20th of August or in my presence I do not know.

Q. Now, you include the possibility they may have been shot in your presence?

A. That they could have been shot during the time when I was already in charge of the kommando that would mean, the time from 7 of September up to the 13th. It is possible that in this time eight of these people were executed.

Q. The translation came through that they could have been shot in your presence. You don't remember, but they could have been, is that right?

A. Not in my presence, but in the time when I had taken over the kommando, that is the leadership of the kommando.

Q. Didn't you make a report of the executions which you conducted or ordered?

A. The reports, written reports concerning individual actions, were made out, and I have said that these reports were made out by my kommando leader, and deputy, Foltes, but that in general I know about these reports.

Q. Then why wouldn't you remember whether these eight were executed by yourself or by your predecessor?

A. Because I was not present when these actions were carried out, and it would have been an event which would have been carried out during the first days of my activity in this kommando, when I had first arrived here in Welisch, or possibly at the garrison of the other kommando in Uelikki Luki.

Q. Do you now tell us they were not executed, these eight while you were in charge?

A. I do not know what to say. I can only say, based on the notes in the documents, that at one particular combat eight partisans were shot, and I can only say that it must have been so.

Q. The document reports show that the execution total for 7a, as of 28 September was 1252; asof 26 October, 1344; asof 14 November, 1517. Do you admit the correctness of these reports?

A. I cannot say whether this number is correct or wrong, because I don't remember the individual figures. I am sure that the basis of these figures are reports of my own kommando.

Q. Then you admit that these figures could be correct?

A. They could be correct, yes.

Q. That your kommando executed, as of 13 September, 1011; as of 28 September, 1252; as of 26 October 1344; as of 14 November 1517.

You admit your kommando killed that many people?

A. I can only repeat that which I have already said and in clear from the documents and in my own memory, these shootings are, on the whole, shootings carried out in connection with the operations against partisans.

Q. Now, we are only speaking of the total number of people killed. Are these reports correct as to the total number of people killed, whether they were partisans or not?

A. I can likewise, as I have already said, only assume that it must be based on reports of my kommando, but the executions were carried out by the Army. I have already said in my direct examination that, for instance, the report concerning 183 shootings in connection with t the assignment of two divisions was not carried out, not only by my kommando, but also the participating Army units.

Q. You don't question these reports insofar as members are concerned, is that right?

A. And the carrying out of the executions, whether they were carried out by my own men or by the Wehrmacht, by the Army units taking part.

Q. Now, please answer the question. The reports in the document book show that Kommando 7a killed so many people, and I have given you the figures. Do you, or do you not question the figures? I am only speaking of the figures.

A. I cannot say with certainty that the figures are correct, but I can only say that they are based on reports by my kommando.

Q. Very well, You had approximately one hundred men in your kommando, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And they were divided up into various groups, various subkommandos?

A. In two subkommandos at that time.

Q. Only two?

A. During the period of these partisan operations, two subkommandos, Welisch and Velikki-Luki.

Q. You were nine months in the field in all, weren't you, four the first time and five the second time?

A. The first was approximately three and a half months, yes, and the second time must have been about nine months, yes.

Q. Nine months the second time?

A. No, altogether.

Q. Yes, nine months, all right. Now, in these nine months' time, do we understand you to say that not one Jew was killed by your kommando?

A. Yes, as far as I know no Jews were shot by my own kommando,

Q. In nine months' time?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, during all this time the Fuehrer Order was well known of corse, wasn't it, that Jews were to be killed?

A. Yes,

Q. And your subkommandos who carried out independently of you had this order, didn't they?

A. It was known to them.

Q. Yes. And you never revoked the order as far as they were concerned, did you?

A. No, no.

Q. Why didn't they execute the order since they had it in all its completeness without modification and without any instruction from you to disregard it. Why didn't they execute the order?

A. The kommandos in Welisch and Velikki-Luki were, through security conditions prevailing there, so busied by partisan warfare that they could not cope with the order at the time. In RZHEV and Kalinin the frontal position was such--and anyway I was present in Kalinin--that the order for the shooting of Jews was conditioned by circumstances and was impossible.

In my second kommando, which was in the year "42, I was in the territory in which the Jewish population was practically not known to exist in any obvious manner. The advance towards Stalingrad went through the territory of the Don Cossacks. There were no Jews present, In addition to this, after the first halt in 1941, the halt of the German attack, the attitude of the Germans toward the Jews was known - by the Russians, and the Jews had tried to escape before the German advance, and, of course, in 1942 this was the same, even more extensively so.

Q. You yourself had an objection to the shooting of Jews, is that right?

A. I never protested to any superior about it but I uttered my misgivings and I tried to evade the order through the kind of which my assignment was.

Q. Why did you call Blume soft because he did not execute more Jews?

A. I never said that I called him soft, I said that the leader of EK-O said something to this effect about Blume.

Q. This was not your expression, that he was soft because he did not execute Jews?

A. No, that was certainly not my expression.

Q. Now, you say that you executed only partisans, is that right?

A. Partisans, yes.

Q. And you would not execute a partisan unless he were actually engaged in some action against you?

A. If they had not by any action whatsoever damaged the security condition of the territory concerned.

Q. You would not shoot him unless he committed some overt act?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact that if you merely suspected a man of being a partisan that you shot him?

A. No. In that case he was an aid.

Q. He was what?

A. He helped -- he aided the partisans.

Q. And you would not shoot him?

A. If he helps or assists the partisans, then he is shot.

Q. Yes. Well, suppose you only suspected him of aiding, of being a partisan, would you shoot him?

A. If it had been confirmed that he helped the, then he should not be shot.

Q. Did you ever shoot anyone merely because he was suspected of being a partisan?

A. I never shot anybody myself. I know that it says in one report that people suspected of being partisans were shot.

Q. Well, that is not in a report, that is your own affidavit, isn't it?

A. That is not only my own affidavit, but is based on a report from the document in which it was said that in one particular operation of the commando in connection with wehrmacht units, partisans -- 40 partisans, or perhaps 41 partisans and people suspected of being partisans were shot. This report was read to me in my examination, and I said after the name of the village had been mentioned, that this village had been within my territory -- in the territory of my commando, and therefore it must have been my commando who carried it out.

Q. Your commando then executed people merely because they were suspected of being partisans in this instance?

A. Based on this report which is in this document, partisans and people suspected of being partisans -- there are 40 people who are concerned here -- must have been shot.

Q. Yes. Now, in shooting a man merely because he was suspected of being a criminal or a partisan, it was entirely possible that some innocent people were shot?

A. I hope that this was not the case.

Q. Well, it is possible, isn't it?

A. If it is just a suspicion, I cannot exclude it, but I believe that these must have been people who assisted the partisans.

Q. Now, just a minute, please. We have gone through that, we are not talking about those who assisted, those who assisted were partisans, they were active partisans; I am speaking only of those who were suspected of being partisans, they were shot. Now I am asking you whether it is not possible that when you executed a group of people known only as being suspected partisans, that an innocent person might be included in that group suspected of being partisans.

A. I think that investigations were conducted to that this case would be excluded.

Q. Now, I am putting this question directly to you, and please don't circumvent the question. If there is an investigation and a man is proved to be a partisan, the man is a partisan; if there is an investigation and he is proved to have assisted and the rules could have been put in effect then he would have been shot. I am speaking merely of one who is a suspect and when you make a list you say so many partisans, so many suspected partisans -- now I am referring to so many suspected. There is a possibility that an innocent man might be included in that group, is that correct?

A. If this report -

Q. Now, please answer that question. We are speaking of suspected partisans. If you shoot suspected partisans, there is a possibility that in some instance the suspicion is unfounded.

Do you admit that possibility?

A. If in any case people suspected to be partisans are executed without their guilt being proven ever of a smaller activity, in that case innocent people could have been shot, but I may assume, your Honor

Q. Well, you have told us the rest, that there was always an investigation, but you nonetheless in making up this statement very clearly said the persons executed were partisans, that is one group; persons suspected of being partisans, that is a second group; and members of the Russian army in the area of the 9th Army who had been hiding and disregarded our order, that is the third group. Now we have your explanation on suspected partisans. Day before yesterday we were on this subject and you stated in answer to a question, "Also in few questions so-called people suspected of partisan activity were shot." Now you went on further because -- we will give you the whole answer, "Among them were people of whom it could at least be proved that they voluntarily had been active for the partisans either by giving reports to the partisans or by assisting them in some manner voluntarily". Do you stand on that answer?

A. Yes. Thus was my conception of the term "suspected of being a partisan."

Q. I am calling your attention particularly to the wording. In referring to "Suspect", you said, "among them were people of whom it could at least be proved". "Among them", you don't say "all of them", but "among" those suspects.

A. According to my memory I said, "by people suspected to be partisans, were meant those who aided and abetted of an activity."

Q. Then you said the word "suspect".

A. Yes. I said the word "suspect."

Q. Well, do you understand what "suspect" means?

A. Yes.

Q. So when you say that in every case of an execution an exami nation was conducted and the guilt proved, and you used the term "suspect" with regard to individual, you are using the word incorrectly, are you aware of that?

A. Your Honor, my concept is the following. A partisan is a man who is active within his group. Those who help these groups make themselves suspects of indulging in partisan activity, but through this help he contributes toward the partisans and, therefore, he becomes punishable. That is my conception of it. He himself is not a partisan by not actually standing in the woods. I cannot call him a partisan because he is not a partisan, but he assists the partisan movement because he gives them information and news. He gives them supplies.

Q. And that is what you call a suspect?

A. This is the suspect, yes, to be a partisan himself and at the same time commits an act which gives reason for his execution, as punishment for his action.

Q. I think you might do yourself a great deal of good in studying the meaning of the word suspect. When you took over the commando, you started out to fight communism, didn't you?

A. Yes, I was detailed to Russia to take over this special commando. The purpose of the special commando was only made known to me when I arrived in Russia.

Q. And you were out to fight the communists and destroy the communists, is that right?

A. I refused to recognize communism as such, my duty was mainly to pass on information. I was simultaneously assigned to a military task, but this I had not expected before.

Q. Well, you were out to fight coumminsm, and it was your order to execute communists?

A. To shoot active communists.

Q. What would you call as activity on the part of a communist?

A. If a communist who, in a territory occupied by a German army unit actively opposes the decrease of the German army actively, be it by following the proclamation of the communist party in Russia, and contributes towards making the occupation of the German troops intensible, in that case he is an active communist who resists the occupation power and expresses it actively; this is communism.

Q. Suppose a communist makes a speech in which he merely talks about communism and speaks of his adherence to Karl Marx, makes no reference to Germany or its occupying forces, would you regard that as an activity calling for his execution?

A. He expresses his theories to me or any private person, this would hot be a reason for his execution, but if he -

Q. All right, now -

A. If he speaks to a larger public, then he is an active communist who acts against the decrease of the German occupation power which says that any activity for the communist party is prohibited, and will be punished by death.

Q. So that if you came into a room and found a communist speaking to 4 or 5 people, expounding the theory of Karl Marx and indicating his adherence to that theory, you would have him shot?

A. If he makes statements to the effect to resist the German cause, in this case I would have had him shot.

Q. Now, don't repeat my question. I said, you walk into a room and this man is making a speech for communsim to a group of 5 or 10 or 15 people, and he merely tells them how he likes the theory of Karl Marx, and he gives them a long speech about communism; he doesn't mention the Germans at all, would you take him out and shoot him?

A. I would first of all find out if there was an active resistance against the German occupation behind all his theory.

Q. Now, I have given you the question, don't introduce any other elements. You have had 8 days -- you had had an investigation of 8 days, and you find only that they made this speech and that he indicated a devout adherence to Karl Marx. Would you have him shot?

A. I would have got a look at the man, and if I was under the impression that he would put his theoretical conviction into seed, in that case I would have had him shot.

The actual speech or lecture could not be decided upon theoretically.

Q. So that you would listen to the speech and then you would look at him under a microscope, and after this big look, if you thought he might have done something, then you would have him shot. That is what we understand by your answer?

A. Yes.

Q. Very well. While you were in command of 7A, one report shows that 63 communists were killed. The report is dated 25 October.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that what these communists were doing about the type of activity which I have described to you?

A. No. That is an activity which largely is prevalent within the partisan movement. People were caught who were important functionaries of the communist party. Probably there also a few saboteurs and agents installed by the NKWD.

Q. Well, now, witness, since you were out to fight communism, why is it that you were so kind to the Jews when the Jews were the most active communists?

A. I have only been at those few places which I mentioned, and these places, Welisch-Welikki Luki, and at both these places the Jewish question was not as topical especially in comparison with the constant partisan danger so that the Jews in other places like Kalinin, for instance, where there were 30 and 40 Jews and the town was bombarded by Russian artillery fire, this question did not have to be dealt with immediately.

Q. Well, in all this time in the 9 months, do we understand you never saw a Jew?

A. I said also yesterday in my cross examination that in Welisch as well as in Kalinin and Rshow there were Jews, while in the sector of my second commando I cannot remember that there were any Jews. As I said, the Jews had left after the first stop of the German front, fled -after the first German holdup.

Q. Yes, but please answer the question. In all these 9-months' time, did you ever have to pass upon a Jew?

A. I said that in Welisch there were Jews and that in Kalinin there were Jews.

Q. All right, what did you do with the Jews in these two towns?

A. In the report, or in one of the reports it is mentioned that the Jews in Welisch -- in fact it is the report it is mentioned that that they put into ghettos. A further report from my commando chief says that a Jewish counsel was installed, and I am sure that in Rshow, Kalinin the regulations referring to Jews were made and were also a Jewish counsel was going to be formed.

Q. What did you do with the Jews that came before you either in examination or otherwise?

A. No Jews were put before me. I cannot remember any Jews.

Q. All right, well, then in all this time, coming back to the original question, in the 9-months' time you never had to pass sentence upon a Jew?

A. I did not conduct the investigations myself -- it is possible.

Q. In this time of 9-months while in command of one group and in command of another group, you never had to pass upon another Jew?

A. It is quite possible that there was one or two Jews among this or the other sentence and was shot under the general communist executions.

Q. You never had to pass upon a Jew as a Jew?

A. No, I don't remember that I ever sentenced a Jew as a Jew or that I confirmed such sentence. It is possible that among these partisans and communists there were Jews or could have been Jews.

Q. How many?

A. I don't know.

Q. You said a moment ago one or two Jews, now, were there more?

A. I said that there is the possibility that among these partisans or communists who were investigated were Jews.

Q. You don't know as a fact from your investigation whether even one Jew was executed among all these people who were killed -- you don't know as a fact that there was even one Jew?

A. I do not remember a concrete case of such.

Q. Then so far as your memory is concerned you do not recall one Jew in the 9 months' time that you were in Russia?

A. No, I remember so such case, but it is very probable.

Q. Well, now, let's get this very straight because we don't want to have any question about it. In the 9 months' time that you were in Russia you do not recall having passed on the case of one Jew?

A. No, because such a case would not have been submitted to me, as in the case of a Jew, but it would have been just one of the communist cases.

Q. Well, if you had an investigation of each man, if a man was a Jew, that would appear in the report, would it not, that he was a Jew in addition of being an active partisan?

A. Not necessarily, Your Honor; it is possible.

Q. Do you mean to tell us that any investigation made of a partisan or an active person resisting would not include his nationality and especially if he was a Jew in Russia?

A. No, I don't want to say that. It is possibly noted down if he is actually arrested as a Jew.

Q. He is arrested as a partisan, but in the investigation it develops that he is a Jew, wouldn't that appear in the record?

A. It is probable that it would appear in the record, yes.

Q. Now, I ask you the question again. In these 9 months' time did you ever pass upon a Jew?

A. I don't remember, but I think it probable.

Q. How many do you think that you passed upon?

A. I cannot give an estimate, but I think it possible that among those people sentenced there were Jews?

Q. How many Jews?

A. Your Honor, I can give no estimate; I can only say that I think that it possible that there were Jews among them.

Q. You think it possible, but you are not sure. Now, do you come back to the proposition that there were not Jews?

A. That I did not say, that there were no Jews.

Q. Well, you said it was possible, you doubt remember one instance where you saw definitely it was a Jew?

A. I cannot remember any individual cases.

Q. I certainly know that no Jew was sentenced because he was a Jew, but I thank it possible that among those executed there were individual Jews who were members of the partisan groups.

Q. But you don't remember how many?

A. No.

Q. Can you give us an estimate of the number?

A. No, I can give no estimate because, as I say, I don't remember any individual case, but I think it possible that there were possibly -at least I think it is probable even -- that there were Jews among these partisans or these communists.

Q. Perhaps two or three?

A. Your Honor, I can give no number because I would tell an untruth if I are to say that there were two or ten cases.

Q. Didn't you keep a report on the people that were executed -didn't you make a report on the people that were executed?

A. The reports were sent individually to the groups. Any sort of compilation was not carried out, as is mentioned in the situation reports.

Q. You got these reports, didn't you?

A. I generally received the individual reports of events if I was present.

Q. Yes, and from all these reports which you received of executions you do not recall whether any Jews were executed or not?

A. In any case no reports were received according to which Jews were executed as Jews. The kind of reporting makes it absolutely necessary that this would have been reported if it would have happened.

Q. You don't remember one report of any Jew who was executed as a partisan because he was a Jew?

A. I say I cannot remember any individual case, but I do not exclude the possibility by that there were Jews among the partisans.

Q. Now is it that you remember so well all these other reports that you were making, the reports on the collective farm system, on the Russian church, on the Bolchevik state, and you even made a study of Stalin's speeches, but would you regard that as more important than keeping a report on all the people that were killed?

A. Your Honor, I tried to explain that I did not regard the Police Department as work which was in my line and that I personally only tried to deal with the Information Service, reporting. Therefore, these activities were those which I was not interested in carrying out, because it was not my work, except for the one incident during the period which I have described when I was in my second commando.

Q. In spite of directives by Nebe that you give more attention to the Police Security Work, you still insist that your primary task was the making up of reports on farms and on Stalin's speeches?

A. My personal activity was through my field of activities until then, the SD reporting. For the Police and military organizations, I had collaborators which carried this out.

THE PRESIDENT: Are there any witnesses ready to be called? I have here Eugene.......no, that is the defendant.

DR. VON STEIN (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT SANDBERGER):

Dr. Mae.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mae? Very well. During the recess, unless there is any other redirect or recross, during the recess the present defendant witness will be brought in the box for examination.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. HJALMAR MAE, a witness, took the stand and testified as follows:

JUDGE DIXON: Witness, raise your right hand and repeat after me:

"I swear by God, the Almighty and Omniscient, that I will speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing."

(The witness repeated the oath.)

JUDGE DIXON: You may be seated.

DR. VON STEIN (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT SANDBERGER): May I start?

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. VON STEIN (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT SANDBERGER):

Q. Witness, please describe briefly the most important points of your career, in as far as it is necessary to judge in how far it concerns the answering of the questions to come.

A. My name is Hjalmar Mae, born the 24th of October in Tartu, Esthonia. I am an Esthonian citizen. I am married. I am a Doctor of Philosophy, a Doctor of Political Sciences. I am a Protestant. Since 1929 I have been active as a politician in Esthonia.

Q. Witness, in the year when Russia occupied Esthonia, that is, 1940 to 1941, were you in Esthonia at that time?

A. Yes, until March 1941 I was in Esthonia. After that I fled in order to escape the Communists, but until 16 March 1941, I witnessed the occupation of my homeland by the Communists.

Q. Witness, how do you know about events in Esthonia since March 1941 until summer of 1941?

A. I know them from the statements of people whom I know to be trustworthy and reliable, from statements by members of my family who were in Esthonia at that time and official documents, which I personally read.

Q. When did you return to Esthonia?

A. I returned to Esthonia on the 16th of July, 1941 to Bernau, but I could only stay for one day, because the Field Commandant asked for my immediate return from Esthonia. After that I returned to Latvia. The Latvians gave me a house and on 18 August 1941, I was able to return to Esthonia to Bernau. Since then, I have been in Esthonia until 22 September 1944. Then I fled again in order to escape the new occupation by the Communist Troops there.

Q. When and where did you meet Dr. Sandberger?

A. I met Dr. Sandberger in Talinn. Talinn is the capital of Esthonia and in German it is called Reval. I met him there on 30 August 1941. I tried to meet him before, but I did not succeed. In Tartu, in German, Dorpat, and I did not manage to meet him in Ragnel, in German, Wesenberg, because Dr. Sandberger was always traveling and because of the attack on Talinn I was not able to reach him in Dorpat.

Q. Did you hear anything from other Estonian circles about Dr. Sandberger?

A. Yes; the reason why I tried so hard to meet Dr. Sandberger was that in Estonian circles in the south of Estonia it was known that he had tried to help us and that he was very understanding and, therefore, I wanted to meet him. The deputy of Dr. Kleist, who enabled me to make the journey - I asked him to introduce me to him but I only succeeded on 30 August.

Q. Please give us some Estonian names, who particularly tried to help you concerning Dr. Sandberger?

A. The Estonian Colonel Tilgre was a political counsellor since the first days of his activity in Estonia. Colonel Tilgre was a very highly esteemed officer. For about fifteen years he had been adjutant to the Prime Minister, he knew a great number of important persons, and Estonian nationalist circles suggested him, and Dr. Sandberger used him as his personal political counsellor until Talinn was captured.

Q. Witness, please tell us which office you took over in the fall of 1941 in Estonia.

A. On 20 September 1941, at the order of the commander of the Rear Army Territory North, I was given the position of a Director for Education and Law, as a member of the Estonian self administration. My colleagues practically considered me the chief of the Estonian self administration and accepted me as such, and in their capacity I was active until I was officially confirmed in that position.

Q. Witness, to take up such an important position which was given to you by the Estonian president.........was this made legitimate?

A. Repeatedly I had discussions with our State president after the occupation of our homeland, who was convinced - like all of us - that the War between the Soviet Union and Germany would come about soon, only it was not obvious who would start this war. He was the Germans would win.

He believed, however, that the United States of America would take part in the war and that this entry would bring about the final victory to the Allies. For that reason for us it was come about to recover the sovereignty of our State.

He gave me the Communism would regain their independence.

Q. Witness, may I ask you to speak a little slower so that to hold this important position in Estonia?

A. Dr. Kleist. Dr. Kleist was in the Foreign Office, and Dr. Kleist knew Estonia very well.

He was sympathetic towards it, Denmark.

Dr. Kleist shortly before the beginning of the war with right that the development of events through the so-called fait accompli

Q. Witness, how were you appointed in Estonia?

A. Dr. Kleist assisted here because he negotiated with Army agencies.

On 16 July I was able to travel to Bernau. I intended central Estonian administration agency.

Q. What was the situation which you found at the time in the city of Bernau?

A. On 8 June Bernau had been liberated from the Communists, He called himself temporarily authorized president of state, and as

Q. What was the reaction of the Commander in Chief of the German Army?

A. The German Commander in Chief reacted to this with set up, particularly local or field command offices.

After that, and I had to return immediately.

I left for Latvia, and in Latvia had its effects in Latvia.

In Latvia, very early the German civilian and as part of the work of this Reich Commissar and the concerns of

Q. How were you pointed then?

A. I said before, on 18 August I returned to Bernau in Estonia together with Dr. Kleist, and in his presence I talked to and negotiated with him.

General von Rock was very understanding,

Q. What do you know about the situation in Tartu at the time?

A. I left Bernau the same dry, for Tartu. Tartu had been mained for some time on the Embach River.

This river goes right through the center of the city of Tartu, and serious fighting between the Estonian self-defense and the German army, and on the other hand between the Red Army, had taken place.

In Tartu, owing to this fighting, people were very much embittered because, among others, Tartu was the place where mass murders had been carried out. In the prison of Tartu, 192 highly esteemed citizens were murdered by the Communists.

MR. GLANCY: May it please the Tribunal, we accept the good doctor as a political authority, but we fail to see the relevance of his statements as far as it concerns the activities of Sandberger. On these grounds we object to this line of testimony.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Mandry, it isn't yet evident just what the relevancy of this is. I presume he is leading up to something very specific. Would you please indicate to the Tribunal what you intend to establish by this witness?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, the questions which I address as preliminary questions to the witness now have the purpose of describing whether the statements that the defendant himself will make later on in the witness stand are correct. First of all, the question whether it is right that at the time he heard in Pretzsch about the position in the Estonian territory, whether he was ordered to......... The truth I want to establish through statements of this witness, who is an expert on his country. I consider it important whether the witness came there from Estonia as one who was only informed through propaganda, or whether the actual facts which he saw himself conformed with the truth. For that reason I ask to be allowed to put all these questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand, Dr. von Stein......I think I got your name incorrectly first........that you are going to establish that the defendant Sandberger, when he arrived at Pretzsch, was confronted with a certain situation. He was informed that conditions were such in Estonia. And you want to confirm that the report given to him correspond with fact?

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Now, that is relevant, but we yet don't have the specific statement that the defendant was confronted with, so we don't know what this witness is going to confirm. That is our difficulty.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, the further questions which this witness will confirm as actual facts are these questions....... that work was carried out in Estonia. He will describe exactly his activity, how Sandberger acted there, whether his activity mainly consisted of police security tasks, or whether his activity consisted of different subjects mainly.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, does this witness actually know Sandberger? Did he see him in Estonia?

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, your Honor. All these years.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, we will permit you to question, and then Mr. Glancy - if you find that you believe it is becoming irrelevant we will hear another objection.

BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q: Witness, in the city of Dorpat, who was responsible at the time?

A: The first Germans who arrived in Dorpat on 11 July 1941 were the units and the men of the local commander of Dorpat. The field commander, Colonel Bosebruch, arrived on 12 July, and since fighting went on for weeks all authorities and units were subordinate to the field commandant of Dorpat.

Q: What measures did this Colonel Boseruch take?

A: I can only describe measures insofar as they concerned with prestige... he was very strict.

MR. GLANCY: One moment, please. If it please the Tribunal, we have had the testimony of this witness to the effect that he returned on the 18th of August. He is now testifying as to happenings on the 11th of July. This is merely hearsay.

THE PRESIDENTS: Isn't that correct, Dr. von Stein?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, the witness testified before that certain conditions in Estonia he knows from reports and official documents; other facts he witnessed himself when he was in Estonia. What the witness tells us now probably concerns these things which he also knows, not only from hearsay but also from documents; and beyond that, your Honor, it does not depend so much on the actual facts but the witness also testified that this Collnel Bosebruch stayed not for one or two days, but two years. For that reason I submit that the objection of the Prosecutor be overruled.

THE PRESIDENT: Where the witness is testifying as to actual knowledge, he certainly can speak with greater amplitude than where he is speaking only from study. So it would seem to the Tribunal that when the witness is going to tell us something which he only read -- that then he abbreviate his statement and make it very short because obviously it isn't something of his own first-hand knowledge.

BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q: Witness, may I therefore ask you to be very brief on the following questions. I repeat the question... What measures did Colonel Bosebruch take. Please only talk about the fact whether this Colonel Bosebruch carried out arrests immediately, and to what extent this was done.

A: Colonel Bosebruch had given orders that all persons arrested be handed over to the field commandant in Dorpat, and he judged these people and disposed of them.

Q: What happened to these persons who were arrested?

A: I cannot say this from my own knowledge, but I know from reports, that minor Communists who only deserved small punishment were shot by him, and we considered this to be brutal.

Q: Witness, when did the independent power of the field commanders cease to exist?

A: On 20 September 1941, when the Rear Army Territory because part of that area.

Q: Witness, I am now telling you about the document which the Prosecution filed against Sandberger.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, this is a document in Volume II-A. I can state the contents very briefly. It may not be necessary, your Honor, that this be read out. There is only one question from the document. Volume II-A English page 86-a, the following is being said in this document:

"In the district of the city of Dorpat since the occupation of the city by German troops, 291 persons were arrested, were put into a camp which the field commander set up. In this time, that is, after the German troops occupied the city, 405 persons, 50 of them Jews, were executed."

THE PRESIDENT: Did you say this is on page 86?

DR. VON STEIN: 86-A.

THE PRESIDENT: What is the document number? We don't find it.

DR. VON STEIN: Exhibit 46.

THE PRESIDENT: What document number?

MR. GLANCY: Sir, it is NO-3149, to be found on page 88.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, I see; he's reading from page 88. Very well, Thank you.

Q: (By Dr. von Stein): Witness, I presume that you did not know anything personally about these events. I address the general question to you. Insofar as conditions in this city in the district of Dorpat became known to you, do you consider it possible that these measures were carried out under the responsibility of the German field commander.

A: Yes.

Q: If I understand you correctly, at that time --- in July and August, and possibly beyond that --- in the city and district of Dorpat, it was like this... That subordinate authorities, whether Estonian or German, actually could not exercise any power but all tasks were handled by the field commandant exclusively... Is that right?

A: Yes, that is how it is. The field commandant of Dorpat had set up an administration department. I also had to deal with this at a later time.

Q: Witness, I now come back to the question, when and how you met Sandberger?

A: I met Dr. Sandberger, as I said, on 30 August 1941 in Talinn.

Q: When were you assisted by Dr. Sandberger for the first time?

A: Immediately after meeting him I considered it the first task to help the families of tens of thousands of people who had been deported. For that purpose, all our charitable organizations and churches were invited to help, and together formed an organization of the Estonian People's Assistance and I asked Dr. Sandberger to obtain permission from the Army commanders. He did this.

Q: And what was your power, your authority?

A: On 20 September 1941, I was appointed as a member of the Estonian independent administration. Five men with the same rights were appointed, who were authorized to issue directives with legal strength. They were all independent, but, as I said, they considered me practically to be the chief, and accepted me as such because until then I had conducted all negotiations and was asked to continue to do so.

Q Witness, what was the competency of the self administration? up, concerning the territory, we were not competent for the whole of Estonia because not the whole of Estonia had been freed from the enemy. Only on 21 October, 1941 the whole of Estonia was under our competence.

Q When was the German Civilian Administration set up in Estonia? with a general commissar at the head of it. The general commissar confirmed all laws and directives which we had made until then. and did Dr. Sandberger help you to overcome these difficulties? culties arose in every field. Whether it was a minor or a major question, the general and civilian administration wanted to take part in everything and interfere; and Dr. Sandberger took an interest in all minor or major questions and helped until a good relation with the German Civilian Administration had been established in August.

Q After the 30th of August, what did Dr. Sandberger hear from in on the Estonian personalities about the suffering of the Estonian people under the communists about the needs of the day and the discussions with Dr. Kleist, concerning the aims and the future of Estonia?

A I informed Dr. Sandberger about the fact of how Estonia had been occupied by the Soviet Union in 1940. I laid this down in an affidavit and submitted it to the Tribunal already, and I don't want to tire the Tribunal by repeating this orally, it deals with the violation of international law and of agreements between the Soviet Union and Estonia. I explained there the situation in detail and proved it through excerpts from documents. If the high Tribunal considers it right that I repeat this here orally, I will be glad to do so.

MR. GLANCY: If it please the Tribunal, international law, customs, usages and political background is not part of the charge. We are concerned with a very narrow channelized thing -- murder. I wish the witness would confine himself to his knowledge of Sandberger's activities and not concern himself with political surveys

THE PRESIDENT: I do believe, Dr. Von Stein, that your witness is sort of spreading out into territory which goes far beyond the limits of the indictment.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, the witness just mentioned an affidavit which he submitted. I consider it helpful that the witness makes his statements before this Tribunal orally so that the Prosecution cross examine the witness afterwards about those points they want the witness to explain. I want to say the following: I consider it of great importance whether the witness will confirm to us here what he himself told the defendant Sandberger about conditions in the country, in which Sandberger was active at the time. Based upon these facts in particular, the Tribunal can get an opinion on the statements which might be used in the defense of the defendant; whether they are afterwards confirmed with the truth; whether they conform to the truth. is certainly relevant, but it doesn't seem that your question was restricted to such a narrow proposition as that. Put your question again.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, my question is as follows: I addressed the question to the witness what he himself when he met Sandberger on the 30th of August told him about the suffering of the Estonian people as a consequence of the occupation by the Soviet Union. Your Honor, all those things were told the defendant in Pretzsch at the time, and the Tribunal should know whether this information was merely propaganda or whether these are facts and truths that actually occurred. Your Honor, it is also of importance for the attitude of any defendant, whether the defendants were lied to; it is a difficult thing when the defendants here heard something from people who should have been experts, or came to decisions through their own experiences.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, we will permit the question, Dr. Von Stein.

Do you know what the question is? I am asking the witness if he knows what the question is. BY DR. VON STEIN: asking you what information did you give to Dr. Sandberger on the 30th of August about the suffering of the Estonian people under the communists. Witness, I now ask you not to refer to your affidavit which we do not know, but I ask you to describe the things as they occurred at the time; therefore, what did you tell Sandberger at the time.

A It's like this. I informed Dr. Sandberger when I met him, about events in Estonia, and for that purpose, first of all I explained to him, since people abroad know very little about Estonia in general, that Estonia is a sovereign state and a member of the League of Nations. In the year 1939 it had been given an ultimatum by the Soviet Union, with the request to sign an agreement of assistance and friendship with the Soviet Union, on the basis of which the Soviet Union wanted to use some areas in Estonia for military purposes. In the agreement it has been expressly mentioned that the Soviet Union in no way wanted to interfere with the domestic affairs of Estonia. In the summer of 1940, the conference of the Baltic foreign ministers took place in Talinn, as had been previously announced by the Soviet Union; when the Ministers were asked whether they objected to this Treaty. During the conference of the Baltic foreign ministers, Estonia, like other Baltic states, was given an ultimatum of six hours saying that Estonia did not want to accept the Soviet Union together with all other Baltic states.

THE PRESIDENT: You had better repeat that entire statement so that there will be no question as to just what the witness said. Estonia wanted to attack the Soviet Union, and for that reason, for security sake, the Soviet Union requested that the Soviet troops enter Estonia immediately, and appointed a new government that would accept and sign this agreement of friendship.

Soviet troops did enter Estonia; the government resigned. The Soviet Union, on their part, called its plenipotentiary to discussions with the state president; the president of the Soviets in Leningrad Shdanow, at the time he was president there. The Russian local commander immediately requested that they be given the right to held meetings as they wanted to.

THE PRESIDENT: When did all this take place? What was the date?

A On 26th June, 1940. May Icontinue?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

ing of Faustenhof and announced that: He had appointed this government and this government would immediately arrange for elections to be held for the parliament. These elections were set for the 14 and 15th of July, 1940. During these elections, three days before the elections, all candidates who did not belong to the communist party were crossed off the list, and instead of elections which should have taken place according to the Estonian constitution, only those candidates were elected who belonged to the communist party. The votes were not publicly counted; the results of the election were not made known according to election districts; in Estonia election procedure is the same as that in England, but only the total result was made public namely that 92 per cent of the voters had voted for the communists after that. This first chamber of the parliament convened, while the second chamber, the second house of parliament which had been intended by the Estonian Constitution -

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, did you tell all this to Sandberger? about Estonia. I did not explain this only to him, but I had to explain it to every German who was active in Estonia because we could not expect them to understand us if we didn't explain to them what actually happened in Estonia, and we did not want to be governed-

THE PRESIDENT: Did you tell each German who came into your country about the election; and how many were in the one chamber and how many in the other chamber?

A Yes. To all functionaries who could make decisions concerning us I had to explain all this; nor only I, but possibly also my colleagues because I did not meet every functionary.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, suppose you try to abbreviate it; don't give it to us so much in detail.

A Yes, to say it briefly, I informed Dr. Sandberger that according to our opinion Estonia was governed in violation of the agreement with the Soviet Union, and of International law, and had been occupied illegally.

Immediately after the occupation by the Soviet Union, Estonia, was declared as a state, annexed to the Soviet Union, and the Soviet authorities started to be active in Estonia. As to the sufferings of the Estonian people in particular, this was first of all the activity of the NKWD; secondly, the deportations of ten thousands of Estonians carried out in an inhuman and brutal manner; and the activity of the elimination battalions.

MR. GLANCY: One moment, witness; one moment, please. If it pleas the Tribunal, the Prosecution has no desire to suppress any evidence which might help to clarify the defendant Sandberger's position and listening for almost twenty-five minutes, to the testimony which the witness has given

THE PRESIDENT: Do you still tell us, witness, that you told all this to Sandberger?

THE PRESIDENT: Sandberger had a lot of leisure time apparently.

A I didn't understand.

THE PRESIDENT: Sandberger had a lot of leisure time apparently.

A Well, I didn't tell him all this all at once.

THE PRESIDENT: What did you do, meet every once in a while and you would sit down in a rocking chair and you would tell him this long story about Estonia's history? And it was my duty to inform these German authorities who had to make decisions concerning us.

THE PRESIDENT: What did you do? we wanted to avoid. For that reason I explained to him the situation which he found there, and perhaps could understand. I told him the causes and the reasons. I told him that there were three institutions and actions. This was in connection with the NKWD, the deportations and the elimination battalions who terrorized our people to such an extent that we were really quite desperate, and for that reason the people asked that communists who had taken part in these actions be punished.

MR. GLANCY: In order to abbreviate proceedings, the Prosecution is willing to concede that the defendant Sandberger was fully briefed by the good Doctor, now present, on all political history in Estonia, and the things that brought the entry and the occupation which preceded the occupation. If he would just summarize, it would help a great deal.

THE PRESIDENT: There did all these conversations take place, witness, at your home or in his office; or, while you were out taking a little stroll?

A No, in the office of Dr. Sandberger, in Talinn.

THE PRESIDENT: And he would put aside all his affairs and listen to you talk?

THE PRESIDENT: He must have been. to him in several days. Unfortunately, my explanation to this question cannot be brief. I will be glad to restrict myself to the statement that the Estonian people were aroused because of all the communist functionaries, and that in Estonia there was not a single family who had not suffered personally under this.

THE PRESIDENT: Over what period of time did these conversations take place, so that you finally were rails to acquaint Sandberger with the story of your country's turmoils? How long did it take you to tell him this story?

THE PRESIDENT: I am afraid we can't give you that much time here. We are a little busier than Sandberger appeared to be at that time, so, during the recess, suppose you try in your mind to condense the story and then when we reconvene again at 1:45, give it to us a little more tersely than you gave it to Sandberger in 1941.

(A recess was taken until 1345 hours, 7 November 1947.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. HJALMAR MAE - Resumed DIRECT EXAMINATION (CONTINUED)

DR. VON STEIN: May I proceed?

THE PRESIDENT: You may. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, we stopped at your explanation of conditions in Esthonia. Now, in order to hasten the procedure, I want to put precise questions to you which I want you to answer briefly. What did Sandberger learn from you, about the first big action of the NKWD, which took place on 14 July 1941 in Esthonia?

A. I informed him that on the 14 June 1941, that is, before the beginning of the war and during the period of the peace and friendship agreement between the Soviet Union and Esthonia -- in the night of the 14th June -- that people were arrested and imprisoned: 3512 men, 3024 women and 3067 children. These victims were respected Esthonians and wellknown in public life or in local life. They were also workers, of course, even farmers; and of those seized and deported ones, in order to give an idea of it, were people from newly-born children to people of 82 years of age of all classes of the population. This deportation was quite unexpected and took place in front of the whole population because the trucks, with barbed wire, were at this railway station before the eyes of the population and the whole situation created among the population desperation and hate against Bolshzvism, because considering the population of Esthonia, practically every family was hit by this measure.

Q. That did Sandberger find out through you and other Esthonian personalities concerning Extermination Battalions.

A. I told him that Extermination battalions were active in all circles and all territories in Esthonia, by order of...

MR. GLANCY: One moment, please. If it please the Tribunal, we again wish to renew our objections on the same basis as before. These occurrences, as far as we can see, have no relevancy to one charges as ledged against the defendant Sandberger in the indictment. These are purely collateral and are not connected in any way, matter or form which we can see.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, the defendant Sandberger, as all the other defendants, is charged with being guilty of shooting many Communists. I want to clarify with the help of this witness which Communists were shot at that time and what the attitude of the Esthonian population was as to this. Therefore I think these questions are relevant.

MR. GLANCY: The Esthonian population is not being charged before this Tribunal, merely the defendant Sandberger, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. von Stein, what did the attitude of the population have to do with the defendant's action? Do you intend to submit that the defendant went there to execute the will of one Esthonian population?

DR. VON STEIN: No, your Honor. I want to emphasize two points. The first is what did Snadberger know about these things when he resolved the order in Pretzsch. Secondly, the execution of this order, as I shall prove, was not only carried out on the part of the German authorities but also largely by the Esthonian Civilian Guards in self defense. which Sandberger at that point entered, it is of great importance to show the attitude of the Esthonian people towards Communism.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, we will permit the question and the objection will be overruled; but I think you should try to bring it as quickly as possible to the real issue in the case, namely, whether Sandberger was guilty of any crimes.

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, your Honor. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, I repeat the question to you: What did you tell Sandberger concerning the extermination battalions?

A. Extermination battalions had been installed by order of the Commissar of Interior Matters in all the Sectors who had the order to work independently without any examination or investigation against everybody who spread rumors and who were regarded as Soviet enemy elements or those who were regarded to be against the occupation powers and to eliminate such elements which otherwise could come into the hands of the enemies. -- as regards the Deportation....

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment. You used the words "enemy" and "occupying power." Now, in that part of the world who was an enemy today might be a friend tomorrow; who was occupying today would be an invader tomorrow because at one time Germany and Russia were fighting side by side. So that, use the name of the nation and of the nationals, otherwise some difficulty might arise in trying to determine just whom you are referring to.

THE WITNESS: Yes. I beg your pardon, your Honor.

A. (Continuing) there was an order by the People's Commissar for Interior Affairs. Germany was regarded as an enemy because, at that moment the country was in Soviet Russian hands.

THE RESIDENT: What year was that?

THE WITNESS: That was In July, 1941. War was at that time waging within the country. These extermination battalions COURT II CASE IX did not only fight the enemy, that is, Germany, but also they fought Esthonians at the actual places because Esthonian men, as they were afraid of deportation, had fled into the woods, and forests and the moors and there tried to protect their families when extermination battalions were approaching.

opinion, quite a number of defenseless, innocent people and not only murders alone, but also tortures which we regarded as inhuman; for this reason the population was so much enraged against the extermination battalions, that in the front lines in which Estonian Defense police had arrested members of the Extermination Battalions, these were dealt with immediately there and then.

THE PRESIDENT: These elimination battalions, who were they? I told you to use the name of the nation. Otherwise we are going to get into a lot of amgiguity.

THE WITNESS: Yes. These elimination battalions consisted on the Soviet side and the Esthonian side. The Esthonian self-defense organizations which operated in the woods and forests and in case of fights had arrested members of these battalions who had committed murders shot them there on the spot, through a court martial. Therefore, I made the effort, that is why I talked to Sandberger about this, to prevent these independent acts in these places and I tried to introduce an actual examination immediately because I did not want illegal and impossible circumstances to prevail in the front areas.

Q. Witness, did you tell the defendant Sandberger about the losses on the part of the Esthonians through the actions of these elimination battalions or other actions by the Communists?

A. On the whole, Esthonia lost, until the end of October 1941, 108,000 members of the population. Of these losses there are about 65,000 people which were lost in these actions.

Q. What is the whole population of Esthonia?

A. 1.2 million inhabitants.

Q. Witness, is it true that the Esthonian population was generally of the opinion that one had to recokno with the fact that these Esthonians which were deported by the Russians, were taken to Russia or would be taken to Russia and would be killed there and was it the opinion of the Esthonians that the German Security Police found out about this?

THE PRESIDENT: That question is not clear to the Tribunal. I don't know if it is to the witness.

DR. VON STEIN: The witness has just explained that large numbers, thousands and tens of thousands of the population were deported. He told us that the total losses were far beyond a hundred thousand of which a large part had already lost their lives before this action. I now put the question to the witness, what the attitude of the Esthonian population was and what they thought about the fate of the remainder of the deported people, whether the Esthonians were of the opinion at that time that they would over see their family members again or whether they had to reckon that they would probably be killed in Soviet Russia and would never return to their home country. I think this question important for the reason that the witness will tell us that the population must be very much embittered and that these matters must have influenced the population so much that they organized their own self defense and retaliation measures and that is how the number of thousandsof people appears in the documents.

THE PRESIDENT: Your question is entirely too broad. You want this witness to tell what every member of the population thought. In the first place, how can he tell what anybody thinks? Now he's already explained that they suffered great losses and he's told about deportations. The deeds speak more than thoughts. So he can't testify as to what everybody else thought. He can only testify as to what they said and what they did. Now, it seems you have indicated what he told Sandberger so the time ought to be ripe now to bring Sandberger in on the Scene.

DR. VON STEIN: What I meant, Your Honor, was this: The witness must know what the general atmosphere of the Esthonian people was at that time and I put the question to the witness, whether he gave Sandberger an idea of this attitude and atmosphere within the Esthonian people. That was my question.

THE PRESIDENT: That isn't what your question was originally. You asked him what the population thought. Now, if you will ask him what he told Sandberger, that is another thing; and, furthermore, it seems that he's already told us what he told Sandberger.

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, Your Honor, I shall withdraw the question. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, I put the following question to you: What did Sandberger learn from you about the regulations prevailing in the Esthonian Republic concerning Communist activities?

A. The Communist Party and activities in Esthonia was prohibited since the public riot attempt 1st December, 1924. Activities were regarded illegal and therefore punished by court martial.

MR. GLANCY: If it please the Court, the membersof the Prosecution do not wish to seem persistent, but again we enter the same objection on the same grounds, that of relevancy. That the population thought about the Communists has nothing to do with the crimes with which the defendant Sandberger is charged.

THE PRESIDENT: You are now going back to 1924 what the Esthonian population thought in 1924 or what the official attitude of the Republic was in 1924.

You are going back to 1924 and a great deal happened between 1924 and 1941 which could completely change a scene which occurred in 1924. That is certainly too far back.

DR. VON STEIN: This morning I heard the President put a question concerning Communists. This question wasput to the defendant Steimle and it was to the effect whether Steimle had had Communists shot just because they were Communists.

THE PRESIDENT: That was in 1941. I certainly didn't ask him what he did in 1924.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, it does not refer to the years 1924 or 1920 but it merely refers to the time 1940, that is, even the time before Russia invaded Esthonia.

THE PRESIDENT: And there is a vast difference between the question which the Tribunal put to Steimle, who is a defendant charged with a specific crime, and this witness, who is not a defendant and who has come in here only to testify as to conditions which Sandberger was familiar with. Now, Sandberger certainly didn't know what was happening in Esthonia in 1924. At any rate, he isn't chaged with any knowledge of what happened in 1924, and even if we suppose that he did know, are you going to argue that because the Communists did certain things that Sandberger was privileged to do the same? Is that your theory?

DR. VON STEIN: No, Your Honor. My starting point is the following: I want to show the Tribunal what the legal rules were prevailing until 1941 concerning Communism or Communist activities and what did Communist action mean. Did it mean that a man would be punished severely just because he was merely a communist?

THE PRESIDENT: We have already allowed you to do that and we will allow you even further to do it, but its don't see how it is going to help anybody to have this witness tell us about 1924 which is the date the witness mentioned.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I only asked the witness the question concerning the time until the time 1941 and how the situation was at that time. I don't want to know how it was in 1924, I only want to hear from the witness what he himself told Sandnerger about legal regulations in Esthonia before the Russians occupied Esthonia.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, it you don't want to hear about 1924 and the Tribunal doesn't want to hear about 1924, I guess we are unanimous, we don't want to hear about 1924.

DR. VON STEIN: No, I don't want to hear anything about 1924; I want to hear about 1940.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Let's hear about 1941. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, what were the regulations prevalent in Esthonia in 1940 concerning Communism or Communist activities?

A. It was legally forbidden; Communist activities were regarded illegal and was punished by court martial. The sentences were up to death sentences.

THE PRESIDENT: Well now, I don't quite follow you. Which government is issueing these decrees, now?

THE WITNESS: The government of the Esthonian Rupublic.

THE PRESIDENT: I thought that you had told us that the Soviet government had taken over; that they had won the election; that you had a Soviet government after 1940.

THE WITNESS: On the 22 June 1940 the Esthonian independent government ceased to exist. Until then Communism had been forbidden, as I said.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, but who was your government in 1941?

THE WITNESS: 1941, Esthonia was part of the Soviet Union and had been annexed as such.

THE PRESIDENT: Are you telling us that the Soviet government was putting up manifestoes that anyone advocating Communism would be shot?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. von Stein asked you to tell us about the conditions in 1914, and you proceeded to tell us about these decrees prohibiting Communist activity.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I put the question for the period before the occupation of Russia. I want to find out what was before. There are various periods of time concerned, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment.

DR. VON STEIN: There are various periods of time here. The first time until the occupation of Esthonia by the Soviet Union; then the second period, that is the time of the actual occupation by Soviet Russia, and the third stage is -

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. von Stein, the Tribunal is aware of these different periods. What we are endeavoring to have you do, and the witness also do, is to indicate what period you are referring to, but if you begin to talk without indicating the date, without indicating the nation, then this testimony is of no value whatsoever.

BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q? Witness, I shall put the following question. What were the legal regulation concerning the punishment of Communistic activities until the occupation of Esthonia by the Soviet Union?

A. As I said, Communism, until 22 June 1940 was prohibited in Esthonia by law, and was punishable by military law, up to death sentences.

Q. What punishments were imposed? Can you tell the Tribunal in what cases death sentences were imposed, and what usual punishments were imposed for other activity?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr von Stein, we have this much, that up until 22 June 1941, Esthonia officially prohibited the practice of Communism, and for the violation of that decree punishment could be meted out even up until death. Now, we have that. Now don't go back to that any more.

DR. VON STEIN: May I point out Your Honor, apparantly it was a translation mistake, and apparently '40 and '41 have not been translated. properly. The witness in now dealing only with the period for '40.

The date in '40 is before the occupation of Esthonia by the Communist. He is now only talking about that period before this; that he is not speaking about 1941 when Russia was --

THE PRESIDENT: We got up tuntil June 22, 1941, that is what we have got. Is that wrong?

DR. VON STEIN: Can you tell the Tribunal the individual dates which we talked about. Tell us exactly the dates, and in part of the attitude of the government, and what the government of Esthonia had to do whether influenced by the Soviet Union at the time, or whether it was an independent nation?

THE PRESIDENT: You are giving him about fifteen question in one, long outpouring of words. Now, just a moment.

Q. Witness, there was a period of time during which Communism was prohibited, and the practice of Communism got severe penalties even including death; which period was that?

A. Until the 22 June 1940.

THE PRESIDENT: 1940. All right, now proceed from that point. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, what was the attitude of the Esthonian population from the Summer of 1941 concerning the punishment of those who participated in the actions of the Bolshevists in Esthonia?

A. The population asked for severe punishment for those who were actually quilty.

Q. Who carried out the arrests of those communists?

THE PRESIDENT: The population asked for severe punishment for what? For those who were guilty means nothing.

THE WITNESS: I beg your pardon. The population asked for severe punishment of all those who in 1940 and '41 during the occupation of the country by the Communists made themselves guilty of murder of individual persons in Esthonia.

BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, I ask you again in order to establish the right dates. You spoke of people who made themselves guilty in such an action. When did they become guilty? What period was that?

A. The period is from the occupation of Estonia by the Soviet Union, 29 June, 1940, until the occupation of Esthonia by the German troops; that was in the course of June, July or August, until 21 October 1941.

Q. Tell the Tribunal what you mean by guilty. What does the term "guilty" mean? What did one do with people who were found guilty?

A. On the part of the elimination battalions, which we have been speaking about, and on the part of the NKWD, several thousand persons were murdered.

THE PRESIDENT: All right now, we understand up until June 22, 1940, those who practiced Communism were criminals, and could be executed; between June 22, 1940 and June 1941, those who did not practice Communism were guilty and could be killed, is that right?

THE WITNESS: Yes, that is correct.-----

THE PRESIDENT: All right, let's proceed on that point now. Dr. von Stein you ask the questions.

DR. VON STEIN: Yes. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, after Esthonia was not under Soviet Sovereignty, any more then if I understood you right, the population asked for punishment for those who during the period of occupation had denounced others to the NKWD Esthonians, or had handed them over; are those the guilty people who after the Red Army left, were punished by the Esthonia authority?

THE PRESIDENT: You have made a very complicated question. It is a very simple thing. After the Soviets withdrew, and the German forces took over, then Esthonia went back to its original attitude of being anti-Communist, and demanded punishment of those who had been violent Communists during the Soviet period?

THE WITNESS: Yes, that is so, Your Honor. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, who arrested these Communists who had been found guilty?

A. For the most part the Esthonia self-defense organization, partly the police.

Q. Were the investigations of any individual cases carried, out?

A. I cannot answer from my own knowledge, but so far as I have been informed, in most cases, yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, just a moment.

A. (continuning) - but also

THE PRESIDENT: You are not permitted to say you have no knowledge of a thing, and then give us an answer. If you have no knowledge then you have no knowledge. Now, you either have it or you don't have it. You can't guess at your answers. Now, do you have any knowledge on this subject?

THE WITNESS: Well, yes. I understand the question asked by the Tribunal that is, the last question.

THE PRESIDENT: I didn't put the question to you. It was your attorney who put to you the question. Put your last question again Dr. von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, I ask you now who conducted the investigations against these Communists?

A. The self-defense organization, and the political departments of the Police Main Office.

THE PRESIDENT: And you know this of your own knowledge?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Now the German Security Police carried out such investigations in July and August?

A. I don't think I can answer this question. I have no knowledge of this.

Q. Witness, after the German Army marched into Esthonia, that is, in July and August, 1941, who ordered the executions of the Communists ?

A. The local and field commanders ordered the executions.

THE PRESIDENT: At the end of your answer you say "Local and field commanders," which does not mean a thing. Which local and field commanders? The Esthonia local commanders or the German local commanders?

THE WITNESS: I beg your pardon. I shall be more explicit. They were the field and local commanders of the German Wehrmacht, of the German Army who held the power.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, as soon as a conditions became a little more quiet, and the German Security Police had the possibility to take over from the formerly mentioned authorities that actual procedures could be initiated how was the actual procedure in these cases then?

A. Investigations were carried out by the political department of the Police Main Offices, the Esthonia Police Main Office.

Q. And who decided in that case?

A. The investigation materials were examined and investigated by committees, by examination committees, and with the judgments they were turned over to the German authorities.

Q. Of whom did these committees consist?

A. They were former Esthonia judges and other legal authorities.

Q. Who were the proposals submitted to, proposals for sentences?

THE PRESIDENT: Did the Esthonia authorities themselves conduct any executions? I am referring to that plan -

A No, no, we didn't have power to do that.

THE PRESIDENT: Immediately following the Soviet withdrawal, did the Esthonia authorities conduct any examination, trials, and executions?

THE PRESIDENT: Why not? authority by the Germans. We would have preferred to do it ourselves.

THE PRESIDENT: The Germans took over all authority when the Soviets withdrew?

A No, it didn't take over all the authority, but a part of the functions of the government offices. Esthonians were in charge of the administration of local district offices.

THE PRESIDENT: Were you engaged in arresting people? Did Esthonia have authority to arrest people?

THE PRESIDENT: I didn't say, you. I said, the Esthonian authority. Were you the whole State?

A No. But the self defense organization who were subordinate to German field and local kommandateurs did carry out arrests of persons.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, well, then the Esthonian authorities had no authority in police work, in arrests or in trials?

Q They had no authority to conduct investigations?

THE PRESIDENT: Allright, proceed. BY DR. VON STEIN: instituted which proposed the judgment and sentences, and submitted them to the German Security Police. I now ask you whether this kind of procedure was as thorough possible, and, whether it corresponded with the demands of Justice and Objectivity to such a degree as was possible at that time?

MR. GLANCY: We fail to see that he sets himself up as an expert to give an opinion as to whether or not these investigations and recommendations were justified. He said he had had no part of police work. We object to the question on that ground, if if pleases the Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: The witness has stated that the Esthonian authorities had no power to conduct any arrests or investigations.

DR. VON STEIN: May I repeat. The witness stated that there was a judgment commission; there were lawyers, Esthonian lawyers, and this commission collected and compiled the material, and then proposed the judgments to the German Security Police.

THE PRESIDENT: What is your question.

DR. VON STEIN: I now ask the witness whether he is of the opinion whether this kind of procedure was objective and thoroughly, and whether this kind of procedure ...

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, do you still stand on your answer made just a few moments ago, that the Esthonian authorities conducted no arrests or examinations?

THE WITNESS: Well, I must explain, Your Honor, I took over my office .....

THE PRESIDENT: No, just a moment. Just a moment, please. That is the answer you made to the Tribunal. Now do you stand on that or don't you?

THE WITNESS: Well, officially, these authorities were at that time authorities of the German field and local kommandenteurs. There was no Esthonian Central Government.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, the Esthonians worked under the German occupying power, is that right?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, all right. Now your attorney, or rather Dr. von Stein has asked you to pass judgment upon some entirely independent body, and the Tribunal is unable to see how we can pass judgment on what somebody else did. The objection of the Prosecution in that respect will have to be sustained.

DR. VON STEIN: population at that time criticised this manner of investigation at that time?

Q Shall we put it in another way. Were the Esthonian population in agreement with large scale investigations being carried on against active Communists, or did the Esthonian population ---

MR. GLANCY: The witness has not stated that he performed a "gallup poll" of Esthonia, therefore, he is not qualified to answer that question. He does not know as a cross section what that opinion was.

THE PRESIDENT: In the first place we don't know what the judgments were.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I want to put the following question to the witness. The witness has been in Esthonia and he lived in Esthonia, and I want to ask whether he knows of the attitude of the population there, what he thought about it?

THE PRESIDENT: About what?

DR. VON STEIN: About the investigation of active Communists, whether the population, owing to the hardship they had suffered, they even defended themselves at the time. Your Honor, it is like this, that shortly after, or just before the invasion by the German Army the population was so angry that accesses occurred in great numbers, were Communists were shot by the Esthonians in self-defense. Therefore, the number of Communists shot increased to such an extent and they are mentioned in these documents which were submitted by the Prosecution, for this reason I want to ask the witness these questions.

MR. GLANCY: Perhaps, your Honor, I have misunderstood but I have understood from the witness that the Esthonians could not carry out these executions.

THE PRESIDENT: He very very specifically stated that.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, these were not executions, but we must imagine back to the time immediately following the departure of the Russians. They were just shootings. These people about whom the witness told us that they were hiding in the woods, they came out of their hiding places, and these people who were responsible for the murder of their own families, were simply shot without sentence, without judgment, without being tried.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. von Stein, you are not on the witness stand. The great difficulty here is that you have put the cart before the horse.

I don't know whether that can be translated correctly into German or not. If you had put the defendant on, then we could more easily follow what you are attempting to show by this witness, bu you are endeavoring to establish by this witness some things which apparently are predictated upon what you intend that your client will say, and we don't know what it is. Now let me suggest this to you. If this witness has the possibility of remaining in Nuernberg for whatever time is required, then you can put him on after the defendant testified, and then perhaps what he is now talking about will not be so ambigous, and foggy.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I think it is most important for us to hear from a neutral witness of facts or whether we more depend on the statement of one of the defendant's, and I would like to follow your suggestion, Your Honor -

THE PRESIDENT: Listen, Dr. von Stein: You are asking this witness to confirm what the defendant has not yet stated, isn't that true? You want him to say that the people of Esthonia shot the individuals that the Prosecution charges the defendant shot. That is what you are endeavoring to build up, but the trouble is that you don't have a foundation for that kind of a statement. We will permit you to examine this witness if you insist on presenting it that way, but we will have to adhere to the rules of evidence, and what is irrelevant we will exclude. We have indicated to you a way of getting this testimony in, but if you don't want to take that course, of course that is your privilege.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I would like to accept this suggestion, but I would like to draw your attention to the fact that the witness has been here for a month, and the witness comes from Austria.

Furthermore, I don't think he has very much time, not enough time to remain here. I have had difficulties, Your Honor, and I was asked again and again how long the witness would stay here in Nuernberg, but regarding the importance of the statement, I have declared again and again the witness would be examined very soon. Now he is here in the witness stand, and I would like, therefore, to ask the Tribunal to permit me to put this question so that the witness can go back to his home.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you over ask the Tribunal about this situation. About the witness, whether he should wait, and when he could come in?

DR. VON STEIN: The witness was asked to come here, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: But you say -

DR. VON STEIN: Without my having told when he should appear here.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, Dr. von Stein, let me tell you, as I thought I made it clear to all defense counsel. That this Tribunal is ready at all times to hear attorneys either in the court, or in the chambers, and when you have any difficulty, come to see the Tribunal. If you had come to the Tribunal, and told us that you had a witness here a month ago, we certainly would have done something about it.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, the reason was that my defendant was ill for some time. Therefore, I could not suggest this witness he examined before and request to have the Tribunal hear this witness. It was very important to me that this witness should be heard immediately before the examination of the defendant. I did not want to tear my case into two. Therefore, I had to wait until my turn came today, because my client is now well again. That was the reason for it.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will adjust itself to the situation in which you find yourself and you may continue with the examination.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I have now decided to follow the suggestion of the Tribunal and to -

THE PRESIDENT: You mean Dr. Gawlik has decided.

DR. VON STEIN: No, your Honor, it is not this, but to my regret I have found out that only a short time is at our disposal now anyway, and within this court I do not think I will be in the position to finish the examination of this witness in an hour, so therefore the witness has to remain here until Tuesday or Wednesday, and I think it will not be of such tremendous importance to the witness whether he can go back to his home two or three days before or after. For this reason I have now decided to wait with the examination of this witness and to discontinue it now.

THE PRESIDENT: I think, Dr. von Stein, in arriving at so momentous a decision that you had to wrestle with yourself a great deal, and you must feel a little tired now so we will give you a rest of fifteen minutes.

( A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. testified as follows:

JUDGE SPEIGHT: Witness, raise your right hand, and repeat the oath. speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath.)

JUDGE SPEIGHT: You may be seated. BY DR. VON STEIN:

A My name is Martin Sandberger. I was born 17 August 1911 in Berlin. My father was a commercial employee. I attended the elementary school in Stuttgart and in Hoechst near Frankfort on the Main River. In Hoechst I also attended the high school from 1920 until 1929. In 1929 I graduated there. After that I studied from 1929 until May, 1933, I studied law in the Universities in Munich, Freiburg im Breisgau, Cologne and Tuebingen. I concluded these studies with the first state exam of law, the so-called "referendar exam" in May, 1933. After that, until November, 1936, I was legal Referendar. I concluded my service in the legal administration in November, 1936, with the second state exam of law, the so-called Assessorexam. Already before, namely in November, 1933, I got my doctor's degree at the University in Tuebingen.

My further career after passing the assesor exam November 1936 is as follows: As an assesor I joined the service of the Wuerttemberg inner administration and I remained there 1937 and 1938. For half a year at a time as an assessor in the inner administration of the county, as I shall describe later. The other half of the year 1937 and 1938 I was active in full capacity in the SD Main Section in Stuttgart.

In the Wuerttemberg innder administration, according to the prescribed time in March 1939, I was promoted to governor councillor, and, therefore, had the rank of a civil service in the inner administration.

Q When did you join the NSDAP? or any other political parties?

A No. Until then I had no interest in party politics until then.

Q What were your motives for joining the NSDAP?

A The impression I had gained in the year 1931 was as follows: The political and economical situation in Germany became worse more and more as mysery and unemployment spread more and more. In order to avoid repention, I wish to point in this connection to the explanations which my co-defendants have already detailed, concerning the impression which they gained in those years in Germany.

Q Which afficiation of the party did you join at the end of 1931? Students Association.

Q Were you active in the Students Association in 1933?

A Yes. From the middle of May until the middle of July 1933 I was chief of the Students Association in Tuebingen, after I had already been president of the General Student Committee of the Tuebingen Students Association for some weeks in 1932.

Q Why did you join the SA in 1933?

A The reasons was as follows: One of the most important motives of my joining the National Socialist Party was that it was my opinion that the then in Germany existing class-distinctions and class hate should have to be overcome by creating a community of the people.

As a student I felt the class distinctions even stronger than other people. For me, the question of joining the SA was so to say the only possible confession to a principle of a practical community of the people, doing service there once or twice a week together with men from all professions.

Q When did you first come in contact with the SD?

A That was in 1935. At the time I became an honorary co-operator of the SD on the subject of section situation reports regarding high school and scientific questions. operator of the SD? tion namely, Dr. Schoel pointed out the SD to me. At the same time when I was chief of the Students Association in Tuebingen he had been chief of the Students Association in Heidelberg, and thus I had become acquainted with him.

Q What did Dr. Schoel tell you when he won you over for honorary co-operation in the SD? political parties and independent press were eliminated that then the highest Reich authorities would not be properly informed about the real situation in the domestic sphere and that the real feeling of the people in these domestic spheres was not explained to them very clearly. Therefore, he explained to me, it be necessary that an independent, neutral information service be set up to bring objective situation reports on all domestic spheres of life. I must point out that Dr. Schoel had got contact with the SD through the same Professor Hoehn who has been mentioned here repeatedly by Herr Ohlendorf and Spongler in the witness box. This Professor Hoehn at the time was an lecturer on state law, and in 1935 he had taken it upon himself to set up such an information service on domestic spheres, particularly on the cultural sphere.

Q When did you become a full-time employee of the SD?

A That was in November 1936 after my second exam on law. I became then chief of Department II/2 in the SD Main Section South West.

Q What were your tasks in this department? German domestic sphere. It was not a security police task nor an information service but reports about German domestic spheres, as has been testified to in detail in the witness stand here by Herr Ohlendorf. My personal duties as department chief consisted mainly in choosing experts, and to train them. Section South West within the main framework of the SD--did they have to deal with getting information or with central evaluation?

A Neither the one nor the other. For the task of the information service was up to the SD sections, and the task of the central evaluation was up to the SD Main Office in Berlin. This main section was, therefore, an intermediate instant between the SD sectors on the one hand and the central office in Berlin on the other hand. They had to be passed on orders from Berlin to the subordinates offices, had to check the reports of the subordinated offices, and had to forward those reports.

Q During that time were you only active in the SD?

A No. As I indicated before, throughout these years of 1937 and 1938 I was simultaneously a civil servant in the inner state administration and simultaneously I had a part-time job in the Reichs Students' Association which can be explained by the fact that my superior in the SD, Dr. Schoel in 1936 also became Reich Leader of the Students Associations and these two functions were both dealt with by him.

Q What plans did you have at the time for your future? Inner Administration, a plan, which my superior in the SD, Dr. Schoel also approved of.

Q Did your activity change owing to the outbreak of the war?

as through the order of the chief of the security police of the SD at the outbreak of war all SD main sections were dissolved. Previously I had been chief of the inland department with this main sector. My task after the outbreak of the War was to dissolve the SD Main Section as far as organization and personnel was concerned.

Q How long did you hold this function?

Q What task were you given after that? the Reich. Office of the Reich?

Naturalization of German immigrants from Estonia and Latvia who according to international agreements between Germany on the one hand and Latvia and Estonia on the other hand, in the fall of 1939, had voluntarily emigrated from Estonia and Latvia. A directive provided for the appointment of experts from six different Reich sectors who worked independently in their own fields. My task consisted of dealing with the technical and organizational aspects of the directives issued by these experts.

Q Was the Central Immigration Office part of the SD?

A No. It was a special agency of the Interior Administration of the Reich. Its foundation had been ordered by a decree in the Reich Ministerial Gazette of the Interior Administration issued by the Reich Ministry of the Interior.

Q When did you become a referant in Office I?

Q What were your main tasks as referant in Office I? training of the Security Police and the SD. The most important part of this was to find new directives for the career and the training of the so-called executive service of the security police and the SD. To be brief May I refer to what Herr Schulz has testified in the witness stand about this executive service? Immigration Office, did you have the possibility to look into the affairs of other offices of the RSHA? Central Office?

Q Upon joining the SD, were you at the same time taken into the SS?

A Yes. At the request of my chief in the SD, Dr. Scheel, I was taken into the SS in January 1936 within the SD; I did not belong to the General SS or the Waffen SS.

in connection with Count III of the Indictment where you are charged with membership in the SD and the SS I just want to conclude those points which are connected with the questions of your activity in the SD and the question of your involuntary membership in the SD during the war. How long were you in the Eastern assignment?

Q What was your next assignment? of the commander of the security police and the SD in Verona in Italy. which you were in charge? al and economic spheres in that part of Italy which was occupied by German troops at the time. In order to give a picture of this activity, could you give us some examples of such reports? in the fall of 1943, whether the German economic leadership and particularly the armament industry should discontinue an important part of the northern Italian industrial production and deport the experts to Germany. In accordance with the feeling prevalent among the population of Northern Italy, Department III of which I was in charge at the time was very much in favor of continuing the Northern Italian industry to as great an extent as possible and to let the skilled workers remain in their regular factories in the industrial cities in Northern Italy as far as possible and continue to work there instead of sending them to Germany. Such reports went to Office III of the RSHA in Berlin whose job it was to come to conclusions about this, and they also were sent to the German plenopotentiary in Italy, to Ambassador Rahn.

Another example of questions which were acute in Italy, particularly in the fall of 1943, were questions of food supplies. At the time we pointed out to the competent German authorities that the Italian food situation was endangered and we made suggestions how the situation night he relieved and improved, suggestions which were made to us by the population. have any functions or auxiliary functions in connection with the secret state police? orders which are mentioned in the IMT verdict against Gestapo and SD?

Q How long did you carry on this function? RSHA as Chief of Department VI A.

Q When did you actually start this work? charge? Office VI, special training, office and files of Office VI, also the cultural information service and the Central Office of Office VI. an information organ of the Gestapo, the secret state police? information about any order or measure which is mentioned in the IMT verdict against the secret state police and the SD?

A No, I did not get information on this. May I add to the question that I was not Chief of Department VI, but Chief of Depart ment VI A. thing about any order or measures which are mentioned in the IMT verdict against the secret state police and the SD; you never heard about such in any of your positions from the beginning to the end of the war except for those orders with which you were concerned in the so-called Eastern assignment, is that right?

war is part of the indictment; were you a voluntary member of the SD during that time?

A No. The membership in the SD throughout the war was not voluntary; since the outbreak of war, leaving the SD was prohibited and, therefore, practically impossible. The entire full-time personnel of the SD was considered, after September 1939, as essential war work and was subject to military law, within the jurisdiction of the SS and police. compulsory?

Q Yes there a possibility for you to volunteer for the army? but nevertheless I tried this repeatedly in a hap-hazard manner about seven times in all between 1941 and 1945.

Q At which agencies?

AAt the agencies competent for this in Office I of the RSHA. In March 1941 I made a written application to the Chief of Office I, Streckenbach, in which I urgently requested transfer to the army.

Q What happened after that?

Q What did you do after that?

When I was granted this after a few weeks, I asked Streckenbach during a discussion lasting half an hour that he grant my application. He explained to me that the shortage of personnel in the RSHA was so great that nobody could be released, and he was very unfriendly when I left him because I was so insistent.

Q Was there another agency where you could have applied?

A No. As Office Chief I, Streckenbach was the only one competent for this. 1940 or 1941? I had been in the hospital for many months and during that time I was completely unfit for war service. At the beginning of the war the results of this illness were still so strong that I was fit for duty in an office but not for regular war service. I, therefore, did not actually have the possibility to volunteer for the army already then. service? your fitness? At the beginning of the winter 1940-41, I decided to do everything in order to eliminate the consdquences of my illness in order to restore my ability to do front-line service and thus to make it possible to join to the army and therefore to be able to leave the RSHA.

My first watering cure in the spring of 1940 was unsuccessful. With the permission of Office Chief I, Streckenbach, in February 1941 and March 1941, I made another cure for the special purpose of restoring my fitness to do front-line duty and thus to be able to join the army. Immediately after that, as I already explained, I asked Streckenbach for my release to join the Army. That is, at first, I wanted to take my basic military training and then go to the front as a private. I want to emphasize here that I did not know anything else at the time, except that the Germans had planned to attack England, as was announced in 1940. The Russian campaign was not mentioned, at least not to me at the time.

Q In 1941 and later, in spite of Streckenbach's refusal, did you continue to make attempts to go to the Army as a combat soldier? I asked every few months, in talking to the competent personnel chief, whether there could not be a way to release me to join the army; the first time in October, 1941, then again in March, 1942, and then every few months. Also in 1944 I tried again and in 1945, when I was in Office VI of the RSHA, I continued with these attempts, unfortunately unsuccessfully, due to the acute shortage of personnel in the SD.

Q Did you make any other attempts to leave the RSHA?

A Yes. My former SD chief, Dr. Scheel, at the time was still Chief of the Reich Student Association. At the end of 1941 I wrote to him asking whether he could not use me in his Reich Student Association and ask the RSHA that I be released for this. He agreed to this and addressed a letter to the RSHA with the urgent request to release me for an office in the Student Association. The matter dragged on for months, but finally his request was rejected, again due to the great shortage of leaders who were informed about affairs in Office III. war?

A No, there were only orders which one had to obey. I did what I could against my first, second and third order.

did you then try, during the time of the Eastern assignment, to get away from there? was Dr. Gengenbach, who was competent for personnel questions of the domestic SD. As I explained at the beginning, I had belonged to this domestic SD until 1939 and that was my special field. In the years 1941 to 1943, every time I was in Berlin, I visited Dr. Gengenbach and asked him to see to it that I be given another position in the SD service in the Reich which would have nothing to do with the police.

Q When, exactly, was this?

A The first time in October, 1941. That was my first official trip to Berlin from the Eastern assignment and the second time in the fall of 1942. Then about every 3 to 4 months, until finally I came to Verona as Department Chief III within the domestic SD. called Eastern assignment with the Security Police and the SD. When were you ordered to go to the Eastern assignment?

A That was in the first half of the month of June, 1941. I cannot remember the exact date.

Q Did you object to this order? release me for the Army, as I have already explained.

Q What did Streckenbach reply to you?

A He told me a war with Russia was at hand. An assignment by the Security Police and the SD had been provided for this. There was an acute shortage of personnel. He even had to bring people back from the Army, and, therefore, the question of releasing any one for the Army was beyond discussion.

Q Had you been trained for the police?

Q Was there a possibility for you to evade the Eastern assignment?

A No, I was under military law. One could not try more than I had tried with Streckenbach. units assigned to the East?

Q What happened in Pretsch?

A The units were set up and distributed. I was appointed Chief of Sonderkommando I A. As for the details about the time in Pretsch, I would like to refer to what has already been said in detail on the witness stand here, particularly by Herr Ohlendorf. I myself was present during the discussions in the Palais Prinz Albrecht in Berlin and during the speech by Streckenbach which has been mentioned here repeatedly and during which the well-known Fuehrer Order was announced.

Q What rank did you have at the time?

A My rank was that of a Sturmbannfuehrer. That is the same as a major in the Army.

Q What orders did you receive before the Eastern assignment? expected, about the conditions in regard to international law, and other information and instructions which Herr Ohlendorf and Herr Blume have explained in detail on the witness stand here. May I refer to this. Also, Streckenbach personally informed me about the Fuehrer Order, which said that in order to secure the Eastern territory permanently, all Jews, Gypsies, and Communist functionaries were to be eliminated, together with all other elements which might endanger the security. orders to you?

Q What was your reaction to the Fuehrer Order?

think it was possible that such an order was at all thinkable. The contents of the order were so entirely beyond my imagination that I could not imagine a realization of this. In particular, I could not imagine that I myself would be able to do this and, on the other hand, I believed I could not ask my men to do something which I could not do myself.

Q Did you see a way out of the situation?

A No, I saw no way out. For me it was a position of great inner compulsion and a conflict between duty and feelings in the most extreme manner which I could imagine.

Q In what way do you speak of a conflict? and the Supreme Commander, the duty of submission of the individual will to the authority of the State. On the other hand there was the human feeling which revolted against such measures.

Q Why did your feelings revolt against such measures?

A Such feelings in such a situation are very hard to explain. I believe I can express it best when I say that I considered the order inhuman and wrong for social and ethical reasons, that is, because of its inescapable reaction on the community life of our own people and that of others and on the relationship of our people to other peoples.

Q How did you judge the actual correctness of this order? measure by the Chief of State was objectively necessary or not, what his motives were and whether these motives were correct. which you found yourself?

A Open objection would have meant death. Such death, however, would have been a completely senseless martyrdom, senseless because it would not have helped anyone and because it would not have stopped things from going the way they were going.

Q What decision did you make in this compulsive position? as far as it was possible without openly disobeying the order, which would have been senseless. this order completely?

A. At the time, of course, I could not picture this very clearly. On the one hand, I knew now the moment the Fuehrer Order was announced ` that I was to be the leader of the Sonderkommando, that is, a commando which was always to be with the fighting forces at the very front...... Thus it seemed possible to me to a certain extent to evade carrying out this order, On the other hand, I played with the thought that perhaps, owing to enemy activity, it could not be done, or that one could come to a territory where there were hardly any Jews. Also, I had the idea that these orders - for me at least - were inconceivable, that perhaps they might be revoked; that, therefore, the most important thing was, at the moment, to delay carrying it out.

Q. How could you have the idea that Hitler could revoke such a fundamental order?

A. Here, too, my thoughts were not clear, and could not have been clear. These orders were so far beyond my imagination that I simply could not believe that they actually should be carried out. Also, I thought that if one were to start now to carry out this order in the East, this would become known abroad very quickly, and that then the reaction would be so strong from abroad; that, due to this, Hitler would feel forced to change his ideas about this matter. I also thought, for example, that the German diplomats abroad, in carrying out their official duties, would report about such strong reaction abroad if such an order were carried out, and that in this way the German diplomatic circles would be given reasons which would seem so decisive to Hitler, that he would change this order without changing his basic conception about the destruction of Jewery and Communists, in the East in particular.

Q. What did you think about the illegaliby of this order?

A. The illegality of a Fuehere order was out of the question. It corresponded to the German constitutional situation at the time that the Fuehrer was the supreme and unrestricted legislator, that he could legally decree anything which would then have the force of law, and that he was master over life and death.

A Fuehrer decree was the supreme law.

Q. What were you told at the time about the situation in regard to international law concerning the Soviet Union?

A. I was informed that it was the opinion of the Reich government, and also of the command of the Army, that the Soviet Union on its part considered itself outside of international law. It was said that the Soviet Union had expressly declared itself not bound by the Hague Convention and the Geneva Convention. Therefore, it was said, Germany was not bound by international law within the entire territory of the Soviet Union.

Q. That wasyour opinion about this Fuehrer decree being contrary to international law?

A. Even if it had been contrary to international law - at home it was binding for us, because according to German opinion at the time and not only at the time, but for decades - or since time immemorial -the citizen is bound by every internal state order which takes precedence over any other obligation. Therefore, an opposition to international law in any measure for the individual citizen was of no relevance.....if an internal law existed it was legal for him.

Q. What communications were made by the official propaganda in Germany in the Fuehrer speech, and by the army command at the time concerning the position of Germany towards the Soviet Union?

A. Here the following announcements were made. The Soviet Union, for ideological reasons alone, had an aggressive attitude on principle, and planned a war against Germany, and even the whole of Europe. German interference would therefore be necessary to ensure the continual existence of Germany and Central Europe. Therefore, Germany was in a state of emergency and there was no other way out.

Q. At the time, did you hear anything about the attitude of the Soviet Union in the areas which the Soviet Union in 1939 and 1940 attacked, or occupied?

A. Yes. We were told that the Soviet Union had violated international law as regards Finnland, the Baltic countries. In the commando of which I was in charge there were about four interpreters - Germans from the Baltic states, from Estonia and Latvia, who until the Spring of 1941 at the request of the Voldsdeutsche Mittelstelle, had been in the Baltic states, and they reported to me already in Schmiedeberg that is a locality near Protzsch where we were- about the actions in the Soviet Union in the Baltic states in 1940 to 1941.

Q. Who was the Einsatzgruppen Chief who was your superior?

A. That was the SS Brigadefuehrer, General Major of the Police, Dr. Stahlecker.

Q. Will you give us a short description of the character of Stahlecker?

A. He was energetic, intelligent, and ambitious. His temperment was sanguine. He was lively; he was jumpy; and unpredictable. As a superior he did not tolerate any open disobedience, but under certain circumstances he allowed arguments with him. He took interest in small matters in carrying out his inspections; but, on the other hand, he had no orderly method of working, and therefore he could not always overlook the entire sphere of his command.

Q. Was Stahlecker decided to have this order carried out to the last degree?

A. Yes, definitely. In particular, he was interested that they would realize in Berlin that he was absolutely obedient concerning this order; and, not only obedient, but a special ambition in carrying this out. This may be based on the fact that Heydrich doubted Stahlecker's obedience and devotion towards Heydrich, In the witness stand it had been expressed repeatedly that Heydrich was a very mistrusting superior, and as far as I could find out from conversations with Stahlecker at the time, Stahlecker was also being distrusted by Heydrich, and Stahlecker seemed to be very worried about this, and he therefore wanted to show Heydrich and Himmler that he was very obedient and completely devoted.

Q. What was the decision point of interest in Stahlecker?

A. The reasons which I just indicated consisted of those four points about which he know that in Berlin Heydrich and Himmler considered them the most important points, namely, first of all, a good relationship with the army as far as possible; secondly, a strict and energetic leadership of the kommandos under his command; thirdly, as quick and through an execution of an order as possible, in particular concerning the Jews; and fourth, aspart of this Fuehrer order, a bitter fight against Communism. Concerning the first point, that as an Einsatzgruppe chief, at the request of Himmler and Heydrich, he was to have a particularly good relationship with the Army, -- this request by his superiors corresponded to hiw own inclinations. In the previous years he had been an enthusiastic reserve officer, and he quite often said at the time, in 1941, that he would much rather remain in his tank battalion as squardron chief than be in charge of this damn Einsatzgruppe.

Q. Did you express your great misgivings concerning the Fuehrer order to Stahlecker?

A. Yes; this happened two or three times, in July and August 1941.

Q. How did Stahlecker react to this?

A. He emphasized energetically that this was a Fuehrer order, and that it could not be changed and could not be discussed.

Q. Was anybody present during those discussions?

A. By perchance my deputy was present in one case, Hauptstrmfuehrer Carstens. By the way he was the only man in my kommnado whom I informed about the existence of this fuehrer order, but I added very confidentially that I would try to do everything to avoid carrying this out as far as my commando was concerned or to delay it. This deputy was the only man in my commando whith whom I had a personal and confidential relationship. He was the only man in my commando whom I had known previously; I knew him from a former office.

Q. How strong was Sonderkommando I-A of which you were in charge?

A. At first when it was set up in Schmiedeberg near Pretzsch there were about one hundred men in it. Of these more than one quarter were drivers. There were five officers in the commando; twenty five police officials. Except for two, none of these had been trained in questions concerning communism, and none of them know the Russian or Estonian language.

Q. What other kommandos belonged to Einsatzgruppe A?

A. Sonderkommando 1-B and Einsatzkommandos 2 and 3.

Q. When did you march to the northeast from Schmiedeberg?

A. On 23rd June, 1941.

Q. How did Stahlecker distribute the competence of the commandos?

A. On 25th June he ordered that Einsatzkommando 2 be competent for Latvia, and that Sonderkommando 1-A, of which I was in charge, belonged to the territory of the 18th Army, and particularly for Estonia at that time.

Q. Tell us what happened when you first reported to AOK 18.

A. On 25th June I met Stahlecker near the German-Lithuanian border. He was with the headquarters of the Army group there, and with the headquarters of the 16th and 18th Armies. There he had discussed our attachment to the army group. The Group had expressed on that occasion that the two Sonderkommandos, 1-A and 1-B, which were assigned to the 16th and 18th Armies, were not to stay in the rear army territ primarily, but with the advanced units of the army.

In any case not only in the rear army territories, but most of all in the combat area. On the basis of this agreement, I had to report to headquarters of the 18th Army in order to discuss everything there. On 26th June I visited the G-2 of 18th Army Headquarters. I reported to the commander in chief, and then visited the counter-intelligence department of the Army Headquarters to whom I wassubordinated in a way, that is, all questions of individual missions of my commando within the army were to be discussed with the counter-intelligence department. The G-2 of the army headquarters was the highest superior of this counterintelligence department. This counter-intelligence department gave me the papers, which were needed and all export information which was needed in order to incorporate us into the army. According to a general agreement between Stahlecker, the Army group Headquarters, and the two armies, it was my mission as soon as possible to reach the city of Riga together with those advance units of the army which would be the first ones to reach Riga.

Q. When did you reach the city of Riga?

A. On 26th June I left Memel and the last headquarters on Reich territory. With a sub-commando I went to the area of Schaulen, and there I was told by the commanding general of an army corps of the army to whom I had been sent by the army headquarters that an advance command of his army corps under the command of Colonel Lasch had already advanced to the Western suburbs of Riga. For that reason, on the 27th June, I left Schaulen with this sub-kommando and with a sub-kommando of the Einsatzkommando 2 which Stahlecker had added to my unit for the march. I left Schaulen via Abaiska toward Riga. The advance unit Lasch of the army at the time was in the western suburbs of the city of Riga. They were fighting very hard and the sane day, the 27th of June, units of the Red army cut them off from contact with the rear. This condition remained from the 27th of June until the 30th June. On 30th June a division came from Mitau.

With them came the Einsatzgruppen Chief, Dr. Stahlecker. On the 1st of July, the city of Riga was captured by this division.

Q. What forces of the security police arrived in Riga on the 1st of July?

A. First of all, Stahlecker himself with a small staff; then twenty men from Einsatzcommando 2, with the deputy leader of that Einsatzcommando 2; that was a criminal director of the state police, and of Einsatzcommando 1-A, about fifteen men under my charge. I beg your pardon, I meant Sonderkommando.

Q. What instructions did Stahlecker give?

A. Stahlecker immediately gave instructions to Einsatzkommando 2, that is, to the deputy leader of this commando, the criminal director just mentioned of the state police, to deal with security tasks in Riga. On 1st and 2nd July a few men of my commando, were to help him temporarily to securematerial in offices and office buildings. I myself was to prepare for the further advance of my commando towards Estonia.

Q. What did Stahlecker do himself during these days?

A. I cannot say in detail because during those days I hardly contacted Stahlecker. In general he dealt with the setting up of Latvian police and Latvian auxilliary police. Stahlecker himself had his headquarters during those days in the Latvian police building. I myself had no office and did not need one because I did not have to carry out any official functions in Riga. Stahlecker himself constantly negotiated in those days with leading Latvian personalities.

Q. Were the ten men in your sub-commando active on security police tasks in Riga?

A. Only insofar as they helped Einsatzkommando 2-A to secure material which was in Soviet offices and which was later to be evaluated for security police tasks.

Q. Did you or your sub-kommando leader carry out security police tasks in Riga?

A. No, that was up to Einsatzkommando 2, insofar as Stahlecker did not do it personally.

Q. During the time between 1 and 3 July, did you give instructions to the deputy commando leader of Einsatzkommando 2?

A. No. I was not entitled to do this. He was not subordinated to me, but he was subordinated to Stahlecker.

THE PRESIDENT: Since you are now going to get into the action in the field, perhaps we might wait until Wednesday morning and then we can start that new subject completely fresh. So that the Tribunal will now be in recess until Wednesday morning -- do you have something?

DR. MANDRY: No, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You are just trying to get out first. 9:30 o'clock. Very well.

(The Tribunal adjourned until Wednesday morning, 0930 hours, 12th November 1947.)

No. II in the matter of the United States of America against

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, The Judges of Military Tribunal II.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. von STEIN:

Q. Witness, we had stopped on your direct examination with the facts that you had arrived in Riga 1 July 1941 together with a subcommando of 15 men of your commando and at the same time with another sub-commando of 20 men of E.K. 2. In order to restore the connection with your direct examination which has already been given, summarize in a few sentences, please, what you answered to the last questions I asked you.

A. On the 1st of July 1941 the Einsatzkommando Chief Stahlecker had arrived in Riga. He had given the order of E.K. 2 to start with the Security Police job in Riga. Some men in my commando were to help them on the first and second of July temporarily in securing material in the buildings. Stahlecker himself during those days was concerned generally in setting up the Latvian Police and Latvian Auxiliary Police. He had his headquarters in the Latvian Police Building and conducted his consultations with the Latvian personalities.

Q. What did you do yourself in those days?

A. I had my commando follow up which had been in Memel so far. That was the last territory on the Reich Territory. I had this order from Stahlecker to proceed to Estonia is quickly as possible for the advance of the Army which had been proceeding very quickly up to that moment was proceeding evidently in the same quick tempo. I had to conduct negotiations with Headquarters of the Army Groups and Army Corps in order to find out what further military position was to be made by the Army and was dependent on these dispositions as to how I was to distribute my sub-commandos as time went on.

These Headquarters of the Army Corps and Divisions were all distributed over the territory in the area of central Latvia and it was a time-consuming task to find all these Headquarters and then to carry on the necessary negotiations with them.

Q. What did you find out during these negotiations?

A. I heard that the 38th Army Corps of the Army was to advance in the direction of Pleskau-Narva. I further learned that an advanced department of the Army under the leadership of General von Zelle was to proceed towardReval as quickly as possible. Other battalions were to proceed toward other southern parts of Estonia.

Q. What measures did you take after that?

A. I formed three sub-commandos. One sub-commando was assigned to the 38th Army Corps which was to advance together with this Army Corps via Pleskau along the eastern shore of the Peipus Lake toward Narva. In order to explain this further may I say that on the map here in the Courtroom the Peipus Lake is that lake which forms the eastern border of Estonia. The town of Pleskau which I mentioned is not listed on that map. It is situated on the southern end of the Peipus Lake about 15 kilometers east of the Estonian border, that is on Russian Territory. The town of Narva is listed here but there is an error on this map. It looks as if the City of Narva is not on Estonian territory but on Russian territory. In reality the City of Narva belongs to Estonia and, therefore, should have been shown on the map about 2 kilimeters left of where it is now listed. A second sub-commando was formed by me for the central Estonian area. That is for the area west of the Peipus Lake. I formed a third sub-commando to have it advance on Reval. This sub-commando was to join with the Advance Unit of the Army under the leadership of General von Zelle which I have mentioned before. I myself took over the leadership of this commando since the Advance Unit of von Zelle hoped to reach Reval in a few days and since Reval, being the capital of Estonia, was the most important objective.

In order to understand the further development may I add that this intention of the Advance Unit of von Zelle to reach Reval within a few days did not succeed but that on the first day after crossing the Latvian-Estonian frontier it met strong enemy resistance and that city of Reval was not actually captured until 28 August, that is one and one-half months later.

Q. When did the three sub-commandos start their march from Reval?

A. 4 June 1941.

Q. What information did you give to your subcommandos leaders about the message you were given in Pretsch?

A. I summarized the ideas to my sub-commando officers which had been given to the Einsatz Group Chiefs and Einsatzkommando leaders during the conferences in Pretsch and in the Prinz Albrecht Palace in Berlin but I did not tell them about the order which was announced by Streckenbach to eliminate the Jews and the Gypsies and to elimate all Communistic functionaries collectively.

Q. Why didn't you tell them that?

A. As I have already said when I described my reaction to the Fuehrer order I had made the decision as far as possible to evade the order for myself and my commandos. It was a logical consequence of this discussion that I would not inform my subordinate officers about the Streckenbach order, or rather that I would not tell them about the Fuehrer order which had been passed on by Streckenbach.

Q. Did you give your subordinate officers any definite instructions about carrying out their missions?

A. Yes, I told them to take all necessary measures in order to secure the area and especially to keep the rear of the fighting troops free in order to secure the fighting line but no collective measures were to be undertaken. Executions were to be carried out only in exceptional cases and only if an individual heavy guilt was established and only after the individual concerned was given a chance to defend himself orally.

Q. Did you give any special instructions about the advance of your commandos through Lithuania and Latvia?

A. Yes, I told them that for Lithuania and Latvia not our commando was responsible but Einsatzkommandos II and III and the subcommando of my commando were, therefore, during their march through Lithuania and Lativa only to carry out these security jobs which were absolutely necessary as immediate measures, that is, only during danger on the march.

Everything further was to be left to Einsatzkommandos II and III.

Q. During your march through Lithuania and Latvia did you yourself order arrests or executions?

A. No, in no case.

Q. Were you a sub-commando officer?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. von Stein, your question was, "Did he on this march order any arrests or executions" and his answer was "No". Do we understand by this that he arrested no one?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, this was a question for a defeinite period of time only - that march through Lithuania and Latvia. For this period of time the defendant says that he himself ordered no arrests or executions.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. What period of time was that?

DR. VON STEIN: Will you please tell the Tribunal how long this march through Lithuania and Latvia lasted - what period of time was concerned here?

THE WITNESS: This period of time was as far as I am concerned from the 25 or 26 of June until about 5 July.

THE PRESIDENT: We understand that he really had no jurisdiction in those two countries and, therefore, it would not be incumbent on him to take anyone into custody. Is that right?

DR. VON STEIN: Will you please give an explanation to the question of the Tribunal. Was it because there was no judicial competency during that time?

THE WITNESS: No, that wasn't the question which I was asked. I understood it in such a way that I should answer whether I personally during this march through Lithuania and Latvia ordered an arrest or an execution. In the preceding question I have already explained the fact that the sub-commandos or- my commando were, of course, justified.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please. Now you are going to tell us everything that you have told us before and the question was very simple. You have said that you did not arrest or execute anyone in Lithuania and Latvia. Now the question is, was that because other commandos had been assigned to those two areas? Answer that yes or no.

THE WITNESS: No.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Then was it because you saw nothing which would occasion your arresting or executing anybody?

THE WITNESS: I didn't understand the question.

march you did not have occasion to arrest anybody.

A The reason was as follows: The Einsatz Group Chief, Stahlecker, had ordered from the beginning that Einsatz Commando 2 was competent for Latvia and that my commando, that is to say, the Special Commando I A was to be competent for the area of Estonia primarily and the Eastern territory adjoining that, namely, that of the 18th Army. The advance of the 13th Army through Lithuania and Latvia was very quick. Of course, the subcommandos of my commando, if they had to be at one place during the march for several days, had the duty and the right to take security measures, but I told them right away that we were only to pass through Lithuania and Latvia, and that they were to limit themselves to those jobs which were absolutely necessary for an immediate security of the army rear area, and in this manner it may be explained that during the advance one or two sub-commandos during short stays in individual villages undertook security police missions on the responsibility of the sub-commando leaders, but that I myself because of the rapidity of the advance personally ordered no arrests or executions there.

Q Did any of your sub-commandos perform any executions?

A I don't know of any concrete case. Your Honor, that any of my sub-commandos carried out executions there. One or two of the sub-commandos probably did undertake arrests.

Q Well, now, you say you do not know of any precise case. Your sub-commandos had to report to you, did they not? by wide areas. Between me and my sub-commandos there were no communications for several days.

Q Well, but they eventually did report to you? of the sub-commando leaders, they, of course, reported to me.

Q Well, they eventually had to report to you, did they not?

Q Very well, did they report any executions? they may have not?

A Yes. It is possible that executions took place, but I don't know it concretely, or rather I do not remember. BY DR. VON STEIN: decisions?

A Yes. According to a general order of the Einsatzgruppe Chief Stahlecker, the sub-commando leaders in the entire area of Einsatzgruppe A had basic permission to make independent decisions, and they had full responsibility in individual cases. to pass judgment in individual cases?

A Yes, absolutely. They we re all members of the security service of the security police and SD. They had good experience and good qualifications. ecker's opinion in general was that the indigenous population was to be induced to start measures against the Jews. Did you on your march through Lithuania and Latvia have anything to do with one of these operations?

Q Did any of your subordinates have anything to do with this?

A No. I am convinced that this was not the case, otherwise, I would have found out about it in the course of time.

Q Did Stahlecker give you any special order in reference to Estonia?

A Yes. Not in the form of a compulsive order, that is to say, but he gave me directives which were to be followed, if possible.

Q Did you carry out this directive?

Q Why not? ethical reasons.

Q Did you tell Stahlecker that you did not approve of such measures?

A Yes. In a careful but unmistakable manner I expressed to him that I did not consider this correct. BY PRE PRESIDENT:

Q When was that, please? on the 4th of July.

Q And where was it?

Q And just what did you tell him?

A I cannot remember the wording of it. It is a long time ago, but I told him in a cautious manner that I did not consider it correct.

Q Well, now, don't be so cautious with us. Just tell us what you said. How, you told him in a cautious way that it was not correct but try to construct, if you can, just how you told it to him and use as well as you can remember the phraseology.

Q Well, we don't ask you to remember verbatim, of course, but you do remember that you were very cautious. Well, now, how did you go about this caution - tell us as well as you can remember what you said to Stahlecker on July 4 in Riga. about the following: That through such events public order and public morale would be affected in such a manner....

Q Well, now, just a minute, you say "through such events", what "events"? which I was asked, namely, pogroms of the indigenous population against Jews.

that the pogroms were in order?

AAll right, now, what else?

AAn I to continue with the reasons which I gave him?

A The main thought was as follows: That I thought that such events would affect the public order and morale and that there was grave danger that if such things happened at all and are permitted to happen, it would be very difficult in other respects, too, to keep up public order. Another thought which I also implied cautiously was that the event, especially for the Jews, was inhuman. but I certainly did not use the literal expression "inhuman" when I was specking to Stahlecker because it would not have had any meaning to him at that time since Stahlecker was completely under the influence of the Fuehrer Order. the word? As far as I remember, I could have said it about as follows: If the Fuehrer order would have to be carried out, then this was certainly not the best way of carrying it out - approximately in this manner. merely indicated that a more efficient manner might be found to carry out the fuehrer order.

A No, in no manner. On Friday I have already said that I had the most basic and most severe misgivings about that. to Stahlecker that it was inhumane to do this, that it was against humanity, but you did not use that phrase. You did not couch the ex expression in that rank - now, I would like to know just exactly how you told him that this was an act of inhumanity and not use the word.

if this severe order has to her carried out, this was not the correct way of doing it, this meaning by way of pogroms as Stahlecker considered it correct. At least in the tone in which I said it, it was clear and evident that I wanted to express what I have just meant by the expression that I considered this type of carrying the order out as especially inhumane. conveyed to Stahlecker the idea that this was inhumane. All you have told us is that you said to him that if the Fuehrer Order had to be carried out, this was not the way to do it. Nov, is that what you told him?

A Yes, this is the sense. I explained it in about these words, but I do not remember the exact words I used. remark that Stahlecker was able to understand that you regarded that business as inhumane. had to understand the sense of my words without any question. when you spoke so guardedly and so cautiously that even today we are unable to gather from your remark that you were opposed to this on the grounds of inhumanity. that he rejected my objections on my part in very harsh language; and he reproached me with not being hard enough with these matters in the East; I was too soft, and did not have any understanding for the necessities of the time and the area. The conversation took about 15 minutes. Of course, I cannot remember any individual words he used, but the thoughts which he had were about the way I just expressed them.

Q A nd then what did he order you to do?

of the Jews in Estonia in such a way that in Estonia pogroms of the population against the Jews were to be induced. He did not give it to me in the form of an absolutely binding order, out in that form, that this was his wish, and this was a directive which he was giving, and which was, if at all possible, to be carried out, but he left the possibility open to me to tell him later on that for some reasons it was not possible. executed?

A Yes, Your Honor, we spoke about this expressly. I knew the Fuehrer Order from Pretsch, and before I left for Estonia he again expressly repeated it to me as having to be carried out.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Dr. von Stein, you may proceed. BY DR. VON STEIN: synagogues in Estonia still intact?

Q What orders did Stahlecker give to you before you left Riga?

A He gave me two orders particularly. the first order was to have as good a relationship as possible with the army and, secondly, as I have just said, according to the Fuehrer Order to have all Estonian Jews eliminated. BY THE PRESIDENT: suggested to him that there might be a better way to carry out the order. Did you indicate to him what that better way might be?

A Your Honor, I must have expressed myself mistakenly. I did not suggest to him that there was a better way, I merely said that if this Fuehrer Order had to be carried out at all, this way, namely, the pogroms, was certainly not the correct way. Perhaps the translation brought it out differently.

Q No, no, I protect the interpreter in this. That is exactly what came over to us, that this was not the correct way to do it.

Nov, what I am asking, and the question was suggested by my colleague, Judge Dixon, if you indicated to him that this was not the correct way, did you not tell him then what was the correct way; didn't Stahlecker ask you then what was your suggestion as to the correct way?

Q The matter stood there?

A Yes. Stahlecker did not take back his directives. BY DR. VON STEIN: you. Did you carry out those two orders? carried this out correctly; the order about the Jews, I did not.

Q Why not? when it was given in Pretsch that I had decided to do everything in order to avoid the execution of the order for my part and for my commando's part.

Q Why did he just give you those two orders? these two points most important; the special order about the Jews in Estonia, he gave me because he knew that there was only a relatively small number of Jews in Estonia and because he believed and wished here to be able to report for a part of his area very quickly that this area was free of Jews. By this he wanted to show Berlin that he was especially ambitious about carrying out this order. Q Will you please comment on two situation reports which are contained in two reports of the events, namely, about the situation report which is contained in Volume III A, Document No. 4536. There is no exhibit number available as yet for this exhibit.

This is the report of the 1st of July 1941. On page 50 of the German text - page 35 in the English.

A This report is wrong. On the 28th of June I was not in Mitau, as is stated in this situation report, but on that day I was already before Riga, already on the day before, namely, since the 27th of June. Since the 27th of June I was, as I already stated on Friday, in a western suburb of Riga with an advance unit of the army under the command of Colonel Lasch. On the way to Riga I did not even come through the town of Mitau because on the 27th of June the commanding general of an army corps told me that Mitau was still in the hands of the enemy, that one, therefore, could not pass through Mitau at all, therefore, I took a different route, namely, by way of the city of Bausk. This town is southeast of Mitau. I was in Mitau for the first time end of October 1941 when I went from Riga to Tilsit on a subiness trip. I do not know whether on the 28th of June even a single man of my commando was in Mitau. The fact that parts of my commando were in Libau at that time is correct. From there they were to move on to Riga together with the 219th Infantry Division. The largest part of my commando was at that time from the 28th of June to the 30th of June in the town of Memel. That is the last headquarters on Reich territory. It doesn't say anything about this in this operation report, it says on one part was in Schaulen, whether this is correct, I do not know. The various parts of this situation report cannot possibly come from me because the advance unit Lasch with which I was from the 27th to the 30th of June, right before Riga, had been cut off from its rear communications.

Einsatzgruppe, or with my commandos. On top of the page in this operational report it says that the leader of the Einsatzgruppe, Brigadier General Stahlecker, was on his way to Riga on 30 June. This report is Correct. II-A, Exhibit No. 37, Document NO-2935. A The first page of this report reads as follows: "Group Leader, together with Einsatzcommandos I-A and II, has moved into Riga," End of quote. This sentence is correct. of page 2, and there it reads that,"The subcommandos of the Commando I-A were to move to the City of Wenden, to Derpat, and possibly for Psckew, and it also says here, page 1 of the English, Your Honor, and it also says that another part of Einsatzcommando I-A is intended for Reval, and is already on the move." End of quote. This is correct. This subcommando destined for Reval left Riga on 4 July in order, as I have already said, to join up with the advanced unit of General von Zelle, and to reach Reval by way of Velini. I commanded this subcommando myself. the area of the 18th Army?

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, please. Just which document and which page are you now commenting on?

DR. VONSTEIN: Up to this time it was in Vol. II-A, Exhibit No. 37, Document NO-2935, page 41 of the English text.

THE PRESIDENT: You were referring then, I take it, to what is marked as page 5 of the original?

MR. GLANCY: I believe that he is referring to page 5 of the original found on page 41 of the Document Book, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Now on page 4 of the original there is a state ment that Einsatzcommando I-A entered Riga.

Is that correct?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I stated that the first sentence of this report is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Now how about the sentence in the second paragraph: "All synagogues have been destroyed." Is that correct?

THE WITNESS: I didn't know anything about this at the time. I didn't hear this until later. During a conversation which I had with Stahlecker on 4 July, which was described in detail before, Stahlecker merely told me that he had made attempts to induce the Latvian Auxiliary Police to carry out such measures. I personally never had any dealings with the Latvian Police or the Latvian Auxiliary Police, and had no contact with them, and I had nothing to do with these measures.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, you were in Riga, Didn't it come to your attention that the synagogues had been destroyed?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, at the time when the synagogues were destroyed I had already left Riga. On 4 July, as I stated, I left Riga, Whether this took place on the 4th or 5th or later on, I don't know, Stahlecker told me later, about the 20th of July, that he personally had induced Latvian Police forces under Latvian officers to carry out these measures. Whether the Einsatzcommando II had any knowledge of this, which also was in Riga from 1 July on, and which remained in Riga constantly, and which was competent constantly for police missions in Riga, I don't know.

THE PRESIDENT: Now you were in Riga on July 4th?

THE WITNESS: On the morning of 4 July I left the town of Riga.

THE PRESIDENT: You left Riga on the morning of July 4th?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Didn't you tell us you had a conversation with Stahlecker on July 4th, in Riga?

THE WITNESS: Yes. In the early morning of 4 July, before I left Riga, I reported to Stahlecker before leaving, in order to join with the advance unit Zelle, and on the occasion of this conversation the conference between Stahlecker and myself took place.

THE PRESIDENT: What time in the morning did you speak to Stahlecker?

THE WITNESS: Between eight and nine. It was in the hotel, in his hotel room.

THE PRESIDENT: Then after the conversation you immediately left?

THE WITNESS: After an hour, yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Then you don't know anything about the hundred Jews who were shot on that day by a commando of the Security Police and SD?

THE WITNESS: I merely knew that they were shot by a Commando of Einsatzcommando II on order of Stahlecker. Stahlecker also told me about this on that morning.

THE PRESIDENT: He told you about this on the morning of July 4th that he had ordered the shooting of one-hundred Jews?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: What time did the execution take place?

THE WITNESS: I don't know.

THE PRESIDENT: What other commando was In Riga on that date?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, the first sentence of this document shows that Einsatzcommando II also was in Riga during the same time. Stahlecker and my commando and this commando moved into Riga simultaneously on 1 July. My commando was to move on as quickly as possible, and Commando II was to remain in Riga, and always remained in Riga, and later became the agency of the Security Police and SD for Latvia.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Dr. von Stein. DR. VON STEIN: destruction of the synagogues, I would like to ask you the following questions: Your commando was destined for Estonia, is that right? Estonia were still intact in 1943 with a "yes"? were still intact when I left Estonia.

the destruction of the synagogues in Riga? through the area of the 18th Army about the conduct of the Soviets? received reports from the population about the measures which had been taken there in the preceding year by the Soviets and, under their leadership, by the indigenous Communists, There were numerous executions and deportations. I don't think I have to go into details here, because sofar as this concerns Estonia, the witness Dr Mae has already reported on this. I would only like to say that all this which we heard about this from all classes of the population was to a large extent a confirmation for us of what we had been told before the march started. your attitude? change because of these experiences or findings, but these experiences did influence.- -

THE PRESIDENT: Give us just in a word what you mean by "these experiences."? measures which had been taken in the years of 1940 and 1941 by the Soviets and, together with them, by the indigenous Communists, in reference to the killings and deportations of many inhabitants, and the measures connected with this. I said to the preceding question that through this my human attitude did not change, but when judging the legal situation I was influenced. It was clear from the beginning, as I already said when explaining my thoughts in Pretsch, that any illegality was out of the question for a Fuehrer Order, but when we saw in this Baltic area to what a large extent the forces then in power there had deviated in the preceding years from the basic principles of law, we were doubtlessly influenced in the sense that any possible misgivings about the legality which one still might have had were removed by this.

We had to consider that in an area in which law and morality were disregarded to such a large extent, extraordinary measures might be justified, even these measures which were beyond our imagination up to this moment.

Q what situation did you find when you got to Estonia? advance met stubborn resistance. This resistance was met in the whole area of Central Estonia. On the German side voluntary formations of the Estonian Home Guard participated in these fights, on the side of the Red Army destruction battalions participated primarily. The expression "fight" is actually the wrong word here, for it was the nature of these destruction battalions never to be committed in battle, but after the withdrawal of the Red Army from a certain area, they were to be left behind, and they were to destroy everything behind the German lines, which was still there and which would be important for the German troops. In a sense, those destruction battalions were thus to operate behind the lines of the German Army, and they were to destroy the bridges, public installations of every kind, buildings to a large extent, and etc.

Estonia is a country which has many forests and many swamps. Through all these pecularities of the situation, a condition arose which can only be designated as a Civil War. The larger part of the Estonian people was anti-Communist, only a small part was Communist.

THE PRESIDENT: Were these Destruction Battalions organized? You use the word "Battalions" which suggests organization. I merely went a confirmation of that?

THE WITNESS: Yes, the name was "Destruction Battalions". These were units of the Red Army which were not committed in combat, but which were committed behind the German lines.

THE PRESIDENT: But they formed part of the Red Army?

THE FITNESS: They were no regular part of the Red Army, but they were in some form subordinate to the commanding general or the divisional commander.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

THE FITNESS: In order to understand the intervention of the Estonian Home Guard in these fights on the German side, I must explain in a few words what this Estonian Home Guard was. A short time after the foundation of the Estonian Republic was formed, a Communist uprising took place in 1924. Since the Sovietization of Estonia would have meant less of sovereignty for Estonia, that is, absorption into the Soviet State, this was not only an ideological and political question, but the Nationalist Estonian circles considered this as a question of existence for the State Itself. Therefore, a militia was set up of volunteer citizens and farmers in the whole country, who had their arms with them constantly. Only part of the officer corps was concerned full-time with this militia, and this militia, the so-called Home Guard, was the armed organization of all ablebodied men of the country. This organization existed up to 1940, until the country was annexed by the Soviet Union. During the fights, before the German Army moved in, units of the Home Guards were reformed spontaneously and voluntarily by the men who had fled into the forests and swamps before, and these units now intervened partly independently, and partly on the German side of these fights.

The Estonian Home Guard, during the entire time of the German occupation, from 1941 to '44, continued to exist as an armed national militia, and it was the actual bearer of the security of the country from 1941 to '44. This was an advantage to the German Army leadership, because thus hardly any German troops had to be in Estonia, because all the functions which had to be assumed by the German troops could thus be handled by the Estonian Home Guard. This solution had the great advantage for the Estonians, that they did not have to surrender their arms, as it had to be enforced with strict directives in the rest of the Eastern area; but (every home guard member) that is, every farmer and citizen, was able to keep his arms, and that was so-to-speak a question of his national honor for him. BY DR VON STEIN: and the Estonian Communists?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr Von Stein, this might be an appropriate moment to have our recess, since you are going to open up another field of discussion. The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is in recess for fifteen minutes.

(recess)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. ASCHENAUER (Counsel for Ohlendorf) Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Ohlendorf he excused from this afternoon's session, because the prosecution wants to interrogate Ohlendorf for Case 6 in my presence.

THE PRESIDENT: In accordance with the statement made by Dr. Aschenauer, attorney for the defendant Ohlendorf, the defendant Ohlendorf will he excused from attendance in Court this afternoon. Dr. Aschenauer, will it take all afternoon?

DR. ASCHENAUER: I don't know yet, your Honor,

THE PRESIDENT: Well, for as long as will be required for the interrogations the defendant Ohlendorf will be excused from attendance in Court. this afternoon. Dr. Aschenauer, will it take all afternoon?

DR. ASCHENAUER: I don't know yet, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, for as long as will be required for the interrogations the defendant Ohlendorf will be excused from attendance in Court.

DR ASCHENAUER: Thank you, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You are very welcome.

DR. KOESSLER (Counsel for Ott): Koessler for Ott and also as deputy for Dr. Stubinger for defendant Braune. In order to prepare the defense I ask that the defendants Ott and Braune be excused this afternoon from attending sessions.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendants Ott and Braune will be excused from attendance in Court afternoon.

DR. KOESSLER: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: You are welcome. You may proceed.

Q (By Dr. Von Stein) Witness, I repeat the question, what did you hear in Estonia about the activity of the Soviets. and the Estonian Communists? Estonian people had anti-Communist views and were not in agreement with the annexation of Estonia by the Soviet Union.

This annexation was rather considered as illegal and all measures which were taken in the time of the annexation of the Bolsheviste in 1940 to '41 and had occurred then were also considered as a violation of the Estonian law and as incorrect and inhumane towards the Estonian population. areas, had Communist views, but a great number, in fact the majority of the population, were national Estonians and anti-Communists. This was not equivalent to being pro-German tendency only resulted in the summer of 1941 insofar as the Estonians could not expect help against the Russians from England, but could only expect it from Germany at that time.

innumerable Estonians who reported to us what they and their relatives and their friends had suffered in the preceding months through the measures during the time under the Soviets. This was particularly characterized by the fact that the Estonians held the opinion that the great number of persons who had been deported most probably would sooner or later meet certain death. I cannot judge in how far this opinion was correct. I can only say that at the time it was the opinion of the Estonians that they would most probably never again see their relatives and friends who had been deported in the previous months and because of this circumstance in particular, the feelings and opinions of the Estonians were particularly articulate. In detail I believe that the things which happened in this time, 1940 - 1941, through the Soviets and through the Estonian Communists in Estonia, I think I can limit myself to merely indicating them, because the witness who has been heard here in part last Friday, Dr. Mae, has testified about the things in his official position since he is better informed because of his position than I am and since, I believe, that in as far as these things have not been cleared up sufficiently, he will be permitted to complete his statement.

Q What did you hear about the Jews in Estonia? of the Soviet annexation, had been very active for the Bolshevists.

Q I refer to Document L-180. This is an extensive report by Stahlecker. I shall come back to this document in detail, hut just now I would like to ask you to look at pages 122 to 124 of the photostatic copy, and for identification, to state your views on the most important points.

THE PRESIDENT: Which document is this, Dr. von Stein?

DR. VON STEIN: The document is in Volume II-A, Exhibit 34, probably also on page 1 of the German text - of the English text.

Your Honor, this document is only contained as an excerpt. The pages to which the witness will now refer are only in the photostatic copy. I don't know whether they are already contained in the English text.

A (Continuing) I believe the most important sentences in this report are the following: The report contains three typewritten pages concerning the Jews in Estonia. The most important sentences are the following: "Estonia, until the middle of the last century, belonged to a blocked-off zone of the Russian state where it was prohibited -"

THE INTERPRETER: I am having the sentence repeated.

A (Continuing) "Until the middle of the previous century Estonia belonged to a blocked zone of the Russian State where it was prohibited for Jews to move into this territory. For that reason there are very few Jews in Estonia. In the free state of Estonia, of a total population of 1.2 million inhabitants, about 4,500 Jews were counted". I pass over several sentences. Another sentence: "Of the minorities in Estonia, the Germans and the Jews were the only ones who had the right of cultural autonomy according to an Estonian law of the year 1942". I now leave out a few sentences again and continue: "The Jews in Estonia, contrary to the loyalty pretended to the Estonians, changed their attitude when the Bolshevists took over power and put themselves at their disposal. Some of the young Jews were under Communist influence and some of them were organized. The most important figure in the Bolshevist coup d'etat is the Jew Kutkin from Reval, the son of the representative of the Jews in the Estonian State Council. He was NKWD agent, and together with the Jew Freigin , who became prominent in the coup d'etat, he entered into the NKWD on a completely full time basis. Exactly as in the other Baltic States, Jewish private property was also nationalized. The Jews themselves, however, were left as directors of their former enterprises. A great number of Estonian business enterprises were given Jewish directors upon nationalization.

Immediately after the coup d'etat a great number of Jews were sent to Reval and the other Estonian cities as a result of the Bolshevization. These escaped from the German troops without exception. In Estonia the NKWD was the stronghold of the Jews, Haring the Bolshevist regime. From it they exercized their influence, not always visible, out decisively, in all spheres of life. A great number of indigenous Jews, particularly in Reval, joined the NKWD. She economic commissars in Estonia were all Jews. Here Jews were given specialized positions without training. For example, a, Jewish shoemaker became director of a. glove factory. Jews were given positions in the press of Estonia by the Bolshevists. The greatest number of-Cultural institutes passed into the hands of Jews who immediately introduced tne kind of cultural life which existed in the Soviet Union." End of quote. office by the Estonians at the time? reported to us at the time, but I am convinced that today hardly any Estonian will confess to having made such a report, commando?

A. According to the necessities as they arose, three, four or five subkommandos were established. According to military circumstance it had to be changed. One subkommando was in Derpat and had to deal with South Estonia from there. Another one was in Pernau. That is a harbor town in the southwest of Estonia. A third subkommando had remained with the Thirty-Eighth Army Corps of the Army and was with them in the east of the Peipus Lake, about a hundred kilometers to the south of the City of Narva, and there they had met with strong enemy resistance which could not be overcome for many weeks. Smaller subkommandos, when necessary, were formed. A larger subkommando, of which I was in charge, at the beginning of August was assigned to the fighting territory in the northeast of Estonia, All these subkommandos, but in particular the latter one under my charge, were active to assist the G-2 of the Army. Only to a very small extent did they carry out security Police measures. Almost through the entire time they were occupied by conforming with the wishes of the G-2 sections of the Army Corps of the divisions, and the I-A's of the advance kommandos. that this G-2 service in the German Army is about the same as, as far as I know, the Department G-2 in the American Army, only there is a great difference in the following: In the German Army these tasks of enemy reconnaisance were given less consideration than they were given in the American Army. If I am not very much mistaken in the American Army there often are G-2 officers - that is, the American Army has the G-2 service also in the regiments, while in the German Army this G-2 service is only extended to the divisions. The result of this is that in the German Army the regiment does not have a G-2 section and an advance kommando does not have a G-2 section either. The advance department, meant units COURT II CASE IX of the Army which had been taken out of a division, and the G-2 of the division remained with the division staff and did not move up with the advance unit.

The result was that, as I have often witnessed myself, an advance unit who got stuck somewhere in the forests of Estonia, not only did not have a G-2 officer, but did not have one single man who could speak Estonian, so that a commander of an advance unit once told me, he was stuck. Now since the forests in the territory were full of enemies and he did not have one man who could speak one word of Estonian or Russian in his advance unit. The result of these total conditions was that those parts of my kommando which, according to the orders of the Commander-in-Chief and of the Einsatzgruppe Chief were in the combat territory, were constantly asked by the Regiments to help with their tasks.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, I, of course, do not know the make-up of the German Army organizations, but it is rather difficult to grasp that there would not be, below the division organization in the regiments and even in the battalions, something which corresponds to the G-2. Certainly in the German Army organization there must be something below the division to handle enemy intelligence. A regiment may be quite far removed from division headquarter and must be aware of enemy intelligence. Do I understand from you that there is nothing in the regiment which corresponds to G-2?

THE WITNESS: Yes, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well,

THE WITNESS: The case which I just explained, that a commander of an advance unit which had the strength of a strong regiment, did not have an officer with them who was able to make enemy reconnaissance and did not have any men with him who spoke Estonian, this happened, as I can COURT II CASE IX say decisively in the time between the 10th and 15th of June in Meriamar.

That is a village about one hundred and fifty kilometers to the south of Reval, and the commander of this advanced unit was a Colonel of the Peoneers, with the name of Ullesberger. Owing to these conditions it came about that each G-2 of a division and each regiment commander employed those people of my subkommandos who appeared there immediately for their G-2 jobs. These members of my kommando who were qualified for such tasks were not very numerous, I myself only had four interpreters and only very few officials who were able to carry out such interrogations; but these few people, nearly all of them, had been assigned to help with these military G-2 duties and it corresponded completely with the orders which I had received from my Einsatzgruppen chief and from the high kommando of the Army: that all such wishes by the front troops were to be conformed with and any other task be put aside.

Q. During what period were you absent from the headquarters of your kommando in July and August?

A. In July and August there was no kommando leader in my Kommando. I was always traveling and had no staff, and wherever I was present at subkommandos I inquired about the news. I made decisions which had to be made concerning the general tasks, I called on the commanding generals and division commanders and the regimental commanders and took along any written reports which were there.

Q When did you set up a fixed commando leadership office?

A That happened after Reval had been captured. On the 28th of August, after that time, everything was centralized in Reval. in Estonia. You already testified that on entering Estonia, state of civil war existed. Please describe the situation in the territory On the German side, the forces of the Estonian homeguard, who fought together with the Germans, were four to five times as strong as the forces of the German army itself. Concerning the arms, the Russians were very much superior. The situation became more serious owing to the territory which contained forests and swamps, and owing to the fact that in the city of Dorpat itself, for several weeks fighting had been going on in the streets, and owing to the feet that the communists had formed terror groups who were in that part of Estonia which the Russians had already left, and they were to carry out terroristic actions and operations there. They had dynamite; they had poison in order to poison wells, and so forth. The situation became more serious because as I already said wherever the Russians had retreated the Russians had left behind them so-called destruction battalions who on their part had been given the order to destroy everything which might be of any military value to the German forces. Things were destroyed here which were not of immediate military value and amongst those there were many things which were important for the survival of the population and which were absolutely necessary for their survival. had any, they were not regular uniforms. They had been organized centrally by the "highest partisan movement" in Moscow. I cannot say whether the designation "highest partisan leadership" is the proper designation for this, but in general in military usage, it was called thus. The tasks for these destruction battalions were directed by this highest partisan movement.

As for the Russian partisan movement, they were given instructions from Moscow mostly by radio or from headquarters near Moscow. part of the Russians only existed in so far as they had to determine from what time onwards such a destruction unit was to be left behind and where they were to remain. All in all, owing to these circumstances, which I have tried to outline here and about which the witness, Dr. Mae, has already talked about, two things occurred. the swamps, in the forests and in the streets. And an extraordinary... BY THE PRESIDENT: Understandably. You say "for weeks," now when was this? ended about the 10th or the 15th of August. Where?

Q City of where?

A In the city of Dorpat: D-O-R-P-A-T, which is marked on the map here as Tartu. Tartu is the Estonian name; Dorpat is the German name. Apart from that, street fightings took place in the city of Pelsamau and in other small localities in central Estonia. In the city of Dorpat itself, the main direction of the fighting for about two to three weeks was a river which flows right through the city.

Q Was there any street fighting in Pleskau? there. I only was there one day later for a few hours. I did not hear anything about street fightings there, but I cannot say that with certainty

Q Was there any visible popular excitement when you arrived there?

A May I ask, in which city?

not arrive there with a subcommando but only with an interpreter and one man in my car, and not for the purpose of taking over an assignment there but only to ascertain whether the 18th Army was competent there or the fourth Armored Unit, who were on their right flank.

Q When did you arrive there? turbulence in. the city or not, couldn't you? did not notice any unrest there, which I would have noticed, but I only traveled through two streets and left the city of Pleskau a few hours later after having ascertained that the 18th Army was not competent there. of unrest, but you did not know of it because you only passed through two streets?

A It depends, Your Honor, on what you understand by the word "unrest": unrest, in the form of great numbers of people collecting in order to demonstrate against something---many dozens or many hundreds of people who want to demonstrate. In these two streets, of course, I would have noticed it, and this was not the case. I don't know whether you mean that by the word "unrest."

Q Well, did you learn of demonstrations elsewhere in the city? city at the time and did not have that intention because it wasn't my task.

Q Well, you had all of Estonia, didn't you? May I point it out on the map to show where the city is?

(Witness points out the city of Pleskau on the map)

Q About how far from the lake?

A From the lake? kilometers.

PRESIDENT: I see.

Q How long did you remain in this city?

Q Did your commando remain any longer than that?

A On that day, a commando did not move in there. As I said, I only arrived with my driver and with my interpreter and with another man.

Q And you say your commando didn't remain there at all---didn't even come into the town? move on immediately along the eastern bank of the Peipus lake towards Narva. which is in Document Book II-A? It begins on the English page 110. It's the Situation Report, No. 165. Now that report very clearly states that on July 10, 1941, the Sonderkommando 1 a established an office in Pleskau.

Q Dr. von Stein, will you please help him to locate that.

DR. von STEIN: Your Honor, may I ask again what number was the document?

THE PRESIDENT: The Document No. is NO-3401.

DR. von STEIN: That is, in the German text, on Page 121.

THE WITNESS: Yes, I have the situation report here: Situation Report No. 165.

DR. von STEIN: Situation Report No. 165, yes.

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Now under Paragraph 2, which begins, "Reports of Einsatzgruppe and Einsatz commandos, Page 6 of original."

A. Yes.

Q. Now, do you see that first paragraph: "Reports on the situation in Pleskau?"

A. This paragraph, Your Honor, is not contained in the excerpt which is here, - but I have had the opportunity to read it in the photostatic copy and I know that there a long situation report by Department III dealt with Pleskau, and that it says there at the beginning that, "In Pleskau, since 10th July, an office of the Commando had existed." This sentence is incorrect---just as incorrect as many other sentences in these documents which can be misunderstood. When this report was made in February or January 1942, no official was there at all who had ever been there in July. Therefore, he could not know this from his own knowledge. Perhaps he heard about it some time or other that on 12th July a commando passed through towards Narva or that I personally was there on the 10th July, and he came to a wrong conclusion from this.

Q. Well, don't you assume that these reports are made up from records? A man wouldn't guess and give a date like July 10th specifically, would he?

A. Your Honor, these situation reports about January of 1942 certainly were never based on records from July or August. As to the fact about my presence there for a few hours, and so forth, no record or anything like that was made. The expert who wrote this can only know this from hearsay. May I point out in two other documents where it shows--

Q. Just a moment, just a moment, now. You kept the headquarters informed as to where you were, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, and they would keep some record of what you were doing, Wouldn't they?

A. It is probable that the reports which I made were kept there for some time.

Q. Yes, well then why do you assume that someone would have to guess to determine where you were on July 10th?

A. Your Honor, I presume that this situation report---Pleskau, which contains about three pages, and which I have read carefully, was made by a minor official of this detail in Pleskau, who at the time in July, had not been there at all. This report---Pleaskau, certainly was not made by the Einsatzgruppe in this form. This sentence was not entered in the Einsatzgruppe report but in the sub-commando report and it is an error. May I say that in the Situation Report, No. 24, the Einsatzgruppe---in particular, Einsatzgruppe A, made a report which is contained here that the city of Pskow---that is the Russian for Pleskau---belonged to the territory of Einsatzgruppe 1 B. If you will permit it, Your Honor, I will read the sentence out of the copy.

Q. Just a moment. I want to find out whether this report which says that on July 10th, sonderkommando 1 a established an office in Pleskau is correct or not.

A. This sentence in this report is not correct.

Q. Yes now, do you offer as an explanation for that incorrect statement that the compiler of this report merely guesses at it?

A. I cannot state, which reasons caused him......

Q. Yes. Do you exclude the possibility that he made it up from some kind of a record which he found in the Einsatzgruppen-headquarters or elsewhere? Do you exclude that possibility?

A. Yes, Your Honor, That possibility I must exclude definitely because this report was compiled---I can see from the contents--by an expert of Department III in Pleskau and not by a person who was in the headquarters of the Einsatzgruppe, Q. Well, if it was made by someone in Pleskau, that is all the more reason why it might be accurate, isn't it?

A. No, Your Honor. The fact that I was in Pleskau on 10th July and loft again, and that only many weeks later, namely about the middle of September or the end of September, a detail of my commando was set up in Pleskau, about this intermediate time no documents existed at all, other than this report-----

Q. Do you exclude the possibility that someone noted that you had arrived in Pleskau, that someone wrote it down? Do you exclude that possibility?

A. Yes, I can exclude that possibility.

Q. You exclude the possibility that you, coming through the town, with your obvious authority, made no impression on anyone; that you came in and just drifted away like the mist of the morning without anyone seeing you or paying any attention to you?

A. Yes, Your Honor, First of all, at the time I held the rank of a major. According to conditions at the time, I was not an important personality.

Q. Well, I think every major in the army would disagree with you that a major is not an important officer.

A. Your Honor, in this case it's a relative question. In Pleskau there were so many generals at the time that a major was not considered to be anything, and there were innumerable majors and colonels and lieutenants colonels, who were all more representative than I was because I arrived in an open car and had been travelling on the open highway at night and was so dirty and unshaven that I made a completely unrepresentative impression.

Q. Well, just how long did you remain in this town now?

A. Four to five hours.

Q. Four to five hours. And where did you go in that time?

A. First of all, I called on the local commander.

Q. Yes. Now, all right, you visited the local commander. Now don't you suppose that he made some record of the fact that you were there?

A. Certainly not. He had only just arrived and nothing was written down in that office. It was not written that I visited him. But it is impossible, Your Honor, that in February some expert could go to the local commander to find out whether I was there.

Q. Don't let us talk about February. I am talking about the day you were there. You went to the local commander and you reported there. Then where did you go?

A. Yes. Then I visited the staff of the armored unit 4, which was about 25 kilometers to the south of Pleskau, and the local commander had told me about this, in order to find out whether Pleskau actually belonged to the territory of the armored group 4 and not to the territory of the 18th Army.

Q. And then where did you go from there?

A. From there, I went down to the river in order to clean myself and to have a bath and to shave. There I stayed about minutes.

Q. And then where did you go?

A. From there, I went to the NKWD prison. A local inhabitant had pointed this out to mo. I ascertained there that in the NKWD prison about 25 or 30 prisoners were in the cells of this prison.

Q. And then where did you go?

A. From there, I went to the local commander again in order to tell him that I was leaving the city again because I was not competent for Pleskau.-----

Q. All right. And then where did you go?

A. From there, I crossed the river again---the Velifaya--which flows to the east of Pleskau and there I looked for the subcommando which I had assigned to the 38th corps from Riga in order to find out what the sub-commando had been doing and what his further intentions were.

Q. And then from there where did you go?

A. From there I returned to the advance unit of General von Zelle, south of Velim, which I had left two days previously----

Q. Now you want us to believe that during all these official visits that you travelled like a phantom: no one saw you, no one made any reference to it, no one made any record of it? That is your explanation of this incorrect report?

A. Your Honor, nobody there could have recognized me because there was nobody in Pleskau who knew me. But perhaps I can explain this report by the fact that I presume that it was set up in the following manner: this expert who wrote it, either during my stay in Pleskau or while this expert was in Reval, I once told him briefly that I had been in Pleskau for a few hours on 10 July, and what I had found in the NKWD prison there. May I add that two or three other documents show that in the time from the middle of July, for at least six weeks, in Pleskau or in Russian Pskow, asit is written in the document, Einsatzcommando Ib was there, and that Einsatzcommando Ib was competent there for six weeks. After Einsatzcommando Ib had left Pleskau Stahlecker gave me the order in September to set up a command in Pleskau. This detail existed after about the 15th or 20th of September. The one document which reveals this is this Situation Report, No 24, where Stahlecker reports to Berlin that as the most important aims, this was given:

"Report of 16th July. Einsatzcommando Ib--I beg your parodn--Einsatzcommando Ia, Estonia, with the cities Pernau, Reval Dorpat, Narva, the commandos will remain in this territory there until they receive further orders. Secondly, Einsatzcommando Ib, the territory to the South of Petersburg, the cities Pskow--that is Pleskau--Ostrow, Opotschka."

tion Report No. 34 of 26 July 19141, Document No. 2954, Document Volume III-B, that Pleskau was the main headquarters of Sondercommando I B; therefore the headquarters of the commando leader personally. It is quite impossible that such a long time, apart from Sondercommando Ib, that any one of the Sondercommando Ia could have been there.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until one-fortyfive.

( The Tribunal recessed until 1345 hours.)

(The Tribunal reconvened at 1330 hours, 12 November 1947.)

DR. HEIM: ( Attorney for the Defendant Blobel) before, in writing that is, because of its basic importance. On Friday of last week I asked for, I requested, that the film sound--track of the interrogation of Blobel of 16th June, in the morning and afternoon, should be reporduced before the Prosecution in this Court.

THE PRESIDENT: June 16th?

DR. HEIM: requested it on Friday last week The actual examination was on the 6th of June, that was before the beginning of the trial and before the Prosecution began, Your Honor, I would like to make the following comment.

THE PRESIDENT: I know just a moment Let's first make certain that we understand what you are referring to. This is the sound track of an interrogation.

DR. HEIM: Yes, Your Honor,

THE PRESIDENT: Between what persons?

DR. HEIM: Between the defendant Blobel and Herr Wartennurg as representative of the prosecution,

THE PRESIDENT: ALL right, now proceed.

DR. HEIM: Your honor my request for this motion is for the following reason; I questioned Mr. Wartenberg in this Court when he was on the witness stand, and I questioned him in detail about this interrogation. The defendant Blobel. also testified about this as a witness in his own case. The two statements contradicted each other, and I think in order to find out the absolute truth of the matter, these sound tracks should serve a very useful purpose if they are produced here in Court.

THE PRESIDENT: You say the two statements contradict each other Which two statements?

DR. HEIM: The testimony of Mr. Wartenberg when he was in the witness stand here and the testimony of the defendant Blobel when he was a witness in his own case, concerning his interrogation by MrWartenberg on the 6th of June, 1947.

THE PRESIDENT: You say the 6th of June? or, the 16th?

DR. HEIM: The 6th of June.

THE PRESIDENT: 6th of June, yes. How, on what particular subject did the contradiction occur?

DR. HEIM; Your Honor, the contradiction was that the defendant Blobel declared that he had drawn Mr. Wartenberger's attention to the fact that the affidavit in the form submitted to him was incorrect, and contained many omissions which would have to be filled in later. The defendant Blobel furthermore stated that he asked Mr. Wartenberg to let him make these corrections. Mr. Wartenberg had then told him that the affidait in the form submitted to him would only be changed in unimportant details. Furthermore the defendant Blobel says that at the time he had been promised that at a later date he would have the opportunity to make the necessary corrections. Mr. Wartenberg did not confirm this testimony of the defendant Blobel when he was in the witness stand here. It is his statement against another statement. In view of the question of the defendant Blobel's credibility, I think it is necessary that the sound track of this interrogation in question be reproduced so it can be established if the defendant Blobel told the truth when he was in the witness stand.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, did the defendant then sign the affidavit?

DR. HEIM: The defendant Blobel signed the affidavit, and it is in Document Book I of the Prosecution.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes; well, did he make the necessary corrections before he signed it?

DR. HEIM: No, he did not, Your Honor, As I have already said, the defendant Blobel stated here that he had been told at the time that the text had to remain unchanged and, therefore, he did not have the possibility to make the necessary changes.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Heim, as Judge Speight suggests, didn't Blobel make the corrections on the stand when he testified here?

DR. HEIM: Yes, that is correct, Your Honor, but it is here a matter of credibility, Can we believe the defendant Blobel? In the final analysis, the credibility of the defendant Blobel is at stake. I have no further witnesses at my disposal for my case, but only the testimony of the defendant Blobel in his own case, and it is of basic importance whether the Tribunal believes the testimony of the defendant Blobel when he was in the witness stand or not.

THE PRESIDENT: We will hear from the prosecution.

MR. GLANCY: If it please, Your Honors, the Prosecution is of the opinion, as it has been voiced before, that the interrogations, sound tracks and other devices for recording pre-trial interrogations are not an issue in this case; and, therefore, have no relevancy. The defendant Blobel had adequate opportunity, through counsel, to examine the interrogator, Mr. Wartenberg; every opportunity was afforded the defendant Blobel to make any corrections which he deemed fit, proper and right on the stand. excluded.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Heim, can you refresh our recollection on whether you questioned Mr. Wartenberg on this very thing?

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, I questioned Mr. Wartenberg intensively about this subject for almost an hour.

THE PRESIDENT: And what, in brief, did Mr. Wartenberg reply?

DR. HEIM: Mr. Wartenberg, Your Honor, did not essentially confirm the testimony of the defendant Blobel, but said the contrary.

THE PRESIDENT: Well now, as I understand it, Dr. Heim, you are submitting to the Tribunal that when the affidavit was prepared that Blobel pointed out that there were incorrect statements in the affidavit, is that right?

DR. HEIM: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: And that then Blobel signed the affidavit anyway, upon the assurance that corrections would be make later; is that what you tell us?

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, that is correct.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. Now, when you asked Mr. Wartenberg the question, did he affirm or deny that he had assured Blobel that the corrections would be made?

DR. HEIM: Your Honor, decisive seems the question which I put to Mr. Wartenberg whether at the time he had stated to the defendant Blobel that the text had to remain as it was, that is, no changes could be made in the actual text as such. This question was denied by Mr. Wartenberg. He said that the defendant Blobel had had the sibility to make any necessary changes of any kind, which became evident, he said, from the fact that the affidavit which had been made out on the morning of 6 June had been changed by Blobel and that on the afternoon of the same day the existing affidavit had been changed and the new version of it signed by the defendant Blobel.

MR. GLANCY: If it please Your Honor, the Prosecution merely wishes to repeat its objections on the same grounds which it stated. It would seem that it would serve no purpose to grant the request of the Defense. However, I would like an opportunity to consult with Dr. Hochwald and answer in writing if it is deemed necessary.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand, Dr. Heim, that you have already made this request in writing?

DR. HEIM: Yes, Your Honor, on Friday of last week.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, the Tribunal will examine itself the transcript in order to refresh its memory on what transpired when you, yourself, Dr. Heim, questioned Mr. Wartenberg.

After that scrutiny, then we will determine whether the sound track or any other record which was kept of the interrogation should or should not be produced. We will assure you that every opportunity will be allowed you, in any field at all, to present your case, and if you regard this as bing vital and important, with regard to the credibility of your client, then you will have that record produced. Of course, the prosecution will be given an opportunity to answer the request and oppose it if it sees fit, and then, naturally, we will have the issue before us and the decision Will be made on what we ascertain.

MR. GLANCE: Thank you, lour Honor.

DR. REIN: Thank you, Your Honor, I am only attempting to produce the absolute truth and make it known to the Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: And the Tribunal will assist you in this, because after all the credibility of any witness is very vital, and anything which can shed light upon the credibility of any one who takes the witness stand is always very helpful to the Tribunal.

DR. HEIM: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You're welcome. You may now proceed, Dr. von Stein.

DIRECT EXAMINATION - (Continued) BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, how were the security measures organized at that time, that is the time of July and August, in the territory Dorpat?

A. I have said that at that time, that is July and August, in the territory of central Estonia, the center of which is Dorpat, very confused circumstances prevailed. As for guaranteeing interior security in the city and district of Dorpat, the field command, of the Army was responsible for it; it was responsible for all questions of security, and the field commander was also the combat commander, whenever the commander of the advance unit was not there himself at the time.

The field commander was also the chief of the Estonian police prefecture and the Estonian home guard. In order to clarify this point may I say that an army field command was that command which was responsible for all army matters in a certain area under the command of an army headquarters. A field commander and also a town commander were immediately subordinate to the chief QM of the army's headquarters. In a territory like Estonia the most important towns had field commanders; in the less important towns there were town commanders. Each field commander and each local commander of the army were responsible and competent for this Estonian sector in the capitol in which they were stationed. In Dorpat there was a special case because there was continous fighting going on there, and the field command was fully responsible for all subjects.

Q. Were the conditions the same in the other parts of Estonia?

A. It wasn't quite as clear in other parts of Estonia, but in the larger parts of southern Estonia and central Estonia there were similar conditions, especially in the sector Pernau and in the sector Wald.

Q. As far the cases mentioned by you are concerned, the field and town commanders were responsible for all field security measures; how was the normal procedure at that time in combatting Communism?

A. The normal procedure was the following: Arrests were undertaken, first by the Estonian home guard; to a lesser extent also by the Estonian police, especially by the so-called constabulary of the Estonian police in the rural districts. Investigations were carried out only rarely by the Estonian home guards; in other cases by the Estonian police prefectures.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment. Now, you tell us arrests were made by the Estonian home guard and so on. Then you follow with a statement, investigations were made. Do we understand you arrested first and then made investigations later?

A. In most cases it was, Your Honor, that most people who were known to have cooperated with the communists, or had sympathized with the communists during the year of annexation were arrested first by the home guard on their own initiative, and only after that the homeguard and Estonian police started investigations.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

A. This does not exclude that in individual cases, of course, first on the part of the Estonian police offices investigations were carried out and then the subject was arrested. The judgments and proposals for sentences in those cases were prepared and completed in the Estonian police offices where they were submitted in writing, giving the motives --and especially --making suggestions for the sentences. The final confirmation of the decisions was given of the German sub-kommando leaders. In the months of July and august and Sept ember the general tendency , however, on the part of my commando and on the part of my sub-kommando leaders was that only temporary measures had to be taken and executions had to be limited to the most necessary and the most unambiguous cases.

BY Dr. VON STEIN:

Q. If now you arrived at a new locality with your sonderkommando, or even by yourself, what did you do?

A. The answer to that question refers first to the time, approximately from the 28th of June or July (?) until the 17th of August, that is 1941. In those cases when I arrived in a town. I first tried to establish what kind of Estonian agencies existed there, because Estonian agencies were not set up by the Germans, but in most cases Estonian home guard units and Estonian agencies had already formed when the Germans, be it of the army or the security police, arrived there. As a result, it would first have to be established what Estonian agencies existed at all; that is mayors, counts office and other administrative offices. home guard units, police offices, Then I discussed matters with the Estonian police, and I tried to make it quite clear to them that first of all written material had to be secured and safeguarded; material, that is, from the administration and government offices of Soviet party organizations and state organizations. This material then had to be Sent to the Estonian police prefecture in the County seat; in each of the 12 country scats there was one Estonian police prefecture.

A (continued) I also emphasized that Communists should, if Necessary, be arrested but certainly not executed. It was necessary to emphasize this because the attitude of the population was so embittered that in many cases the Eastonian Home Guard was inclined to carry out immediate measures. I tried to prevent that as far as I could by talking to the Estonian Administrative Offices that they should use their influence on the Estonian Home Guard with the effect that no immediate executions would be carried out - only arrests. to you?

A No they were not. The Home Guard and Police Authorities were not subordinate to me but to the Field and Town commands of the Army.

THE PRESIDENT: Do we understand, witness, that you called in the leaders of the Estonian Home Guard and gave them directions as to what to do?

A No, I had talked about the Estonian Police Authorities. That is something different. That is not the Home Guard.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. And you called in these Police Authorities and you told them under no circumstances were they to execute any Communists, they were merely to arrest them?

THE PRESIDENT: And did you also tell them that they were not to execute any Jews, merely to arrest them?

A Yes. Jews were not even talked about. Except in one case in Pervau in the middle of July 1941, I never gave any orders to arrest Jews. That was only later, in the end of September or the beginning of October, 1941. During this time that I have just talked about there were no Jews arrested.

THE PRESIDENT: But you told the Police not to execute any Communists or Jews, merely to arrest them?

THE PRESIDENT: So that in effect you instructed these Police officials to flat-footedly disobey the order which you had from the Fuehrer down through Stahlecker?

or from Stahlecker, that everywhere I went I should immediately see that all Jews and Communists should immediately be shot. As far as the Communists were concerned I was of the opinion, first of all, that it would have to be established who came under the category of this Fuehrer order, that is who was a Communist functionary who was so dangerous in fact that an execution could be considered. That, in my opinion, would at least have to be investigated.

THE PRESIDENT: Tell, what you very specifically stated was that all Communist functionaries and all Jews were to be liquidated, is that correct?

THE PRESIDENT: Now, you told the Police officials not to execute Communist functionaries or Jews, merely to arrest them.

A Your Honor, I did not say that Jews should be arrested. I said that arrests of Jews at this time, July or August, were not carried out except for one case in the middle of July in Pervau; in the period which I just talked about, approximately 17 July to the 28 august no Jews were arrested in the sector I was in, that is the Northeast Estonian Sector between Togotapsk and Narva.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you say anything to these Police Officials about Jews? No. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q Would you like to proceed with this question? am sorry that the Estonian Home Guard and Estonian Police Authorities were not subordinate to me but to the Field and Town Commands of the army. My command had the right to give directives to the Police Prefecture if security police questions were concerned and only with the agreement of the Field and Town Commands.

In the matter of the Home Guard, for instance, we could only give directives via the Field and Town Commands. If I may emphasize again the difference in the relationship of my own commando to the Estonian Home Guard on one hand and to the Estonian Police on the other hand, it is that we could not give any direct directives to the Estonian Home Guard but only by way of the Field and Town commands, but we could give directives to the Estonian Police Prefecture in matters of security police matters. Nevertheless, Estonian Police Prefecture was actually subordinate to the Field end Town commands. Police when Reval was captured in the end of August and you installed a permanent local Army administration? centralized in Reval and now the sub-commando leaders were no longer responsible for all individual decisions the way Stahlecker had basically ordered. Now the competence for all Security Police decisions in Estonia was in the hands of the Department Chief IV in Reval. This was a change which was brought about in order to unify matters and to make things more objective. Stahlecker gave his agreement to this change. Also the matter of reporting and information was centralized. Even within the Estonian Police a centralization took place for call individual decisions and for the channels of command. The Estonian Police Prefecture in Reval was the central administration office of the Estonian Police for the whole of Estonia. of Communist activities in Estonia at this point? time from 20 August and the following weeks. This Soviet leadership in Estonia had left an underground movement in Estonia in order, after the military struggles had been finished, to carry out espionage and sabotage activities in Estonia.

Many Communist functionaries, even leading functionaries had been left behind for this purpose. Apart from this, as I have already mentioned, special Communist terrorist groups had been supplied and armed. They had explosives and poisons, chiefly to be used to poison wells. The situation had become very critical because even in the following weeks, in September and even late in October and November, the front was very near. Even at the time when the front was in the sector south of Leningrad, that was from the middle of September, the front was comparatively near Estonia, and in the sector between Leningrad and the Peipus Lake an extraordinarily strong Partisan activity had developed. This was favored by the territory which consisted mainly of forests and swamps and also favored by the fact that from the Leningrad front as well as from the Moscow front Partisans could be sent to this area. This became especially acute when the winter came which, we know, arrived very early and very severely in 1941. These Partisans came from the east of Peipus Lake. They came across the ice of the Peipus Lake and came into Estonia. The activity concerning the infiltration of the Partisans to Estonia during the whole time from September 1941,on was a very strong one. On the other hand, however, from approximately the beginning of September there were very few German troops in Estonia. As from October there were hardly any, as far as active combat units were concerned, of the strength of but one regiment. But, in Estonia at that time there were a number of staffs of the Army and coastal troops consisting of coastal units of the marines and the Navy, but no actual combat units. The actual security of the country in this time, as I explained, was only secured by the Estonian Home Guard which was practically a militia of Estonian citizens and farmers.

the country and the rear connections of the Army succeed? of the Estonian Home Guards and the Estonian Police the combat of Communism was very successful. The centrally organized espionage and sabotage machinery for this underground organization, which was to exist and which was to contain members of the functionary corps of the Communist Party in Estonia was eliminated very soon and many arrests were carried out, arrests of Communist functionaries and agents of all kinds. further danger averted? the whole time tremendous activity developed on the Russian side and in Estonia sabotage and espionage was carried out and the population, in order to influence the Estonian population in a Communist way, and against Germany. It becomes evident from a number of reports of events that strong Communist activity took place. It becomes evident in fact from parts not submitted by the Prosecution so far. May I now give a few examples?

THE PRESIDENT: Who made all the arrests you spoke of, the arrests of the Communist functionaries? lesser extent by the Estonian Police and the Constabulary in the rural districts, but to a lesser extent also in the towns.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you not make any arrests yourself, that is, your organization?

A No, this wasn't possible mainly for the reason that we had only four German interpreters who knew the Estonian language. One cannot carry out arrests without knowing their language and these four German interpreters were fully used for other tasks and not for arrests only. Furthermore, these Estonian authorities arrested rather more Communists than too few, so there was no necessity in our paying too much attention to it.

THE PRESIDENT: You just sat back and reviewed the sentences which were passed by the Home organization, is that right?

A No. I did not speak about sentences just now, only spoke about arrests. The question - -

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment. Don't tell me what the question was. I know what the question was. You had stated some time today that you reviewed - you and the sub-commando leaders reviewed all sentences, is that right? shall come back to. That is, I personally. Otherwise, the suggestion for sentences were submitted to the Estonian Police Authorities based on an investigation which had been carried out locally, then affirmed and confirmed by the sub-commando leader....

THE PRESIDENT: In all the time you were in Estonia you only passed on six cases?

A I personally dealt with six cases and made my decision. That is, I personally. It was actually the task of my department chief IV to examine and investigate the judgments and to confirm them. I may say now that I shall deal with this procedure at a later point.

THE PRESIDENT: But do I understand you to say that all the time you were in Estonia you passed on only six cases - you reviewed only six cases? cutions. That means six death sentences. The whole number of cases which were examined by myself was 25, on two different occasions. Among those there were six executions.

THE PRESIDENT: So that in all the time that you were in Estonia you reviewed 25 cases and from these 25 six executions resulted? to deal with this. BY DR. von STEIN:

the danger of Communism had been averted?

A I said that I can see examples in many reports of events. In fact such reports which have not been mentioned and submitted by the Prosecution, especially from the report of events #95 which is 26 October 1941, document 3347, that's page 15. Then #130 of 7 November 1941, document #2823, page 10. Then #155 of the 14 January 1942, document #3279, page 21. And then from the report of Einsatzkommando A of 15 October 1941, document no 1180. That's inclosure VII, A large part of other reports which were issued in Reval in this department deal with this too. It was not included in reports in Berlin then, so now it is not contained in the documents here. From inclosure 7 which I mentioned last, that Is document 1180, the activity of the so-called Illegal Central Committee is described which had been left after the end of military operations. The President of this Committee was the former President of the Central Committee of the Communist Party when they were legal. He had therefore been left as an illegal chief of the underground organization. As members of this illegal Central Committee of the Underground Movement there are marked former leading members of the Central Committee of the Communist Party in Estonia or the council of the People's commissars of the Soviet Republic. In one case even a people's commissar, that is the leading man in charge of the Ministry of the former Soviet Republic was concerned. It becomes evident that no loss than five leading personalities had been left in order to deal with this underground movement and to be in charge of it. The number of the rather minor and small functionaries was relatively larger. From another report of events I take the confirmation that in Narva the Communists among the working population formed about 15% and that small groups were still in hiding in cellars on top of the buildings and operated from there and organized plunderings and attacks. It is furthermore proved that the Russian population of Narva was Communisticly infected so that espionage aid to refugees of this illegal organization and partisans could only be stopped by systematic combing operations.

In another report of events, that is January which reports about the events in December, it is mentioned that in Narva and in Petschura, that is again in the border territory, the atmosphere and attitude of the Russian population was connected with evacuation of Rostov and Ritwin by German troops and a consequence of the entry into the War of the USA, that through this in fact the Russian population that had Communistic tendencies the general mood improved. In another report of events in November, that talks about events which happened in October it is mentioned that experiences so far in the sector south of Leningrad make one conclude that the system of mass assignment of agents which had already been used by the Russians in World War of 1914 - 1918, would now be used again. I may add that this report was not issued by my own commando but by Einsatzgruppe A, that is south of Leningrad, but that these events reported about had repercusions on Estonia. Furthermore it is mentioned that for espionage and sabotage actions young people between 14 and 20 and women were employed.

In another report of event of January concerning events until up to the end of December, there is mention made of difficulties in food supply and accommodations and that, therefore, smaller troops are non formed from the partisan units which are active as terror groups, Furthermore, it is stated in this report that at the Estonian northern coast in the middle of November 1941 a hundred partisans had been landed who were to start operations in the vest of Narva. I may add here that such an event repeatedly happened. I remember now that even in later months it was attempted again and again to land via the Finnish Bay and to smuggle through large units of partisans consisting of 100 to 120 men......

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. von Stein, the witness has given us quite a report of the reports that have been turned in, but he has sort of forgotten himself. It will be interesting to know just what he was doing during this period. After all, any report can be relative only as long as it throws light on the defendant himself. He has sort of taken himself out of the picture completely and he is just giving us a general account, which is interesting, but we would like to know hour he fits into the picture.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, we shall come back to those questions in individual details. The witness only wants to paint a general picture of Estonia at the time. He only wanted to express the Communist danger and he wanted to say that the Communist danger was the same before and after the occupation, and I shall come back to the individual details later.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. SANDBERGER: I may conclude at this point and say that the lack of any combat units in the sector of Narva was very dangerous for the security because in the vicinity of Narva there were a number of extensive slate mines which was the most Important industrial enterprise in Estonia, and was of tremendous importance because of the oil which was produced there for the German Navy. Sabotage attempts on this industry would have had most serious effects on the German Navy.

I may furthermore say briefly that in the whole of the winter 1941 to 1942 and even later, as it becomes evident from the report, parachute partisan operations were caried out over Estonia. These partisans were equipped with explosives, with wireless sets and with plans of arms dumps, and addresses of Communist agents in Estonia and so forth. I believe in December 1941 one of these parachutists stated that in partisan schools of the Soviets there were approximately 3,500 men who were trained and these men should land over Estonia in the spring of 1942. Even attempts on army information units were made again and again which was most irritating because the most important information and news channels went via Estonia; especially in the southeastern corner of Estonia that is the area bordering the Pleskau sector. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q I now come to the documents submitted by the prosecution. They are based apparently largely on reports which were issued by your officials. Please tell us first what kind of reports were issued by your office. five departments. This concerned, as far as Departments I and II were concerned, general changes referring to own personnel, administration and information service. As far as Department III was concorned there were reports made about the modestic spheres and the atmosphere within the population concerning the domistic spheres. As far as Departments IV and V we e concerned, security measures and matters of security police were discussed. There were reports which dealt with the situation and with the activity until the end of the month. Those had to be submitted at the latest, the last day of the month, at the Einsatzgruppe Riga.

Q What was contained in these situation reports?

A In these their own activity was mentioned. First of all, the activities of Department 4 and 5, but also the acitivities of other offices concerning general security, and then general events which concerned the security situation in Estonia, and which neither had to do with our own security nor with the German Army. and the activity of other authorities concerning the general security position? Was this difference clearly understandable?

A No. The difference is not easily recognizable in the documents submitted here, I would almost say that in most cases it is not recognizable.

THE PRESIDENT That in not the question which Dr. von Stein asked you. He asked whether your reports differentiated between your activity and the activities of local authorities. Please answer that question.

MR. SANDBERGER: I beg your pardon. In the reports of Department 4 in Reval the difference between our own activity and the activity of other authorities was generally distinguishable but not always. BY THE PRESIDENT.

Q Well, why wasn't it always?

Q No, no not deduced. You had charge of these reports. You are sending in a report on what is happening with your organization. How, tell the Tribunal why you wouldn't distinguish between what you would do and what somebody else does in a report which you submitted to your own headquarters, reports dealing with situation and activity of Department 4, were not issued by mo personally and in a majority of cases I did not even know them before they were sent off for the mre reason that I was absent; if, however, I was present -

Q You were in charge of that commando, were you not?

Q And, therefore, you were charged with making reports?

Q All right, how long were you up in this part of the world?

Q Yes, and you sent in a report each month?

Q How, when you were, of course, you saw the reports? Now, you are there, and you are sending in a report. Let us take that situation.

Q All right, now when you send in this report, don't you distinguish between what you do and what somebody else does?

Q Now, please don't go back over that again. We have a situation where you are sending in a report. Now, you don't need to modify that. You have the report. Here is your report. You are going to send it in. You are in charge of the commando. How, in this report you distinguish between what you do and what somebody else does, don't you? when these reports were sent in?

Q Now, just a minute. Didn't you say just a moment ago in most cases you were present?

Q Well, then, just a minute, let us correct this. If there is a mistake, we want to correct that. That is what we got over the earphones. At least, that is what I get. Did you get that, Judge, that he said "in most cases"? Will the German reporter please look at her notes and tell us if the witness said that "in most cases" he was present when the reports were sent in?

That is the way I understood it.

(Whereupon the German reporter read from the record as follows:

"Your Honor, I have had no opportunity so far to say that this position and these situation reports of the Department 4 were not issued by me personally, and that in a number of cases I did not see them before they were sent off for the mere reason that I was not present; if I was present"-- and then it is interrupted,) THE PRESIDENT: Well, and then what follows?

(Whereupon the German reporter continued to read from the record as follows:

"This commando was under your command" -- and the next answer is again "Yes", then "about two years" is the next answer, then there was another answer "Yes", then the other answer "As far as I was present, in most cases", and then again it was interrupted.)

THE PRESIDENT: Just a minute, just a minute. That is what I am referring to. Please read the question which preceded and the answer very slowly -- that very question and answer.

GERMAN COURT REPORTER: The question I did not quite understand because I immediately wrote down the answer.

THE PRESIDENT: You didn't catch the question?

GERMAN COURT REPORTER: I haven't got the question -not quite.

THE PRESIDENT: I see, and what was the answer that you got?

(Whereupon the German Court Reporter again read from the record as follows:

"As far as I was present, in most cases" I heard, and then it was interrupted).

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, I thank you very much. We can check that answer in the sound track, but let us proceed from this point.

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Were you present in most cases or not when the report was sent in?

A. Your Honor, that depends on what sector or what period you -

Q. Well, you say, you were there two years, were you present in most cases when the report was sent in?

A. Approximately in this time in about half or up to two thirds of these cases I was present.

Q. Well, now, just a minute, there is quite a difference between one-half and one-third. One half is 12 and one third of 24 is 8. Now, were you there 12 times or 8 times that the reports were sent in? You don't remember?

A. No, because it depends whether I was present on days when this report was to be sent off, which was on the 27th or 28th of the month-whether I was there or whether I was on leave.

Q. If you were there when the report was sent in you distinguished between what you did and what somebody else did?

A. I certainly made a distinction in most cases, yes.

Q. Why do you always say "in most cases", you would in every case, wouldn't you?

A. Your Honor, I am not saying it because I do not exclude the possibility that I did not make this distinction in this or the other case. Therefore I say "in most cases". May I proceed?

A. Yes, certainly.

Q. For the reason that in my commando in some sphere less might have happened than requested by the staff or by Stahlecker himself. As a consequence of this, it is possible -- I cannot quite exclude the possibility -- that is, in one or the other case I will say, I left this question open. The question was whether a certain activity was carried out by the sub-commando, by myself, or by another commando.

Q. I didn't quite catch that, did you say that something less might have happened than was expected - is that what you said -- I am only trying to catch that.

A. What I mean, Your Honor, is that the activity of Stahlecker and his staff, concerning measures of a state police sphere was a very extensive one, and that my attitude was not quite his own, in these matters; resulting from this disagreements came up between us; therefore, I cannot quite exclude the possibility absolutely that in order to overbridge this disagreement with Stahlecker and his staff or to improve our relations, perhaps in this or the other case, on one or two occasions, it might have been assumed that a certain security measure was carried out by my staff, which really might have been carried out by another authority.

tion, is that right -- is that what I understand you to say -- in order to satisfy Stahlecker you would include in the report something which would please him, out which had not actually been done by your organization -- is that what you are telling us?

A No. I did not want to say that....

Q Well, let's get this correct. You said you do not exclude the possibility that because Stahlecker expected you to do certain things that, therefore, in your report, there may have been included something which did not correspond with the facts, is that what you have told us -- I am only trying to repeat what you said?

Q Well, now, let us stick to the reports. I asked you whether in these reports which you yourself made you distinguished between what you did and what somebody else did -- then you gave me a long story about a disagreement you had with Stahlecker. Now, what has that got to do with the report? distinctions should be made between the activity of our own authorities and of other authorities, but this does not exclude the possibility that in individual cases this distinction was not made.

Q Why was it not made? insufficient activity on my own part.

as to give him an impression of something which had not taken place?

A No, Your Honor. The matter reported about, of course, had taken place. But it is possible that it had taken place, not based on an order by the own authority, but perhaps by another authority, and this question had possibly been left open.

Q Let's get back to the original question. In the reports which you made, did you distinguish between what you did and what somebody else did -- did you, or did you not?

Q Sometimes you did not distinguish? it did not report about as to who gave the order for it. It did not say that it had been ordered by us necessarily, but it also was not maintained that somebody else had ordered it. and it is naturally understood that your report reflects events as they occurred. How, did you always distinguish between what you did and what somebody else did -- answer that "yes" or "no".

Q. Then sometimes your reports were misleading?

Q Well, if you didn't distinguish between what you did and what somebody else did, then they didn't tell the exact truth? whole this and this measure was taken in Estonia without adding who carried it out and who ordered this action. Stahlecker's wrath?

Q. Yes, so, therefore, the reports were misleading?

A No. The report said that this and this measure had been carried out. It was a situation report, but it was not contained in the report that these actions had been initiated by myself or by my collaborators. This was neither expressed positively nor negatively. May I also add that Stahlecker was informed about conditions in Estonia, that he knew in fact that I had very few people, and that other agencies had more people.

Q Now, we are getting off the subject; we are talking about the report. How, you would have us believe that these reports didn't amount to anything because he had his own reports. You had to send in a report every month? somebody else did - you have answered that "no"? with Stahlecker? when they were sent in. When you weren't there the reports went in just the same, didn't they?

Q All right, when you returned, did you see a copy of the report? want to know what went on while you were away? I was first on leave and then I was ill. It was absolutely impossible to read, after I returned, all the reports which had been received in the meantime.

A That also wasn't possible because the number was too high.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, if you were away two months, there would be only two reports. Why is it impossible to read two reports?

A. Your Honor, there were not only two reports that were made by Department IV, reports we are talking about here, but a large number of very extensive reports were made by Department-III. They were bulks of reports, which were sent on within two months, and it was impossible to read them.

THE PRESIDENT: You told us the reports were made at the end of every month, and they had to reach headquarters on the 2nd or 3rd of the month, of each month were the reports, so when you came back from your leave, did you read the copies of these two reports?

A. I certainly read those reports in most cases, but I cannot exclude the possibility that in one or the other case I did not read it.

THE PRESIDENT: So that over a period of two years you saw practically all the reports, or there may be one or two that you missed?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(recess)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. HOFFMANN( for the defendant Nosske): tendance in court tomorrow, Thursday, in order to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Nosske will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow in order to prepare his defense. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, were there other reports, apart from this monthly report which had to be made to the Einsatzgruppen at the end of the month?

A. Yes, there were individual security police reports which also could concern the activity of Department IV and V and also the activity of other agencies--German and Estonian agencies--and also the situation concerning security in general. Such individual reports did not have to be made at definite intervals. In Department III, the domestic sphere, there also were a number of reports which were not fixed to any deadline. They were short individual reports about events in the domestic sphere and also special reports which had nothing to do with the situation in that month, but dealt with a subject of greater importance, such as economic problems, administration problems, cultural questions, and so forth. These reports were often very extensive. They were not bound to any deadline. Not only the agency of the SD in Riga and the agency in Berlin were given these reports, but also a great number of other agencies had these reports sent to them; in particular, German civilian and military agencies.

Q. Owing to your experience at the time and based on the document submitted, by the prosecution, do you have the impression that these reports always applied objectively?

A. No, it is soubtful; expert officials with the Kommando H.Q. and also the staff of the Einsatzgruppen and also to Office IV of Berlin, often had reports given to them and formulations were chosen which gave an impression which did not conform with the actual situation,

Q. In your opinion, what was the reason why these reports were made so carelessly?

A. There were various reasons. On the one hand, there was lack of training and experience by the experts in making exact reports; in view of the difficult personnel situation in all offices, officials had often to be asked to make such reports who had not done this previously and therefore they did not have the qualification to do this. Secondly, in all agencies concerned, in particular in the staff of the Einsatzgruppen in Riga, there was the tendency to conceal from superior agencies - in the case of the Einsatzgruppe A- this was Berlin- something that should have been done but actually hadn't been done. Also there was a tendency by higher authorities in this case in Riga and Berlin, to retouch methods of subordinate agencies which in their opinion was too soft; for examply, if that report from Reval about the difference between their own activity and the activity of other agencies was made in detail, this difference might have keen left out in Riga or in Berlin, -- in Riga mainly, because they wanted to give Berlin the impression that the subordinate Kommandos themselves did more than they actually did.

refer here in particular to what Schulz testified on the witness stand here about the methods of Referent Hoffmann in Einsatzgruppe C. Similar tendencies existed also in Einsatzgruppe A, not only with Department Chief IV, but also with the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe itself. Many of the things Stahlecker himself dealt with and what he saw or arranged is doubtlessly exaggerated, and when looking through the documents, most of which I have seen here for the first time, in particular things concerning the actions and the sphere of actions of Stahlecker himself, these actions caused by him or by his staff are, I saw, fantastic exaggerations and falsifications and distortions.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, in these reports which you yourself saw, did you find these faults which you have just referred to?

THE WITNESS: I was just going to say---

THE PRESIDENT: I don't mean the reports you saw here, the reports which you yourself sent in and those which you read when you returned from a temporary absence. First let's take up your own reports. In reports which you sent in, did they carry these faults which you have just now outlined?

THE WITNESS: Reports which I found after I had been absent?

THE PRESIDENT: Let's take up those which you sent in yourself. Did they carry these faults?

THE WITNESS: Reports which I personally sent off, that is, if I was present and if I saw them in general did not contain mistakes of the kind which I have just described.

THE PRESIDENT: Those reports which you read when you returned did they contain these faults?

THE WITNESS: In individual cases very important mistakes occurred.

THE PRESIDENT: And when you saw these mistakes, did you do anything to correct them?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I reprimanded the experts very energetically.

THE PRESIDENT: And you sent in a correcting report?

THE WITNESS: In general I used the next opportunity when I talked to Stahlecker personally, I discussed the matter.

THE PRESIDENT: But in some way or another you always endeavored to correct an incorrect report?

THE WITNESS: I cannot say that it always happened. I must leave open the possibility that in individual cases it was not done and Stahlecker was not consulted personally on this.

THE PRESIDENT: In most cases you endeavored to correct obvious mistakes or exaggerations?

THE WITNESS: Afterwards as far as it was possible, yes.

Q. (By Dr. von Stein) mitted against you concerning measures against Communists contained in Volume I, Exhibit 21, Page 108 of the German text, Document NO-3279.

MR. GLANCY: On Page 78-A of the English.

Q. (continuing) Situation Report No. 155 of the 14th January, 1942. Do you find it?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a report which you made yourself?

A. No, the original of this report is contained in the monthly report of the month of December. It was, therefore, - it left Reval at the end of December, 1941. It was made by Department 4 of my agency in Reval. At the time I was not in Revel but most probably I saw the report after returning.

Q. Do you believe that great changes were made between the Berlin report and the original report from Reval?

A. Yes, the original report from Reval about this subject was much more extensive, of course. Now, I cannot remember the exact extent, but I can estimate it to one to two pages. What is written in the situation report here in Berlin is a very brief excerpt ox summary of an extensive report from Reval, but, of course, I do not know whether the alterations and the summarization was already done the previous year or only in Berlin.

It is also possible that changes were made in both places. This text exists here and is an independent, own work done at Berlin, and it is not certain that any one word was written in Reval in that manner except for the figures perhaps and some specialized expressions.

Q. Is this report a situation report or a report of events?

A. This report is a situation report and a report of events. It means, therefore, the reports about the activity of the home offices and other offices---they are all German and Estonian offices---during the time from July until the end of December, 1941, which occurred at all in Estonia during that time, searchings, arrests, interrogations, committment into comps and executions.

Q. What agencies were those in particular?

A. Those were German local and field commanders of the Army.

THE PRESIDENT: Where are you reading from, please?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I am still on the same document.

THE PRESIDENT: Where on the document; what is the original page?

DR. VON STEIN: page 10.

A. (Continuing) These were German local and field commanders of the Army commandos of the Estonian Home Guard, in particular in July, August, and partly even in September.

THE PRESIDENT: Page 10 isn't in our book.

MR. GLANCY: There is an errata sheet. It should be Page 78-A. It is a long page of corrections, if it please, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, does this errata sheet carry the omission?

MR. GLANCY: Yes, sir; it does.

THE PRESIDENT: Is it the one which begins with Page 5 in line after insert?

MR. GLANCY: Local cross number, it does.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Thank you, yes.

THE WITNESS: May I repeat the last sentence? "The agencies which participated in this Security Police situation and activity were all German and Estonian agencies which at all carried out measures in the time from June until the end of December, 1941, which is, namely, measures, searchings, arrests, transfers into camps and executions, and these individual agencies were German Local and field H.Q.'s of the Army and commanders of the Estonian Home Guard; these three in particular during the time from July and August 1941, hardly still in September, to a lesser extent even in October 1941, apart from that, Estonian police and German Security Police.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand that these arrests and internments in concentration camps and shootings were done by organizations other than the kommando groups.

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, not altogether by other organizations, but to a considerable part. A part of these measures was under the responsibility of the German Security Police, that is, myself, but a very important part and a major part, as I shall explain in detail yet, concerns the responsibility of other German and Estonian agencies, namely, those agencies which I have just mentioned.

THE PRESIDENT: Do I understand that later on you will break down these figures for us?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I shall explain that in detail.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Dr. Von Stein) Which reports were used in your opinion in the original report made by Department 4 in Reval?

A. May I emphasize again that between the original report from Reval and this report as it exists here an intermediate office existed, namely Einsatzgruppe A in Riga, who certainly made considerable changes in the original reports were evaluated, reports which Department 4 of the German Security Police had received, firstly, from their own experts, from their own agencies of the German Security Police; secondly, from the Estonian police agencies; and thirdly, from the Estonian Home Guard, whether from the district staffs of the Home Guard or by the Reval Central Office of the Home Guard.

Apart from that reports by the local commanders and the field commanders of the Army were used.

Q In such a procedure wasn't there the acute danger of countings occurring twice? very often. The reason for this does not have to be intentional exaggerations but the reason was the administrational mixup. During all these months from July until December, 1941 this existed in Estonia and this mixup could not be avoided for the time being. If I can explain this with an example; for example, it could occur that about 25 Communist functionaries whom the Estonian Home Guard in the District of Pernau at the beginning of July, 1941 had been arrested and examined, and then had been executed on their own authority. Guard unit to the Estonian police prefecture in Pernau and later also in a report to the central office of the Estonian Home Guard in Reval. The Estonian police prefecture in Pernau then perhaps gave the same figure, 25, again in their reports to the Reval central office of the Estonian police, and apart from that, to the German security police in Pernau, the same place, but finally so the same 25 cases could be reported to the German security police in Reval independently of each other and from various offices, namely, from the office in Pernau of the German security police and by the Central Office of the Estonian police in Reval, and thirdly, by the central office of the Estonian Home Guard in Reval, therefore three times. And finally one could not quite overlook this because these reports did not give names but merely gave figures indicating that this was the same case. That is how the danger arose that unintentional double countings occurred.

THE PRESIDENT: I understood you to say, when you were first asked about this report from Reval, as to whether it was correct, you said that - at least that's what I have here in my book -- that there were errors but the figures were correct.

THE WITNESS: I said that it is possible that the figures which are contained here are the same figures which are contained in the original Reval report. That does not mean that these figures which were contained in the original Reval report were correct because the danger of double counting could have occurred even before they came to Reval.

THE PRESIDENT: Who passed on the report last in Reval? Who was the one who actually sent it on to Riga?

THE WITNESS: That was department 4 of the German security police in Reval.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, wouldn't department 4 make some effort to verify those figures to see that there were no duplications?

THE WITNESS: Such attempts were sometimes made, but in general this could not be taken for security. I must leave open the possibility that such attempts were not made carefully enough.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, department 4 was part of your organization, of course?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: And your organization was part of the German armed forces?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: And one of the things that the German armed forces is known for is its meticulousness in making reports, isn't that right?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, this applies in principle but it does not exclude the fact that where there is rather a mixup in administration and offices run next to each other, it can happen that countings occur twice which are not intended and in other Einsatzgruppen and other Einsatzkommando this has happened as well as what has been reported here.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, this reputation that the German Army has is not an unmerited one, is it?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, those reports which are contained in this report do not concern this to a very great extent objectively, mainly because many instances have been very careless, in Berlin, in Riga and in the local instances.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, generally you would still say that the German Army is very careful about its reports?

THE WITNESS: Doubtlessly one can not say this on these reports which are being discussed here.

THE PRESIDENT: Generally speaking the entire Wehrmacht is very careful about its reports?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I understood you to say that the reports by the entire Army meant mostly military reports. I can only say that these reports which are being discussed here can be proved to be objectively wrong.

THE PRESIDENT: I am saying that generally the German officer receives as part of his training, the idea that he must be careful about reports, generally speaking.

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, the officials who worked on these reports did not have any training in the German Army for this.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, they were part of the German armed forces?

THE WITNESS: They were attached to the German Army concerning this assignment, but concerning making reports for the security police they did not have any training by the Army, and many of them had never made any such reports previously and therefore were quite untrained in this.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, you know that no military movement could be a success unless those at the top could depend upon the accuracy of reports coming in from the field?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, unfortunately it is a historical fact that in the last war, in the entire German Army to a very large extent, false, that is exaggerated reports were made also concerning matters of military importance which are exaggerated to a great extent.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, you would say that this general idea that the German Army is very acurate and that its reports can be depended upon is not merited?

THE WITNESS: Owing to the position which I held I cannot overlook this in order to pass a general judgment on this.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, you won't pass any judgment upon whether that reputation is merited or not?

THE WITNESS: Concerning the last war, in particular, since 1941, I cannot pass a judgment on this. I can only say that I heard a lot of rumors, that military agencies of all kinds very often made wrong reports and that many failures were the result of this, in the East in particular.

Q (By Dr. von Stein) Do I understand you right when you say that the thousand executions can be put to the charge of various agencies and they are responsible for them, first for the months of July and August, 1941, Estonian home guard commanders and German local and field commanders, later field and local commanders, and the Home Guard subordinate to them, and apart from that, German security police and Estonian police. Finally, unintentional double countings are mentioned by you.

Is that right? your opinion?

A Yes. One reason is that in this report in an obvious manner it is avoided to say that these measures were carried out by the German security police insofar as I was able to read through these reports. Now generally it is expressly said there that the Einsatzgruppe or the Einsatzkommando with that figure or other, took certain measures. That is not written here but it merely gives us a local name. It says in Estonia these or these measures were taken without one word adding who took these measures. If all these measures had been carried out by the German security police in Estonia I am convinced that the official who made this report would not have omitted mentioning this expressively. I should think that even in the original report from Reval it is pointed out that the other agencies mentioned took part in these measures to some extent. The experts in Rige or in Berlin then left it out because it did not fit into their general line of reporting. In any case I would like to emphasize that the chief of Einsatzgruppe A Stahlecker, and his Chief Department IV, already through many oral reports by me, particularly Stahlecker through oral reports, were very well informed as to how great an extent Estonian agencies and agencies of the German Army had carried out such measures and how to a relatively small an extent their own forces did this. of Communists transferred to camps is stated exactly with 5,377 but the figure of the people executed is not stated exactly.

A. In my opinion that is proof again of the fact which I mentioned that in these measures various German and Estonian agencies took part in these measures, because the Estonian police knew exactly who was in the camps, and, therefore, they could report this to the department office in detail, but during the executions, the other agencies, namely, Estonian Home Guard and German Kommandantura of the army were not in a position to make exact statements, and, therefore, their's is only an estimated figure here.

Q. How far was the German Security Police responsible for these thousands of executions?

A. The German Security Police, for the reasons I gave is not at all responsible for this figure of approximately a thousand, but only for a fraction; I do not think it right to give an estimated figure here. I shall give more concrete points of view later of concerning other reports of events which reveal which figures concern other agencies without doubt, but, of course, it is right, and I would like to establish this: that executions of communist functionaries and agents to a certain extent were approved by my sonderkommando leaders, by my Department Chief IV, and my myself, according to suggestion, to interrogations, and mobulated suggestous by the Estonian police authorities. But these cases which come under the responsibility of my subordinates and myself, as I said, only concerned a fraction of the mentioned figure.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, your attorney asked you to what extent was the German Security Police responsible for the one thousand deaths. We gathered from that question that he was trying to find out about how many the German Security Police executed, but you did not answer that question.

A. Your Honor, the question which was put to me was not how many executions the German Security Police are concerned with, but what was the responsibility of the German Security Police.

THE PRESIDENT: Then the Tribunal will ask you to what extent, numerically, was the German Security Police responsible for the shootings of one thousand.

A. Your Honor, I am not able to give a definite figure on this.

THE PRESIDENT: Why not?

A. Because I cannot remember such a figure, and, therefore, cannot state it.

THE PRESIDENT: Was it a large figure; or, a small figure?

A. If I have to make an estimate, which might be wrong, however, then I would give a figure of about three hundred to three hundred and fifty for which the German Security Police was responsible.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

A. Only such cases were concerned, however, which had been examined very carefully previously, and where it had been ascertained that there were communist functionaries who had endangered the security gravely; and that simultaneously there was serious guilt which even according to national Estonian law would call for a death sentence. That careful individual examinations were carried out, is shown by this document and shown by the fact of other decisions; namely, as it says here, that 3,785 people who had minor charges filed against them were released; that is, these persons were also communists and they were also incriminated as communists, but the incrimination was not so serious, in a sense that during that time, this time of reporting up to December, it was possible to release them. To the expression "concentration camp captivity," which is mentioned here, I shall say more about later on when describing the execution of penalty in Estonia. BYDR. VON STEIN:

Q. Please look at the report of events, No. 88. It is contained in Volume II-A, Exhibit 46, Document No. NO-3149, page 92 of the German text, page 86-A of the English text, your Honor. Page 87. Here it is reported that in the Dorpat district since the occupation by German troops, 405 executions took place. Is this figure of 405 executions contained in the figure of one thousand executions in the Report of events No. 155?

A. Yes, doubtlessly. This figure surely is part of that figure one thousand, except perhaps of the 50 Jewish communists mentioned here. I shall give more explanations of this question also later on when talking about measures against Jews. May I reply to your question now that according to the instructions by Einsatzgruppe A it was actually laid down that Jews, even if measures were taken against them because they were communists, were to be classified as Jews and reported as such, and not to be classified as communists; but in spite of these Riga regulations it is possible that these 50 Jewish communists are contained in the Figure 405 -

THE PRESIDENT: Where is that reference, please, 405.

MR. GLANCY: On page 88, the last paragraph on page 88.

A. The figure of these 50 Jews, I shall come back to when explaining measures against Jews later on.

THE PRESIDENT: I didn't quite catch your explanation about the 405. Would you please repeat it?

A. Yes. The question which was addressed to me was whether the figure of 405 in the territory Dorpat, people who were executed there, which is mentioned here, whether this figure is included in the figure of one thousand which is mentioned in the report mentioned before. I answered yes to this question. The Report of events of 19th September, the other report is one of 14th January; therefore, they are not 405 different persons but they are included in the figure of one thousand. In any case, as I emphasized, it is possible except of the 50 Jews mentioned here, which are included in this report, in this figure 405 and about which I shall speak again later on. This exception is possible because according to the regulations of Einsatzgruppe A, measures against Jews in general were to be classified under the term of Jews, even if these measures had been taken because of communist activity, as communist functionaries add agents, and not only because of the fact that they were Jews. That was the general instruction and according to this general instruction, these 50 Jews should actually not be contained in the figure one thousand, but in spite of this, it is possible that owing to a mistake they are still contained in the figure owing to the reason that they appear here in this total figure 405, and this figure 405 possibly was included in the figure one thousand, BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Can you give detailed statements from what time this original report originated on which this report of events No. 88 is based?

A. It is this report of events in Berlin, of the 19th September 1941. The original report from Dorpat must have originated from the 3rd of August 1941. In the original report there must have been a report which was made at the end of the month of August, 1941, by the Sonderkommando Dorpat, and sent off to Einsatzgruppe A in Riga, that is, actually, presumably the report was made on the 26th or 27th august and on 28th or 29th august it was sent to Riga.

Q. Could you give us a point, from the document itself, concerning the organizational circumstances at the time?

A. Yes. Such a report by a individual Sonderkommando immediately was sent to the Einsatzgruppe in Riga concerning organization was possible only during the time when a central headquarters for the office had not yet been set up. As I said, such a central headquarters was set up after Reval was conquered at the end of August of 1941. Therefore, this report must have been made before that time, and must have been sent off from Dorpat immediately to Riga. If not, it would have been sent via Reval and this obviously didn't happen, because from Reval one could never have written such a report or sent it off which only concerned one city in one district.

Q. In this report it is mentioned, -

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Von Stein, suppose we recess until tomorrow morning at 9:30.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 0930 hours, 13 November 1947.)

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the judges of Military Tribunal II.

DR. RIEDIGER: Your Honor, may I ask that Haensch be excused is examined in the witness stand.

I ask him to be brought to Room

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant, Haensch, will be excused from Room 57.

You may proceed.

BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. We finished discussing the situation report Number 88 in Volume Number IIA, Exhibit 46, on page 87 of the English text;in this report there is mentioned the custody camp in Dorpat.

Why did the field commandatura have a custody camp there?

A. I already mentioned yesterday, and the witness, Dr. Mae, stances.

These conditions were caused by the fighting which had beengoing on for a long time.

During these fights -

THE PRESIDENT: Herr Von Stein, when you refer us to a document, try to indicate that to us also please so that we can have it.

Now we have the document but we don't know which particular page or

MR. GLANCY: If you please, Your Honor, it is page 88 of the English, the paragraph headed "Operations in the town and district of Dorpat.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, thank you.

MR. SANDBERGER: May I continue?

THE PRESIDENT:Please.

MR. SANDBERGER: During these fights and following them the Estonian home guard in the city of Dorpat and the vicinity had carried out arrests and interrogations and executions partly on their own authority and partly under the supervision of the German field commandos of the army. In connection with these arrests and interrogations the Estonian home guard also had set up this custody camp which is mentioned in this report from Dorpat here. The Estonian Police Prefecture who had also been set up during the time of fighting was subordinate to the Estonian homeguard commander. And apart from the very first days of the fighting when the homeguard commander was independent , he was then subordinate to the German field commanders of the German army. This Germanfield commander, a colonel, and first of all, his deputy, a major, were very energetic and active and particularly interested in security questions, including all police questions. They were not at all prepared to hand the security tasks and police tasks over to anybody else, in particular if a subcommando of the German security police came to Dorpat. The German subcommando leader alone, owing to the fact of his rank, was not able to maintain his views towards the field commander, his deputy and the commander of the home guard. Therefore, the full responsibility of the field commander remained in existance until the month of September, also for all police matters. Only in September in security police tasks the supervision over the political and criminal department of the Estonian police prefectura was handed over to the subcommander of the security police. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Pardon me, witness. While you are commenting on this para graph, you see the statement at the end of the paragraph, "There are no more Jews in prison".

A. Yes.

Q. Now, does that mean that they were executed?

A. Your Honor, about the details of this report, I cannot tell you anything since all occurrences throughout these entire reports were not the responsibility of the security police, but, as I have said -

Q. But, Witness, you have just given us a report, a story, a comment on this entire paragraph. You have told us about the subcommandos, about the Estonian guard, and so on. Now, when we ask you a very specific question, you say you are not familiar with the details, why are you commenting on this at all if you don't know this very important detail?

A. Your Honor, I just talked about the organizational conditions as they were in this time from July until September in Dorpat.

Q. How, I will call your attention to the proceeding sentence, "The Total number of persons executed in Dorpat is 405, among them 50 Jews." Now, you told us about that yesterday, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. All right, you were able to give us enlightenment on that sentence. Why can't you shed the same kind of illumination on the succeeding sentence, "There are no more Jews in prison"?

A. Your Honor, what I said yesterday about this figure of 405 executions concerned exclusively the fact that it was my opinion that this figure is contained in the total figure of approximately one thousand executions.

Q. Very well, now, that is your opinion on the 405. Now, give us your opinion on the other sentence, "There are no more Jews in prison". Give us your opinion on that, since you volunteered your opinion on the preceding sentence.

A. Your Honor, I cannot state anything about this because I was not informed about the details. All these occurrences happened exclusively under the responsibility of the field commanders. I can merely presume, and when talking about measures against Jews I shall explain it, that the 50 Jews who are mentioned here are part of the 405 persons executed and were arrested by the Estonian home guard as Communists. In particular as NKWD agents and as such they were interrogated and executed.

Q. Now, you read all that into this simple sentence, but yet you can't read anything into the other clearer sentence, "There are no more Jews in prison"?

A. Your Honor, I said that the things I mentioned just now. I can only assume from the general conditions, but I cannot say how it can be explained that at that time no more Jews were in prison. But it is certain that at that time a great number of Jews were free in that district. In that district in all there were about a thousand Jews before the war.

Q. In this same paragraph there is the statement, "150 persons were released". Were there any Jews in these 150 people?

A. Your Honor, I do not know, because all occurrences mentioned in this report I do not know about in detail. I can only assume that as far as these 450 and these 150 are concerned, the facts are as I mentioned them. I do not know about any individual occurrences mentioned in these reports, nor about the previous figures of releases either. I am only certain that at the time of this report a great number of Jews in the district of Dorpat were at liberty.

Q. Weren't you up there with specific orders to arrest all Jews?

A. Your Honor, at that time I did not carry out this order in the district of Dorpat, as can be shown from this report, because if it had happened it would have been mentioned in this report. In this district, the city and district of Dorpat, about a thousand Jews lived in the year 1935. If we assume.....

Q. Will you please answer my question. Weren't you up there with orders to arrest all Jews.

A. I had this order, yes.

Q. Yes. Now, why do you now say that there were a thousand Jews walking around free?

A. Because at that time I had not yet carried out the order, but only at the end of September. This is shown from this report, Your Honor, that the order was not yet carried out at that time or else it would be mentioned in this report.

Q. Well, then, you can offer no comment on the statement, "There are no more Jews in prison"?

A. No, not for that reason, because all these measures...

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Dr. Von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Who carried out the arrests mentioned in this report?

A. The Estonian home guard and the Estonian police.

Q. The Interrogations and transfers into camp mentioned before, who carried these out?

A. The Estonian home guard and the Estonian police.

Q. Under whose supervision--under whose responsibility did the Estonian police carry out these arrests, interrogation, and transfers into camps?

A. Under the supervision and the responsibility of the COURT II CASE IX Estonian home guard.

Q. Under whose supervision was the Estonian home guard?

A. During the first days of the state of civil war at the time and during the fights in the district of Dorpat, they acted on their own responsibility because from the Germans there was nobody there yet at the time who could have been in charge or put in charge of the Estonian home guard. After the first few days had passed the home guard was under the supervision and responsibility exclusively of the German field commanders.

Q. The executions mentioned in this report, who ordered them?

A. In as far as it concerns the first days, the commander of the Dorpat home guard, later the field commander of Dorpat or his deputy.

Q. Who carried out these executions?

A. The Estonian home guard.

Q. Can you give arguments based on this report for the facts mentioned by you?

A. The report itself proves, and I am only basing my argument on the text of the report, there are a few points showing that this report does not concern the activity of the security police but the activity of the field commanders and the home guard. These are the four points of view: First of all, in this entire report in the heading and also in the text the absence of any mention of any own activity of the German security police is conspicuous. In other reports--in those reports of events it is nearly always mentioned that an Einsatzkommando had done something, or the security police. This is not mentioned here, but it is simply said here that this or that measure was dealt with, was carried out, and so forth without mentioning who COURT II CASE IX did this.

A second point is shown from the heading of this paragraph where it is said that measures in the city and district of Dorpat were carried out. This district was under the competency of the field commanders of the army; not the competency of the subcommando of the security police. The jursidiction of the subcommando of the security police apart from the city and district of Dorpat was concerned also with three other districts in the south of Estonia, namely, the district, Vero, Walk, and Petschur. If this subcommando reported about their own activity and their own responsibility or would have reported about this, then, of course, they would have reported about the three other districts as well.

Q. You, therefore, mean to say that the subcommando had nothing to do with the events mentioned here?

A. Yes. It is in so for a security police situation report and not an activity report. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Witness, do you categorically exclude that a subcommando had anything to do with these activities in Dorpat?

A. Yes.

Q. And you do it just merely from reading this report?

A. No, Your Honor, but from my own knowledge of conditions at the time about which the subcommando leaders reported to me.

Q. Didn't the Estonian home guard have to submit their recommendations for executions to you or a subcommando leader?

A. No, Your Honor. In the district of Dorpat it was like this, that he submitted it to the German field commander.

Q. Didn't you tell us that all recommendations for executions had to be passed on by the subcommando leaders?

A. Your Honor, I explained yesterday that in the COURT II CASE IX district of Dorpat, in particular, the conditions were different.

Q. Why was Dorpat different from any other place?

A. The reason was that the field commandant from the very beginning had a very strong position. He was very energetic and on his part wanted to keep the jurisdiction for everything.

Q. When you told us yesterday about the recommendations for executions being approved by subcommandos, you did not make any exception in favor of Dorpat, did you?

A. Yes, Your Honor. I am absolutely certain that I explained that these suggestions to the subcommandos and these regulations existed only there where no special regulations had been laid down as in Dorpat and in several localities in the south of Estonia. I am quite sure of that.

Q. Well, we gather from what you have said that you personally are not at all familiar with everything that is stated in this paragraph to which you have been directing your attention in the past half hour. You are personally not acquainted with those facts?

A. Your Honor, I do not know about the individual occurrences. I know the organizational situation, that at that time....

Q. Well, please answer the question. Do you personally have any knowledge of the facts contained in this paragraph?

A. No.

Q. Were you involved in any way in any of these incidents referred to in the paragraph?

A. No.

Q. Well, then, why are you spending so much time defending the statements in that paragraph if you are not involved?

A. I wanted to explain how the responsibility was in COURT II CASE IX connection with the jurisdiction in Dorpat, and that for this report.

...

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Dr. Von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, why did your subcommando make this report if you said they had nothing to do with the events mentioned?

A. Why it made this report I do not definitely know, or at least I do not definitely remember, but there can be only one reason for that, that the Einsatzgruppe in Riga requested from the subcommando in Dorpat an activity or situation report at the end of the month of August.

Court No. II, Case No. IX.

Q How did the expert get the statements for this report?

A I don't concretely know, but according to the circumstances it can only have happened in one way. Namely, that he went to the field commanders of the army, and to the Estonia Home Guard, and to the Estonian Police, and there asked for the documents concerned, or copied from the documents listed there, and made a situational report of the Security Police based on these documents. this report exclusively were under the jurisdiction of the German Field commanders, or, under the Estonian Home Guard, and not under the jurisdiction of the sub-commander of the Security Police?

Q The conditions regarding competency, in Dorpat, i.e. independent power of the Estonian Home Guard and total responsibility of the German local and field commanders; did that also exist in other localities in Estonia?

A Yes. Not to such an extent, but temporarily in a similar manner in some district towns in the south of Estonia, in the month of July, and partly also in August 1941. for these measures? issued at the beginning of the Eastern Campaign, about the question of the disposition of the population, and the combatting of Communists. The orders applied to the entire Eastern Army, and to the German Police assigned to the East. on the organization of the German SIPO, the German Security and the Estonian Police in Estonia at the time. the various succeeding periods are to be distinguished. Concerning the Estonian Police, this is first of all the period until the introduction Court No. II, Case No. IX.

of the Estonian independent administration, that is, 20 September 1941. The second period is that of 20 September 1941 up until the introduction of the German Civilian Administration, on 5 December 1941. In the first period the Estonian Police Prefectures ware auxiliary agencies of the field commanders on all question of public security. Centralized District Authority did not exist until the 20 September 1941. In the time from 20 September 1941 until 5 December 1941, the Estonian Police Prefectures were subordinate to the Police Department of the Estonia Ministry of the Interior. That was part of the Estonian self admininstration, and these were subordinate to the Commander Rear Army Area North. In the third period, from 5 December 1941, the Estonian self administration was subordinate to the German Commissary General as Chief of the Civilian Administration. The period about which I shall now talk in detail is that of October until December 1941, because this is the decisive period for these cases which are mentioned in the Report No. 111, that is, executions of Communists after careful examination. The Estonian P Police was subdivided into twelve Police Prefectures; in each Estonian District there was a Police Prefecture. The Estonian Police in general had a general police department, a political police department, and a criminal department. The political and criminal departments together on an average had a personnel of approximately 800 people. Among them were sixty to eighty lawyers, that is, persons who had received full legal training at the University of Dorpat. In this....

THE PRESIDENT: Where was this all taking place, in Reval? Was this all in Reval?

THE WITNESS: No, in the entire country of Estonia.

THE PRESIDENT: Where were these eighty lawyers, scattered throughout the country?

THE WITNESS: These sixty to eighty lawyers, were, most of them, in Reval, and some were distributed among the twelve agencies throughout the country. Apart from that among the personnel of this Estonian Police and Criminal Department, there were sixty to eighty professional officers Court No. II, Case No. IX.

from the former Estonian Army, who had been assigned partly for organizational functions, and partly for the verdict commission, which I shall explain later on. From 5 December onwards, that is, since the Civilian Administration was introduced, the political and criminal departments of the Estonian Police were united, and became the special organization of the Estonian Police for Inner Security, whose headquarters were in Reval. In the previous period the Police Prefecture in Reval was the most important headquarters and the leading agency for the entire police concerning specialized questions; that is, all recommendations for judgments from the entire country came together there. During that time the organization of Department IV of the German Security Police, that is, the German State Police within Estonia contained the following personnel: With the commando headquarters in Reval there was a Department Chief IV with four intermediate officials. Department Chief IV had the rank of Kriminalrat, a criminal director of the German Security Police; that is the same rank as a Major, that is the same rank I had. In most cases it was an official who himself had been trained for law. In general his age was about ten years older than my age, and he had a lot of police experience. The four intermediate officials who were his assistants had the rank of a sergeant -- a top sergeant.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr von Stein, what is the purpose of all of these very detailed descriptions of these officers, indicating their ages? We have not as yet heard about their home life, but it seems that we are getting into a greet deal of unnecessary detail. What is your purpose?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, that is of importance in order to prove what forces were at his disposal. The country of Estonia is about as big as Holland, and he wants to show that the police forces at his disposal were by far not sufficient in order to carry out the police affairs satisfactorily. He further wants to prove that he could not supervise those forces at all, because they were distributed all over the country. That is largely what he wants to prove.

THE PRESIDENT: You say, all these forces were at his disposal?

DR. VON STEIN: For his district yes, but all the forces Estonia, no.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment. I understood you to say that all these forces were at his disposal. Now, is that correct?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, he is now giving us the figure of the people who were subordinated to him.

THE PRESIDENT: All these police forces were at his disposal?

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: He was the Chief Police Officer in Estonia?

DR. VON STEIN: Not to that extent, no. He only had certain functions and about these functions he will tell us more later on.

THE PRESIDENT: Everything is going to come later on. Let's have something now. Let's get right to the very issue. He is charged with certain crimes. Now, if he didn't commit these crimes, then let him tell us why and how he didn't commit them, but we are getting into a great deal of academic discussion and description of activities in Estonia which may or may not enter into the picture. Let's get to the real issue.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, it is of importance, because if the defendant would tall us now that he only received a certain amount of knowledge of all of this, then it would seem incredible for us to receive an exact impression how conditions actually were in the country at the time. For that reason unfortunately it is necessary that we have to discuss these points as well.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. BY DR. VON STEIN: tion, That police forces were under you? Police, Department IV in Estonia had the following personnel: Department Chief IV in Reval, plus four intermediate officials with the rank of NCO.

In the offices in Reval, Dorpat, Pernaw and Norva, and Arensburg, one intermediate official, who had the rank of an NCO, For the State Police task in Estonia of German officials, there was an executive official, and nine intermediate officials. were subordinate to you?

A Yes, for State Police tasks, yes. Apart from that there was those for the criminal, police tasks, which are not under discussion here now. introduced as substitute for the instructions of the OKH and the RSHA in Estonia? 1941, those general directives applied which I had announced to the subcommando leaders before I moved; that is, first, only to arrests, executions only in special, exceptional cases in the manner as I have described yesterday. Now in the first half of October I initiated the following directives for the treatment of all districts concerning the Communists in Estonia. May I explain the procedure briefly that when reports came from the population to the Estonian Police, and to the Estonian Home Guard. In the political department of the Estonian Police, Prefecture the reports were received, investigations were carried out, records were made, arrests were carried out whenever required, and the witnesses were questioned; particularly, these witnesses were questioned whom the defendant, the accused, wanted called in order not to be incriminated. After the examination had been concluded, a Commission sat, consisting of three members. This Commission examined the entire procedure, and an expert gave a lecture on it, and explained same; they listened to the accused, and, in particular, they had to consider everything that he stated for his defense. They examined all the documents, discussed all questions in the case, and then came to a final decision.

THE PRESIDENT: What would the accused be charged with?

THE WITNESS: As Communist functionaries and agents. There were many persons who worked for the Communist Party in Estonia, or for the Soviet Communists, and had been executed as such.

THE PRESIDENT: What if they proved to be Communist functionaries, then what happened?

THE WITNESS: Then in each individual case according to the facts, and according to the personality, it was decided whether the person was to be executed, or was to be transferred into a camp.

THE PRESIDENT: What would they decide as to whether he could be executed, or sent to a camp. Let's suppose now it is established that he was a Communist functionary?

THE WITNESS: There were a great number of Communist functionaries, of various kinds and various characters. Not every Communist functionary down to the smallest and the most minor functionary were executed.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, let's suppose that he was a functionary of some importance; let's say, he had been a Burgermeister or a mayor of a town, and had acted as such up until the occupation of Germany, what would happen to him?

THE WITNESS: It can not be judged in this manner. It only depended on what he did in this office, and it depended on how we judged his general personality.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, let's suppose a case where you have a mayor of a term, and he conducted his office as a mayor should; he was very active, he was a Communist, and he attended the meetings of the Communist party, and he discharged his duties of the office with a Communistic point of view.

Now, that is the evidence.

THE WITNESS: If he had not done anything other then what you just mentioned; if he had not carried out any activity for the Communists, and didn't act as a functionary of the NKWD, then he was not executed.

THE PRESIDENT: No, I said, if he was a full Communist, carried our the functions of his office as a Communist, belonged to the Communist Party, was active, believed in the doctrines of the Communist Party, talked about Communism. Now what happened to him?

THE WITNESS: It depended, Your Honor, when he talked about Communism, whether this happened in the time after the occupation by the Germans.

THE PRESIDENT: No, up until the time the Germans arrived. All of this happened before the Germans arrived.

THE WITNESS: If he had been nothing but a mayor, and had no other functions, and had not done anything else as a Communist, he was not executed.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, didn't your Fuehrer Order say, all Communist functionaries had to be executed?

THE WITNESS: I didn't understand the Order that way, that every Communist functionary, without any distinction, and without examination of the individual case was to be executed. BY DR. VON STEIN:

THE PRESIDENT: You have used the phrase over and over "Communistic activity." What do you mean by "Communistic activity"?

THE WITNESS: In Estonia when examining these cases it was understood that they had actively taken part in the killings and deportations.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, now, witness, if a man killed someone, illegally, then you would have to be concerned whether he was a Communist or not, because the law of the land would take care of him; so let's exclude these very clear cut cases of illegal killings.

Define for me the Communistic activity.

THE WITNESS: An I to understand the question to the effect that you mean such Communistic activity which would result in a death sentence, or such Communistic activity which would cause transfer into an internment camp?

THE PRESIDENT: You have used the phrase yourself, "Communistic activity." which would subject an individual to arrest and possible execution. How, what was this Communistic activity which would result in that?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, there were Communist activities which could result in execution. There was another which could result in an internment into a camp and other activities which did not even result in internment but in many cases in a release after a few weeks. I read this in a document yesterday. 3,700 minor incriminated Communists who had also been active in Communist activity.

THE PRESIDENT: However, you have not as yet told us just what you mean by "Communist activity" which would result in a man's execution?

THE WITNESS: That cannot be explained to the full extent. May I give you some examples. One example is an active pant in an underground organization which was created so that when the Russian Army had left Estonia, they should carry on espionage and sabotage.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, that is another thing, that comes under the category of espionage and sabotage. That is now Communist activity as such?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, these cases were to be dealt with and were classed as Communism, which consisted of sabotage and espionage, and were done for Communistic reasons and motives. Under the category Communism which I am going to explain here comes everything that happened in the service of Soviet authorities, of the Communist Party of Estonia, no matter what the activity was, sabotage or espionage, and so forth.

THE PRESIDENT: Let's get back to the original issue in this entire trial. You know that this trial is based upon the original Fuehrer Order, which has been discussed at length by every defendant who has taken the witness stand. Now you tell us what that Fuehrer Order was.

THE WITNESS: The content of the Fuehrer Order was apart from the Jews and the Gypsies -

THE PRESIDENT: Not apart from. Tell me what it was. Did it include Jews and Gypsies, to execute Jews and Gypsies?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, now.

THE WITNESS: Jews and Gypsies and Communist functionaries and such elements who endangered the security of the country.

THE PRESIDENT: Did it include in that phrase "Communist functionaries"?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Dr. von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q Witness, may I address the question to you again. In Estonia was anybody punished because of Communistic views?

THE PRESIDENT: How, do you know that as a fact? Do you know as a fact that no person in Estonia was punished because he held Communistic views?

THE WITNESS: I ordered this expressly.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you know as a fact that no one was executed because he held Communistic views?

THE WITNESS: Under my responsibility, no.

THE PRESIDENT: Then you can not answer the question which the attorney put to you.

THE WITNESS: I beg your pardon, I understand the question to mean that the defense counsel meant my responsibility. I don't know whether he meant this.

THE PRESIDENT: You put the question again, now. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q The question which I addressed to you was as fellows: Whether anybody was punished in Estonia merely because he held Communistic views. You said, no in reply to this, and in this connection I shall address another question to you. What have you got to prove this? I went to refer you to documents. Is it right that it can mistakenly had at first been arrested, and later when the case was examined and. it had been found out they were released again because they had not been active in a criminal sense, but they had been arrested merely because of Communistic views?

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment now. That is not the question at all, Dr. von Stein. You asked the question, were any people executed in Estonia, because they held Communistic views, and his answer was a categorical no.

DR. VON STEIN: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, now I ask you, do you know that as a fact?

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: I ask the witness, do you know as a fact that no one was executed in Estonia because he held Communistic views?

DR. VON STEIN: May I address a question to the witness in order to refresh his memory and point out the documents to him, which prove quite obviously -

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q He can answer that question. It's your own question so you can't get away from it. he held communistic views. How you know that as a fact? bility and to the orders which I save.

Q Don't you know as a matter of fact that many were executed as a result of error? Police. I do not know of any such case.

Q You don't know of any execution that took place based upon error?

Q You do not admit that that could happen? police, I do not know of any case where an execution was carried out following a death sentence by mistake.

Q You do not know. You exclude the possibility that someone could have been executed as a result of error?

Q All right. Now, just a moment. I read from your own affidavit, signed on 23 April 1947: "Although I do not remember a definite case, there was a possibility that some members of the Estonian police who made these investigations and summaries of the facts, or the interpreter who acted as translator falsified part of the facts with a view to having a person sentenced to death. The summaries were later signed by Chief 4 of the Estonian Police, who was converwithin the staff of the German Department 4, two Estonian internees were employed who had to check on all cases which had been handled by the Estonian Police."

Now, do you change your answer in view of that statement made by you?

ly to Mr. Wartenberg, that I never heard of any case where a falsification was ever made. These things are not based on facts or statements by me, but great importance has often been attached to it by Mr. Wartenberg, to bring in the possibility of a falsification.

Q Just a moment. You said a while ago that you excluded the possibility that someone could have been executed unjustly. Now I read to you your own statement in which you say: "There was a possibility that because of falsification or difficulty in translation a person could have been sentenced to death who should not have been sentenced to death." Do you withdraw your statement of April 23 in that respect? statements on this point I wish to boil down to this: that I never heard of any such case. I said this at the tine and I want to say that now.

Q But your affidavit says, "There was a possibility." Today you say there was no possibility. Now which do you stand on: the statement that there was a possibility that someone was unjustly done to death, or that there was no possibility that someone was unjustly done to death? Now, what do you stand on? tions. Herr Wartenberg asked me whether it might have been possible that Estonians might have smuggled false documents into the files. unjustly in Estonia while you were in Estonia?

Q Now please answer that question. Was there the possibility that someone may have been done to death unjustly while you were in Estonia? responsible? Do you mean, Your Honor - of a case and then how this was reviewed by the Chief 4 of the Estonian Police and then it came to the staff of the German Department 4. Now I am reading from your own statement. Now, do you say that there was a possibility that someone could have been executed unjustly? Estonian Police a false document -

Q Now please answer the question. Was there a possibility that an innocent person could have been executed?

Q All right. Then your categorical answer that no person was killed unjustly while you were up there has to be modified, doesn't it? hear of any such case and did everything to avoid it. to reply to the question directly and precisely. BY DR. VON STEIN: far as humanly possible, I would like an exact description of the procedure of reviewing. the police prefectura had passed was done in the following manner. May I add, this decision within the Estonian authorities was called "Judgment". In German, correctly stated, it is called, "Recommendation for Judgment." This verdict with the findings and with a detailed explanation of the degree of punishment and with the entire documents was sent to the branch office of the German Security Police. There the official of the German Security Police looked through it. If no objections could be made, the file was returned to the Prefectura. Following that, the verdict with the reasons given for it and the entire documents were sent to the headquarters of the Estonian Police, the Prefectura in Revel, and later to the headquarters of the Estonian Police for internal security.

There the entire procedure was thoroughly examined. The entire documents were looked through and reviewed, and again another commission, consisting of three who were also lawyers and professional officers, came to a decision and examined or confirmed the decision passed by the police prefectura. These statements -BY THE PRESIDENT: as much attention as apparently was given to an Estonian citizen: having one board pass upon it and another board and then still another board? police court I would not have such a careful procedure as was carried cut there.

Q Yes. So you gave more care and consideration to the Estonians than would he accorded even a member of the SS? procedure correct, then they closed the case. The verdict and the basis for the verdict were translated, and on a special sheet the reasons for the degree of punishment were mentioned, and the entire file was handed on to the German Department 4 of the German Security Police. Only if the verdict was "imprisonment for up to six months", then the chief of the Estonian political police was entitled to pronounce this punishment. In Department 4 of the German Security Police, there was another high Estonian legal official who again examined the entire file, a legal official who held a high fulltime position in the Estonian legal administration, and for five hours a day he only did this job. He checked everything, examined the documents for being proper and also stated his opinion about the degree of punish ment, and returned, the file to the Estonian Security Police, if he objected to it.

If there were no objections to it, then he prepared the statement of the German Department Chief 4. In the statement which he made it was shown - and he signed this -- that he had checked the files, that he found them correct, and that in his opinion the judgment of the judgment commission was correct. This procedure was then submitted to the German department chief 4. The German department chief 4 read this verdict, the reasons for the verdict and the enclosed motivation of the degree of punishment - and the enclosed statement of the Estonian official just mentioned. If he approved of the verdict, he confirmed it.

MR. GLANCY: May it please the Tribunal, it seems to me that we have been through this same line about two or three times now, and this is merely cumulative or reiterative, and I object to it on these grounds.

THE PRESIDENT: I think that is entirely a proper observation, Dr. von Stein. Hasn't he told us this before?

THE WITNESS: I beg your pardon, Your Honor. This is another agency of which I am talking now. This is a third agency which again examined this case.

BY THE PRESIDENT: and review a case? Just count them: the three men - the first boardand so on. Just tell us how many.

A In the first commission, there were three. Apart from this, there was the referent who had prepared the case and the expert.

A That makes five. And then in the headquarters of the police in Reval there were three persons of the judgment commission and a referent.

Q That's four more. itself and not in the province. Then there was -

A Yes. Then there was the Estonian legal official in the German Department 4.

Q And how many were there?

A One: the department chief.

Q That makes eleven, is that right?

Q Eleven people passed on each case. Very well. in which the judgment commission in the district did not function. After the department chief 4 had confirmed it, the entire file was sent back to the headquarters of the Estonian police, who on their part had to see to everything else. Another agency which was independent was the so-called Department for Reprieves within the German securith police.

Q Well, then, there were more than eleven?

Q All right. Then who else reviewed the case? This court of appeal, you say, of whom was that made up? there, not together but separately, to deal with such cases where the persons concerned or the members of their families had made applications for release. This caused a new investigation of all cases which had been applied for and there were, of course, a great number. The procedure was here as follows: the applications were handed in -

Q How many persons reviewed the case?

A In the central office, one person; and apart from that, in the reviewing section, again the persons in the subordinate offices. Sometimes it was the same ones who had already taken part in the previous procedure, but partly different persons as well.

Q Then this court of appeal only consisted of one person?

Q All right. Then we have had eleven and two more. That makes thirteen. cases independently. Therefore one should not add two persons here but only one.

Q Well, that is the reason I said "one"; so, that makes it twelve. assured that he was worthy of execution? same opinion. It was possible that a few of the persons were in favor of executions, and others were in favor of internment. But all of these twelve persons, at least the first eleven, took part in the making of the decision.

Q Well, then, at least eleven people had to pass upon a man's case before he could be executed in Estonia?

called "Mercy Applications", were handed in constantly - a great number of then to the chief of the Estonian administration, to the chief of the German civilian administration, the German general commissar, and to the agency of the German Security Police. All such applications were now sent to the court of appeal which existed within the German Department 4 and consisted of these two lawyers. The court of appeal reviewed the case very carefully. May I leave out here the details as to how this was actually done? In any case, all original documents were consulted again.

THE PRESIDENT: I am sure that Mr. Glancy will not object to your leaving out the details.

THE WITNESS: The conclusion was that an opinion of the court of appeal was made out whether the application for release could be granted or not. In many cases, the application for release was made on the fact that the family was in great financial difficulties. In such cases, it was seen to that the Estonian people's welfare board, that is the general welfare organization, looked after the family. I believe that is a sufficient answer to your question. BY DR. VON STEIN: entire procedure. Is it now your opinion that everything was done, as far as humanly possible, that could be done in order to avoid wrong decisions? this very careful procedure, I did everything in order to avoid mistakes, as far as possible. Q Oh, yes, it does. A man could be arrested, and he happened to be a Jews Now,was he given the same consideration as everybody else?

Q I am not speaking of the internment of a Jew. You, yourself, pointed out in one of the reports where , out of a certain number, 50 were Jews. Q None of your commandos knew of this order? did not give him the order telling him to carry it out; I only informed him about it -- that this decree existed -- but that I would do everything in order to avoid that I and my commando would have to carry out this decree.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for 15 minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal desires to make an announcement with regard to tomorrow's session. The Court will convene at the usual hour of 9:30 and will recess at the usual 12:30 hour, but it will have no session in the afternoon. Tomorrow afternoon there will be no session of Court.

Dr. Von Stein, before you take up thecontinuation of direct examination, I would like to ask the witness another question about a situation which was presented this morning. BY THE PRESIDENT: Communistic Mayor, who had lived up to all the rules of Communism, and then the Germans arrived and he was arrested and he was tried, and we understand that you said that if that's all they had against him, that he was a Communist, then he would be released.

A If he didn't do anything else than what the President has just said, then he would not be released, but he would be interned. However, he would not be executed.

Q Oh, I thought he would be released outright?

Q He would be interned? of all he would have to be interned if he was a convinced Communist. indefinitely?

A That depended on the individual case. There was such a thing as internment for the duration of thewar or internment for one year or two years or half a year. proved Communist, who had been the Mayor of a town in Estonia, still a Communist; what would be his term of imprisonment?

13 November 1947_M_MSD_9_2_Ninabuck (Lea) termination of the war?

A No, your Honor. That was not up to me to decide what would happen at the termination of the war. I always told the officials here in this area we could make no decision with regard to security police matters. We could not make permanent decision. I mean decisions for the end of the war.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed.

VON STEIN: a Communist Mayor the result of a sentence or was it a security measure? measure. have just mentioned develop? of October, that is, around the 10th or 15th of October, 1941, when the conditions in Estonia became stabilized. The reason for setting up this procedure in this fashion, together with directives which covered about three or four typewritten pages, was that a great number of qualified Estonians were at our disposal, lawyers, and civil servants, as well as authorities of the Estonian administration, who were employed in such tasks. Thus the conditions here were quite different from those in the other areas in the Soviet Union which had been discussed previously. directives. Q You spoke of thespecial objectivity of this procedure. Was the task of these police authorities limited only to finding out what was of disadvantage for the individual concerned?

A No, not at all. It was the express duty of these police authorities to investigate everything objectively and thoroughly, even that which was favorable to the indicted man, and to bring all proof which the man who was charged was requesting. That was what was writeen in those directives and it was repeated by me orally during general conferences of Estonian policemen and during individual conversations which I had with Estonian police officials.

Q Did you yourself make judgments in individual cases? his documents, and in these three cases I made the final decision which otherwise, according to the directives, was the job of the chief of Department 4.

Q How many individual cases were concerned here?

Q Well now, please tell me, had these men committed murder?

Q How many? espionage cases.....

Q Now, you sentence six men to death and you don't recall what you sentence them to death for?

Practically it was the way I have explained it, that ten to eleven Estonian officials in three to four different agencies were concerned with such -

MR. GLANCY: Your Honor, the prosecution objects for the same reason as it has before. It is merely repetition and reiteration. I think this ground has been fully covered.

THE PRESIDENT: Why are you going into this again, Dr. von Stein?

DR. von STEIN: I now come to the affidavit of the defendant in which he mentions a different opinion. BY THE PRESIDENT: facts with all the reviews that you have spoken of?

Q And you reviewed all those deliberations, did you? was the responsibility of Department Chief 4.

Q Yes, and you reviewed all the papers and all the deliberations?

Q Oh, well, were there some documents there that you didn't read?

Q And you don't know what was contained in those documents? read a large amount of reading matter, and therefore I do not have any concrete recollection of these six cases.

Q Well, you couldn't read the Estonian documents? German?

You merely approved what somebody else had done because you had faith in them? documents was a mere formality because you merely took the opinion of those who had preceded you? that I was of the opinion after what had been submitted to me, that an internment would have been sufficient.

of the essential points, which I did read.

Q Yes. It didn't occur to you to say that when I asked you that question about five minutes ago, did it? This just came to you as you deliberated in your mind as you were speaking?

A May I ask what question? I didn't get this. documents, you said no. I asked you if you knew what was in those documents, and you said no. Then, after many other questions had been put and answers had been given, then it occurred to you to reflect upon that and then you said that you had read a summary: is that right? the procedure which I have described before the recess. review, but on the fact that ten or eleven people had passed upon this beforehand, or ten? suggestions of these eleven people were not approved. question. You do not remember what these six people had done in order to be sent to their death. You cannot tell us today what each one had done?

Q All right, did you make a report on these executions? the next monthly report to the Einsatzgruppe.

Q Yes. Now those were the only six executions which you ordered while you were in Estonia?

Q. And in which year did they occur?

A. In the fall of 1941.

Q. 1941. Now, that was six years ago, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And all these six years you never gave any thought to these six executions, and, therefore, couldn't recall why they were sent to their death; why these people were sent to their death.

A. Your Honor, in the six years I have seen and read such a great number of documents, and had so many impressions that the recollection of the individual cases no longer exists.

Q. But these were the only six that you, yourself, ordered executed.

A. Yes.

Q. And although you studied the record, and although it was your act eventually which sent them to their death, and although these were the only six people in the whole world that you ever sent to their death, yet, you cannot tell us now, with all this time for deliberations, and with all the time you had to prepare for your case, why they were killed.

A. Your Honor, I said they were killed either for espionage activity or as functionaries of the NKWD. Other than those two categories were not among these six; that I remember definitely.

Q. They were sent to their death because they were communist functionaries or belonged to the NKWD?

A. No, pardon me. There were two groups: there were two types of people among them. One type was persons who were convicted of espionage. I don't know whether there were one, two, three or four. The others were people who were voluntary functionaries in the NKWD. and in this capacity they were criminal participants in the killing of Estonian citizens.

Q. So there were two categories; you don't remember who fell into either category.

A. No, I don't remember whether one or two or three fell into one category.

Q. That is as much as you can tell about the crimes committed by the six people who were executed?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed. Dr. von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, were all essential points contained in these motivated suggestions of sentence which would show what sentence would have to be imposed?

A. Yes, I already said that the procedure had to be absolutely objective, and all exonerating circumstances had to be mentioned too, and were mentioned in the summary.

Q. You just said that the Estonian documents were not read by you because you did not know the language. Did you discuss the suggestion of the judgment with the Estonian officials who read these documents?

A. No, I have.....

THE PRESIDENT: What was that answer. Repeat the answer.

A. What question? BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. My last question was the following: Whether you as a man did not know the Estonian language discussed with the authors of the judgment the matters of the judgment and about what the judgment was arrived at, and about the contents of the documents on which the judgment was based?

A. I did not discuss with these people these concrete six cases, but I often spoke with them about the thoroughness of the procedure; and about what would have to be considered when arriving at these judgments; and what the summary would have to have in them.

Q. Witness, if you were in doubt whether the judgments proposed were correct, didn't you discuss them with the authors?

A. If I had had any doubts about it, this would have certainly happened.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Von Stein, I must congratulate you an insisting upon your leading questions until you get the answer which you desire. Now, it was very obvious that your other question was a leading question. Didn't you discuss this with the Estonian home guard and with the judges. You know, that is a leading question. You practically suggest to the witness what he is to answer. If you say to someone: Now, didn't you discuss with someone when you were in doubt as to what you should do, his answer inevitably is going to be yes. He would have to be a fool to say no. So, that is known as a leading question, and you know a leading question is not permitted. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, we now come to a statement in your affidavit, of the 21st of April, 1947, in Volume III-A, Exhibit 102, Document NO-2891, page 100 of the German text, page 73 of the English text. Your affidavit twice mentions the fact that forgeries were not completely excluded, were not completely out of the question. Please comment on this.

A. These statements are not based upon the statements by me, but on the fact that the interrogating officer attached great importance to putting these statements about the distortion, the forgeries, into this.

MR. GLANCY: If it please the Court, I believe that the defendant had ample opportunity previously; in fact, this, morning, to explain all this. All this is cummulative.

THE PRESIDENT: What do you say about that, Dr. Von Stein? Can you offer a new phase of this situation which would justify the re-questioning?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I wish to withdraw the question, and I shall take up another question about the same affidavit. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, how is it that in the same affidavit when discussing this procedure nothing is mentioned about a judgment commission and about the directives issued by you about establishing the individual guilt?

A. I wanted all these things to be contained in the affidavit, and I mentioned them to Mr. Wartenberg, and I asked him that the directives issued by me, the way I have described them this morning, be taken in, and as I have already described them a long time previously to other interrogating officers -

MR. GLANCE: I think the affidavit speaks for itself, sir. He makes the observation here before he signs it: I have had the opportunity to make alterations and corrections in the above statement. I made this declaration voluntarily without any promise of reward: I was not subjected to any duress or threat whatsoever. I think this is the highest and best evidence.

THE PRESIDENT: We will permit the witness to offer any explanation which he has on this matter.

A. I had the opportunity to make changes in this affidavit: I also had the opportunity to take in two additional sentences, but I did not have an opportunity to add anything more than those two sentences; and the statement which I had to sign here speaks only of changes and of corrections, not of additions. Mr. Wartenberg said expressely in answer to my request, that I would have such opportunity very shortly-I thought this would be in April or May--to mention all this exactly. Therefore, I had prepared it in my cell in order to give it to him, and I still have this; but he did not call for me again. I no longer had an opportunity to make these additions. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Well, witness, you actually made up four affidavits, didn't you?

A. In April only one affidavit was made, the one that I have before me. The others are of November, 1945. At that time we did not speak about these things.

Q. Well, why didn't it occur to you when you wrote up the other three affidavits to tell this very important item?

A. In these affidavits in November, 1945, we did not talk about communists at all. The statements were not made out by me, but the prepared text in November, 1945, was brought by Mr. Wartenberg; and in November, 1945, to a lesser extent than here, the possibility existed to make changes. I could not touch upon the subject of communism in Estonia when talking to Mr. Wartenberg in November 1945 if he does not even ask me for it.

Q. Well, it never occurred to you, even though you are a lawyer, in preparing four affidavits to add the very simple statement that no execution was ever performed without the case having been duly tried, duly reviewed, and duly passed upon by supreme authority.

A. Your Honor, this thought occurred to me and for almost half an hour I discussed this matter with Dr. Wartenberg, asking that he permit me to add all this, but he did not permit it.

Q. Well, why couldn't you, when the affidavit was finally given, back to you to sign, add that very simple statement. You could do all that in one sentence.

A. Your Honor, it was not permitted. Mr. Wartenberg took it upon himself to figure which auditions and corrections he would allow and which corrections he would not allow. Such corrections were typewritten in the office of Mr. Wartenberg.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Von Stein, did you question Mr. Wartenberg on this particular subject when he was in court?

DR. VON STEIN: No, your Honor. At that time I did not have the defense of Sandberger.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, who was his counsel at that time?

DR. VON STEIN: My colleague, Dr. Mandry.

THE PRESIDENT: Did he question Mr. Wartenberg?

DR. VON STEIN: I do not know, Your Honor: I cannot give you any information.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well; proceed. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, what instruction did you give about the manner of carrying out the executions?

A. The instructions were for an absolutely militarily correct carrying out; end letting them keep on their clothing.

Q. Were you present during executions?

A. No, I didn't consider this my duty. They were carried out by the Estonian home guard, under the command of an Estonian officer; a German official from Department IV was present as a witness.

Q. You said that you supervised the activity of Department IV as an inspector. Do you remember any definite individual case?

A. An individual case which I remember especially well was the following. I was addressed about it by a high German official. A respectable Estonian citizen, lawyer by profession; his name was contained in the list of my D agents which was found the and of September in the NKWD building. Thereupon he, of course, was arrested. When about six to eight weeks my attention was drawn to this case by German official. The case had not been known to me previously. I asked the director of the Estonian police and the following story came out: This personality had already been released again. The case stood as follows: He was actually an agent of the NKWD; therefore, he was justly listed in that list, but he gave the following facts: That he had been forced to participate in that activity as an NKWD agent, and that in case of refusal he would have to suffer great disadvantages; and he assured that he did not make out any reports which would be of disadvantage to other people. We could not prove this because his superiors in the NKWD were not there at the time; but he was known as a respected national personality. Thereupon, he was released becaused it could not be proven that as a forced NKWD agent he had done anything which would have injured others.

Q. Witness, in view of the lesser communists you have already said that these were released after their cases had been reviewed. Who decreed these releases?

A. Investigations of arrest took place currently, and the activity of the board of pardon also led to releases. Amnesties were undertaken on the occasion of national holidays; in February and August 1912; always of several communists who were less incriminated such amnesties were decreed by the Chief of the Civil Administration in Estonia, by the General Commissioner.

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Do I understand, witness, that some communists were released?

A. Yes.

Q. Not even put in jail or sent to a concentration camp?

A. No.

Q. Well then, conditions were much better in Estonia for a communist directly under the German armed forces than they were in Germany itself during the war.

A. Yes, perhaps; I don't know.

Q. Well, you know, don't you, that any one who professed communism in Germany, during the war, was immediately apprehended and placed in custody; don't you?

A. No, I don't know this because I did not have any insight into the activity of Department IV.

Q. So a man in Estonia could be a communist and talk communism, and yet not suffer any penalty of any kind?

A. During the time of the German occupation, he could not talk about communism to others without his being immediately arrested thereupon.

Q. Well then, what do you mean by a lesser communist?

A. I mean by the following: In Estonia there were people, perhaps ten thousand, who during the communist period of 1940-1941, had actively professed to believe in communism. Not all of these people were then interned furing the German occupation or kept in internment, but only if there were special reasons, such as danger of the security of the German army.

Q. Well, suppose a man was a communist during the Soviet regime, and he still remained a communist; he did not revoke communism; he did not in any way indicate that he had out with the past; that he was still a communist. Would he be released?

A. It depends how he expressed his attitude; whether he expressed it at all.

Q. Well, suppose he merely in conversations told someone: Yes, I am a communist; I believe in communism; and that is all.

A. Then he was interned.

THE PRESIDENT: All right; that is all. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. How did the population react to these releases?

A. The population severely criticized these releases; they said that the Germans were too soft; that they did not know communism as it was in practice; and that was completely wrong to release less incriminated communist after so short,a period.

Q. What experiences did you have with these releases?

A. One part of the released people was quiet, that is to say, refrained from taking part in any activities. Another part, however, again took up communist activities and, therefore, had to be again interned.

Q. Did you do anything to prevent excesses on the part of the population who was aroused?

A. Yes, I did two things. First of all, in the summer, via the Estonian police prefectures, I tried to have the Estonian home guard refrain from independent operations, that is, not to undertake any executions on their own responsibility. Later, in the fall of 1941, I issued an energetic decree against denouncers, that is, persons who wrongly or out of negligence, accused others of communist activities. This decree was made public over the radio.

Q. Do you believe that you did the best in your power with these proclamations in the sense of actual justice. Did you do the best that was possible under the circumstances?

A. Yes, I think I did.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you think he could have answered no to that? If you ask a man if he is really good and kind, and wonderful, and smart, do you think he is going to say no?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, if he were of the opinion that he did everything, then he would have that opinion. There are some people who say that they had not done everything.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you think Sandberger would?

DR. VON STEIN: Mr. Sandberger is under oath; I imagine he is going to answer correctly.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. I think it is a good time to go to lunch. We will recess until 1:45.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

Q Witness, in the document L-180, in the Volume II-A. Exhibit 34, page 1, in Enclosure No. 8, it is stated that in Estonia, 684 Communists were executed. Are the 405 executions which took place in Dorpat without the assistance by the SIPO, through the Field Kommandos and the Home Guard mentioned in the Report of Events No. 88, are they contained in these figures?

A Yes, they are contained therein. The report of Events No. 88 originates from the end of August.

MR. GLANCY: It is in Book II-A, sir, page 26.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

A (Continued) Yes, they are included. The Report of Events No. 88 originates from the end of August, and the report L-180 is from a later date in October. the responsibility of the German SIPO?

Q Won't you tell about the figures. By this figure you mean the difference between 684 Communists contained in the L-180 and the formerly mentioned 405 executions mentioned in a former report? German Security Police, most of them don't. Among them are such executions which occurred in other localities in Estonia apart from Dorpat, and were carried out in a similar manner as in Dorpat, that is, without the participation of the German Security Police, with the Field Kommandos and local commanders of the Army and Estonian Home Guard.

Those are the temporary conditions in July and August, 1941, about which I talked in detail. January, 1942. This is contained in Volume II.D. Exhibit 87, Document NO-2834, page 27 of the German text and 22 of the English text. Please comment on the report on page 32 of the German text, page 26 of the English text about political police events in Reval. Please tell us first why the report covers the time from the 1st to the 22nd of January.

A May I have the document, please?

Q It is Document NO. 2831. about because this paragraph is obviously taken from amonthly report by Department IV in Reval. The term for reports from the Estonian Police to the Security Police was always the 25th of each month, in this case, the 25th of November. The German Security Police processed it on the 27th, and sent it off on the 28th or 29th. this report? that the following conclusions can be drawn. The political department of the Police Presidium at Reval, as it is written here, what it actually means is the Estonian Police Prefecture in Reval submitted recommendations for sentences to Department I-A. This formulation shows that a procedure took place whereby recommendations for sentences were decided on after being worked out and were submitted by the Estonia Police Prefecture to the German Security Police. We are concerned here with three kinds of dcisions, partly executions, partly transfers to concentration camps, and partly releases.

Q In this document, the expression "concentration camp imprisonment" is mentioned. Please explain how and where these prisoners were interned.

spent their time of internment in prisons and in prison camps of the Estonian Justice Administration. The Estonian Justice Administration had put at the disposal of the police part of these camps and prisons. The expression "concentration camp" is therefore wrong". This is merely an abbreviation by a German official who, instead of using the correct expression "prison" or "internment camp" used this abbreviation. The personnel and the instructions in these Estonian prisons and in these camps were subordinated to the Estonian Legal Administration arid were exactly the same as foremerly in the Estonian Free State. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Did you pass upon the 282 sentences mentioned in this document?

A Your Honor, I personally confirmed 6 verdicts. I am not sure and cannot say whether these six cases are contained in these 79 cases. described this morning happened during that time.

Q But you were in charge of the Kommando, weren't you? chargeable with their receipt, weren't you?

Q Well, Department IV was under you, wasn't it? Department V, for instance. kommano I-A, they were, in fact, sent to you. You may not have personally received them, but they were sent to you, as a matter of fact.

Q. Yes, and of these sentences you only examined 25. Is that what you tell me?

A. I said this morning that altogether in the fall of 1941 I had 25 cases submitted to me. It is possible that these 25 cases were during that time, but it is not certain. I cannot say it.

Q. Were you interested in the others at all?

A. I had organized this procedure in such a manner that I was certain, or believed to be certain that it was done with reliability and justice as far as possible. The Department Chief IV who had arrived at this decision was a man who had the same rank as I had, namely, that of a major, and had been used to these things for many years, which I had not been, because I never had anything to do with such things.

Q. Now, you approved of six executions. There were 79 in all. Did you interest yourself in the other 73?

A. I did not have them submitted to me.

Q. Did you interest yourself at all in these other 73 executions?

A. Your Honor, I did not quite understand what you mean by the expression "interested."

Q. Yes, well, under your authority, because you were the Chief of Einsatzkommano I-A, there were 79 executions. 6 of these you were personally familiar with. Did you know of these other 73?

A. About no individual case, no.

Q. Did you know of these other 73 executions?

A. No.

Q. 73 executions took place under your command and you did not know about them?

A. I knew the figures and that these executions took place, but I did not know the individual cases.

Q. You did know, then, that 73 executions were going to take place?

A. Yes,

Q. And you yourself didn't interest yourself in any of these execution with the exception of the 6 you have mentioned?

A. That was not my task, Your Honor.

Q. Well, your answer is, you did not concern yourself with these 73.

A. I personally did not concern myself with them.

Q. Very well. Who actually ordered the executions? You were the Chief. Who finally put his O.K. on "Let this man be shot."

A. It was the man who confirmed the judgment of this Commission of 3. The procedure was first were these where the persons participated -

Q. Well, just a moment. We have gone through this. Now the recommendations for executions are before Einsatzkommando I-A, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. You tell me that Department IV passes upon these sentences, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now who was the individual officer that finally O.K.'d the executions in your Einsatzkommando?

A. During the time which is concerned in that report of events it was a Criminal Councillor, Dr. Merten.

Q. Doctor who?

A. Dr. Merten.

Q. Dr. Merten, Yes, now he put his O.K. on it and it didn't come to you at all?

A. No.

Q. So, therefore, as Chief of the Einsatzkommando, executions took place in the name of the kommando without your being familiar with what was taking place?

A. Your Honor, that was not my task. Originally, it had been the task of the subkommando leaders to be able to carry out executions themselves. Later on I asked the Einsatzgruppe Chief to change this and at least that the Department Chief IV should decide for the entire kommando. I already considered this an improvement of the situation in the interest of those concerned.

Q. Well, do you think it might be a further improvement, if you passed upon sentences of execution?

A. Your Honor, as far as work was concerned, this was not possible for me to do, because according to the will of my superiors the main point of my work was concerned with Department III. That is, most of my time I had to work, according to the wish of my superiors -- I had to work on tasks in Department III. I did not have a Department Chief of Department III. I therefore was personally in charge of this department.

Q. And what did you do in Department III?

A. In Department III I had to make reports about the domestic sphere in Estonia and passed on political advice of the Army commander in Reval, political reporting to the Army High Command, to the Commander of the rear army territory, to the German General Commissar in Reval.

Q. Wouldn't you think that in the domestic sphere it would be interesting to find out why 73 people were about to be executed?

A. Your Honor, this did not belong to the task of Department III. Executions belonged to the tasks of Department IV.

Q. Well, it was still part of the domestic sphere. It happened right there in Estonia.

A. Yes, but it was not part of domestic sphere work; according to Department III -

Q. Well, you had Department III in your immediate charge, but Department IV was also under your control.

A. But there was a difference, Your Honor. I was in charge of Department III personally and here all my superiors constantly made requests to me personally.

Q. And Department IV was under you?

A. In Department IV had been assigned to me as an official of the Security Police also in the rank of major.

Q. Very well, then you were satisfied with the competence of Department IV to approve executions without your reviewing or in any way looking into the individual cases?

A. I don't understand the main verb in this sentence.

Q. You were satisfied with the competence of the major in Department IV, so much that you could depend upon him entirely to authorize executions without your interesting yourself in those individual cases?

A. Your Honor, it was not a matter of my being satisfied. My superiors had settled it that way because of my.-

Q. Now, Witness, we are losing a lot of time. If you will only try to answer the question directly -- Now, you were the Chief of the Einsatzkommando?

A. Yes.

Q. And Department IV was under you?

A. It was one of the 5 departments under my charge.

Q. Very well, now if the major in charge of Department IV were very incompetent and was executing people carelessly, that would be your concern, wouldn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes, so therefore you were satisfied with his competence and you allowed him to make the decisions of life and death and you didn't review any of those cases.

A. Your Honor, not I would allow him, but my superiors, whom I told about, determined it so.

Q. Well, suppose that this major were very incompetent and he was executing people without the required evidence and this came to your attention, would you do anything?

A. Of course.

Q. Well, all light, then. When I say to you and it is a very simple question; you are just losing a lot of time -- that you were satisfied with his competence and therefore you didn't bother to look into the cases because you were satisfied.

A. I beg your pardon. It is not a matter of my being satisfied with his competence, but his competence was established by my superiors and it

Q. Suppose that your superiors had given you a man and they were satisfied with his competence, but you found that he was incompetent, that he was careless, that he was reckless, and that he was drunk all the time; that he signed executions without looking into the cases. Would it be your job to do something about it?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes, well, if you could have passed on his incompetence, then you could have also passed on his competence.

A. I don't quite understand the question.

Q. If you could decide that the man was incompetent, as you said that you could, then you could also decide that he was competent.

A. No, your Honor, there is a difference. The basic question, that the Department chief........

Q. Well, listen. We are not going to get anywhere with this, so let's drop it. Now, who actually signed the death warrant?

A. The confirmation of the death warrant was given by Department chief IV except for the six cases where I did it myself.

Q. So that is was the signature of this Department IV man that sent 73 to their death?

A. Yes.

Q. And then who performed the execution?

A. As I mentioned briefly when describing the procedure, the entire further execution of the procedure was dealt with by the Estonian police.

Q. And you had someone from Department IV to supervise it?

A. An official of Department IV was present as witness during such executions.

Q. And so far as these 73 were concerned you knew nothing about them?

A. I knew that executions occurred.

Q. But you didn't know for what reason?

A. I did not know the individual cases.

Q. You didn't know why these 73 were being executed because you didn't investigate the cases?

A. I did not know why it was done in each individual case.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. The witness, Dr. Mae, mentioned that in the Estonian Republic until 1940, Communism had been prohibited by law and in major cases, serious cases a death warrant was passed.

Do you and your officials know all about this.....at the beginning of your service in Estonia?

A. Yes, we know that. We knew that Estonian court martinis were competent for the punishment of such occurrences in the time of the Estonian Republic until the time of 1940.

Q. The Prosecution stated that all Einsatzkommandos had to do with sorting out political functionaries out of POW camps. Please state your opinion on this.

A. I remember for certain that such orders were not carried out in Estonia.

Q. During the fighting in Estonia were there a great number of POW's?

A. No, there were relatively few. Many POW's were other parts of the Eastern front there where so-called local fights took place. This did not happen in Estonia.

Q. In that year, 1941, were there POW's quickly transported to the south from Estonia, or did they remain in the country?

A. Most of them were transported to the south immediately in order to be assigned to work there.

Q. Were POW's who were taken prisoner in Estonia not used for work assignment in Estonia proper where they were required?

A. No, except for a few exceptions, this was not the usual thing because in Estonia in 1941 there were many unemployed among the population, for example, in the city of Reval alone 20,000, as one of the situation reports in the document shows; 20,000 unemployed in a city like Reval of 100,000 inhabitants is a relatively very high figure.

Q. I now want to discuss measures against the Jews. You said previously that Dr. Stahlecker had told you at the exterminated, and he ordered you to do so, and he expressed this order towards you repeatedly.

Did you inform your subcommando leaders or your Department Chief IV of this order, and did you give them orders concerning the Jews?

A. I did not tell my sub-commando leaders, as I already said, and my Department Chief IV about the Fuehrer Decree announded in Pretzsch. As I have already mentioned, I only told my deputy because I had great, confidence in him. I Informed him of the existence of this decree not for the purpose of having him carry out this order, and I added that I would do everything whenever possible in order to evade this order as far as the commando and myself were concerned. In the following time in July and August measures were taken against the Jews in Estonia only to that extent as measures were taken against other people, for instance, Estonians, Russians, and so forth, and with the same procedure except for a few internment cases which I shall discuss in detail later on. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Witness, I notice that every few minutes you tell us that you are going to discuss something later on. This trial is going to end sometime; it isn't going to go on forever; and I wish that when you come to a point, you would discuss it then and there because you have a half dozen things hanging in mid-air, so (describe these things just as you go along. And in that respect since we are now on that subject, we want to ask you directly whether you did or did not believe in the Fuehrer Decree which called for the execution of Jews and communist functionaries, gypsies, and so on?

A. I did not quite understand the question, whether I believed in it, it is better to mean whether I believed in the existence of the decree.

Q. Whether you believed in the execution of the decree.

A. I don't understand the expression in the German, the execution of the order".

Q. Well, did you believe.........let's put it this way.........did you accept the Fuehrer Decree as something which should be put into effect?

A. I already explained that my reaction to the Fuehrer Decree........

Q. Now, please don't go into all that. Why don't you answer the question directly? Did you accept the Fuehrer Decree as something to be enforced?

A. It was my intention to avoid carrying out this order as far as possible concerning myself and my commandos.

Q. Then you did not accept it as something which should be enforced?

A. I did not doubt its legality.

Q. Now, you have been trained in law and I presume you have been trained very unwisely in how to evade questions, but forgot your training now if you were trained that way and try to answer questions directly. Did you accept this order as an order to be enforced?

A. Your Honor, this question cannot be answered with "yes" or "no".

Q. Well, why can't it? Here is an order. We will give you an order. You read the order, and your conclusion is, "I will enforce it", "I will not enforce it". Now what is your answer?

A. In this case I can say I decided not to offer any open disobedience.

Q. Then your answer is, "I will not enforce it"?

A. I beg your pardon, I did not understand it.

Q. Here is the order, and order says that you are commanded to execute Jews, communists, functionaries, gypsies and so on. Now, you look at that order. You are a soldier, and you come to a conclusions. "I will execute that order" or "I will not". Now, which conclusion did you come to?

A. Neither to the one nor to the other, but to this conclusion, that if at all possible I would have nothing to do with the execution of this order.

Q. Well, then you concluded you would not enforce it. You are either on a horse or you are not on it.....you can't be half on a horse and half on the ground, if you are in that situation, you are in a pretty bad situation.

A. Your Honor, I was in a forced situation where I could not come to a clear decision, as it happened to many of my comrades as well.

Q. Now, don't bring your comrades into it, they have been answering for themselves, and some have been a little more forthright than you have been, let me tell you that now. You have this order; you are going to enforce it, or you are not going to enforce it. Now, what conclusion did you come to?

A. I first came to the conclusion to delay the execution as long as possible.

Q. All right. For that moment you are not going to execute it. Now, did there come a time when you said, "yes, I will execute it"?

A. No.

Q. So, therefore, you refused to enforce the order?

A. I did not express my disobedience.

Q. Well, to yourself?

A. Myself, yes.

Q. Yes. Now, you have given us quite a long speech on the propriety of the order. You said that even if the Fuehrer decree was contrary to International Law it had to be enforced because it was German law. Did you say that?

International Law it was German law and, therefore, had to be enforced-did you say that? was German law?

Q You did say that?

Q Then at that moment you were accepting the decree as German law?

Q Yes. And you refused to obey German law, is that what you are telling us?

A I did not refuse it, but I talked to my superior, Dr. Stahlecker repeatedly, and asked him to delay the enforcement of this order.

Q Did you speak to your sub-commando leaders about this order? tioned before.

Q Did they know about the order?

A The Fuehrer decree?

Q You didn't revoke it so far as they were concerned?

A I did not pass on the Fuehrer decree to these men; consequently I did not have to revoke it.

Q Well, they knew that it existed?

A No, Your Honor. I already said that I did not hand this order on to these men.

Q Did your sub-commando leaders know of thei Fuehrer decree?

Q They didn't know of it?

A No. I did not inform them of the Fuehrer decree.

Q Well, did they learn of it by themselves? me.

Q You don't think that they knew about the Fuehrer decree? whose name is Karstens with whom I talked about it. people then, and don't tell me all about this business of the trials and so on. I mean where they had independent commands. The measures under discussion until now concerned communists, and concerning communists I did announce the decree however not in a collective form. performed some executions. Now, on what authority did they perform these executions? merely said that it is possible that this happened. I also explained that I told the sub-commando leaders about everything that was told us in Pretzsch and Schmiedeberg, however, with the exception of the Fuehrer decree concerning the Jews, gypsies, and the collective destruction of functionaries, everything else was known to the sub-commando Leaders. in the Baltic countries your sub-commando leaders and those under you did not know about the Fuehrer decree calling for the execution of Jews? concerned with the period up to the end of September when for the Einsatzgruppe during my absence the execution of 400 Jews was ordered. At this time at the end of September, the beginning of October, the first four sub-commando leaders were ordered back. the Fuehrer decree calling for execution of Jews?

PRESIDENT: Proceed, Dr. Von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN: Number 88 in Volume IIA, Exhibit 46, Document No. 3149, page 92 of the German text, page 91 of the English text? been people who because of a communist activity and endangering security were arrested by the Estonian home guard and the commander of the home guard or the field commander in Dorpat, because of this communist activity sentenced them to death.

PRESIDENT: Are you going back to these 50 Jews again? Well, for someone who didn't know anything about Jews you are spending a great deal of time about these 50 Jews. He has given this explanation a number of times.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, at the beginning of this case we only talked about communists and we now intend to speak only about the Jews. It is right that the 50 Jews were mentioned at the time in connection with the figure of the communists, but in order to give a unified impression to the Tribunal concerning the Jewish question and how it was dealt within Estonia, we now want to give a general explanation about all the points contained in the documents about the extermination of Jews in Estonia.

PRESIDENT: Proceed.

MR. SANDBERGER: I believe the question has been answered. BY DR. VON STEIN: of the 12th of October 41, Exhibit 38, Document No. 3155, page 40 of the German text, page 43 of the English text.

PRESIDENT: What is the delay about? We are all ready.

DR. VON STEIN: I was only waiting for the page--the English page in the English document book.

PRESIDENT: I thought it had been announced. It is page 43. All right, proceed.

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, page 43.

MR. SANDBERGER: What was the question, please? BY DR. VON STEIN: The question was how many Jews approximately were in Estonia when the German army arrived there? mentioned that after the occupation of the country about 2,000 Jews might still have been in the country at the time. This estimate is incorrect. In reality less than 1,000 Jews were still living in Estonia after the occupation of the country. This is merely an estimate which was not confirmed later on. under what circumstances it was written? monthly report of the month of September to the Einsatzgruppe. It was sent off from Reval on 29 September. I was absent from Estonia at the time, namely, in the combat area of the 18th army near Leningrad for several weeks. The Department Chief IV of my commando had previously suddenly been recalled to Berlin. My deputy who was actually chief of Department III but also had to take care of Department IV simultaneously, did not know much about this subject because the Department Chief IV who had been dealing with the subject on his own written document obviously did not exist. Now suddenly with very short notice a report had been made to Einsatzgruppe A about the measures against Jews so far and simultaneously the Einsatzgruppe had approached us because nothing much had been done until then, and the deputy of the Department Chief IV on his part had to ask the Estonian police and the Estonian home guard to give him the documents about all that had been done until then. This explains that in this report many things are completely wrong, and many things are very unclear, and strong contradictions arise out of this report.

Estonia was started by you. Why did you do this--Stahlecker had ordered you to eliminate all Jews in Estonia immediately according to the Fuehrer decree? this order as far as possible hoping that it would be revoked or rescinded. On the other hand, I did not want to show any open disobedience. When I talked to Stahlecker at the end of July 1941 I asked him to agree to this, that executions in general would not be carried out by German commando members but by the volunteer Estonian guard, but I emphasized that this would mean a delay of executions because the home guard at first was busy dealing with the anti-communist measures.

Q What did Stahlecker say to this? he gave instructions that then at least all Jews in Estonia be interned for security reasons immediately. of events Number 111. It says here it was carried out immediately for the following groups, for all Jewish men over 16 years of age, and for all Jewish women of working age in Reval and vicinity, in Dorpat, and vicinity, and Pernau and vicinity, is that right?

No, that is not right in that form. This report is therefore wrong to that extent. It only applies concerning the case of Pernau. There it concerned internment of about one-hundred Jews in the middle of July 1941. In the District of Pernau there was a special situation; combat had been going on around the forest surrounding the city for some time. For their pro-Soviet attitude a great number of the Jewish population had become known in the meantime. Therefore, this internment of the Jews and Jewesses in Pernau, and the surrounding territory of about one-hundred persons was carried out about the middle of July.

Q And how about the case of Dorpat and Reval? Was internment of Jewish men and Jewish women carried out here immediately after the Germans arrived there? September. Consequently, they were mistaken in this report.

Q The following sentence in the report "Events No. 111" on page 3, does it apply which reads as follows: "For the Jews living in Reval and vicinity, at the moment in Harku, District of Reval, a camp is being prepared which after receiving the Jews from Reval shall be expanded to *---*tain the Jews from Estonia"?

A Yes, this sentence is correct. That is plan which I made at the *---*ginning of September. About the 10th of September I gave the order *---*at Jews be prepared for transfer to camps at Reval and Karku, and *---ring the following week, in time, this be carried out at first con---*erning the Reval people, later on the Dorpat people, and later on the *---*ernau people, and in time also concerning the Jews in the rest of the country, during the Fall of 1941.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, how do you explain that this statement is correct. You give unqualified approval of the correctness of the statement you just read. How did you explain this is correct, but the other statement about all male Jews over sixteen with the exception of physicians and appointed Jewish elders being executed by the Estonian Unit under Sonderkommando, how do you explain that is not correct. It is THE WITNESS:

May I ask Your Honor which sentence you mean, which I considered quite correct.

THE PRESIDENT: On page 3 there is the statement of male Jews -I am sorry. (interruption) Of male Jews over sixteen with the exception of physicians and appointed Jewish Elders." Do you find the place?

THE WITNESS: Yes, Your Honor. I have not yet given an anation of this. If you wish I will comment as follows:

THE PRESIDENT: I thought your attorney asked you on that, you not asked him that?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, the question will come up later.

THE PRESIDENT: I am sorry to proceed on that. Let's ask out that, as I was under the impression you had commented on that. *---*ll, allright, is that statement correct, or not correct?

THE WITNESS: It is correct that all male Jews over sixteen *---*ears of age except physicians and Jewish elders were executed by the Extonian homeguard unit under supervision of Sonderkommando 440, it so says here; that is right, it was done in the time between the 26th and 29th of September, without my knowledge while I was absent from Estonia in the combat area south of Leningrad at the immediate order of Stahlecker.

THE PRESIDENT: Is that the item you referred to in your affidavit? Do you explain that in your affidavit?

THE WITNESS: No, Your Honor, I didn't mention this in the affidavit. This point is not contained in that affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, in your affidavit of 23 April, "On the basis of orders issued by Stahlecker I arrested all the Jews in Estonia. In October of November, 1941, Stahlecker ordered these people to be executed."

THE WITNESS: No, that is not this order but a later order. This affidavit refers to these Estonian Jews who remained alive after this first order of Stahlecker's had been carried out, there were fivehundred to six-hundred.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then there were two groups of Jews that were executed?

THE PRESIDENT: I am sorry I interrupted you, Dr. von Stein. You may continue. BY DR VON STEIN: sentence in the Einsatz Report 111, which I quoted, and it deals with the question whether at the time in Harku a camp was prepared for the Jews. You replied, that is right. I see it is in time about 10 September 1941, the order on this?

Q I now ask you; why could it never have been earlier. Your instruction, why was this not given at an earlier date than 10 September 1941? Reval at the end of August before we did not know anything about the existence of Camp Harku. In the following days, the beginning of September, I gave the order that a suitable site be found, and I was informed that a suitable camp existed here, and then I gave the order which I described here.

Q Witness, in this report of Events No. 111, concerning the issuance which showed that you tried not to carry out this order, doesn't that contradict the general attitude of Stahlecker? Did Stahlecker not reproach you about this? and not execution measures, which are only a small extent at least. On the basis of this report by Stahlecker, I was reprimanded severely by him in the middle of October. I told him how such a report had come about, namely, that I had been absent, he knew this, that the Department Chief had been absent, and that my deputy had not been informed, and that the expert had made this wrong report.

the time when this report was made you could not have been present in. *---*e he did not like it, and if I had been present such a report to I would have also objected very strongly would not have been made. --- A statement made by Herr Jost on the witness stand tells here during the execution of your office he noticed that you personally making out reports always used a very clear wording. Order that of view could you give us the points in this report of Events No. which are so incorrect and full of inconsistencies that you *---*inly would not have written them, or would have approved them, or --- have signed them? for a decision; not only do they talk about an execution of 440 but on the other hand statements are made which make no sense. --- very quick execution was forcible for example, it is said that the *---*sh population was to be seized according to their capability of --- On page 2 in the center, and on the following page 3 in the center, it is said they were prohibited from trading, taking part in trade, and so forth. All of those are instructions which were given, and it would have had no point if an execution would have been considered by me to be carried out very soon, or even been ordered by me. beyond doubt that the original report in which this report is based would have been submitted to you, if yen ha a been staying Reval at the time?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. von Stein, is that a statement by you, or is that a question?

DR. VON STEIN: The question, your Honor --the question, Your Honor.

is, whether the defendant Sandberger would have received this original report which would have been submitted to the defendant Sandberger, and in particular, would it have been submitted to him if he had been in Reval?

THE PRESIDENT: All right. Answer the question.

THE WITNESS: Even if I didn't see all reports of Department IV, owing to the great importance of this report, there is no doubt that I would have seen this report if I had been stationed in Reval.

THE PRESIDENT: We take it from that that you didn't see the report?

THE WITNESS: Yes, Your Honor, at the time, about from 12 September until 3 October 1942, I was certainly absent from Reval as Chief of the sub-commando in charge of the area south of Leningrad, and throughout this entire time my deputy acted quite independently with the transactions of the office. I only heard about this report later on when about 3 or 4 October I returned to Reval.

THE PRESIDENT: You had absented yourself from Estonia;

THE WITNESS: Yes, during the time I just mentioned.

THE PRESIDENT: What were you doing on this trip south of Leningrad?

THE WITNESS: I came at the time to my main job which was to be Kommando Chief with the 18th Army. My task with the 18th Army consisted from the very beginning of dealing with sub-kommandos in combat areas, and to be present there. From the middle of September onwards the combat area of the 18th Army was no longer in Estonia but to the south of Leningrad.

THE PRESIDENT: And were any Jews executed on this trip?

THE WITNESS: No, this was not my task. My task during that journey consisted of assisting the G-II Section, just as I had done in July and August in Estonia, as well, and as I have already described here.

THE PRESIDENT: Was it ever your task to execute Jews?

THE WITNESS: In my assignment as Einsatzgruppen Chief Stahlecker did give me the task but I never carried it out.

THE PRESIDENT: You were able to travel all through the Baltic countries, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, up into Russia, and you remained up there two years, and in all of that time you never executed a Jew?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, first of all, may I reply to the statement with an affirmative, but this part of conditions existed in such manner that after February 1942 Estonian Jews did not exist any more.

THE PRESIDENT: They had been all executed?

THE WITNESS: They had been executed at the order of Jeckeln in Pleskav.

THE PRESIDENT: In all this time you yourself never ordered the execution of a Jew?

THE WITNESS: No Jews except those who could have proved to have been active as Communists, who had been examined and had been sentenced.

THE PRESIDENT: And during all this time you were never courtmartialed, you never got into difficulties with your superiors?

THE WITNESS: I repeatedly had difficulties with my superios Stahlecker.

THE PRESIDENT: I mean any serious difficulties?

THE WITNESS: I didn't show any open disobedience towards Stahlecker.

THE PRESIDENT: Now what more open disobedience could you show than to refuse to obey a very clear order. He ordered you to start pograms and you didn't start the pogroms; he ordered you to eliminate Jews, you didn't eliminate Jews; he ordered you to execute Communist functionaries, you didn't do that. Now, what more open disobedience could have been manifested than that?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, concerning the question of pogroms, I told Stahlecker that it was not possible.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, you disobeyed. He wanted you to do it, and you didn't want to do it and you didn't do it.

That is disobedience, isn't it?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor. I said that Stahlecker didn't give this to me as an order to be enforced, but as a directive which should be followed as far as possible.

THE PRESIDENT: What is the difference between a directive and an order? A directive commands you to do certain things, doesn't it?

THE WITNESS: The difference in this case consist of the fact that an order is an absolute and compulsory order, a binding order.

THE PRESIDENT: Is that the reason you didn't obey the directive, because it was not compulsory?

THE WITNESS: Stahlecker told me to carry out the pogrom against the Jews.

THE PRESIDENT: Now please answer the question, why you didn't start the pogroms, and now you tell us it was not an order, but it was a directive, is that right?

THE WITNESS: No, I didn't use the word "order" but I used the word "directive", there is a difference there is a slight difference in the German, Your Honor, which, if possible, didn't absolutely have to be obeyed. I especially meant this difference.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, the reason you didn't obey a directive to carry out a pogrom, because it was not a direct order, is that right?

THE WITNESS: The reason was that I didn't want to enforce a pogrom.

THE PRESIDENT: Then you disobeyed an order, didn't you?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, it was not an order in that sense.

THE PRESIDENT: All right. Then it was not an order, and you didn't have to follow it at all, is that right?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Now the Fuehrer Order was an order, there is no question about that, is there?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: And you disobeyed that?

THE WITNESS: The order didn't say that the Jews be executed within a certain period.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, that is the reason you were able to do it, you could defer it two years, and in that way you didn't disobey the order?

THE WITNESS: I wanted to delay and defer the execution of this order, and I did this.

THE PRESIDENT: Your explaination then for the reason you didn't obey the Fuehrer Order is that it didn't say to execute the Jews Immediately?

THE WITNESS: No, Your honor, the reason was--

THE PRESIDENT: There will be a recess for fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHALL: The Tribunal is in recess for fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY THE PRESIDENT.

Q. Witness, is there anything in the reports on this trip of yours, this mission or yours to Leningrad? A. Did I understand you correctly, that you mean whether there is anything in this report about my stay in Leningrad?

Q. Yes.

A. No, that is not possible.

Q. Why not?

A. Because this report only covers the question of the Jews in Estonia within a report by Department IV.

Q. Well, just a moment, is there anything an all these reports........you had an opportunity to study them ........which talks about your mission to Leningrad?

A. Yes, there are several reports which are concerned with the reconnaissance in Leningrad, that is with the G-2 auxiliary service.

Q. Does it refer to you or to your kommando?

A. Part of this activity, or this G-2 auxiliary service for Leningrad, concerns me.

Q. Is there any reference in reports to you, Sandberger, or to your kommando, I-A, being on a mission to the south of Leningrad?

A. Yes.

Q. What document? Let us see it.

A. I can't tell you by heart, your Honor, I didn't write it down. If you permit I shall try to look for it by tomorrow.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, we were discussing Situation Report 111, namely, those points about the internment of Estonian Jews.

I now ask you from what parts of Operation Report 111 can you tell that in July 1941, that is, after your arrival in Estonia, you did not order at first an internment of all Estonian Jews?

A. From page 2 of this report it can be gathered first of all that no general internment of all Jews was at first ordered, for it says expressly here that internment measures were taken at Reval. Dorpat, Pernau, but there were nine other Estonian counties. Your Honor, this is document NO-3155, Operation Report 111, page 2. It says here expressing that internment took place in three different localities. Reval, Dorpat, and Pernau. These are only three counties. Outside of that there were nine other Estonian counties in which Jews also lived. That Jews lived in these other counties and how many can be gathered from Document L-180. On the next page of this operation report, that is on page 3, it is shown that some measures were ordered which would be completely incomprehensible if an internment would hare been ordered simultaneously, namely, forbidding of the public trade, forbidding school attendance, forbidding the use of theaters, and movie theaters, inns, etc.

Q. Why did you have to decide in favor of the internment of all Jews in September?

A. The pressure of Stahlecker became stronger. During a conference Stahlecker had asked me again around the first of September why the executions had not yet been carried out. I told him then repeatedly that the Home Guard, which was to carry out the executions, with his permission was still fully occupied with searching for Communists. Thus I accomplished that for the time being Stahlecker again consented with postponing the execution. But he again demanded categorically that the immediate internment be undertaken for reasons of political security.

Under these conditions I considered the internment as the lesser evil. Added to this was the fact, looked at from a Security Police point of view, that the underground movement which had been underway repeatedly was uncovered, whose leaders were leading Communists and NKVD officials, and further there was the realization of a strong implication of Estonian Jewry in Communism, especially within the NKVD.

Q. Did this internment correspond to your personal feeling?

A. No, the internment of all Jews did not correspond to my personal attitude, but it was unavoidable under these circumstances. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Did this internment correspond to your personal feeling?

A. No, the internment of all Jews did not correspond to my personal attitude, but it was unavoidable under these circumstances. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Witnees, when did you join the NSDAP?

A. In November 1931.

Q. And when did you join the 88?

A. On the 1st of January 1936.

Q. When you joined the NSDAP in 1931, did you know the policy of the Nazi Party with regard to Jews?

A. I had no idea that measures of this kind.......

Q. Now, listen Witness, please answer my question. Did you, in 1931, knew the policy of the Nazi Party with regard to Jews?

A. I knew the points of the Party program.

Q. Very well, now what was that program?

A. These points I understood to mean that a Numerus Clausus would have to be introduced, that is, that the Jews in Germany would have to be restricted in their professions corresponding to the ratio in the population which they held, and that a sort of minority right would have to be created for them.

Q. Then in 1935 did you learn of the Nurnberg Laws?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did they provide for?

A. I cannot give the exact contents, your Honor.

Q. You knew they were deprived of citizenship?

A. I cannot remember, but this is possible.

Q. You don't know the Jews were deprived of German citizenship in 1935?

A. I cannot concretely remember this.

Q. Do you know what happened November 10, 1938?

A. Yes.

Q. What happened?

A. The burning of synagogues at the order of Goebbels and on the next day arrests by Heydrich, by the Gestapo.

Q. Yes, and what happened to the Jews in Germany?

A. Many Jews were arrested.

Q. Well, they were sent to concentration camps, weren't they?

A. A part of the Jews were sent to concentration camps. Yes, I heard about that.

Q. Well, generally the policy was to put them all in concentration camps, isn't that right?

A. I did not know anything about this at that time.

Q. Well, you know now, don't you?

A. Now, of course I know that Hitler in the year 1941 gave the well-known order, and in the year 1942 he gave the general order for the extermination of the Jews.

That I know now.

Q. But you know between 1935 and 1941 Jews were sent to concentration camps?

A. I only know this in connection with the 10th of November 1938.

Q. You know that in Germany and in practically all occupied countries; it happened in Holland; it happened in France; it happened in practically all the countries the Jews were herded into concentration camps, if not worse?

A. Your Honor, about the conditions in the occupied territories I had no knowledge.

Q. Well, did you knew that in Germany Jews were sent to concentration camps?

A. Only in connection with the 19th of November. Then I hoard about it.

Q. However, in 1939 or 1940, do you remember that Jews were being sent to concentration camps?

A. In the year 1939 and 1940 I merely saw on the street in Lodz that there the Jews had to wear the Star of David, and I later saw that they were put into a special part of the city. I did not see and I did not hear that any of those Jews were put into concentration camps.

Q. You knew that their liberty was restricted, they were herded, put into ghettos or in concentration camps. You knew generally that was the policy?

A. No, no, that that was the general policy I did not know.

Q. Where were you at this time?

A. Partly in Berlin, partly in......

Q. In what office?

A. Office I of the RSHA.

Q. And you did not know that Heydrich's and Himmler's policy was to put Jews in concentration camps?

A. No.

Q. In which office were you?

A. Office I of the RSHA, that is the personal office.

Q How long were you there?

Q Well, tell me the time?

Q Well, beginning from what time? you did not know that it was the policy of the Reich to put Jews in concentration camps? camps. camps?

A You mean to send them all into concentration camps? cerned Jews?

Q You didn't agree with the Party so far as it referred to Jews? the restriction as to numbers is concerned, not as far as taking the citizenship away from them.

Q You disagreed with the Nuenrberg Laws?

A I wasn't asked.

Q Well, I ask you now, did you disagree with the Nuernberg Laws? it, I would not have approved it.

Q All right. You took the oath to Hitler, didn't you?

Q Now, you believed in German law, didn't you?

answer it concretely. I didn't quite understand it.

Q Did you believe in German Law? As a lawyer that should not be a difficult question. it be the Reichstag, passes a law and it becomes then binding on all German citizens, did you feel yourself compelled to obey that law?

A But I didn't approve of many decrees. it referred to Jews? rights.

Q And when did you come to that conclusion?

Q In 1935? became a member of the SS, and you got an important office in the Reich Main Security Office although you did not agree with the Party program insofar as it referred to Jews: is that right? with whom you worked? these things.

Q You deceived your superiors, did you not?

Q They knew that you were in favor of the Jews?

A Your Honor, I didn't say that I favored the Jews.

approve of their loss of citizenship, the confiscation of property, the placing in concentration camps, and further deprivations? remained in the SS? these measures.

Q The SD had nothing to do with Jews?

Q Don't tell us about Mr. Ohlendorf. He takes care of himself and he has been far more forthright then you have been. Now, can you tell us -- what can you tell us that the SD had nothing to do with Jews?

A No, I don't mean to say that, but I wanted to say that the SD, for example, after the 10th of November, 1938, made out several detailed reports which were against these measures of Goebbels in an economic respect which. Mr. Ohlendorf has already mentioned, as well as in a general respect about the morale of the population. knew that one of the cardinal policies of the SS and of the Nazi Party was the persecution of the Jews? aim was the persecution of the Jews.

Q I didn't say the main aim. Let me ask you this question. Did you know that there were Jews in the concentration camps of Germany? ment camp in Estonia? terned because of an individual guilt.

Germany, did you approve of that?

Q So therefore you did not believe in German law? agreement.

Q I didn't say directives. You told us this morning or yesterday rather, that the Fuehrer Order, even though it violated international law, if it did, was German law and therefore had to be enforced. You paid your respects to law in that instance; is that right?

A I didn't get the question. of Jews may have violated International Law but whether it did or not, it was German Law and therefore should be enforced. Did you say that?

Q Did you say that here in Court?

Q All right. So therefore you approved of the Fuehrer Order insofar as it was German law, but you disapproved of the German law which put Jews into the concentration camps?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. von Stein, you take up two other questions.

DR. VON STEIN: Shall I continue with the same point or shell I continue with my direct examination?

THE PRESIDENT: You continue with your direct examination.

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Continued) BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q Witness, did you have any legal misgivings about the internment? just given, because a Fuehrer Order existed. But -

THE PRESIDENT: Now, witness, you say that the reason you had no mis givings about putting Jews in the camp, the internment camp, was that there was a Fuehrer Order to that effect.

Well, there was a Fuehrer Order with regard to the execution of Jews. Why did you not have some misgiving about that, or why did you have misgivings about that?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I did not approve of either, neither of the execution nor of the internment of all Jews, but I had to decide in favor of the internment as the lesser evil because of the pressure of Stahlecker.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

A (Cont'd) Independent of the fact that I neither approved of the one or the other, according to my personal feelings, it was no question that this order in reference to the execution and of course in reference to an internment also justified this measure but there was a special reason here about the Jews in Estonia. In any Case I looked at it from that point of view. I had no possibility to examine whether it was completely in accordance with international law.

This point of view was the following. The Jews in Estonia were distinguished from the Estonians, the Russians and the Swedes and the Germans, not in reference to the race or to the religion, but the practical difference as it was politically acute in Estonia was the difference in their ethnic characteristics. That became evident in the legislation which the Estonian Free State permitted its minorities, namely, it permitted them cultural autonomy. This right of a cultural autonomy was granted by the Estonian Free State to the Russian minority, was a question of voluntariness on the part of these groups whether they made use of this or not. The Russian and Swedish minorities made no use of this. The German and the Jewish minorities did. Thereby the Jewish group had become an ethnic unit and thus it came about that within the Estonian Republic the Jews living in Estonia had their own cultural autonomy and therefore they were different in an ethnic respect from the remaining inhabitants of the country. Since this ethnic group

THE PRESIDENT: Well now, just a moment. What is all this leading up to? Now, you have established this ethnic group. Now what's this got to do with putting them into an internment camp. You said it was easy for you to put them into a camp and then you gave us this long explanation. How, bring those two points together.

THE WITNESS: Yes, the conclusion of this train of thought is the following: since this is a special ethnic group, and since this ethnic group had adopted a hostile attitude for the most part against Germany, as the Estonians had reported to us, it seemed justified to undertake such an internment and analogous to the same directives which of war.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, because of their hostile attitude you found it comparatively easy to confine them to this internment comp. That's what it sums up to?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q. Well then, it didn't break your heart too much to put them into an internment camp, did it?

A. I said before that I was against an internment, or rather, that I had personal misgivings about it without establishing individual guilt.

Q. Well now, you have given us two propositions. One, that it was with great regret and reluctance and against your own feelings, and with many misgivings, that you put them into an internment comp; that is one proposition. Then, you give us a long story on how because of their ethnic quality, becuase of the homogeneity of opposition to the German forces, that it was entirely justified to put them in camps; so, on one side your heart is broken; on the other side it is very gay. Now, if you can reconcile those two statements, please do so. If not, which one do you now give us an representing the facts?

A. Your Honor, in this statement is a matter of additional points of justification for these measures, the way it was discussed by me and my collaborators at the time, and the way it is described in an affidavit.

Q. Please answer the question. Were you satisfied to intern these Jews or not?

A. I had personal misgivings.

Q. Even though you know that they were enemies of the state?

A. In the case of those with whom it had been individually established.

Q. (interposing) Now, you put them all into one group. You went to great pains to tell us how you put them into one ethnic group.

A. Your Honor, I had no misgivings about those in whose cases it had been established concretely, but I had misgivings, not legal misgivings, personal misgivings with COURT II CASE IX the others.

Q. How many Jews did you put into that camp?

A. There were about eight to nine hundred.

Q. Did you examine each and every one of these eight to nine hundred to determine whether he was personally hostile to the Reich or not?

A. No.

Q. Then, how could you decide whether one should be confined or not, as against another.

A. Your Honor, perhaps I expressed myself mistakenly. I did not say that this was decided in each individual case,, but I said that all had to be interned, even those in whose cases no investigation had been made, and that is those cases I did not personally confirm it; nevertheless, it was unavoidable.

Q. Did you investigate the cases of any of these eight hundred to nine hundred Jews?

A. Yes.

Q. How many?

A. I cannot give you the number.

Q. Well, why can't you give us the number. You have given us a great deal of details on the Jews, why can't you tell us how many of the eight to nine hundred you examined.

A. I cannot remember this figure.

Q. Well, was it five hundred?

A. If I must give an estimate, it may be about eighty to one hundred.

Q. You examined eighty to one hundred; why didn't you examine the other eight hundred, or seven hundred? Do you think it was fair to examine only eighty to one hundred and not examine the rest? Is that your idea of justice?

A. For two reasons this did not happen, Your Honor.

Q. Why?

A. One reason is that Stahlecker had urgently ordered a COURT II CASE IX general internment, and I could not evade this.

Q. Why did you evade it for the eighty to one hundred you did examine?

A. There the investigations took place because in connection with other cases which were investigated, namely, Estonian communists, with whom these Jewish cases were connected; and, therefore, interrogations had to take place.

Q. Did you examine these eighty yourself?

A. I personally took no investigations myself.

Q. Then you didn't examine the case of any of these nine hundred?

A. I personally did not make any investigations; that was not my job.

Q. So you committed these eight hundred to nine hundred Jews without knowing whether they were enemies of the Reich or not; but only because they formed part of a racial group which had been condemned by Stahlecker and those above him; is that right?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: All right; proceed. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, is it correct that you faced a choice at that time, a choice of either executing Jewry on the basis of the Fuehrer Order; or, to intern Jewry.

A. After the conferences I had with Stahlecker, and which I have described, an internment was no longer avoidable under any circumstances; the compulsion of the order was too strong.

Q. Witness, is it correct that first of all an order for the execution of the Jewry existed?

A. Yes, of course, I have already said that.

Q. Is it also correct that you chose only the internment COURT II CASE IX of the Jews?

A. Yes, I have said that too.

Q. How was it possible that you were able to delay these internment measures for so long?

A. When Stahlecker addressed me on this question, I repeatedly asked him to agree to a delay in the executions for the reasons which I have already given. He was in a state of unrest about this, but he finally consented to it; but he ordered that the internment was to be carried out immediately, and the executions as soon as possible.

Q. What reasons did you give Stahlecker in order to accomplish a delay?

A. First of all, during a conference in the second half of July, I asked him to agree to a delay-BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. When was this conversation with Stahlecker?

A. In the second half of July.

Q. I thought you told us it was July 4th at Riga. Was there another conversation?

A. That was one conversation, and the next one was around the 20th of July in the Staff Headquarters of Stahlecker.

Q. When did you first speak to Stahlecker when he arrived in Riga?

A. That must have been on the 1st of July.

Q. Then you spoke to him on July 4th again?

A. On the 1st of July we did not speak about the Jews in Estonia, but on the 4th of July we did speak about the Jews in Estonia, yes.

Q. Then the 1st of July he said nothing about the Jews.

A. No.

Q. On the 4th of July he did.

A. Yes.

Q. On the 20th he did.

A. Around the 20th of July, yes.

Q. Yes, Did he ever tell you in all these conversations anything like the following: It was intended from the very beginning to obtain the cooperation of the reliable population for the fight against vermin, that is mainly the Jews and communists? Did he refer to the Jews as vermin?

A. The word vernim was not used.

Q. I am quoting from his language. He never used that word to you?

A. No. The word Vermin in reference to Jews I never remembered that Stahlecker used this.

Q. Did he ever use a more tender term?

A. I cannot remember the expressions he used. I cannot remember that he spoke of them any differently than Jews.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed. BY DR. VON STEIN:

A. Through the fact that Stahlecker in this conference on the 20th of July agreed that the executions not be carried out by members of the German commandos, but by Estonian home guard volunteers, a first delay of the executions was achieved. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Do I understand you to say that Stahlecker agreed that you were not then to execute any Jews?

A. This conference had about the following content. I told him what the conditions were in Estonia, and that thus far -

Q. (Interposing) Please tell us what he said to you with regard to the Jews. Were you or were you not -

A. (Interposing) Your Honor, I think it is necessary in order to explain this answer that I say what I reported COURT II CASE IX to him and what I suggested to him.

Q. How long did you talk to him on July 20th?

A. I cannot say how long we discussed the Jewish question in this conference.

Q. How long was the conference?

A. About two hours.

Q. Very well. What did you tell him? And what did he say to you about the Jews, but give it to us briefly.

A. I told him the following. Thus far no Jews had been executed in Estonia. No pogroms had taken place. This was not possible in Estonia; I would ask him to agree that my commando members would not carry out any executions in Estonia, but that this would only happen on the part of volunteer members of the Estonian home guard. Stahlecker agreed to this. Thereupon I told him -

Q. (Interposing) Well all right; you know that he agreed to that.

A. Yes.

Q. Yes. All right; let us -- and he still had that thought when you dismissed him or he dismissed you after the two hour conference?

Q Now, do you know that in his report he said, "In accordance with the basic orders received, however, the screening activities of the Security Police had to aim at a complete annihilation of the Jews"; was he telling you one thing and reporting something else? discussed with me and what he discussed with others and what he reported to Berlin.

Q Well, then, that is what I say. He told you one thing and reported another to Berlin.

Q You think that it wasn't his purpose to execute the Jews?

Q Then his language wasn't exaggerated. He did believe in the annihilation of the Jews? but he made an exception in your case. Was he especially fond of you?

Q So to that extent he made an exception in your favor?

Q Which ones?

A For example, in Lithuania and Latvia, even after Stahlecker's death, tens of thousands of Jews were still living.

Q Wait. You say he made these exceptions after he died? not have all Jews executed in his entire area.

Q Well, he might not have gotten around to it. That doesn't mean that he exempted them, just because there are some Jews living. It doesn't mean that out of the kindness of Stahlecker they are still alive, does it?

A I didn't get the question.

THE INTERPRETER: I will repeat it.

THE PRESIDENT: Don't bother repeating it.

Q (By the President) Did Stahlecker give every evidence of executing the Fuehrer Decree or not?

Q But he made an exception in your case?

A No. He only approved a delay. The Fuehrer -

Q He made an exception to the extent he didn't say to you, "You execute these Jews at once." He made that exception.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Dr. Von Stein.

THE WITNESS: Shall I continue with the question

DR. VON STEIN (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT SANDBERGER). No, I will ask you another question. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q What were your thoughts during these repeated delays? Did you keep on hoping that Hitler would revoke the order or limit it?

A Yes, I kept on hoping this? BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Did you ever hear any of Hitler's speeches?

Q And did you hear what he said about Jews? Jews. hope that he would change his views about the Jews? spoke about the Jews.

Q You knew something about Hitler's character, didn't you, that he was very adament and perservering once he made a decision?

the papers.

Q You didn't know he was a very resolute man? some instances it was said that he was not resolute and soft.

Q So you thought he might soften in his attitude about the Jews? That's what you were hoping for?

A "Soft" is not the right expression here.

A I was hoping --- May I continue? he had given, or at least restrict in.

Q Do you know whether he ever did restrict it or revoke it?

Q Who told you this?

A I cannot remember exactly who it was. It might have been the Chief of my office in the RSHA, but this is not quite certain.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed Dr. Von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT SANDBERGER): would revoke this order?

THE PRESIDENT: He has covered that now. You don't need to ask a question just because you have it on your book there, if it has already been discussed.

DR. VON STEIN: No, Your Honor, I ask this question, because the Tribunal just asked this question about Hitler and a possibility of revoking the order and I asked the defendant this question.

THE PRESIDENT: He gave his views on it. He hoped that Hitler would revoke the order. He was living in hope. You can't blame a man for living in hope.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, this answer is not sufficient. I would like to extend this answer and --

THE PRESIDENT: All right, we'll see what you get now. You ask the question.

Q (By Dr. Von Stein) Witness, you have told the High Tribunal that you had the hope that Hitler would after all revoke this order concerning the Jews. Could you give us any thoughts which induced you to adopt this hope? hope that the reaction abroad in reference to the execution of such measures in the Eastern front would be so strong that the German diplomats would report about this in such terms that Hitler in regard for the reaction abroad would come to change his opinion, not in reference to his opinion but in reference to the Jews, that is, the danger of the Jews in reference to Bolshovism, but in the sense that in the sense that in consideration of the reverse reacgion abroad would be stronger.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Von Stein. Now you may like this answer. You may think it is pretty good and that's the reason why you want to have him keep telling you this same answer, but I heard all that take place yesterday. I have that here in my notes. He hoped the order would be revoked, and he considered the thoughts --- I have it here in my notes that he hoped the order would be revoked. He considered the thought that if the order were executed the reaction would be so strong that Hitler would be compelled to revoke the order. Now he is merely giving you some warmed up --- warmed over agin, nothing fresh in this answer.

DR. VON STEIN: No, Your Honor. The question was a result of the High Tribunal's question whether he hoped that the delays would--

THE PRESIDENT: It doesn't mean that because the Tribunal asks a question that you must begin at the beginning all over again. This question has been answered. Let us go on to something else.

Q (By Dr. Von Stein) Witness, what thought did you yourself have about the questions of the order, in view of your own person?

than that.

THE PRESIDENT: You see, Counsel, even he is tired of that same question now.

Q (By Dr. Von Stein) Witness, you said before, when explaining the contradictions in the Operational Report III that you were not in Estonia when the report was made out and sent out. When was the Reval report which is contained in Operational Report III sent out from Reval?

A It was within the monthly report for September. The monthly report had to be sent out, had to be in Riga at the latest on the 30th of September, that is why it must have been made out on the 28th of September.

Q Where were you at that time? south of Leningrad for the purpose of doing auxilary service and helping the Army.

Q Since when were you absent from Estonia?

Q Why did you leave Estonia? beginning of the assignment. I was not Director of the Security Police at the time as my most important position. At this time during the second half of September the main job which I had, which I had to do for the 18th Army was, of course, not in Estonia, but in the combat area of the 18th Army, that is to say, in the area south of Leningrad. Everything else also was of secondary importance to the Army. The Army headquarters demanded that I was to be present with a subkommando in the combat area. Stahlecker gave a corresponding order.

Q When did you return to Reval from the combat area?

October. in Estonia? deptuy. these reports go on automatically without you? nor did I make any reports to Reval. In Reval everything went on without me. According to the conditions there, because of bridges having been blown up or for other reasons, the distance Reval Leningrad was about 10 hours by car. Between Leningrad and the Estonian frontier, there was a Russian Army corps. Therefore, the traffic between the details south of Leningrad and Estonia was very difficult and I wag not constantly at one place, but I was on the road frequently and difficult to get in touch with. On the Order of Stahlecker, my deputy who remained in Reval had complete power to continue my office there. That I was supposed to command my office in Reval from my office near Leningrad would have been almost impossible, just as impossible as when an infantry division is divided into two parts and one half is 300 kilometres away from the other and the communications are bad. Then the commander cannot command the part which is 300 kilometres away.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Von Stein, I think perhaps this might be a good point at which to recess until tomorrow morning. The Tribunal will be in recess until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 14 November 1947 at 0930 hours.)

of America, against Otto Ohlendorf, et al.,

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II.

Military Tribunal II is now in session. God save the United States of America, and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed Dr. von Stein. BR. DR. VON STEIN:

Q. We were discussing the operational report No.111. Witness, didn't you have any knowledge of this report, or of the facts mentioned in it?

A. In the period of time which was the last to be discussed yesterday, that is, when I was with my subcommando south of Leningrad, the period between 11 September and about the 3 October, I had no knowledge of this report , and of the facts reported in it only sofar as they had been ordered before my departure on approximately 11 September, namely, that the general internment of the Estonian Jews was to take place during the following weeks.

Q. That did your deputy report to you when you returned to Reval between the 3rd and 5th of October about the question of the executions of 450 male Jews contained in this report?

A. He told me the following: Around approximately 26 September there had been a telephone call from Department IV of Einsatzgruppe in Riga, with an order of Stahlecker that in the monthly report which was going to be given within the next two days everything was to be reported what had so far been done with regard to measures against the Jews, including all special treatment so far taken. My deputy answered that so far no special treatment had been undertaken. Thereupon, another telephone call came after a short time from Department IV in Riga with the strict order of Stahlecker to immediately undertake special treatment of considerable number of Jews, and to report about this immediately in the monthly report about to be made out, that is, within two days.

Q. What did your deputy do thereupon?

A. He passed the order on for immediate executions, namely , of those executions which are mentioned in this report. He passed this order onto the Estonian Home Guard, to the Central Offices of the Home Guard in Reval, and he had the executions supervised by German officials of Department IV.

Q. What happened to the Jews who were interned?

A. They were transferred in 3 November 1942, upon my orders from Camp Harku near Reval to Pleskau.

Q. What reasons induced you to take this step?

A. In October and November 1941, Stahlecker again ordered the carrying out of the executions. It was of special importance to him to be able to report tint Estonia was free of Jews. Since I knew that it would be decisive for him to be able to make this formal report, I tried to bring the Jews into a camp which was outside of Estonia, thereby he was in a position to report that Estonia was free of Jews. Another point of view was that the introduction of a civilian administration in Estonia was to be expected very soon, at the beginning of December, 1941. The installation of the civilian administration was to be connected with the High SS and Police Leader. I knew that the latter was a confidant of Jeckeln, and that for this reason alone it would be impossible that the 500 Jews would remain in a camp near Reval.

Q. What finally did happen to these internees?

A. In the second half of January, or in the first half of February the Higher SS and Police Leader Jeckeln travelled through Pleskau.

He heard by a coincidence that there were about 500 Jews fromEstonia in this camp in Pleskau. He was very much irritated by this, and gave the order to the subcommando-leader in a very severe and emphatic form to carry out the executions of these 400 or 450 Jews immediately. The subcommando-leader did this immediately without my knowledge.

Q. When did you hear of this operation of Jeckeln's ?

A. A few days after this event I came by coincidence through Pleskau on an official trip. On this occasionthe subcommando reported to me about this action.

Q. Can you remember the date?

A. I cannot remember the exact date, since I have no definite documents for this. But it must have been in the second half of January or in the first half of February.

Q. What makes you conclude this?

A.I remember that between this event and the death of Stahlecker, a few weeks passed, but during this time I no longer spoke to Stahlecker for at that time Stahlecker was in Lokvia for six to eight weeks, that is, with a commando of Einsatzgruppe-A with the 16th Army, north of Welikie Luki, and there Stahlecker had the military command himself of this commando. In the middle of March 1942 he was severely wounded there, and died shortly afterwards.

Q. Witness, you have testified that the main part of your personal work was not concerned with Security Police matters , but with other fields? Do tell us what these were?

A. In the first three months, that is to say , from July to September 1941, until the first days of October I was mainly commandoleader for the 18th Army, and to a very large extent occupied with the Auxilliary service for G-II of the 18th Army. This was the primary task from the viewpoint of the Army. For this reason I had during most of my time a constant liaison officer with Army Headquarters. In the

Q. In order to picture your political and critical mission, please give a few examples with which you were concerned, especially, and primarily in your reports?

A. Primarily I worked for the equalization in the status of the Estonians with the Germans, in principle and in practice. I tried to influence the German agencies, especially the German Civilian Administration in order to increase the automony to be granted to the Estonians in the economic field. I believe that this question will not be of interest here in detail.

Q. Your total mission in Estonia ten was to look after the security of this area. Will you please tell us how far these missions you have just described to us are concerned with the security of this area, that is, with the missions which were given to you?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Von Stein, you said in the very beginning of your question, "Your total mission in Estonia then was to look after the security of this area." Now that is stated as a fact, is it?

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. VON STEIN: Witness.

THE WITNESS: The work of Department II about which I just spoke was to try through their Political and Critical Reports, to show all those points which contributed to the discontent of the population, and to fight all these tendencies on the part of the German Administration, which would lead to such discontent. The line of thought in reference to the security of the area was that the security of the area taken care of through our Estonian forces would be all the better, the less there was discontent on the part of the population with regard to the burden of the war. Therefore the question of the equal status of the Estonians and the Germans was not only a material question but also a psychological one. I think that answers the question.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I have no further questions on direct examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Any defense counsel desire to cross examine the witness?

DR. GICK: Dr. Gick for the defendant Strauch. BY DR. GICK:

Q. Witness, were you in the beginning of November 1941 when Strauch was ordered to take up duties in Riga, leader of Special commando I-A with headquarters in Reval?

A. Yes.

Q. Could Strauch, who had been appointed commander of the security Police in Riga have, in your opinion, lead the Einsatzkommando II from Riga?

A. In this time, in November 1941, this was not possible. In the course of the Summer 1941 Stahlecker had collected all parts of Einsatzko mando II and III. All those who were not needed to fill the area of the 4th Army, and later into the 16th and 18th Armies; later on these elements of Einsatzkommandos II and III were committed with the 16th and 18th Armies, that is to say, also in the areas south of Leningrad, and in the area of Locknia, north of Welirie Luki. These commandos were lead directly by Einsatzgruppe-A, and not from the rear area in Riga or anywhere else.

Q. The Staff of Einsatzgruppe-A was in Krasnbgvardeisk?

A. The Staff of Einsatzgruppe-A was in Krasnbgvardeisk, yes.

Q. Witness, when was the agency of command of the Security Police and SD for Latvia installed in Riga?

A. What was automatic together with the introduction of the civil administration. When that happened in Latvia, I don't know exactly. It must have been around July or August.

Q. July or August 1941?

A. Yes, 1941.

Q. Since Latvia is the southern neighbor of your area, Estonia, you probably knew the name of the then commander in Riga. Did you know at this time that Strauch was commander of the Sipo and the SD in Riga?

A. I must say here that during this entire period in the fall of 1941, that is also in November 1941, to which your question refers I was not in Riga and had no official contact with the agency of the command of the Security Police and SD in Riga. At that time in November 1941, evidently through a coincidence, I didn't hear anything of Strauch being the commander there. My recollection is only that first Sturmbannfuehrer Barth was commander in Latvia, and then after him Dr. Lange.

DR. GLANCY: Just a moment. The witness is attempting to testify to something which he has just admitted he couldn't possibly know. He is going by recollection. He says he had no contact with Riga at that time and he heard nothing about it; therefore, he cannot be qualified to answer.

THE PRESIDENT: What about that, Dr. Gick?

DR. GICK: The question refers to whether the witness had knowledge of this and the witness has to give us the reasons for this, and the reasons are essential.

THE PRESIDENT: Ask him what is the basis of his knowledge. BY DR. GICK:

Q. Witness, since Latvia was your neighboring area, would you have had to find out that Strauch was commander of the Security Police and the SD in Riga if he had been commander there for a lengthy time?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, Dr. Gick. I don't know why you put it in such a hypothetical form, "if" and "suppose." Just ask him if he did know that Strauch was in Riga and had charge of a certain outfit.

DR. GICK: Your Honor, I think the witness has already answered this question. He did not know. Thereupon, I made it hypothetical, would he have had to know it.

THE PRESIDENT: He answered that, "yes."

DR. GICK: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then, in effect he didn't know but he should know.

DR. GICK: Actually, he didn't know; at least, that is what he says, but -----

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, did you know or didn't you know?

THE WITNESS: I did not know that in November 1941 Strauch was commander in Riga.

THE PRESIDENT: What furthermore do you want than that? That is very definite.

DR. GICK: Yes, the question suffices, but I only wanted to know why he did not know. The question was answered by the witness. I have no further questions in this respect. BY DR. GICK:

Q. Witness, did you know that in Latvia all Jewish matters were in the hands of the chief of Department 4, with the commander of the Security Police and SD for the Eastern Area Lange?

DR. GLANCY: Just a moment. I would like to know which commando the witness was in command of. He can't be an expert on two. He tells us he was much occupied with many, many different, diverse affairs in Estonia. He left Latvia, to the best of my knowledge, around the 4th of July, the 5th of July.

THE PRESIDENT: Just what is your specific purpose here, Dr. Gick? What is it you are trying to get from the witness?

DR. GICK: I wanted to find out from the witness whether on the basis of his knowledge of the conditions in Latvia and in Estonia, which are after all connected, whether he knew or knows by whom the Jewish matters were handled, and the witness has this knowledge, and therefore he can answer the question.

DR. GLANCY: The witness has gone to great lengths in his direct examination to impress upon the Tribunal that he spent only an hour or so on the morning of the 4th of July with Stahlecker.

THE PRESIDENT: Fifteen minutes he was with Stahlecker.

DR. GLANCY: Thank you, Your Honor, fifteen minutes. In that time even a person of giant intellect cannot absorb so much.

THE PRESIDENT: How do you know he doesn't have a giant intellect?

DR. GLANCY: That I don't know, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: All right now, if he knows, he will tell us; if he doesn't know then he can't tell us. So now ask the witness if he knows. If he knows about this Jewish situation in Latvia, he is qualified to answer. Find out if he knows. BY DR. GICK:

Q. Witness, did you know how the Jewish questions were handled in Latvia, and by whom they were handled?

A. About conditions in Latvia itself during the time which you have in mind, I don't know any details. But with regard to the handling of the Jewish matters in the staff of Einsatzgruppe A in Riga or with the commander of the Security Police and SD in Riga, I knew that the Chief of Department 4, Dr. Lange, apart of Stahlecker, was the driving force with regard to the Jewish question. And this was at the time when the first Einsatzkommando leader of Einsatzkommando 2 Bartach was in Riga. Otherwise, I don't know any more about this question.

Q. Do you also know that Dr. Lange, after he had become command er in Latvia, continued to handle these Jewish matters?

A. Do you mean in the staff of the R D S. ?

Q. Yes, on the staff of the commander.

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Witness, in the document Book 3 A, page 17, Exhibit 110, Document No. 3372 -- there is your affidavit of the 19th of November, 1945, --In this affidavit, under No. 4, you said that Strauch had participated in the Jewish persecutions in Minsk. How did you come to make this statement?

A. This is an interrogation of November, 1945. During the course of which I was asked, among other things, for names of people who had anything to do with Jewish Questions. During these interrogations, we did not speak of any specific events or of any occurrences apart from my own case, but we spoke exclusively of names. In this case, when the name Strauch was mentioned, there was no talk of any specific event.

Q. This affidavit was taken by Mr. Wartenberg. You heard here in court how Mr. Wartenberg described the procedure of taking down affidavits.

THE PRESIDENT: I think you are going to ask a long question on a fact which is not established. You said that this affidavit was taken by Wartenberg. It was not taken by Wartenberg. Do you have the affidavit there before you?

DR. GICK: Yes, I have it with me.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, who took the affidavit?

DR. GICK: I read here, English, "Subscribed and sworn to before us at Oberoursel, Germany, 19 November 1945. Signed, Rudolf Urbach and Rolf Wartenberg."

THE PRESIDENT: Well, it seems that Wartenberg only translated the document. Dr. Glancy, isn't that the situation or isn't it? There is a phrase even in Wartenberg's declaration which is a little confusing, we must admit.

DR. GICK: Perhaps the witness can clarify the question.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, all right, who took this affidavit, witness, from you?

THE WITNESS: Both of these officers, Captain Urbach and 1st Lt. Wartenberg, were both present. Mr. Wartenberg had carried out the interrogation, the interrogation which led to the interview, and called Captain Urbach in and both participated in the taking of the oath. They were both present.

THE PRESIDENT: I beg your pardon. You may proceed, Dr. Gick. BY DR. GICK:

Q. Witness, would you please describe how this interrogation was carried on?

A. The procedure wasn't exactly the same as it was here in the courthouse and as it was described by Mr. Wartenberg; that is to say, no oath was taken before the interrogation as it was done here, and it was not recognizable that this was a matter of an affidavit. It could not be seen either that the possibility would be granted to refuse the testimony or to refuse giving such an affidavit.

Q. Was this affidavit submitted to you after preliminary discussion, all written our, ready for your signature?

A. It was brought in by Mr. Wartenberg in a typewritten form, like the others. He brought in four statements on that day.

Q. Therefore, you cannot and could not designate Strauch as being in connection with any definite measures concerning Jews in Minsk?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gick, that is not a question, it is a statement. You will have to put a question to the witness. BY DR. GICK:

Q. Witness, may I ask you to give an answer about this?

THE PRESIDENT: No, you can't, because that was a very leading question. You practically gave the answer yourself. You must put a question to the witness, not a statement.

DR. GICK: Your Honor, am I not in cross examination? I am ask--ing the question in cross examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, I beg your pardon. Dr. Von Stein has been here so long a time that I thought it was still the direct examination in effect. The question will be permitted. You may answer that statement question.

DR. GICK: May I please repeat the question, Your Honor? BY DR. GICK:

Q. Witness, therefore you couldn't and cannot mention Strauch in connection with any concrete measures against Jews in Minsk?

A. No, I cannot, and this statement was not supposed to express that, either. During the interrogation, we did not speak of any definite fact, only of the fact that Strauch was commander in Minsk. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Witness, you signed this statement voluntarily, didn't you?

A. I wasn't under immediate pressure.

Q. You signed this statement voluntarily, didn't you?

A. In such a case, it is a relative question, this being voluntary.

Q. Did you sign this statement voluntarily?

A. I did not refuse because of force.

Q. Did you sign this statement voluntarily?

A. Yes.

Q. All right, now. The fact that you were not sworn, although the statement very definitely indicates that you were sworn, would have no effect on your telling the truth, would it? Let me put it another way. The statement declares that you made the statement under oath.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you make it under oath?

A. Yes.

Q. Then what is declared here in this statement is correct, is it not?

A. To the best of my knowledge.

DR. GICK: Your Honor, my I say here that the witness has made a statement about this matter which I was able to get from the witness by questioning him.

THE PRESIDENT: That is not quite clear to the tribunal. Please make it a little clearer what you have in mind.

DR. GICK: I mean to say, Your Honor, that the witness here on my questions has given a clarifying answer about the point at issue in the affidavit is to be interpreted. And that was the purpose of my question.

THE PRESIDENT: I still don't know what you are trying to put over to the Tribunal. You say you put him a question. Very well, and he answered it. Now, what is it you are complaining about? I don't quite understand you.

DR. GICK: I beg your pardon, Your Honor, I don't want to complain. I merely wanted to point out that today the witness has given us an explanation to this affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: And the explanation is what he just told the Tribunal, that to the best of his knowledge and belief what he put into the statement is correct.

DR. GICK: Yes, that is what he said here.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, are you satisfied with that?

DR. GICK: Yes, of course.

THE PRESIDENT: All right then.

DR. WALTON: Your Honor, it may shed some light on this. I gathered from the good Doctor's remarks that he was trying to plead entrapment.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Walton, Dr. Gick is satisfied; Sandberger is satisfied; the Tribunal is satisfied, so why stir up muddy waters?

MR. WALTON: Maybe he pleads entrapment on cross examination. I couldn't tell him how to proceed.

THE PRESIDENT: You are entirely at ease? You are satisfied, Dr. Gick?

DR. GICK: Yes, Your Honor.

BY DR. GICK:

Q. Witness, over and about the more knowledge of Strauch's presence in Minsk -- did you have yet any real knowledge about the conditions and circumstances in Minsk?

A. No, I had no such knowledge as I never was in Minsk, and Strauch was never in Reval. During the entire time during which Strauch was in Minsk, no mutual official conference ever took place with the B.D.S. in Riga where we might have been both present. During this ontire period, I only met Strauch once or twice by coincidence in Riga. We only exchanged a few unimportant words; at any rate, we discussed nothing official. In other respects, I had no knowledge of events in Minsk either.

Q. What does the question mark mean after the name "Strauch" where the designation "SS and Police Leader" occurs under No. 4 of the document?

A. This question mark means that here, at the request of Mr. Wartenberg, the name of the SS and Police Leader in Minsk was to be put in as being mainly responsible for the orders of Jeckeln. But I could not remember the name, so that this space had to remain blank.

Q. In Document Book 3 A, German page 15, Document No. 3681-I don't know the exhibit number--how did this statement come about with regard to agencies of the Security Police and SD in the Ostland in which it is noted commander in White Puthenia, Strauch---

DR. GLANCY: May it please the Tribunal, if he is adapting this as his own testimony, I wish he would introduce it. We have never introduced this document. It is not before the court; however, we have no objection to its introduction by the defense.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Gick, you will be permitted to cross examine from the document, but if you intend to have the Tribunal accept it as a document, then you would need to introduce it yourself, because it has not been introduced.

DR. GICK: I beg your pardon, I did not know that this had not yet been introduced as an exhibit of the Prosecution.

THE PRESIDENT: No, it has not been introduced, out we will allow you to question from it since it bears Sandberger's name and therefore is relevant.

DR. GICK: May I repeat the question then? BY DR. GICK:

Q. Witness, in this document which is in Document Book 3 A, German Page 15, and which bears the number 3681, there is a sketch on which it is noted "Commander of the Security Police for White Ruthenia, Strauch, around the first of November, 1942." How was this sketch made out?

A. During an interrogation, I was asked for about five or six names of leading personalities in the area of the Eastern Area, and the interrogating, officer took them down and put them into a sketch which he was making at the same time. As far as I remember, the name Strauch was not mentioned. During the next interrogation, the sketch as it is submitted hero, was submitted to me for my signature and then the name Strauch was put in in the box headed Einsatzkommando 2. I objected to this, that as far as I know Strauch was not the commanding officer of Einsatzkommando 2, but that he was commander of the Security Police for white Ruthenia. Thereupon, I was requested by the interrogating officer to put the name Strauch into the box headed White Ruthenia and I was also requested to give the dates which have reference to this sketch. I answered that this sketch the way it is now refers to many various dates, and therefore I was requested to specify the various dates and put them in. I answered that I really could not remember from when on Strauch has been commander in White Ruthenia, that I could only remember that it was--must have been--sometime in the winter of 1941 to 1942. The interrogating officer said that the exact date was of importance and we agreed that we would put in about from the first of January, 1942.

had a very general recollection that somewhere in the winter, '41-'42 Strauch was there.

DR. GICK: Thank you, I have no further questions.

DR. SCHWARZ: Dr. Schwarz for the Defendant Jost. BY DR. SCHWARZ:

Q Witness, I would like to ask you a few questions. Mr. Jost was your commander and Einsatzgruppe chief, I think, from the end of March to August or beginning of September, 1942. When was your first official contact with Jost? refer to the treatment of Jews?

A Yes. We briefly mentioned the Jewish question also. question at the time? wanted to make the attempt to achieve that an exception be made for the Reich Commissioner Eastland or the Baltic States as far as the Jewish measures or the Hitler Order were concerned. Therefore, right from the beginning he wished that for the time being nothing should happen to the Jews.

A Yes. Jost told me that in Riga around May some hundred Communist had been released or were to be released. He asked me how this situation was in Estonia and I told him that in February an amnesty had already taken place and another amnesty was expected for August. tion. Litzmann, as far as Security Police measures were concerned?

Q Could you give me some examples for this?

A This is, first of all, a question of Communist matters. Many applications by relatives reached Litzmann, and there were cases in which women described their economic position very impressionably and for which the Commissioner General ordered a release of the men concerned.

Also the amnesties which I have mentioned took place because of a decree promulgated by the Commissioner General.

DR. SCHWARZ: Your Honor, I have no further question.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Any other cross-examination on the part of defense counsel?

(No response).

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, you may take up the cross-examination on behalf of the Prosecution.
BY MR. GLANCY:

Q Dr. Sandberger, when did you join the Party? been a National Socialist for ten years, is that correct? during your student days, you were a speaker on behalf of the National Socialist movement, weren't you?

A I don't know what you mean by the expression "speaker". speeches, yes, that is correct. the ideologies and aims of the National Socialist movement? attitude toward the Jews, is that right?

of the Party. There were some circles which did not approve of the things which some other circles of the Party did in the Jewish question, or said.

Q When did you join the SS?

Q That was unified organizationally, wasn't it? ideologies and aims, is that right? SD especially.

A Yes. I only joined the SS by way of the SD.

Q I don't want any explanation now. When did you join the SS?

Q Did you join the SS on the 11th of May, 1935?

A No, that is not correct. I joined the SS on the 1st of January 1936.

Q Were you born on the 17th of August, 1911?

Q Both these dates are contained in your service record. Do you have any comment on that?

A I think that is a mistake. The date of May, 1935, which is contained herein, is not the date of my membership in the SS but is the time when I first got in contact with the SD. I am quite sure of this.

Q When did you join the Party?

Q Couldn't that have been the first of December, 1931?

Q When did you apply to become a member of the SS?

but my recollection is not quite exact.

Q I think that your recollection fails you. A record is more permanent than a memory. On the first of December, 1931, you became a Party member; on the 11th of May, 1935, you became a member of the SS.

A Pardon me, Mr. Prosecutor. This is doubtlessly a mistake. I am absolutely certain that the date of May, 1935, is the date of my first contact with the SD and that on the 30th of January, 1936, I received my admission into the SS, retroactive to the 1st of January, 1936.

Q What is your SS number? of May, 1935. Do you expect us to believe that they got the number correctly; they got your birthday correctly; your Party record correctly, and make a mistake on the date of your joining, which is all important as far as seniority is concerned?

A Mr. Prosecutor, I don't know whether it says on that record that this is SS membership for this date. I am absolutely certain about this, that I was admitted to the SS on the first of January 1936. My superior at that time, Dr. Scheel, is here in the house and will be able to confirm this at any time. Einsatz mission in the East, were you aware of the attitude of the National Socialists towards Jews and Communists?

A May I ask, Mr. Prosecutor, which concrete attitude you mean? For example, I did not know, and I never heard of this, that prior to 1941 Jews were systematically sent in concentration camps in Germany, in case that is what you mean.

A No, I was not aware of this. I didn't hear about this. I already said yesterday that I learned that after the 10th of November, 1938. Jews were sent to concentration camps, but that they were again released after a few weeks, as far as I heard, and I know nothing, that later, until 1941, in any case, any systematic internments into concentration camps took place for Jews.

Q When did you join the SD?

A My first contact with the SD was in May, 1935. That is the date which you mentioned before. that your first contact with the SD was in january of 1935.

A Mr. Prosecutor, this is a mix-up. In January, 1936, is the membership into the SS and May, 1935, the contact with the SD. I am absolutely certain of this. subervience, subordination and obedience to the Fuehrer, did you not? of allgiance to Hitler as a justice official, and in 1936.

A I am asking you about your oath as an SS man. Answer that question.

Q Can you repeat it for the Tribunal?

Q Give us the sense of it. You must remember it. You lived with it for years.

A The sense of the oath is as follows: That I vowed allegiance to Adolf Hitler, and to the superiors designated by him.

Q Didn't it say complete faithfulness without questions, wasn' it more likely the sense of it?

Q I am asking you if that was not the sense of the oath?

Q Was it or was it not?

Q Was it or was it not, yes or no?

A Pardon me, may I ask you to repeat the question?

GGladly, Wasn't it the sense of the oath that you swore, vowed complete and utter obediance to the Fuehrer and to such superiors as he would place over you, without question?

happened later.

Q Did you take the oath?

Q Do you consider an oath binding?

Q Did you consider this oath binding at that time?

Q Were you released from that oath? the two speeches, one in Berlin and one in Pretsch, were you aware of the Hitler order to exte minute Jews, Communists, gypsies and other asocial elements? people whenever and wherever found it they were Jews, Communists or other elements odious to the German people? it that way, that anywhere where I would go this happen through my kommando, but I was convinced that a delay was possible.

Q Let us stop right hero. Let's remove the other people between you and the Fuehrer. The Fuehrer issued the order. He issued it through channels, that is true, but in effect he issued it directly to you. You had sworn an oath. Was this oath binding?

Q Did you receive this order? given?

A It wasn't given to me in such a way that I had to carry it out by a certain deadline, that is, immediately or within four weeks. any clause or stipulation as a part of the order that it would be up to your discretion that you could not, or that you could fail to carry out this order? ed not much interpretation. people whom you have enumerated, but no deadline was given Stahlecker either, and at the time of Stahlecker's death, that is after nine months tens of thousand of Jews lived in the area of Stahlecker.

Thus, he also did not carry out the order to its complete extent in nine months, either. remained is because you needed manpower?

Q Wasn't the final aim or the final solution that all Jews, wherever and whenever encountered, when they served no further usefulness or if they ever were considered a security threat, would be annihilated?

A May I ask do you mean the aim of the Fuehrer Order?

A I didn't quite understand the question.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, would you mind refraining the question after recess?

MR. GLANCY: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed.

MR. GLANCY: Thank you. BY MR. GLANCY: final solution of the Jewish problem in the East was a complete and total annihilation insofar as possible after they had served their purpose as workers and laborers.

A There was no period of time, no time limit; no deadline.

Q I didn't ask you that; just a moment. I didn't ask you that. Answer my question as it was phrased .. yes or no.

A If you attach particular importance to the word immediately. I must say no.

Q I didn't say immediately. I said the final aim or final Solution.

A In that case I misunderstood; yes. May I ask the question to be repeated? I understood immediately; I am sorry. aim or the final solution of the problem, insofar as it concerned Jews, Gypsies and communists in the East, their total extermination and annihilation whenever it was possible after they had served their purpose as laborers?

Q You answered yes to the question; did you not? BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q When did you think -- excuse me for interrupting, Mr. Glancy -when did you think that deadline might finally be decided upon? when the territory had been reached all Jews should be eliminated. There was no time limit; no deadline. tion should take place; that is right?

Q When did you think that finally a deadline would be established; that from a certain day then the order had to go into effect? of the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe or at least within Einsatzgruppe A; it might have been different with other groups.

Q Yes. When was the deadline reached in your case? order that could not be contradicted at the end of September, referring to one part.

Q Very well. So that then the Fuehrer Order was held in abeyance from the early part of June until the end of September.

A No. Stahlecker knew that; it becomes quite evident from the reports that it was not absolutely carried out. I will also explain the reasons why.

Q Just a moment, please; just a moment. You said the order did not have to go into effect immediately. Then I asked you when it did go into effect. You said about the end of September; is that right? of us at the end of September.

Q Now just a moment, please. Answer the question. We lose so much time because you pay no attention to the question. The order did not require you to put it into effect immediately, you tell us; is that correct?

Q All right. Now, when did you finally get an order; when did the order finally go into effect so far as you were concerned?

Q Well, you told us before the end of September; is that date incorrect?

not totally, not for all of them. finally to exterminate Jews, as the Fuehrer Order indicated?

Q Well, what month? The autumn has three months?

Q Well, all right; the first of September was the first time that you finally were called upon to give some effect to this order; is that correct?

Q All right; now, I am coming back to that original question, so far as that Fuehrer Order, as far as you were concerned, was held in abeyance during the months of June, July, August, so that this order was held up three months so far as you were concerned. should not be carried out.

Q Then it wasn't out into effect for three months.

THE PRESIDENT: It took me a long time to get that very simple question. Proceed, Mr. Glancy. BY MR. GLANCY: as far as you are concerned with regard to the Fuehrer Order, you must have at all times been aware that at some time you would be called on to carry out this order; is that correct? order must be obeyed; is that right?

A Yes; there was no deadline though. Time. I am sure that my question have been clear and concise, where there is only one interpretation.

We won't waste any time if you will be a little more responsive to my question; consider it and answer it as it is asked, please. You knew that as far as the Hitler order for the extermination of Jews, Gypsies and communists was concerned, that at some time you would be called upon to carry this out; is that correct?

Q Very well. You have said that you were a commanding officer of Sonderkommando I.-A; is that right?

Q You broke your commando up into five Amts divisions, or offices; is that correct?

Q You had subordinates in each one of these offices; is that correct?

Q You issued orders and expected them to be carried out? Sonderkommandos to exterminate Jews, Gypsies and communists; is that right?

Q That was their main task; that was the reason for their formation and organization -- the security of the army's rear area and the extermination of Jews, Gypsies and communists.

commando.

Q Answer the question yes or no; then you may explain after you have given an answer. Was that not the reason for the formation, of the organization of the Einsatzgruppen, the extermination of Jews, Gypsies and communists because they were considered a threat to the security of the army? gruppen existed as organizations at the time when the Fuehrer Order had not been made known that their assignment would be that of a general securing of the rear army territory.

Q At some time you received the Fuehrer Order; is that right? mination of the Jews, Gypsies and communists? felt so inclined you obeyed them; otherwise you relegated them to a position of secondary importance.

A No, that is not how it was. There were many cases in which we hesitated to carry out the orders.

Q Hesitancy is not what I am driving at here. You were to carry out the Hitler order as the Chief of Sonderkommando; is that right? 1941? delay.

Q You said that the deadline was reached in September? 2nd of September, he wasn't very well, and he gave me that order.

When hegave me that order he agreed to a delay on that date. At the end of September, in my absence, he repeated this order at my office, but he did not refer to the execution of the whole, but only of a part of it.

Q This order in part?

A I wasn't there. Therefore, I couldn't obey it either in part or wholly.

Q Did the members of your commando obey it? carried out whether you were present or not?

Q. Did you realize this when you assumed command of Sonderkommando I-A?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it carried out in part by you or by your subordinates in Sonderkommando I-A?

A. By my subordinates, yes, without, my knowledge; in my absence.

Q. Were you in command of Sonderkommando I-A?

A. Yes.

Q. How many Jews were killed in September by members of your command?

A. The report says that there were four hundred forty; I do not know from my own knowledge.

Q. Did't you say that your subordinates reported to you as to this affair?

A. After I had returned.

Q. Did they report to you?

A. After I had returned from the Leningrad area, in the beginning of October they reported to me, yes.

Q. They reported to you?

A. Yes, after it had happened. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Did you reprimand them for doing it?

A. I couldn't reprimand. At least the next day...

Q. (Interposing) I didn't ask you whether you could; I asked you whether you did.

A. No.

Q. Did you talk about it at all?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you tell them?

A. I said that I regretted that this order which he knew was going to be delayed by me, that it had to be

Q. Did you tell him not to do it again?

A. I had no choice to do that because he was transferred the next day to Berlin.

Q. Well, during the conversation that you had with him, when you expressed your regret this had happened, did you say: Now, I don't want you to do this again.

A. Your Honor, that was not topical at the time because this man was about to be transferred to Berlin anyway.

Q. Witness, answer me: How old are you?

A. Thirty-six years.

Q. Very well. Now, a man thirty-six years of age ought to be able to understand a question and to reply to it directly.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you talked with this sub-commando leader when you returned?

A. Yes.

Q. And you expressed your regret that he had executed these Jews in your absence.

A. Yes,

Q. How long was this conversation with him?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Well, a matter of minutes?

A. I think it must have been longer.

Q. Well, about how long? An hour or two?

A. Approximately an hour; it could have been an hour; I have no recollection at the moment.

Q. Yes, all right. Now, all I asked you was that in this conversation which you had with him, did you or did you not say to him: I don't want you to do this again.

Don't tell me about where he went the next day.

A. No, I didn't tell him.

Q. What is the name of that Sonderkommando leader?

A. It wasn't the Sonderkommando leader; it was my deputy; his name was Carstens.

Q. Spell that, please.

A. C-a-r-s-t-e-n-s-.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, proceed Mr. Glancy. I am sorry to have interrupted.

MR. GLANCY: Not at all, Sir. BY MR. GLANCY:

Q. Dr. Sandberger, where were these Jews located when they were executed in September?

A. The larger part was in the camp Harku; a few had been left outside in the sectors where they had been living and in the prisons.

Q. How were they collected in these concentration camps?

A. They were arrested by the Estonian home guard on my initiative.

Q. On your orders?

A. Yes, on my orders.

Q. When did this take place?

A. It must have been during the last days of them.

I had given it in fact on the 10th of September, as Q. You gave this order which collected these defenseless Jews in concentration camps?

A. Yes, I gave this order.

Q. As a result of this collection, these Jews were shot?

A. That was one of the primary conditions; the main condition of course was the order by Stahlecker.

Q. You didn't possibly understand my question. I said as a result of the collection of these Jews into central points, they were shot.

A. No, the shooting was the result of the order by Stahlecker. It is correct that of course they could not have been snot if they had not seen collected and arrested. The arrest, of course, I ordered.

Q. They were shot?

A. Yes.

Q. You collected these men in the camps?

A. Yes, I gave the order.

A. You knew that at some future time they could expect nothing out death?

A. I was hoping that Hitler would withdraw the order or change it.

Q. You knew that the probability, bordering on certainty, was that they would be shot after being collected?

A. I knew that there was the possibility, yes.

Q. In fact, almost a certainty; isn't that right?

A. It was probable.

A. N ow, at a later time you collected more Jews didn't you?

A. No, the order that Jews and Estonian should be arrested, that all Jews within time should be arrested, I ordered on the 10th of September approximately, and this order was carried out gradually during the months September and October. It was one order by myself which was issued on the 10th of September.

Q. Was there not another occasion on which, according to you, you were absent and more Jews were shot?

A. Yes,

Q. You collected these Jews according to the basic order, didn't you, the Hilter order?

A. Yes.

Q. And then they were shot; they were shot; isn't that right?

A. Yes.

A. By members of your command?

A. From Estonian men who were subordinated to * y Sonderkommando leaders; that is also myself then.

Q. Then, in fact, they were shot by members under your command?

A. Yes.

Q. Was not in fact........were not in fact the Estonian political police and the criminal police subordinated to you?

A. They were under my supreme command at least as far as the factual matters were concerned.

Q. If you needed aid in carrying out executions, you could so order these forces, couldn't you?

A. No, excuse me. It wasn't the Estonian police which carried out the executions, but it was the Estonian home guard.

Q. Was the Home Guard known as the Selbstschutz?

A. Did you ask me whether the Home Guard was known as Selbstschutz? We haven't translated that.

Q. Thank you, that is what I wanted to know. Wasn't the Selbstschutz or Home Guard under your command?

A. No, he was under the.......he was subordinated to the local commandatura of the army.

Q. Did they army; strike that. Were you aware of an order given to the Wehrmacht that they should not execute 14 N ov 47-M-DC-10-6-Sampson (Hildesheimer) Jews and Gypsies and communists but leave that to the forces of the SIPO and SD as that was their primary task?

command? must have teen 950 Jews shot, or 960.

Q They were shot? as such, that they were really dangerous? were also Jews who individually and personally were not a concrete danger for the security.

Q As a class, they were not actually dangerous, were they? by the Reich leadership and that therefore this order had been given.

Q Then, as a result of the Fuehrer Order these Jews were shot? their collection and their final solution, their deaths?

A No. I did not regard this order as satisfactory. I gave no order regarding their death or shooting. I have said so.

Q You knew the purpose of the Hitler Order, did you not?

Q You ware in Riga on the 4th of July, 1941?

A Yes, in the early morning hours. I left Riga at about nine o'clock in the morning. destroyed and Jews would he murdered on this day, is that right?

A No, he did not tell me on the very day. He told me later. I explained that explicitly. on that morning, that is, on the 4th of July, he told you of his intent to murder these Jews?

A No. When we had this discussion, he said that in Estonia this should happen, in Estonia, and that he caused it himself; of the 4th of July in Riga, he only told me later on the occasion of a discussion on the 20th of July in Novaselia at Staff Headquarters and I said that yesterday.

Q You took a Teilkommando from Riga to Estonia, is that correct?

Q How many subkommandos did you leave in Riga?

A I did not leave a subkommando in Riga. It is possible that individual men were left there, because their vehicles were out of order. They had the order to join us. Parts of my kommandoes, these individual men, were there, but not a whole kommando. left in Riga, report to you that they had joined in an action against the Jews in Riga? Riga, otherwise they would have reported to me about it, but they did not. Therefore, they did not take part. Stahlecker himself told me that this action was run exclusively by the Latvian Auxiliary Police without the help and aid of the Germans and without his own initiative. It is possible that his interpreter took part in it.

Q It was supervised by the Einsatzgruppen, was it not?

A That I don't know. in Riga took part in this action? himself told me that this action had only been carried out by Latvians. Therefore, no man of my own kommando could have taken part in it, no interpreters, even, because I did not leave any interpreter in Riga.

Q I was not quite so specific as to mention interpreters. Are you aware of the Einsatzgruppen Situation Reports?

by the Latvian Police carried out an action against the Jews?

Q In a few moments I'll come back to this and refresh your memory. On page 41 of the English, in Document Book II-A, in view of your basic mission, how do you interpret the following: "The following places will still be searched by our Security Police: Wenden, Dorpat, perhaps Pskow -Teilkommando of Sonderkommando I-A"?

A I interpreted it thus. Stahlecker put into this report that he gave his directives to me to the effect that subkommandos should be sent to these mentioned places to deal with tasks of Security Police. and execute Jews, Communists, and Gypsies, is that not right?

Q You again were an exception? the very first days these measures were carried out. I am not the only exception here. Document Book II-A, page 26. Sandberger, I call your attention to the list of figures and locations under the original page 16.

A May I ask what document that is? I have forgotten the document number.

A Yes, and what page, did you say, what page of the original?

A Thank you. In the German text there is only one sentence concerning the Lithuanian Auxiliary Police. I do not thirds that is what you mean.

Q You have Document L-180?

Q Page 16 of the original?

Q Do you see there Enclosure 8?

A No, there is no Enclosure 8, but I may say, Mr. Prosecutor, I know the figures which should be in Enclosure 8, as for as they concern Estonia so that I can answer your question. 684 executed total, 1,158. that correct?

A No, no. Until the 25th of October. and I have tried to show that this figure 650 Communists contains also amongst other things the number of 405 Communists in Dorpat, according to the Report of Events 88, which was under the subordination of the Field Commanders and the responsibility of the Field Commanders. This figure is contained in this. I am myself concerned with the figure 650 Communists. According to my approximate estimate this is a number which is less than 100. That is my responsibility, because this included everything that happened in July and August by the Field Commander and the Estonia Home Guard, and the Communists; as far as the Jews are concerned -

Q Just a moment. Let's be a little more responsive. As part of this figure some Communists were murdered under your command in Estonia is that right? or is some other agency responsible for part of these? carrying out an order, the order by Stahlecker at the end of September, by my officer of operation.

My kommando is responsible. No, I did not carry it out.

Q Members of your command carried it out? Home Guard. The Estonian Home Guard carried this order out.

October, 1941, were you not? German.

Q You will notice: "The following orders were therefore issued by us." This under the heading of "Sonderkommando I-A." "The arrest of all male Jews over 16; the arrest of all Jewesses fit for work between the ages of 16 and 60."

Q "Who were utilized to work in the peat bogs."

Q Did you have Jews working in the peat bogs?

Q You ordered that they would work in the peat bogs?

Q Did you also order the arrest of all Jews over 16? residents of Dorpat and vicinity in the synagogue and a tenement house in Dorpat? order where they should be accommodated. I only found out later that they were put into the synagogue and I reproached them for that.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, in reading Item 2, did you say, "Jews" or "Jewesses"?

MR. GLANCY: "Jewesses", Sir. BY MR. GLANCY:

Q You recognized this report as coming from you, do you not?

A No, it did not come from myself. I was absent for three weeks. The report was made at the end of September, on the 28th of September, approximately, and I was south of Leningrad at that time and I was not in charge of any subkommandos in Estonia, or, at least, of parts of any subkommandos in Estonia.

Sonderkommando I-A?

Q Were you relieved of the command of I-A?

Q Then you were responsible for those Teilkommandos in Estonia? and during this time I was not in charge personally of the Sonderkomnandos in Estonia. Consequently, I could not be held responsible for them. in October of '41?

Q Do you recognize this order?

A Excuse me, what order?

Q This report. The orders for the arrest of all Jews, the working of the Jewesses in the peat bogs, quartering of the female Jewish residents.

A No. I just said that the accommodation of Jewesses in the synagogues or in the vicinity of the synagogues, I did not order. I did not approve of the housing in the vicinity of the synagogues, when I found out about it, but it is true that I gave the internment order for all Jews in Estonia, approximately on the 10th of September. This should have been carried out gradually.

Q You approved of the arrest of all the Jews, didn't you? You ordered it, in fact?

Q You approved of 60 year old women working in peat bogs, didn't you?

A I was told that this was not heavy work. The suggestion was made by Estonian officials who knew these conditions and who were acquainted with them.

Q You approved of it? disapprove of it.

Q You knew of it? females in synagogues?

Q But it was all right to work them to death in a peat bog?

A Excuse me, Mr. Prosecutor. The work in the peat bogs does not refer to Dorpat, but that concerns the camp Harku near Reval. Here in an old institution -

Q Just a moment. Just a moment. I am not concerned with the location, merely with the truth and the facts. You said that you approved of the working of 60 year old women in peat bogs?

A In the case of Reval, this was approved, yes. In the case of Dorpat this did not come up at all. of concentration camps to accommodate more Jews?

Q You knew what their fate must be as a result of this, didn't you?

Q Didn't you know the Hitler order?

Q Didn't it follow if they were collected, they'd be shot?

Q The certainty was there, wasn't it?

it is 108 of the German-

A May I ask you what document it is?

Q I read here on page 5 of the original under "Communism" "With the exception of one, all leading Communist officials in Estonia have new been seized and rendered harmless." What is your interpretation of "rendering harmless" as far as it applies to the Communists?

Q What is your interpretation of this phrase "Rendering harmless"? they were probably executed.

Q This is dated the 14th of January, 1942? 1942? time, weren't they?

A Only the leading officials are being described in this. The leading Communist functionaries were rendered harmless, yes.

Q How many leading officials were there? and who, with the exception of one, were arrested, are meant definite people's Commissars and members of the Central Party of the Estonian Socialist Republic, as they were listed in an enclosure to the Document 1180; the number of the personalities to which your question referred may have been 6 or 7%. you see that?

Q That means 1,000 were shot?

Q Did you know of it? Do you remember it?

Q Then at one time at least, you knew of it?

Q Were you in Estonia then?

A Yes, hut they were not shot on my own responsibility. I am only responsible for 350.

Q You are responsible for 350?

Q That will be enough. In Document Book III-A, page 13 of the English -- I will withdraw that Question. In Document Book II-A, page 49 of the English -

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy.

MR. GLANCY: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: I think the hour has arrived. Would you mind deferring that until our next session?

MR. GLANCY: Not at all, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will now be in recess until Monday morning at 9:30.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 17 November 1947 at 0930 hours.)

Military Tribunal No. II in the matter 0930-1630, Judge Michael A. Musmanno,

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II.

Military Tribunal No. II is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal. There will be order in the Court.

DR. GAWLIK (for the defendant Seibert): Your Honor, on Saturday I could not talk to my client because all the cells we usually have our discussions in, were occupied. For this reason I would ask you to permit me to have the defendant Seibert excused this morning so that I may talk to him in order to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: It is entirely satisfactory, but suppose we reach him some time this morning, as is not unlikely; it is entirely agreeable to the Tribunal that Dr. Gawlik speak with his client this morning, but in the event we should reach his case before the morning terminates, then of course he would need to be immediately available.

DR. GAWLIK: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Suppose we do this then: suppose that we allow him to go to the room where you will confer with him until recess time. The defendant Seibert will be excused from attendance in court so that he may confer with his attorney until recess this morning; that is to say, until about 11:15. The Marshal will attend to the details.

MR. GLANCY: Thank you, Your Honor. BY MR. GLANCY:

Q Dr. Sandberger, when on Friday the prosecution posed the question to you -- the question was: "Was the Estonian self-defense movement under your command?"

, the record will show that you replied in the negative. Do you wish to reconsider at this time and perhaps reframe your answer?

A The answer exactly is as follows: the Estonian homeguard came under the field and local kommandatura of the army. The security police was authorized to give them directives via the field and local kommandatura. That is what I said in the direct examination and that is the exact answer. group was under your command?

A No, Mr. Prosecutor, it was subordinated fully to the field and local kommandaturas of the army. I was merely authorized to pass on orders to them via these kommandaturas -- of course, only with their agreement. using or employing the Selbstschutz, that was always done, was it not?

Q Then in effect they were subordinate to your commandos? mentioned and as I have also mentioned in the direct examination.

Q You speak of limitations. Might we not pay that there were no limitations, for any order which you gave you fully expected to have it carried out by this group?

A No, Mr. Prosecutor, I could not expect that absolutely because the field and local kommandaturas could come between, and of course so could the homeguard by getting in direct contact with the field and local kommandaturas and thus they could avoid contact with my own office. protection troops and were refused?

Q Thank you. Do you recall the name "Bleimel?"

on Jeckeln's orders; you say that these executions were carried out by your Chief IV or your gestapo chief, is that correct?

A I don't know what affidavit you're referring to at the moment.

Q It's in Document Book III-A, Page 13 in the English.

A Is it No. 3844, Mr. Prosecutor? That is Document No. 3844. but merely about the subcommando leaders in Pleskau. IV.

Q They were subordinate to your command? yes.

Q He was never subordinate to you?

Q And they ordered the shooting or execution of these Jews?

A May I ask what document number that is?

Q That is NO-3340. We see that it reads, on Page 3 of the original: "In the course of the general Security Police screening of an additional part"-

A Pardon me. I can't find the document. May I ask the number again?

QNO-3340. It's Page 118 of the German.

Q I will repeat. "In the course of the general Security Police screening of an additional part of the civilian population around Leningrad, 140 more persons had to be shot."

Do you recall that incident when you were on the Leningrad front with the Teilkommando?

A I am sorry, I haven't found the place yet. It isn't 3340, is it?

Q That is right. It's on Page 3 of the original German. 119 and has only two pages.

Q I am very sorry. Do you have it now? Pare 3 of the original. A No, it only has the reported events on 173, and in this copy that I have it only has two pages.

Q That is all that I am going to refer to. Do you see the paragraph beginning: "In the course of the General Police screening of an additional part of the civilian population around Leningrad"'? about at all. But it says: Location: Krasnowardeisk, and behind that there are a few dots, so that means an omission.

A Behind that there are a few dots then the words: Excerpt from Page 4 of the original, and again a few dots, and then there is a line about Einsatzgruppe B that there are no reports having been received from Einsatzgruppe B; and what you are mentioning, I cannot find.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy, you better send for the photostat then.

THE WITNESS: I am sorry. It's one page -- the page proceeding that and it has the caption: Correction. BY MR. GLANCY:

Q Do you have it now, Mr. Sandberger?

A Yes, I beg your pardon, it is the proceeding page. It has the caption: Correction. I cannot say anything, however, about it.

Q Can you answer one or two of my questions? Can you recall for what basic reason these people were considered a threat to security?

A I can't remember it because it did not fall under my jurisdiction.

Q Were you in Leningrad? October 1941; but this is areport concerning Berlin, dated the 25th of February 1942. February?

Q Were any of your command there? least as far as food and administration went, but not as regards the actual work of Department III and IV.

Q Was this one of your Teilkommandos? was subordinate to the Commando Krasnowardeisk. This report was neither issued by myself nor did it go through my channel at all, nor did I order it.

Q I want to ask you a hypothetical question. If you had a person subordinate to you who was continuously rebellious and dilatory in the carrying out of orders which you issued, would you consider him worthy of promotion? to me the reason which would have initialed his not carrying out of a directive or an order. er to be carried out. Isn't that military activity and custom?

to give me reasons which would have caused his hesitancy in carrying out an order, or his refusal to carry it out.

Q How long were you in command of Sonderkommando I-A? January or the first of February 1943. I don't know exactly. superiors if you were reluctant to carry out orders whichhad been issued to you? gave him the reasons why I asked for a delay.

Q Please answer my question. Would it not become apparent to your superiors if you had been dilatory or delaying in the carrying out of standing orders?

A It did strike my superiors that I did so. That becomes evident from his own reports from Riga and Berlin: L-180 and 111. In these reports it says that I delayed it. can assure you. On the 9th of November 1942, you were deemed so worthy and showed such a soldierly attitude--an attitude of obedience to the Fuehrer and your superiors--that you were promoted to Obersturmbannfuehrer, is that right? were you not? bly. your activities in the east, is that right? grave testimony to the contrary, and I heard other people mention that my activity in the east was looked upon very negatively.

Of course, there were a few people who looked at it positively, but those were not the ones who had anything to do with my promotion.

Q I see. Let us take a look at a document. It's a recommendation for your promotion from Obersturmbannfuehrer to Standartenfuehrer Did you not say that you were in ill health and therefore were not able to take part in the Wehrmacht activities or to join the Wehrmacht? stated on direct examination that ill health--a rheumatic attack-prevented your joining the Wehrmacht.

A Up to March 1941, yes; then I asked to be released.

Q Released from what? Main Office--in order to join the Wehrmacht.

Q T join the Wehrmacht? unit.

Q I offer Document No. NO-5045, as Prosecution Exhibit 182. In this exhibit, we find as part of your recommendation for promotion -

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Mr. Glancy. BY MR. GLANCY:

Q Thank you, sir. This document, I am sure, will service to clear up many difficulties which we have found in your direct examination. First you stated on direct examination that you were in ill health and therefore were unable to join the Wehrmacht. Under your fitness rating it says, "Fit for general service." Under military service it says, "No service. Deferred for the Reich Security Main Office." Another thing that will serve to clarify, it says, "SS since 11 May 1935, SS No. 272495." When I asked you on Friday when you joined the SS you were adamant in your assertion it was 1936 and the record must have been mistaken. However, here again we see repealed "SS, 11 May 1935." You joined the SD in 1936 in January. Perhaps this will serve to refresh your memory. Going on -

A May I ask where it says so here? Yes, I see.

Q Do you see it now?

A But it is not correct, all the same. My superior at that time, Dr. Scheel, is in prison here. He can be asked about it. The codefendant Steimle who is here in the dock was in Stuttgart in the SD at the time and can also be asked whether I joined the SS in May 35 or in January 1936 -

Q The memory of man might fail. Records, if they are not destroyed, stand. Looking at your decorations we see that you got the Service Medal of the NSDAP in bronze, the Iron Cross, the Meritorious War Service Cross I and II Class with Swords, II Class without Swords, the East Medal, Ostmark Medal and the Sudeten Medal. As part of your recommendation further before that we see "Position: Group Leader in Amt VI-B/3." Then it says: "SS-Sturmbannfuehrer Dr. Sandberger who already in the battle period advocated the movement among the students, is irreproachable in his politics and his world point of view.

And is without fault in his character. Sandberger is an SS-Leader of better than average gifts, who possesses a particularly good spiritual fluidity and a gift for grasping quickly. He is distinguished by his great industry and better than average intensity in his work. From the professional point of view, Sandberger has proved himself in the Reich as well" and mark this - "as in his assignment in the East." a preferential promotion. Can we not deduce from this that you as an SS man had carried out all duties and all orders as they were given to you?

A I beg your pardon, may I give my comment on this now?

Q I am not interested in your attitude now. It is what it was in 1941.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, perhaps we got the wrong impression from your statement that you would like to express your attitude now. Well, if it is your attitude, of course that isn't really material, but if you have any explanation to offer to what is contained in this personnel record, of course, you are free to do so.

THE WITNESS: May I do so now. Your Honor?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, certainly, you can comment on anything that the Prosecution has referred to.

THE WITNESS: As far as the degree of ability is concerned, capable for military service, yes, it is true that in 1944 I was fit for military service. I stated so. I was fit for military service from 1941. I said in direct examination that since 1941, based on my own attempts, I became fit for military service, and that I reported for troop service. It is true that I did not serve, I said so in the direct examination. I said that it was my intention to report for service to the Wehrmacht, first of all to get some basic training before and then to join some frontal unit. It is correct that I was deferred for the RSHA.

That was in the beginning of the war, and it was against my express wishes. I said so in my testimony. is a mistake in the files. It must be a mix-up, and I think my defense counsel will be in the position to prove this. As far as the general question is concerned, why my superior at that time, Schellenberg, gave such a strong recommendation for my promotion, at the time, in autumn 1944, after it had been refused twice by Kaltenbrunner, as I know from Schellenberg, Schellenberg himself will make a statement referring to this. I may point out that there is a handwritten note at the end of this document to the effect that the Chief of the SS, Himmler, ordered that at the suggested period I should not be promoted, the date is 9 November, 1944, so that I should only be promoted at a later point, the 30th of January, 1945. As far as the reasoning is concerned, Schellenberg will be able to give better testimony as to this to you. Thank you.

MR. GLANCY: May it please the Tribunal, the Prosecution has no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Any further redirect examination, Dr. von Stein? BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q I have only one question to put to the witness, Your Honor. Witness, you were questioned during the last days concerning the number of shootings, and you stated a figure of approximately 350. You were going to proceed with your answering this question, but you were interrupted. I think it important that you should give us a suppelmentary statement what people were contained in this figure of 350 Communists, and why and for what reason this hooting took place at all. December, 1941, I would like to refer to the whole extent of what I said in my direct examination. It is a confirmation of suggestions for executions by the Estonian Deliberation-Committee, explicit examinations and investigations according to the lines which I talked about.

That is what I meant to say in my answer.

THE PRESIDENT: Are you finished now with your direct examination?

DR. VON STEIN: I have no further questions to the witness, and I now ask -

THE PRESIDENT: Do you have a question? Very well.

DR. SURHOLT: Dr. Surholt for the Defendant Dr. Rasch. BY DR. SURHOLT: of the English and page 17 of the English text. It is Document No. 3872. It is Prosecution Exhibit No. 110.

THE WITNESS: Excuse me, what page is it in the German book?

Q It is page 17 in the German book. The Prosecution mentioned this document in its case in chief and said that Dr. Rasch was made responsible for the persecution of the Jews in the Ukraine. Do you have the document in front of you? Baltic countries and in White Ruthenia is Jeckeln." Then there are figures, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and then it says under 5) "Other information regarding persecution of Jews." Then under "b" it says: "Ukraine. Rasch." Will you please comment on whether the interpretation of the Prosecution in your affidavit is correct and is based on facts? prosecution in the Ukraine, Rasch. The reason why I presumed that Dr. Rasch could give us some information as to this is that I knew that he was the chief of an Einsatzgruppe. Another reason - I had no other reason for my assumption. I can't see that here I asserted any responsibility on the part of Dr. Rasch.

Q Can you confirm any responsibility of Dr. Rasch from your own position?

Q Do you know Dr. Rasch's position in the Ukraine?

A No. When I was asked by the Defense Counsel for Dr. Strauch I said I did not even know about it in Minsk and, of course, I know it less as far as the Ukraine is concerned. the Prosecution and their interpretation of your affidavit?

Q You were in Pretsch also? ed order?

A Yes. I said no in my direct examination and I made an explicit statement concerning this. also in Document Book III-A, Document 3873, page 97 of the German document book. You say in this that in September of 1941 the order came through to shoot all Jews. May I assume from this that there were two phases of channels of orders in the East?

A No, I do not know, Mr. Defense Counsel, whether you were present during my direct examination. May I repeat for your information shortly I learned about the general order in Pretsch. My superior gruppen chief did not wait to see whether I would do anything or whether I would not do anything, but he repeated this order on various occasions. What is talked about here is an explicit explanation of the order in September. It had happened before in July and August, but I mentioned all this in the direct examination.

THE PRESIDENT: I thought you wanted to say something to me, but apparently you want me to say something to you.

DR. VON STEIN: No, your Honor, I only wanted to put another brief question to the witness which is now based on the new document which is just submitted. May I ask the question?

THE PRESIDENT: Please do.

DR. VON STEIN: In this new document I find an incorrect statement. The defendant was told that it became evident from this document that already in 1935 he had joined the SS. In the copy which I have, it says, "P.G." - that means party member - "since the 11th of May, 1933."

THE WITNESS: This is also wrong because the Party I joined in November, 1931.

DR. VON STEIN: I only want to point out the incorrectness, the incompleteness, of the document. It does not become evident from the document.

THE PRESIDENT: Let us ask the witness directly, when did you join the SS?

THE WITNESS: I was admitted to the SS with effect from 1 January, 1933 - '35 - and my superior was -BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Is it true that you are supposed to have been a Party member since the 11th of May, 1935?

A. I am sorry I have lost the document now. Noo I have found it now. I have found it. I don't know what it means. "P.G., Party member since 11th May 1937." I don't think it is usual that somebody says he was a Party member since November, 1931 if it becomes quite evident from the document that he has only joined the Party in 1937. I can assure you that I joined in November 1931. What was the official date, I don't remember.

Q. But I must direct your attention to the second line where it says, "P.G" - that means Party member - "since 11 May, 1935."

A. I have already explained the dates now, and I cannot add anything.

DR. VON STEIN: I have no further Question, your Honor. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Well then I understand that you joined the SS in January, 1936, is that right?

A. On the 30th of January, 1936, I received the document confirming my joining the SS, which was back-dated to the 1st January, 1936. It was given to me by Dr. Scheel who is in prison in Nurnberg.

Q. Did you join voluntarily?

A. Yes.

Q. Then, when did you join the SD?

A. In May, 1935.

Q. I see. And you joined that voluntarily?

A. Yes.

Q. Witness, did you prepare any reports yourself while you were in the field?

A. You mean whether I wrote, reports to superiors?

Q. Yes.

A. I believe that I must have dictated three or four reports personally.

Q. Yes, in any of these reports which you made did you outline the system of review of cases which you have told us in detail?

A. You mean, your Honor, review concerning Communists, investigations within the actual procedure?

Q. Yes. You told us how each case was examined and tried by-

A. Yes.

Q. Yes. Now, did you make any report on that to your superiors?

A. I reported orally to Stahlecker, also orally to my later superior Jost, and I also showed him the order which I had issued concerning it.

Q. You had made a written order that these reviews should take place?

A. These directives which I described were contained in an under issued by me which contained about three or four typewritten pages.

Q. Did you ever make that report in writing to your superiors?

A. I don't remember that, your Honor, I don't think so. I may have shown it to Herr Jost.

Q. You have had an opportunity to study all the document books which have been presented by the Prosecution. Have you found in your study any reference at all to this detailed procedure for review and appeal which you have outlined to us?

A. No, I did not find anything at all about this, your Honor. This would not have been approved of in Office IV in Berlin and Stahlecker attached great importance when I reported to him orally that if it was carried out at all, which he agreed to, it should not be emphasized in front of Office IV.

Q. Berlin would rather that you did not conduct these investigations and trials and reviews, is that what we understand from you?

A. Yes, it was not in the line of the Chief of Office IV that matters were being dealt with so thoroughly.

Q. They preferred you would deal more summarily with those who came within the scope of the Fuehrer order?

A. Office Chief IV, yes, would have considered a summary dealing more correct.

Q. Yes. This affidavit which you prepared on 19 November, 1945, NO-3872, was that prepared entirely from memory?

A. Just a moment, your Honor, please.

Q. The one which contains all the names.

A. Yes, the following took place. Herr Wartenberg asked me for such names. I told him that I could not remember many names offhand. Whereupon, he asked me to think about it for eight days in my cell. He gave me pencil and paper and ordered me to concentrate upon this.

He would have me called after eight days and he wanted me to have a few names by then, and he wanted me to give him then the names. After eight days he called for me and asked for these names, and he himself made up the wording from these names. This is, therefore, the result of an eight-day concentration on this subject only which was ordered by Herr Wartenberg, while in making out the other affidavits I had no opportunity to concentrate as long as that, but the questions were unprepared.

Q. Very well. In these reports we find many references to executions where we find the statement, so many Communists and so many Jews executed. If a Communist also happens to be a Jew, is he mentioned in the report as a Communist or as a Jew?

A. Your Honor, both was possible. According to orders of Einsatzgruppe A, Jews should always be mentioned under the heading "Jews", even when they were communists. But it is possible that other procedures were followed, i.e. that by mistake Jewish Communists were not mentioned under the heading "Jews" but under "Communists".

Q. Very well. Where were you between February and April, 1942?

A. In the time, February, until approximately the 10th of March, 1942, I was in Estonia, From the 10th of March, 1942.

Q. Let us have those dates again, please, now.

A. In February and approximately until the 10th of March, 1942, I was in Estonia in my own field of activities, and approximately from the 10th of March, 1942, I was on an official trip in Berlin, and then I was on leave at home.

Q. witness, let us get it a little more precisely. On March 10th you left to go to Berlin?

A. Approximately the 10th of March. It might have been the 9th or the 11th.

Q. Very well. And now, tell us where you were during the remainder of March.

A. Partly in Berlin on an official trip and partly on leave with my family.

Q. And when did you return then?

A. Excuse me, I must add something here. Partly, that is three days in March, I was in Prague. By official order, to attend the funeral of Stahlecker. During the last days of March, I don't remember the date exactly, I returned to Estonia, but on the way I fell seriously ill, and from that day on I was suffering from scarlet fever, and I was in the Department for Infectious Diseases in the hospital, Pernau, and I was absent from duty. That was until the first days of the month of May.

Q About when did you become ill?

A During the last days of March. I can't say the exact date. It might have been the 25th or the 27th.

Q And when did you return to your duties in Estonia?

AAgain I can't say the exact date. It might have been around the 5th of May.

Q Where were you hospitalized? at that time was in a school in Pernau. There I was in the department for infectious diseases.

Q When did you go to Prague?

Q Why did you go to Prague? the Einsatzgruppe with the official order to attend the funeral of Stahlecker in Prague. In order to comply with this order I went to Prague.

Q Stahlecker was buried in Prague?

Q What was the date of the funeral?

A I don't remember the date, it was during the second part of March. March 10 until May 5, is that right, from your duties? 10, on your return? When did you physically return to Estonia? Therefore, in a state of ill health, I was in Estonia in the field hospital.

Q When was that?

you had placed in Pleskau?

A I don't remember the exact date. As I said in my direct examination, this event took place a few weeks before Stahlecker's death which must have been during the second part of January or possibly in the first half of February. I learned about it a few days after it had happened.

Q When did you say the execution occurred? of February.

Q Well then, you were in Estonia when this occurred?

Q Well, were you there at the time of the execution? The execution took place in Pleskau without my knowledge.

Q That were you doing in Reval?

A That's where I was stationed. That's where my office was, where I usually stayed. I did not know that Jeckeln would go to Pleskau on that very day and would be present in Pleskau.

Q And then when did you actually learn of the execution? official trip during which I also passed through Pleskau.

Q And about when was that?

A Your Honor, I told you I couldn't state a more exact date than the second half of January or the first half of February, 1942.

Q How many days after the actual execution?

A I can't remember that exactly. They were few days, two or three days.

had taken place? place?

A No. I knew nothing about it. not in Pleskau?

A Yes. They were under the command of the Sub Kommando Pleskau. And the Sub-Kommando Pleskau was under my command.

Q What's his name?

A It was called "Sub-Kommando Pleskau" of the Specific Command I A. Kommando Leader? often at that time.

Q Pleimehl. Did he get in touch with you when Jeckeln arrived? Reval.

Q How far is it from Pleskau to Reval?

AApproximately 350 km by Road. There was practically no telephone connection.

Q How about the Radio System?

AAt the time, the H.W. in Pleskau had no Radio-Station. connection. Does that mean none at all or six or seven?

there were so many interruptions, that an actual conversation between the offices was not possible, neither at that time nor at another time.

Q Was there any airplane service at all?

Q No military planes available? tell you what had happened? before it occurred?

Q Why not? and therefore I could not reproach him. that no executions were to take place? executed. Therefore this question was not topical at the time, your Honor. camp and left Pleimehl in charge? executed?

A I had told him -- I hadn't given him an order to execute them but this man was most hesitant in every order. He was very soft, and I was absolutely certain that he would never act without having received an order before. This, my opinion of him, was based on my judgment of his character.

He was a very soft personality. execute the Jews. You merely depended upon your knowledge of his character? would never carry out these executions without an order.

Q But he already had the Fuehrer order, didn't he, to execute all Jews just like all sub-commando leaders had? known to him. of this Fuehrer order that Jews were to be executed? I asked him whether he had known about this Fuehrer order. I told him that after all, I had not talked to him about this order, whether some other agency had informed him about it. Whereupon he replied that before he joined my office in October, he had been within the staff of the Einsatzgruppe in Riga and there he found out about this Fuehrer order. I had not known anything about that.

Q Well then, he did know about the order?

Q. Well, you conversed with him when he arrived and you talked about this, and he told you that he had seen the order?

A. Your Honor, perhaps my statement gave reason for misunderstanding. The discussion which I just mentioned happened when he reported to me and told me that Jeckeln had given the order for the execution, and he had carried out the order which was given. Thereupon, I asked him whether he had known about this Fuehrer order, and then he said this to me.

Q. Well, when he first reported to you did you discuss with him his duties?

A. Yes, but these duties, at least in my opinion as I have said, did not concern elimination of Jews. Therefore, I did not discuss the Fuehrer order with him. His duties were mainly concerning tasks of security police, not regarding the Fuehrer order.

Q. And in all your conversations with him the Fuehrer order never was mentioned?

A. No, I did not have many discussions with him.

Q. When you made up your affidavit in 1947, 23 April 1947, why is it that you referred to the period of execution as being between February and April, 1942?

A. Your Honor, the reason is that I had no opportnity to concentrate on the date. I did not have the possibility to deal with these matters so much in detail as I have done during the last few months, and remember things so well. The deadline becomes evident to me based on the following: It was a few weeks before Stahlecker's death which took place the second part of March, and therefore I can now work out exactly that it must have been at that period which I have mentioned. This exact working out did not occur to me then and it seemed to me that Mr. Wartenberg was not so anxious COURT II CASE IX to know the exact date at the time.

Q. That was a very important episode and yet you indicated that it occurred within a two month period. Your memory would have been a little more exact in a thing of that importance, would it not, even if you hadn't sat down and concentrated for eight days on it?

A. I was asked without having had the opportunity beforehand to concentrate upon this question of the date. Mr. Wartenberg did not seem to attach any importance to the exactness of the date, or at least not very much. I told him that I could not remember the exact date and he asked me when had it been approximately, and that is what I told him.

Q. In the personnel report which Mr. Glancy referred to this morning you are praised for possessing the gift of grasping quickly. Could you not have grasped quickly when Mr. Wartenberg asked you the date of this execution?

A. I did not know then, your Honor, that he wanted to know details as to the date, but I told him that I could not exactly remember.

Q. How many were executed that day?

A. That again I did not remember exactly, and I still don't remember it very well, but there must have been about five hundred people, your Honor.

Q. Well, even you returned to Pleskau and found that five hundred persons had been executed without your having been contacted, even though you were in charge, did you not make some report on it?

A. I certainly did not make an immediate report, your Honor, because I intended to report orally to Stahlecker about this event.

Q. And did you?

A. I never had the chance because after a few weeks he die COURT II CASE IX Otherwise it would have happened obviously, but the figure of these executions was reported about in a report which went to Riga but without giving any details.

No doubt there were no details concerning this particular event. That is what I wanted to report about to Stahlecker.

Q. So you never officially complained to anybody about the execution of these Jews?

A. Your Honor, I could not complain to Jeckeln himself. After all, he was my highest chief.

Q. Well, you didn't complain to anybody then?

A. There was nobody there, nobody I could have complained to at that place.

Q. Well, because you couldn't see anybody, because you couldn't talk to anyone, because Jackeln was the only one that you could have complained to and you couldn't because he was your superior, it resulted then that you made no official complaint about this?

A. No, I couldn't do that.

THE PRESIDENT: Any other questions, Dr. Von Stein?

DR. VON STEIN: No, I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Glancy.

MR. GLANCY: If it please the Tribunal, I wish to rectify an error on the part of the prosecution, one which was misleading, understandably so, to the defense. In the presentation of exhibit 182 which is NO-5045, in the German copy where it says "Party member since" and then "SS since", on the American copy, if your Honor will notice, it says "Party member", underneath that, the 774980 reentry, then "SS since". However, in the German mimeograph, rather than putting "SS underneath the Party membership, they have made it a ditto mark, sir. However, on the photostat it is clearly apparent that it says "SS" and not "Party member".

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. You explanation will appear COURT II CASE IX as part of the record.

MR. GLANCY: Thank you, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Anything further, Dr. Von Stein?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, the examination of the witness, Dr. Mae, was interrupted last Friday, I would now like the opportunity to call this witness to the stand.

THE PRESIDENT: The Marshal will be instructed that during the recess, which is now about to take place, the defendant will be returned to the dock and the witness, Dr. Mae, will be in the stand when the Tribunal reconvenes in fifteen minutes.

(Recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Dr. Von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, I will point out to you that you are still under oath. I have a very few individual questions about the defendant Sandberger. Can you tell me whether Sandberger was often in his office or whether he was often on the road.

A. He was often on the road. It was not easy to speak to him. One had to make a previous appointment with him.

Q. Can you perhaps remember whether in September 1941, Sandberger was absent for a long time from Tallin or from Estonia?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Von. Stein, when you say Tallin, it is what we know as Revel; is that correct?

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

A. Yes, I can very well remember one case.

Q. Why can you remember this case so exactly?

A. It was a case in which I had to negotiate with a deputy of Dr. Sandberger; in the rooms of the former NKVD, a list of agents was found in which very respected people in public life were also contained, and I was to intervene in their favor. I tried to speak to Dr. Sandberger, but he was not there, and I spoke to his deputy several times as to whether it would be possible to release these people since they were able to give their signature only under strong pressure, and I am convinced that they did not do anything bad.

Q Who was Sandberger's deputy at that time?

A This was Mr. Karstens.

Q Why can you remember this name so exactly? whether he was related to this man.

Q Can you remember about when this absence of Dr. Sandberger was? Administration, that is, on the 20th of September, 1941.

Q Can you indicate how long Dr. Sandberger's absence lasted? than a week or ten days, for if it had been shorter, it would have been possible to prevent the arrest of these people, or, at least could have been postponed.

Q Can you remember any other lengthy absences of Sandberger? the exact period.

Q Witness, how large is Estonia? somewhat like Holland.

Q Is there a place named Ussaditsche in Estonia?

A I know of no such place. Ussaditsche is a Russian name, and must be in the Russian territory. army, was any Communist activity still in existence? and leaflets were dropped and agents constantly came in in some way, and they were arrested.

MR. GLANCY: If the Tribunal please, the Prosecution fails to see the relevancy of this line of questioning; however, perhaps Defense Counsel can clarify the connection.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, the relevancy of this question is that I would like to grove by this witness that the Communists who were shot were such Communists who were at that time a danger to the German occupation, and, therefore, the executions were justified. Several documents show that considerable Communist activity existed in Estonia even after the withdrawal of the Red Army. Whether these statements are only contained in the German document books or whether they actually correspond to the truth, that is what this witness is supposed to tell us as an expert.

MR. GLANCY: If the witness is not in a position to testify as to the actions of each and every Communist whether they were guilty or innocent or whether they participated in any sabotage, I do not think he is qualified to answer.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I assume that the witness will confirm to us that not only so-called convinced Communists were still in Estonia, but that they were activists; and this question is of great importance in this trial, because Sandberger often discussed the question what type of Communists were meant against whom these measures were taken in Estonia. For this reason I consider this question very relevant.

MR. GLANCY: The only relevant testimony that could be heard here is anything that comes from the personal knowledge, now what he heard from Sandberger.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, we presume that his testimony will be restricted to what he knows personally.

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, I just wanted to mention that. May the witness answer the question?

THE PRESIDENT: You had better put it to him again. BY DR. VON STEIN: was there still a political activity by the Communists existent in Estonia?

DR. VON STEIN: May the witness answer this?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, the answer is very obvious not only because he has told it to us, but because it has been indicated by the defendant and some references to it in the reports also. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q Witness, please give examples for this?

A Pardon me - examples for what?

MR. GLANCY: One moment, please. The Prosecution, Your Honor, is willing to concede that there was Communist activity there, but the point it wishes to make at this time is that unless the witness is conversant with each and every case of a person who was executed, I can see no relevancy to his testimony at all. I think the point the Defense is attempting to make here is that each and every Communist was killed because he was a Communist, and not only that, had been an active Communist in their sense of the word.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. von Stein, your question to the witness was whether Communist activity existed after the withdrawal of the Soviet Army.

DR. VON STEIN: Yes. Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: In effect he answered yes. That itself is a very general answer. All right now, let's see what you can put in the way of a specific question.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I wanted him to give examples, cases, that actually the witness knows individual cases which show to what extent this Communist activity in Estonia was carried out. He is to describe things to us which he himself knows from his own personal knowledge and experience.

THE PRESIDENT: And will he then show that these were the ones that were arrested and tried and executed?

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, Your Honor, I assume that the witness will answer this question in such a way that it will show only such cases their crimes they had committed, or that they wanted to commit, they were executed, and even after an investigation, but this goes too far. I want to ask that later.

MR. GLANCY: The only relevancy the Prosecution can see is if in the case of 14,500 executed communists he is conversant with each and every case, all the facts thereof that went into the reviewing authorities.

THE PRESIDENT: Why do you mean that number?

MR. GLANCY: That number is contained in one of the documents, and I just want to use that as a typical example.

THE PRESIDENT: 14,500?

MR. GLANCY: Three thousand released; one thousand shot.

THE PRESIDENT: He may answer the question.

Q (By Dr. von Stein) Witness, may I ask you to answer it, please? Russian planes dropped parachutists into various parts of the country. At the same time leaflets were dropped. These parachutists were mostly arrested, but I do not know the individual cases about the way the investigation went on further.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

Q (By Dr. von Stein) Witness, I come now to another question. Was there in Estonia a number of people who were active against Germany in a nationalistic sense and for whom an arrest might very well have been possible at that time? towards England. Our whole intelligentsia had that tendency and did not try to hide it, but actually Dr. Sandberger avoided that these people were arrested because of these pro British tendencies or because of nationalistic tendencies.

Q Witness, what was Sandberger's attitude regarding the occupation of people in influential circles who were of a pro-British attitude?

MR. GLANCY: Just one moment. Again, Sir, on the previous grounds of relevancy, the Prosecution objects.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. von Stein, are you going to attempt to show by this witness that the Defendant Sandberger was really on the side of England in this war?

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I want to prove by means of this witness that the main tasks of the Defendant Sandberger were not in the police matters, but mainly in matters of politics and administration.

Furthermore, I want to prove that Sandberger conducted himself completely objectively and that he was not one of those who wanted to have his way in a brutal manner, but that he kept in mind the interests of other people who were of other opinions than he was.

THE PRESIDENT: He is charged with the execution of Jews, Communists, Gypsies, and socially inferior people. I don't see where, the English should come into any of those categories.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, it is not the matter of the English people it is a matter of drawing a conclusion about Sandberger's general attitude. England was in a state of war with Germany at that time and, nevertheless, Sandberger did not harm those people or persecute them in any manner who were pro-English. If the witness confirms this, important conclusions can be drawn about the character and conduct of Sandberger. BY THE PRESIDENT: those who had pro-English views, is that right?

Q Did he arrest those who had pro-Russian views?

Q He didn't arrest those who had pro-Russian views? not arrested, but because of their activity.

Q Then he didn't arrest anybody because of their views?

Q Well, then it isn't necessary to talk about whether he arrested those who held pro-English views or not. He didn't arrest anybody because of their views. form of government, it is your impression that he would not arrest him? pro-English views nor anyone holding pro-Russians views. Do you know of anyone who advocated the Russian form of government and hoped that Russia would win in the War and yet Sandberger did not arrest him? Do you know of any such cases? telling us about his character, suppose that Sandberger did hear some one advocate the Russian form of government and state that he hoped that Russia would win the war, would Sandberger arrest that man or not? would win and German would lose the war -- and Sandberger would not arrest him?

A It is possible that he would arrest him. I really cannot answer such a question.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Dr. von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q Now, to another point. Witness, were any limitations of the churches enacted during Sandberger's time in Estonia?

A No, Dr. Sandberger personally kept contact with the church authorities.

As far as you observed, Sandberger's interests and activities were more concerned with police activity or more with politics and information service and with administration and economics? very interested in all political questions. political questions put to him by you and be other Estonian officials and by the German Army and the German civil administration? questions, do you consider it possible that he was in a position to bother about other individual matters? difficulties which arose and, in my opinion, not much time was left to him beyond that. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Witness, you saw him pretty regularly, didn't you?

Q I How often? Every two or three days, or so? perhaps, but I spoke to him over the telephone almost every day, when I negotiated with him about various difficulties.

Q And during what period was this? When did you sec him, every two or three days? During all the time that he was up there?

A Pardon me. I didn't get the question.

the entire time?

Q How long did he remain in Estonia?

Q You saw him throughout 1942, did you? he was there?

Q Was he there during the first half of 1942?

Q Did you see him during the month of January? in Estonia generally in the first half of 1942, wasn't he? you would know about it, wouldn't you? times, but I do not remember when he was away. the first half of 1942.

Q Now, was he there during the second half of 1942?

A. If the question means that he was there every day, then I cannot answer it with "Yes," but I saw him every two or three days when he was in Reval or in Estonia.

Q. You saw him every two or three days during the first few months of 1942?

A. Yes, I am convinced of that.

Q. Yes, that included the months of, let us say, February and March?

A. I cannot say when he was about, but, if he was there, I certainly saw him.

Q. Well, now, if you saw him every two or three days, he would have to be there, he wouldn't be there in spirit, would he?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, you did see him every two or three days during February and March?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, you may proceed, Dr. Von Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Let us remain with this point. Did it happen that Sandberger was on furlough during the time he was in Estonia?

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Von Stein, the Tribunal will instruct you that that is a leading question end is not permitted and you will please not ask a question like that again. That is a very leading question. You ask him a question which does not put the answer in his mouth.

DR. VON STEIN: This question is a general question of whether the Defendant Sandberger was on furlough.

THE PRESIDENT: There was no discussion of furlough there. He has just been questioned as to whether the Defendant was in Estonia during the first half of 1942 and he answered that and whether the defendant was there in February and March and he has answered that, he saw him every two or three days. Now, if he wants to make any modification of his answer that the defendant was there during the first six months of 1942, which he answered very specifically, then that is up to him, but you can't suggest to him an answer.

DR. VON STEIN: But, Your Honor, I can ask him in some manner which will refresh his memory that he can now say that he remembers a certain period during which time things were different.

THE PRESIDENT: You can ask him generally whether during these two or three years he was there, whether he was absent any time, and he has already answered that question, but if you want to put it again, you may, but you can't specify any particular period and give him practically the answer.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I will ask the witness the question whether he was away at all at any time and the witness will say, "Yes," without any question, because it is known that every soldier in the course of a year was once on furlough at some time.

THE PRESIDENT: You can ask him whether he was away and ask him when. That's the way to put it.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, this general question maybe not of very great importance, but it is just of importance to ask him at what time the defendant was away and I want to come back to this question. I therefore can only ask the witness a definite question for a definite month when I want to refresh his memory.

THE PRESIDENT: No, you can't do that. This is the way you can put the question, and, it will be entirely unobjectionable. You can ask the witness how long the defendant was in Estonia and how frequently he saw him and was the defendant ever absent. If he answers that question in the affirmative, then you ask him when. That is entirely fair and will be unobjectionable.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, but in order to refresh his memory-

THE PRESIDENT: No, it is not for you to refresh his memory. He is your witness. You called this man. You are not cross-examining him.

Q. (By Dr. Von Stein) Witness, do you know that Sandberger was once sick and was in a hospital in Estonia for a long period of time?

A. Yes, I know this. He was at Pernau, and I once visited him there, because of questions which could no longer be postponed, but I cannot say when this was.

Q. Can you tell us approximately when it was?

A. I can only say that it was in the year 1942, but I really cannot tell you any more exactly. I believe it was in the summer.

Q. Do you know how long this illness lasted?

A. No, I cannot say that, but it was not for a short period of time.

Q. After this illness, did he return to Germany for a rest?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, now, Dr. Von Stein, you see, now that's a leading question. I don't want you to understand that I am scolding you because perhaps the rules of evidence ore a little different in Germany from what they are in Anglo-American procedure, but that is a leading question. Now, in order to avoid that fault, you can g et your answer just the same, but you must put the question a different way. Now he has answered that the defendant was ill and to his best recollection it was in the summer of 1942. Now you can ask him, after his illness, where did he go, if he knows. In this way, you get the answer and you get an answer which is uninfluenced by the question, but, if you say to him, "Now, after he was ill, did he go home to Berlin to see his wife and children, "well, then, you suggest something very specific to him.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, these characteristics between a leading question and a general question are very hard to distinguish. Every general question can be a leading question. I would have to emphasize some word. This could even be interpreted as a leading question.

THE PRESIDENT: A leading question is only a leading question if the Tribunal rules it so and if we don't say anything and the Prosecution makes no objection, then it is not a leading question, and you got away with it, so don't worry about every question being bad.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, then I understand you to mean that I can continue to ask questions, but that in any case when the Tribunal stops me, this might be a leading question.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't want you to put the burden on the Tribunal all the time, but now you want to know what happened to the Defendant after he recovered from his illness, so just ask him that question. Just ask him what happened after his illness.

Q. (By Dr. Von Stein) Witness, was the Defendant Sandberger frequently on official trips?

THE PRESIDENT: We'll let you get away with that. That is a very leading question, but we'll let you got away with it.

A. I have already answered that Dr. Sandberger was frequently on the road and that in order to speak to him, one had to make a previous appointment.

THE PRESIDENT: You recall, Witness, that you also answered that you did see him every two or three days.

THE WITNESS: Yes, as long as he was present, I saw him every two or three days.

THE PRESIDENT: Please, proceed, Dr. Von Stein.

Q(By Dr. Von Stein) Was Sandberger frequently absent from Estonia?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, now you have to first find out if he knows where the defendant went when he was absent from Reval. You see, you presuppose that he knows where the defendant went and we have no way of knowing whether he knows or not.

DR. VON STEIN: I will ask him later how he knows.

THE PRESIDENT: No, you ask him first.

Q. (By Dr. Von Stein) Witness, I shall stop talking about the theme of Sandberger's absence for the moment and I shall come to another subject. What do you know about the attitude of Sandberger about the question of the equal status of the Estonian people and what examples can you give for that?

A. On the part of German officials, we Estonians were considered very much inferior to the Germans. Dr. Sandberger was in favor of considering us equal and he was one of the few who conducted himself in this manner toward Estonians. After the occupation of Estonia by the German Army and after the introduction of the civilian administration, the tendency began in Estonia to have all the economic enterprises in Estonia taken over by Germans and to discuss Estonians, at least in -

MR. GLANCY: One moment please: Again, Sir, on the basis of relevancy, we see no connection between his testimony and the charges raised against the Defendant Sandberger.

THE PRESIDENT: That does seem a little general, Dr. Von Stein, a discussion on the economic situation of Estonia.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, my question only said that he was to tell us about the attitude of Sandberger in his fields in Estonia and that he should give us examples for this.

THE PRESIDENT: You asked him his attitude towards Estonians.

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, that is connected Your Honor, with his activity which he carried out in Estonia.

PRESIDENT: Would you not deny that he had many activities in Estonia. What we are faced with is whether or not he executed Jews, Communists, gypsies, and other social elements, not his attitude toward different classes of people with whom we are not concerned here.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, if the question is doubtful of whether Sandberger ordered the execution of gypsies, Jaws, and communists, then it is important to determine how his attitude was in general, whether one could imagine Sandberger doing such things at all, and in order to establish this character of Sandberger, I asked the witness this question.

PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Von stein, you see the difficulty is, this, Dr. Sandberger's attitude toward the Estonians as such could be a very commendable one, and yet that in itself Would not exclude the possibility that he executed Jews, so it has no relevancy. If you want to ask him "what was Dr. Sandberger's character, as a gentle person, as a kind person," just that general question, that is permissible, but to ask him his attitude toward the Estonians or toward the Finns, or toward the Lithuanians would not be of any assistance to the tribunal. BY DR. VON STEIN:

Q. Witness, how would you judge Sandberger's character, and what did you hear from other people about how they thought about Sandberger?

A. On the basis of my official experience with Dr. Sandberger, I can say that he was very correct toward us and that he was very accommodating and just towards us. I believe that it might be a good illustration from the Estonian side if I say that Professor Uncorts, the last Estonian Prime Minister and the center of all nationalistic circles, said on the occasion of Dr. Sandberger's recall he was a politician and no policeman; It is a shame that he left for there might possibly be a police regime succeeding him.

Q. Witness, in order to avoid mistakes, I would like you to describe the organization and the competence of the Estonian administration in the various periods of time.

MR. GLANCY: Just a minute. I do not believe the he has as yet qualified as an expert, it has not been shown what position he held and, therefore, we have no way of knowing what his qualifications are to answer that question.

PRESIDENT: Well, there is an even greater fault, and that is the question is entirely too general.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, as for the objection which the Prosecution raised, I mentioned-

PRESIDENT: Well, don't bother about his objections, be worried a little bit about what the Tribunal said. The question is too general, he can't answer it in any way as the question is now.

DR. VON STEIN: About the question of competence, I consider it very important to be clarified in the procedure of this trial.

PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Von Stein, put a specific question and then we will determine whether he can answer it or not. BY DR. VON STEIN: ties until the 22nd of June 1941?

PRESIDENT: Well, that is too general. In the first place, Sendberger wasn't there before June 1941.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, this is only a brief question, and I only want to briefly note the developmental history of these authorities so that we can get a picture of what power these authorities had later, during the German occupation.

PRESIDENT: He already testified when he was here several days ago as to how first Estonia was free, then the Russians took over the country, then the Russians withdrew--we have that history. Proceed, Dr. Stein. BY DR. VON STEIN: was installed, that is, until the 20th of September 1941, was the Home Guard and the police entitled to undertake arrests and investigations or rather, did they have a right to do that?

A. Yes, as organs of the German field command, they did that.

Q. Witness, in the first few weeks of the civil war, according to your description, there was a great mixup. I now ask you, did Sandberger ever express the desire to you to restore orderly conditions as soon as possible in the Question about the investigation of communists?

MR. GLANCY: This, too, we consider leading, but beside that, we have the objection again of relevancy. We don't see the connections yet, Sir.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, Sandberger said on the witness stand that the proceedings against the communists were all reviewed. Whether this is the case -

PRESIDENT: Why don't you just ask him directly what procedure, if any, was established by the Estonian Government to dispose of cases of individuals arrested for political activity?

DR. VON STEIN: Now Your Honor, the question was not put this way.

PRESIDENT: well, that is the trouble, it wasn't put that way.

DR. VON STEIN: The witness was the highest official of his country. Sandberger came into this country and he found it in a condition of civil war. I now would like to know from the witness what-

PRESIDENT: You have used the phrase, "civil war" very often. What civil war was there in Estonia?

DR. VON STEIN: After the withdrawal of the Red Army when the people of the Home Guard came out from the woods and exercised retaliation against the communists who had murdered members of their families and had committed other acts of violence, these conditions were described by the witness as "civil war", and in order to alter these conditions, a conference took place between Sandberger and this witness. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Witness, was there civil war in Estonia?

A. Yes, on the part of the Estonian population there-

Q. I asked you a question, was there civil war in Estonia?

A. Yes.

Q. What is a civil war?

A. A civil war is a war between two, different segments of the population who have different political opinions.

Q. You must have two difference Governments, must you not?

A. The Estonians who were anti-communists considered the government as continuing to exist, they claimed it could he only prevented by communist violence to continue. Even today the Estonian republic is recognized by the United States of America, and not the annexation by the Soviet Union. Thus there was another power outside of the communist power, but it did not organize this war because it could not exercise any power.

Q. Witness, let's find out something about you. What are you in Estonia right now, if anything?

A. Right now, I am nothing.

Q. Where do you live?

A. In Austria.

Q. Did you ever hold office in Estonia?

A. Yes.

Q. What office did you hold?

A. My last position was chief of the Estonian administration from 1941 to 1944 --September 144.

Q. Now, when you say "chief of the Estonia Administration", what do you mean, what was the name of your office--were you the Prime Minister, were you the Chancellor--what were you?

A. No. It was forbidden by the Germans to have an Estonian Government in action.

Q. Where were you prior to 1941?

A. In June 1940, as I have already said, I was ordered by the president of the state to represent Estonian interests during the German occupation, and I was ordered to do this by the Estonian liberation committee in May.....

Q. In June 1940?

A. Yes, end of June 1940, immediately after the communists came into power.

Q. And the Estonian government sent you where?

A. The Estonian president ordered me in some way which I had to find myself to get out of Estonia and to take up contact with German authorities in case that Germany might start war with Soviet Russia and Estonia might come under German occupation.

Q. You came into Estonia with the Einsatz-Gruppe, didn't you?

A. No. I have already said that Dr. Von Kleist made it possible for me to make this trip by negotiating with the army, and I came to Estonia on the l6th of July 1941.

Q. Did you know Dr. Stahlecker?

A. No. With Von Kleist Herrn Petersen of Herrn Von Kleist I came to Estonia.

Stahlecker, and let's see if this refers to you. It says, "In an agreement with the RSHA the action group brought with them the Estonian Dr. Mae as presumptive political advisor for the Estonians". Are you the man they referred to here?

my name was mixed up with the name of Lieutenant Colonel Tildre, for he was the political advisor.

Q Your name was mixed up with that of whom? was the political advisor.

Q Well, you think then this does not refer to you? German officials between 1940--between June 1940 and July 1941, is that correct? into Estonia?

Q Well, you know the German forces were going to enter Estonia? Russia and Germany would begin and that Germany--this was the opinion of the president--would be at first victorious and Estonia would come under German occupation.

PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Dr. von Stein. BY DR. VON ST$IN:

Q Witness, in a Prosecution document the expression "concentration camp custody" is used. Was there a concentration camp in Estonia?

A No. There were only prisons in Estonia, but it was generally customary with Germans that they used expressions which were current with them and they were such expressions then, but actually there were no concentration camps.

minated communists were released? es?

A It was provided that a so-called "Board of Pardons" was to submit these applications to the office of Dr. Sandberger and the Commissioner General Litzmann would then announce them.

Q Who did the work in these agencies?

Q Do you know how these applications were processed? embitterment against communists to avoid implicating guiltness people-innocent people? the legislation of the Estonian Republic possessed a cultural autonomy?

A Yes, that is correct. The Jewish group according to the constitution -

MR. GLANCY: One moment; again, Sir, we cannot see the connection with the charges that are connected against the defendant Sandberger. Again we object on the grounds of its relevancy. What possible connection Jewish autonomy can have to the fact as to whether or not the Defendant Sandberger executed these people is not relevant to the Prosecution.

PRESIDENT: In addition to that, it is very confusing now. Here the witness is to telling us the local legislature was very favored to the Jews, and a moment ago he said that when Jews and communists were released that the population was angry.

However, aside from that, and perhaps he only said communists, it is really not germane to the issue, Dr. Von Stein. He is giving us a lecture on Estonia, its history, its culture, and so on, but it is rather far-fetched. BY DR. VON STEIN. 1940-41 members of the Jewish group in Estonia were active in the NKVD and the destruction battalions?

MR. GLANCY: Again, Sir, anything that preceded Sandberger's reign in Estonia and is unconnected we cannot see the relevancy of. Sandberger is charged with criminal acts, war crimes, and crimes against humanity in Estonia during a certain period of time. We would like to see the connection with Sandberger, with Sandberger alone. Collateral matters such as here are, while very interesting, not germane, as the Court has phrased it, with the issue at hand.

THE PRESIDENT: The objection is sustained. BY DR. VON STEIN: September 1941 on competent for all people in Estonia?

A No. The Estonian administration was not competent for members of the German Army, for Reich Germans, for ethnic Germans, for Jews, and for foreigners. the synagogue in Reval was destroyed? in Reval was completely intact?

A Yes. It was respected like any church. BY THE PRESIDENT: relations with churches that he was interested in the activity in the churches in Estonia--did that include contact with the synagogues?

A I do not know. I know that he maintained contact with the Estonian Luthern Bishop and the Greek Orthodox Metropolitan. Those are the two large confessions in Estonia.

Q Was the synagogue in Reval a pretty large synagogue?

A I do not know any standard. It was the only synagogue in Estonia?

Q The only one in all of Estonia? synagogue? and the other denominational clergy, why don't you know whether he contacted the Rabbi of the synagogue? they told me so.

Q As, and is it bee use the Rabbi didn't exist that he didn't tell you about any contact with the synagogue?

Q You said that he maintained contact with the churches. In making that statement dod you exclude the synagogue--did you in making that statement assume that the synagogue was not a church? we had many churches -- very many small churches, but the Lutheran and the Greek Orthodox are always meant by "churches", and outside of those there are quite a number of small chruches which are not included, in this answer. in your general term "churches"? Is that right, you excluded the synagogue from your answer?

Q You excluded the synagogue?

Q How many Jews were there in Estonia?

Q You excluded all them in your answer on churches? most Jews in Estonia with whom we were on good terms, had withdrawn together with Russian troops, there were very few Jews there at that time, and the Jewish chruch, the synagogue as a guilty was there, but the community as such was practically nonexistent.

Q Did you know that Sandberger int rmed all the Jews of Estonia?

A I did now know that at that time. I asked the Commissioner General Litzmann where the Jews who had been in Estonia had been put for this, after all, was a matter of our fellow citizens. The Commissioner General answered me that the Jews and foreigners had been interned and he pointed to the decree that the Estonian Administration was not competent for Reich Germans, ethnic Germans, Jews and foreigners.

Q Well, you did know that they were interned? been installed.

Q And di you make any complaints about this?

A Yes. I spoke about this matter with the Commissioner General, for, as I said, these were our fellow citizens, and if they were interned, they had to be able to represent their interests, interests which citizens generally have and which are to be fulfilled in the various civilian questions. But the Commissioner General answered me that all these questions have nothing to do with the Estonian administration and according to the decree which I have mentioned it was our duty to refer all questions up to legal decisions, concerning Reich Germans, Ethnic Germans, Jews, or foreigners to the German authorities.

Jews? learned that he was the one who actually interned them? you?

A No. I interested myself for them. had disappeared from the streets of Estonia?

A No, not him. I asked the Commissioner General. you had with him every two or three days to take an interest in these follow citizens who had dissappeared from the life of Estonia? days, did you ever say to him: "Dr. Sandberger, the Jews have dissappeared from Estonia, I heard they were interned; I hope that their citizenship rights are protected," did you ever say anything like that to Sandberger?

A No. I reserved their rights, as far as the General Commissioner as bearer of the German authority is concerned, I spoke for their rights as far as the General Commissioner is concerned.

Q You never spoke to Sandberger about the Jews in any way?

PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until 1.50.

(A recess was taken until 1350 hours.)

(The hearing reconvened at 1345 hours, 17 November 1947)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I have no further questions to put to this witness.

THE PRESIDENT: Any defense counsel wish to cross examine? Does the Prosecution desire to cross examine?

MR. GLANCY: May it please the Tribunal, the Prosecution has no desire at all to question this witness.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. If you will wait just a minute or two to see if any defense counsel might come in who might have the desire to cross examine. Is Dr. Gawlik here? Yes, here he is.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Dr. Durchholz for the defendant Schulz. Your Honor. Before the case is commenced or so started with the defense, I intend to submit my documents to the Tribunal in the two Document Books I and II. I assume that Dr. Hochwald of the Prosecution will be present. He is being notified just now, so he is coming. Before the case is started again, therefore, I would like the Tribunal to permit me to submit my documents.

THE PRESIDENT: By all means you will be so permitted. The witness Mae will now be excused. (witness excused).

MR. WALTON: If Your Honor please, as I understand the answer of the attorney for the defendant Schulz on the question he wants to submit document books, I just want the record to show that since

Dr. Hochwald is familiar with the subject matter. I would like to reserve for him any objections to be made later.

THE PRESIDENT: I understand that they had already sent for Dr. Hochwald, so he may be present as the document books are being presented.

MR. WALTON: I am sorry, I didn't understand it so.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, Mr. Walton. Dr. Durchholz, have you already submitted a copy of the document books I and II to Mr. Hochwald.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. GLANCY: I expect Dr. Hochwald momentarily, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Does the Tribunal have copies of the books?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: So far as I know the Tribunal has already received these two document books.

THE PRESIDENT: You may now proceed, Dr. Durchholz.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Your Honor, I herewith submit the defense documents for the defendant Schulz. They are Document Books I and II, and I should like to submit the documents in the following order: Under Roman I they are documents which refer to the activity and the promotion of the defendant Schulz within the police department. Under Roman II are the documents which refer to his activity as a police official and a police officer in Bremen during the years of 1923 until 1939 inclusive. Under III are documents which refer to his activity in Gratz for the year 1938. IV: documents referring to his activity in Reichenberg in 1939; V: documents referring to his activity in Hamburg, from 1940 to 1941; VI: documents which refer to his activity as a leader of Group I-B in the RSHA, and as a commander of the Leader-School, or Fuehrerschule of the Security Police in Charlottenburg in 1941 until 1942: VII: documents refering to his activity in the Russian campaign; as leader of Einsatzcommando-V from June until 21 September 1941; VIII: documents refer to his activity as the leader of Group I-A and Office-I in the RSHA from 1942 until 1944, and, finally, IX: documents refer to his activity in Salzburg as commander of the local Security Police Office from 1 April 1944 until the capitulation in May 1945. I may draw the attention of the Tribunal to the fact that the page numbers in the document books as I quote them are also simultaneously the German and English numbers, as the page numbers, etc. are exactly the same in both document books.

the Tribunal. In Document Book I, page 95 I offer as Exhibit No. 1, the Dokument No. 26, which is the dokument of 25 November 1945, concerning the employment of the Defendant Schulz as police official, Hauptwachtmeister. The next document in Document Book I on page 96 is Exhibit No. 2, Document No. 27, that is document dated 25 August 1931 on the promotion of the Defendant to the rank of Polizei-Oberleutnant, that is lieutenant of police. The next document is in Book No. I, on page 97, Exhibit No. 3, Document No. 25, which is the dokument of 29 January 1934, concerning the promotion of the Defendant to a police captain. The next is in Document Book I, on page 98, as Exhibit

No. 4, Document No. 29. It is a document dated 26 April 1938, about the transfer of a job as Regierungsrat with the police guard at Bremen. The next is in Document Book No. I, on page 99, as Exhibit No. 5, Document No. 30. This is document dated 8 June 1938, concerning the transfer of the Defendant Schulz to the State Police Office in Gratz, and transfer of this particular office as a subordination. On Page 100 of Document Book No. I, Exhibit No. 6, Document No. 31, which is referring to transfer of 31 May 1939, according to which the Defendant Schulz is appointed to the job in the State Police Office in Reichenberg. The next is in Document Book No. I, on page 101, Exhibit No. 7, Document No. 32, that is the document of 12 April 1940, according to which the defendant was appointed as Commissar Inspector of the Security Police of the military District 10 in Hamburg. Furthermore, in Document Book No. I, on page 102, Exhibit No. 8, Document No. 33, that is the document of 10 July 1940, according to which the defendant is being appointed Oberregierungsrat, Senior Government counsel, in Hamburg. The next is in Document Book I, page 103, Exhibit No. 9, Document No. 34, document dated 28 January 1941, according to which the defendant is promoted to Lt. Colonel. The next in Document Book No. I, on page 104, Exhibit No. 10, Document No. 35, it is document dated 14 February 1941, according to which the defendant is being appointed as group leader in the Office I in the RSHA in Berlin.

Furthermore, in Document Book No. I, on page 105, Exhibit 11, Document No. 26 it is document of 22 February 1941, according to which the Defendant Schulz is promoted Colonel of the Police. Schulz in May 1945, submitted to the American CIC all the original documents and the documents which I have submitted toddy are the remainder of these documents which he got back in Nurnberg; the others were missing.

MR. HOCHWALD: If Your Honor please, I would like to know whether Dr. Durchholz intends to submit Document No. 39.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: This will come later, the document which the Prosecutor just mentioned. I shall submit it in connection with the documents concerning the Russian campaign. This is proof material or consisting mainly of affidavits which I shall break down to the following: They were given (a) by members of offices, (b) by political opponents.Concerning Point II, I submit the following questions:

MR. HOCHWALD: If Your Honor please, as to this affidavits I want to make a statement. We, of course, have no objection against the offering of these affidavits but we have the reservation, of course, of the right to make an application for the cross examination of one or the other of the file.

THE PRESIDENT: That reservation can be held by every attorney before the Tribunal.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: This is Document Book No. I, page 1, Exhibit No. 12, Document No. 1, which is an affidavit of a criminal senior clerk, Friedrich Rietstaedt. I would like Your Honors to take Document Book No. II. I regret very much not to be able to go through the documents as they come up, that is, Document Book No. I, and then Document Book No. II, but I don't want to disrupt the connections, to current compiling the documents was unfortunately technically impossible, and, I, therefore, ask the Tribunal and also the Prosecution to follow me in this way.

In Document Book No. I, on page 107, it is Exhibit No. 13, which is Document No. 39. It is an affidavit of the criminal commissar, Hans Hafemann. The next document in Document Book No. II, is on page 11, is Exhibit No. 14, Document No. 40, which is an affidavit of the driver Hans Wuelfers. Further, in Document Book II, on page 137, is Exhibit No. 15, Document No. 46, which is an affidavit of the criminal clerk, Alfred Schwarting. Furthermore, in Document Book No. II, on page 114, is Exhibit No. 16, Document No. 41. It is an affidavit of the criminal clerk, Ernst Mueller. Also in Document Book No. II, on pane 115, is Exhibit No. 17, Document No. 42. That is an affidavit of the criminal senior assistant Heinrich Schmitzger. In Document Book II, on page 127, is Exhibit No. 18, Document No. 44, which is the affidavit of the criminal clerk Karl Ripken. In Document Book II, on page 133, is Exhibit No. 19, Document No. 45, which is the affidavit of the criminal clerk, Heinrich Korte.

I would like Your Honors to take up Document Book No. I, on page 23, Exhibit No. 20, Document No. 9, which is the affidavit of the former Police Wachtmeister Karl Roehrssen. In Document Book No. II, on page 179, is Exhibit No. 21, Document No. 60, an affidavit of a former police senator of Bremen, Theodor Laue. I should like this witness not to be mixed up with the government president (Regierungspraesident) Dr. Wolfgang Laue.

THE PRESIDENT: What is a police senator, just for our information, what is the office? I have never heard of it before, a police senator?

DR. DURCHHOLZ: Bremen is known as a town of the State or a Free City, and in that sense a police senator in Bremen is an equivalent for Minister of Interior, he was called a police senator there, and it is again so now.

He is called so in the Free German Hanseatic towns, and Hamburg, Bremen and Luebeck today have this same officialship.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, thank you.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: In Document Book No. I on page 36 I offer as Exhibit No. 22, Document No. 13. It is an affidavit of Marguere the Obenauer. In Document Book No. II, on page 12, is Exhibit No. 23, which I offer as Document No. 4. That is the affidavit of Elsa Tronnier. In Document Book No. I, page 14, Exhibit No. 24, Document No. 5, is an affidavit of Sophie Budelmann. In Document Book No. I, page 16, Exhibit No. 25, Document No. 6, is an affidavit of Betty Hickstein. In Document Book No. I, page 18, Exhibit 26, Document No. 7, is an affidavit of Margarethe Kettler.

Now follows an exhibit in Document Book No. II, on page 125, as Exhibit No. 27, Document No. 43. That is the affidavit by Marianne Melchers. Also in Document Book II, on page 186, is Exhibit No. 28 Document No. 63, which is an affidavit of a former Public Prosecutor in Hamburg, Dr. Wilhelm Stegemann, with whom the Defendant Schulz had close permanent official contacts, and, the last document concerning this point is in Document Book No. II, on page 42, Exhibit No. 29, Document No. 14, which is an affidavit of a merchant in Bremen by the name of Verges, a leading Free Mason. All these witnesses confirm briefly the general human attitude of the Defendant Schulz, his absolute tolerant attitude towards political opponents; the same attitude towards the Jews, his open refusal of taking measures against the Jews, e.g. for the reason of their being Jews. Furthermore, his objection to these so-called Jewish pogroms in 1938; his attitude towards the church; his absolute moderate political altitude; his absolute incorruptibility, and impartiality; his attitude towards the questions of protective custody; also his care for the welfare of those in protective custody, and their families during and after the protective custody, and, finally, the respect he was held in by all his subordinates, and by his superiors, and even by political opponents.

Concerning this last point I shall submit a number of affidavits by political opponents. In the Document Book No. I, on page 6, is Exhibit No. 30, Document No. 2, which is the affidavit of a school director of Bremen, Oskar Drees, a leader of a social democratic papter, Reichsbanner, and today the editor of a very important political social democratic paper. Furthermore in Document Book No. I, on page 8, Exhibit No. 31, Document No. 3, which is an affidavit of Albert Meyer.

Also in Document Book I, page 27, Exhibit 32, Document 10. That is the affidavit of Klaus Buecking, whose Communist family members the Defendant Schulz helped and supported. which is the affidavit of a former attorney, today a parson, Kurt Mueller. an affidavit of the present Police President of Bremen, Helmut Ystroem, who is a well-known Free Mason.

In Document Book I, page 29, Exhibit 33, Document 11. This is an affidavit of the editor Alfred Faust, a former Reichstag member for the Social Democratic Party of Germany and Chief Editor of a Social Democratic paper in Bremen, who today is living in France. loyally, cordially and humanely, and when they were in protective custody, he released them, and partly enabled then to get work and supplies. of the Defendant in Graitz. To this point I submit, in Document Book I, on page 44, Exhibit 35, Document 15, which is an affidavit of the former Ambassador and Minister of the Reich, Freiherr Erwin Gudenus. an affidavit of the wife of a university professor, Dr. Edith Spath. affidavit of the Austrian Government Councillor, Wilhelm von Lahousen. vit of the Episcopal Ordinariete , Chancellor, Dr. Josef Steiner (Fuerstbischoeflicher Ordinariatskanzler).

In Document Book II, page 184, Exhibit No. Document 62, an affidavit of the Lord Bishop Dr. Ferdinand Pawlikowski of Graz. of the Graz State Police Office, dealt them as well as with a number of leading Austrian personalities who had been arrested by Austrian National Socialists and either got them out of custody himself or caused their being released from custody.

This witness also confirms the happenings in Lemberg, and the setting free of the Jews who had been driven together on the Lemberg sport fields. He also talks about the tension in the relationship between Schulz and his superior Gruppen Leader Dr. Rasch, and his Staff Leader Hoffmann. From this explanation it becomes furthermore evident that the Defendant Schulz was never in Kiev.

He confirms that Schulz had rows with Gruppenfuehrer Rasch and often did not obey his campaign for quite some time and stayed in Berlin. 37. That is a letter from Heydrich, of the 26th of September 1941, to the Defendant Schulz, according to which he was released from the leadership of Einsatzkommando 5 and was being recalled to Berlin. document. The defendant stated on the witness stand, that on the 21st of September 1940, as the leader of Einsatzkommando 5, he was released from his job. The date of this document, which is the 26th of September, is explained through the fact that the defendant received the formal note of release only after his return from Russia, in Berlin. His release actually happened on the occasion of his visit in Berlin when he went to see Streckenbach and it was confirmed by him orally. Einsatzgruppe C thereupon had already been told of the release through radio, and the defendant returned only to give over his kommando to his successor, SS-Obersturmbannfuehrer Meier.

Only for this purpose he returned to Russia and went back to Berlin immediately. 49, the Document 57. That is an affidavit of August Haefner. He confirms that on the 27th of September 1941 the training course of the leaderschool, the Gruppe for the training course of those who were to take part in the Russian campaign, was recalled, and that Schulz then in Berlin expressed his disapproval of the executions of Jews which had been ordered.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, I have only one question. Dr. Durchholz has presented an affidavit of a Major Lahousen. I unfortunately do not have the document number, but Dr. Durchholz will certainly know.... I do presume that this affiant is not identical with the witness before the IMT, but I would like Dr. Durchholz to inform the Tribunal and the Prosecution about this fact.

DR. DURCHHOLZ: The affidavit of the witness Lahousen which I have offered is not made by the well-known Lahusen who was a witness during the IMT trial, but I believe he is a brother, or at least a relative, of that witness. In any cane, this witness Lahousen whose affidavit I have submitted up to this point has never been mentioned in connection with these trials and has never been heard an a witness yet. At the time, I think, he was a major in the Austrian Army.

THE PRESIDENT: The record will contain your clarification.

Dr. Gawlik, will you proceed now, please. stand. as follows:

JUDGE SPEIGHT: Witness, raise your right hand and repeat after me: will speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath.)

JUDGE SPEIGHT: You may be seated. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Give the Tribunal your first and your surname.

A. Willy Seibert.

Q. When and where were you born?

A. On the 17th of June 1908, in Hannover.

Q. Please, describe for the sake of the Tribunal your life until the year 1935.

A. My youth I spent first in the country near Hannover, and then I lived in Hannover; I went to secondary school there. I left school Master 1928, after I had passed my matriculation. My father had been a merchant by profession. I myself intended to become a building merchant, and be active in building administration and take up an activity in this field. For this purpose I wanted to study building and economics. My father was killed in the first world war. He had no property, so that before I could begin my studies I had to work on various building sites near Hannover, and on the Midland Canal near Hannover, in sluice building. Thus I worked practically in order to earn myself some money, and at the same time I trained myself in craft.......which would be of value in my building, activities.

school in Hannover, and I studied building, and at the same time economics. I studied for four terms on the whole, but during the holidays and also during two of the terms, I worked practically as a mason. From Hannover I went, after four terms, to Goettingen University.......economics again.... that laster for four terms; and after four terms, I graduated. I passed my State examinations at the Goettingen University, and received a diploma in economics.

Q. When was that?

A. That was in the autumn of 1932.

Q. What was your further activity from then on?

A. I attempted to join the Chamber of Trades in Hannover, or in other economic establishments, but at that time I could not get any work. Then I learned at the University of Goettingen, through a poster which I saw, that referendars and all kinds of young students were given the opportunity to become a soldier and later on if they proved themselves suitable, they would be promoted to officers. This opportunity I made use of because I imagined that after I had been promoted an officer I could join some administrative unit of the Army, and I could thus make use of my professional training and could work in the sphere of my interest.

Q. How long were you a soldier?

A. On the 1st of November 1932 I join ed Infantry Regiment No. 17 at Goettingen, as a private, and I remained a soldier until autumn 1935.

soldier?

A During this period I was trained as an infantry soldier; later, as a non-commissioned officer, a platoon leader, and then a company leader of a motorized unit. But in between for some time, I was detached for training schools by the Chief of Training Affairs of the Army. That was an independent organization. In the summer and autumn of 1935, I was active in the infantry school in Doebritz near Berlin. I went through an officer's training course and after that I joined the guard-battalion in Berlin--Wach Battalion--where I passed the practical part of my examination for an officer. That was in the autumn--I think it was October 1935.

Q What activities did you carry out in the following years? economic expert--a Referent, in the SD Information Service.

Q How did it come about that you joined the SD? met, quite by accident in a Berlin restaurant, an acquaintance of mine who was meanwhile employed in this SD organization as an expert on agricultural questions. During our conversation I told him about my professional aims, and then he explained to me the tasks of this SD organization and the specialized training with this organization. He asked me whether I could succeed in being transferred from the army to the SD if I received the same rank and the same field of tasks in this economy department. I told him that I had, on various occasions, spoken to my superior officers of Defense District III, the personnel department of Berlin, and had asked for a transfer into the administration unit of the army. The major of this department in Defense District III liked me, but he could not help me because there were very few openings, or at least jobs, which were not taken yet. I therefore suggested that there would be a possibility to join this SD organization holding the same rank and dealing with the question of economy--that is the field I was trained inand this major-get me this transfer to the SD. the SD? Berlin, I had not known anything at all about the existence of the SD; therefore, I did not know about the tasks of the SD.

Q Were you a member of the SS in those days?

Q Did you leave the Wehrmacht when you joined the SD? officer and every year I served with the Wehrmacht, for a certain time and I remained a reserve officer until the end of the war. not, or did you join the SS voluntarily?

AAt that time; I joined the SD and with that I automatically became a member of the SS-formation, the SD. I was never a member of the General SS. I never did a day's service in the fomations of the SS and I was not a member either of the Waffen SS or the armed SS. German and Page 50 in the English, Exhibit 152, Document No. NO-2969. It's the promotion suggestion of the 14 January 1943. When did you learn about this document for the first time? submission of documents by the Prosecution. SA from the first of May 1933 and that you were a member of the SS from the 6 November 1935. Are these statements correct?

from the document itself, because the periods of time, mentioned in the documents do not correspond. Thus it says on page 1 of the original, at the bottom: On the first of November 1932, S. reported voluntarily for service in the Wehrmacht; and until the first of July 1933, he was in military training. That is the same time during which I was mentioned here as serving in the SA. This date, the first of May 1933, can be explained through the fact that at the time I was registered in the Office for Physical Training of the University of Goettingen, and I was mentioned by them that I should be put at the disposal of the schools of this organization for further training. That the periods are incorrect becomes evident from Page 7 of the original. There it says under SA, a dot--or at least an asterik--a few dots, then a diagonal 7 W. This has become evident from the photostat that it is: Chief A W, and that is the organization with which I actually was active as a physical trainer.

Q Was this the organization which belonged to the SA? former members of the SA and men who could deal with military training and to whom military trainers were detached. There are various mix-ups, but I don't think they are of importance now.

Q What about the membership in the SS?

A The date: 6 November 1935 may mean the date since I was active in the SS formation--the SD; especially as the service ranks contained in this document show that I was not, as it was usual and as I should have been, transferred to holding the same service rank, but that on the 6 November 1935 I was Unterscharfuehrer, and then I became a Scharfuehrer a few months later, and then again a few months later I received the service rank of Oberscharfuehrer-- all non-commissioned officer ranks. They are all ranks not corresponding to my rank which I held in the Wehrmacht.

Q. Is the statement correct that on 6 November 1935, you joined the SS as an organization?

A. No, I joined the SD, and not the SS.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, shall we have our recess now?

DR. GAWLIK: I would like to ask you one thing, your Honor. My colleague, Dr. Aschenauer, sent me a note saying that he would like the Defendant Ohlendorf to be excused from the session this afternoon. The reason is an interrogation with Herr Schonfeld, as I see here.

THE PRESIDENT: The request, of course, is granted, and the Defendant Ohlendorf will be accompanied by the Marshal to what room number, Dr. Gawlik?

DR. GAWLIK: It does not mention the number of the room. It says Mr. Schonfeld.

MR. GLANCY: That is Mr. Walter Schonfeld, Sir, associated with the I. G. Farben trial.

THE PRESIDENT: Do we have a room number?

MR. GLANCY: I can find out in just a moment, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Will the Marshal please inform himself as to the destination of the Defendant Ohlendorf for this afternoon and have him in custody and properly delivered to the person who desires to interrogate him?

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

Q. (By Dr. Gawlik) Witness, please comment on the document, especially about the statements on page 92 of the German document book, where it is noted, "joined the SS, 1 November" and under the same date "Unterscharfuehrer SD."

A. I did not become active in the SD on the 1st of November, but I assume that this date is due to the fact that the negotiations about transfer from the Army to the scharfuehrer, corresponding to a PFC in the German Army, was dated retroactively before I became active in order that I might reach more quickly the further dates of promotion, 20 April 1936 and 13 September 1936, which had been promised me, and in the same manner in which such transfers usually were carried out, namely, with the same rank.

Q. How do you explain the mistakes mentioned by you in this document?

A. I trace them back to typographical errors which can arise when these matters are entered into the files, when they are copied on other files, in correspondence, et cetera.

Q. What activity did you carry out in the SD?

A. I was used as an expert in the then department economics; that is to say, in the section trade, traffic and commerce and later I became head of the department, and after 1938 I also became deputy of the group chief economics.

Q. When did you become department chief?

A. I became department chief due to the reorganization in 1939, through the fact that Office 3 was created and the referats were now prom oted to departments from that time on. But I want to say that the designation referat or department in correspondence as well as in the usual custom of using the word, was not uniform in the SD organization.

In the one SD organization, for example, for instance,the office in Frankfurt on the Main, the economic expert was called department chief; the same expert in Brauschweig was called an economic referent.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, as Seibert Exhibit No. 1 I submit a sketch about the organization of the agencies of the Chief of the Security Police and the SD. us in which group you were active. are listed on this sketch. We did not bother to list all sub-divisions of offices, merely Office III is subdivided. As sub-divisions of Office III there were four groups; Group III-A, administration and law, Group III-B, public health and folkdom; Group III-C, cultural questions; and Group III-D, economics. In this sketch we did not list the office of the adjutant or the post office which were under Office III as independent agencies, but we merely showed these four groups. Of these four groups, the Group III-D was again sub-divided. If the picture were complete, the other groups would be sub-divided in a similar manner. The listed five departments belong to this Group III-D: III-D-1, agriculture; III-D-2, trade, commerce and transportation; III-D-3, banks and finance; III-D-4, industry; and III-D-5 , labor and social welfare. Looking at it from a personnel point of view, the Chief of Office III-D was Ohlendorf; the head of III-A was Gehlenbach; of Group III-B, Dr. Ehlich; Group III-C, Dr. Spengler; and Group III-D, Ohlendorf. I was deputy of the Group Chief of Economics, that is Ohlendorf in his capacity as Department Chief of Economics; and my position was under Department III-D-2 until the 1st of February 1944, that is to say, commerce, transportation and trade; and at the same time I was deputy for the Group Chief Economics. Only in the last year of the war did I become chief of Department Economics.

Q Can you describe your activity in detail?

economic department and to observe them; to gather information in the entire Reich, and to pass on these reports to the economic ministry and to other agencies. For my department, or later it was a group, I received my reports from the thousands of honorary confidence men from all classes of the population who sent their reports to the local SD agencies, who then passed them on to the RSHA. In order to describe this activity which took all my time, apart from the Russian assignment, I may give two or three examples to show how this activity was carried on. When, in the first few months of the war it was seen that for the agricultural and industrial workers too few shoes were available, and this began to have its effect upon the morale of the workers, as well as on the economy itself, we received reports about this from all parts of the Reich, which I compiled and sent on to the proper economic agency. I was informed by that agency at the time that almost the entire allocation for leather had been requisitioned by the supreme commander of the army, and could no longer be made available to the civilian population; but these reports did not decrease. In the spring of 1940 -

THE PRESIDENT: (Interposing) Dr. Gawlik, why is it necessary to go into so much detail on the activities of this office?

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, the witness is accused here of membership in the SD, as a criminal organization; and, therefore, is supposed to be punished for the activity which he had described here; and, therefore, I consider it relevant that he describe in detail what he actually did during the time in which he was not in Russia and for which he is supposed to be punished too.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, are you basing that Count in the indictment regarding membership in a criminal organization on activities in the office, activities such as he is now going into?

MR. WALTON: No, Your Honor, that count in the indictment is based merely upon the first IMT judgment. I have no doubt that the majority of his activities outside of Russia were perfectly legal. We do not contend that membership in an organization declared to be criminal by the International Military Tribunal is the basis for the count in the indictment.

Now, we intend to show that members of the SD as well as members of other organizations committed criminal acts, but I don't care to say where or when at this particular time.

THE PRESIDENT: No. Well, Dr. Gawlik, it is entirely proper for you to show that his work in the offices was entirely legal and proper. We do not at all discount the importance of that, but I don't see why it is necessary to go into so much detail. If you point out that he was in this office and he had charge of a certain department which had to do with economics of the nation, it seems to be that it might be enough, but to give us the names of the head of each one of these sub-departments can't be of much assistance in determining the real issue.

DR. GAWLIK: Well, this question is finished now. He described his activity which is supposed to be considered, according to the Prosecution criminal, and in order to clarify this for the Tribunal what he actually did, he must give a few examples in my opinion.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, that is entirely in order, Dr. Gawlik, but now you have covered that; and if the Prosecution does not rebut it, then it stands that his activities when he was in charge of this particular department did not involve criminality. Now, if the Prosecution attacks that, then you certainly have the right to go into it in a great deal more detail.

DR. GAWLIK: It has already attacked it through the indictment.

THE PRESIDENT: And then you replied to it now.

DR. GAWLIK: It is my duty to defend him against what he has done. If the Prosecution says that it does not consider this activity in his office criminal, then I shall interrupt at this point. It is only up to the Prosecution to make an express statement.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't know if the Prosecution is going that far.

DR. GAWLIK: I don't know, Your Honor, how far the Prosecution goes.

THE PRESIDENT: Well -

DR. GAWLIK: Therefore, I must defend myself in all directions. If the Prosecution gives me a precise answer how far its contention of criminality goes -

THE PRESIDENT: (Interposing) It is very obvious you are going in all directions with all these shoes that you are getting.

Proceed, Dr. Gawlik. BY DR. GAWLIK: your activity in Office III-D. I have occupied myself all the time and personally. These are several extensive reports about the organization of the economic administration which is just red-tape and paper work. The reports showed, just to cite one example, that for the question of labor allocation alone more than twenty agencies were competent for this field, and that this was very difficult for the people concerned and for the population.

I mention only one brief example from all these reports. We have tried through these reports to achieve a reform in the organization. Reforms were started in this direction, but they did not become very effective.

Q. Outisde of the measures and the jobs you have listed in Group III-D, did you have any other jobs to do or did you carry on any other activities?

A. No, at no time. I was not in any other departments, either in an informational or an organizational manner.

Q. Did you have the possibility of having your way about the proposals made in these reports?

A. The suggestions for improvement listed in these reports came from experts and were merely given to the leading agencies for their information. Whether a regulation was thereupon changed was only decided by this ministry or the organization. That had to be this way and we could not take over this responsibility.

Q. During your activity in this Group III-D, did you have anything to do about investigating sabotage activities?

A. No, we were not an economic police, no trade police either, merely an informational organization.

Q. Who was competent for the investigation of sabotage cases in economics?

A. Outside of the police, there was a Department of Economics in Office IV and there was a Department of Economics in Office V of the Criminal Police.

Q. Did you carry on your activity secretly?

A. No, at no time did I use an alias and I always participated openly and officially in all conferences, mostly in uniform.

Q. When were you detailed to Einsatzgruppe D?

A. In the middle of June, 1941.

Q. What rank did you have at that time?

A. SS Sturmbannfuehrer, which is equivalent to a Major.

Q. Were you relieved of your post in the Group III-D when you were ordered to Russia?

A. No, a deputy was appointed for that time and I retained this service.

Q. How long were you with Einsatzgruppe D?

A. About ten months.

Q. Did you report voluntarily to Einsatzgruppe D?

A. No.

Q. How did you come to go to Einsatzgruppe D?

A. Office I of the RSHA ordered me to.

Q. Did you have a possibility not to obey this order?

A. No, I was under military law.

Q. Since when were you subject to military law?

A. Since the 1st of September, 1939.

Q. What would have happened if you had not obeyed this order?

A. I would have been put before an SS and Police Court and punished.

Q. When you were ordered there, did you know about the missions of the Einsatzgruppe?

A. The measures of the Einsatzgruppe were not known to me in detail, but I knew that the missions which an Einsatz agency had to carry out in the occupied territories consisted of the following: First, security missions in order to secure the occupied area, including measures for the interior administration, and, second, SD mission, that is, to report about the morale and about the situation of public life of this occupied area. As for myself, personally, I assumed that I was to gather material for these reports.

Q. Which missions were you destined for in the Einsatzgruppe?

A. I was supposed to become head of Office III, namely, for these SD missions, within the staff of the Einsatzgruppe.

Q. What were your missions to be in detail?

A. As Director III, I was concerned with gathering material about the morale of the population, about the administrative situation, about health, education, and all economic questions, and I was to send on these reports to the local agencies and to Berlin.

Q. Could this mission be gathered from the designation which you received?

A. Yes, there was an order for me to become Director III.

Q. Perhaps you can explain to the Tribunal what this "No. III" means. Whey was this "No. III" chosen?

A. The "No. III" was chosen because this was the same mission which the Department III had in making out its reports. It, of course, applied here to the occupied foreign area.

Q. Was this mission as Director III mentioned in the order of transfer expressly?

A. Yes.

Q. What were the reasons that you were ordered to be used for this purpose?

A. For this SD mission, namely, this III mission, only a collaborator of Office III could be used.

Q. Were you also supposed to carry out any executive measures?

A. No, no provision was made for this.

Q. Who was destined to carry out the executive measures?

A. Office I of the RSHA had designated a Director IV and ordered him to join the staff, but he did not become active, because Ohlendorf, after conferring with Office I, had ordered that the staff should not carry out any executive measures and this Director IV, who had been provided for COURT II CASE IX them, received a commando when the Russian war started.

There was no other collaborator in the staff, no interrogating officer.

Q. Who was Chief of Einsatzgruppe D during your assignment?

A. The Chief was Ohlendorf.

Q. When you were transferred, were you designated to become the deputy of Einsatzgruppe Chief Ohlendorf?

A. No.

Q. Who was designated as the Deputy Chief?

A. Office I Gruppenfuehrer Streckenbach had designated the senior Commando leader, commando Leader Setzen, as Deputy Chief of the Einsatzgruppe.

Q. Whey was Setzen designated as the Deputy Chief?

A. I can not imagine, because he was an old experienced executive officer.

Q And didn't he talk with you about the mission which was to be performed in Russia?

Q No one mentioned the Fuehrerorder at all to you in Dueben?

Q Did Ohlendorf tell you what the purpose of the mission was? Jobs in the occupied areas; I did not get to hear the Fuehrerorder until we left Dueben by speaking to commando leadersand with Ohlendorf.

Q When did Ohlendorf tell you about the Fuehrer order? today whether we spoke about it already on the way when I spoke about It to the commando leaders.

Q Did you travel with Ohlendorf from Dueben?

Q Did you travel in the same car with him?

A No. There ware 180 vehicles and a fewdays before Ohlendorf gave me the job to carry out this motorized advance and to see that it was correctly carried out; therefore, I was on a motocycle during the entire advance.

Q When did he tell you that you were to be his deputy?

Q Well, now, you were his deputy, weren't you?

A No. I wasnever his deputy. I merely was representative for my sphere as chief in department III.

Q Do you remember when you left Dueben, what day? you exactly.

PRESIDENT: Very well, I am sorry to have interrupted you, Dr. Gawlik. Q Where was the garrison of the group staff -- during' the time you belongedto the group staff? the 11th Army or nearby.

Q How large was the number of members of the group staff?

A The group staff consisted of eight officers. The administrative officer for the Departments 1 and 2, that is, Personnel and Administration, the Director 3, that wasmyself; the adjutant; the interpreter; the doctor; the chief of the police company; the motor pool expert - I think that is all.

Q What was your job and mission within the group staff? Ohlendorf had told me to keep up liaison with the 11th Army and he made that my field, too, Director 3, just a few brief examples? members of the commando. Every commando had either an officer or an appropriate non-commissioned officer, but unfortunately only one person usually who had the same mission in his area. That is to say, he had to make reports about the morale of the population, about the situation in the spheres off public life which I have mentioned before, and to report to his agency, that is, the Division of Corp and keep them informed currently and also to pass on these reports to the group.

That is, a report as to the harvest for instance went to the Food Ministry by way of the RSHA, and, moreover, these reports went to the various staff sections of the 11th Army. For example, to the Chief of Staff, and to the Commanding General himself if it was important, and to the C-II; to the Economic Commanders, to the agriculture leadership, to the Quartermaster with C-IV, and to I-B, that is also C-IV. in these reports during this time which you made them out? there is only one or two reports which are concerned with those missions, but such reports were currently made out, and the were included in the Situational Report to much a greater extent. Furthermore, more extensive special reports, for example, asreport which I made out myself about the entire economic structure of the Crimea, or about the Tartars. Such reports are not included in these Situational Reports. Furthermore, the almost daily reports which were sent to the local agencies are missing in these Situational Reports. In order to give only two or three examples, in every report there was something said about the morale, not once but in every locality which was newly conquered; and the food, situation of the population, the re-establishment of industry, and so forth. The reports show that all phases of public life were considered, so that I don't think I need give any other examples.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, in order to prove the activity of the witness in Einsatzgruppe, I shall submit parts of these documents as exhibits in order to prove what the defendant actually did in the Einsatzgruppe.

THE PRESIDENT: Are you submitting it now, or will you submit them with your document book -- I am sorry. Do you intent to submit them now, or with your document book?

Q When did you hear about the individual executions? learned about then through the reports which the Einsatzcommando sent to the Einsatzgruppe. on by the Einsatzcommandos and special commandos?

A I didn't see this possibility because the chief of Einsatzgruppe himself didn't have this possibility. I had a lower rank, a lower ranking position. Once I witnessed when the chief of Einsatzgruppe tried to do something about this order. This was in Nikolajew, the occasion of Himmler's visit at the beginning of October 1941, during a dinner which took place at that time in which I participated. There were in attendance about twenty or twenty-five persons, and these were officers from the offices of commanders in the vicinity who had been called together for this occasion, and, there were several escorting officers of Himmler's present.

I was a witness on this occasion when after the dinner Ohlendorf addressed Himmler concerning this order, mentioning especially the difficulty of carrying it out; the difficulty for the men who had to carry out this order. I was sitting across the table, Ohlendorf was sitting next to Himmler, and I waited with, great expectancy of what Himmler mould answer to this, but Himmler did not react at all on this. I personally saw no possibility of speaking to Himmler. He was constantly surrounded by high ranking officers.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't quite understand what you mean, witness, by saying, "That Himmler didn't react at all," Did he say anything?

THE WITNESS: No, he said nothing, Your Honor. I notice from his reaction that he was unwilling, and didn't want to go into a debate.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, now, going into a debate goes far beyond a mere answer. Did he not say something; to Ohlendorf who had addressed a proposition to him?

THE WITNESS: No, he didn't say anything, but he turned to his righthand neighbor in order to discuss something with him.

THE PRESIDENT: He didn't say a word to Ohlendorf?

THE WITNESS: About this subject nothing, but, of course, later they discussed something about other things.

THE PRESIDENT: When Ohlendorf presented his proposition to him, was it a long statement or a short statement?

THE WITNESS: It was not much longer than I just described it. He especially pointedout the difficulty of his men when carrying out this order.

THE PRESIDENT: Did Himmler apparently listen to Ohlendorf's statement?

THE WITNESS: By all meanshe listened to it. He must have heard it, because I heard it, and I was sitting across the table.

THE PRESIDENT: And you say Himmler made no reply?

THE WITNESS: That is right, Himmler made no reply, and I considered that as an answer.

THE PRESIDENT: Did Himmler by any action, by any facial expression, reprove Ohlendorf for having made the suggestion which he did?

THE WITNESS: He was evidently dissatisfied by turning to his righthand neighbor, and he didn't react at all.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, you say he didn't react at all. You mean he didn't react favorably?

THE WITNESS: I mean by this, Your Honor, that he merely didn't give an answer, but turned definitely to his righthand neighbor in order to discuss something else.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, he turned to his righthand neighbor and spoke about something else?

THE WITNESS: Yes, that is right. That I must assume.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning. Do you have something to say, Mr. Walton? No. The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning at 9:30.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is in recess until 0930 tomorrow morning.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 0930 hours, 17 November 1947) 0930-1630, Justice Michael A. Musmanno,

THE MARSHAL: Persons in the courtroom will please find their seats.

Military Tribunal II is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

DIRECT EXAMINATION (Continued) BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q Witness, from Document Book III_D, Page 34 of the English, Page 60 of the German book I submit to you Exhibit 158, Document No-2859. This is your affidavit. In this affidavit you have said the following: "Since I took an officer's training course in the Army, my chief, Ohlendorf, ordered me to concern myself with questions of training within the unit." Can you explain these statements in detail? two days before, I assembled the drivers of the entire Einsatzgruppe in order to organize a motorized march column, because these drivers were not trained for driving in a motorized column. For this purpose I conducted several driving tests. During the advance of the column to the garrison I also saw to it that this motorized column proceeded in good order. After reaching our garrison I no longer had anything to do with this training since the commandos were now distributed. The men were all trained. The members of the Security Police had been trained in the school in Pretsch. The members of the Waffen-SS had been trained in their units, and the men of the police had also been trained, in their units.

Q What do you mean "by the expression "training"?

Q What kind of training is this? column, for every officer who was in a motorized unit knows that this is not taken for granted.

Q Were you ever deputy of the Chief of Einsatzgruppe D?

Q From Document Book III_D, Page 1 of the English Document Book, Page 1 of the German, I submit to you Exhibit 148, Document NO. 2856. This is Ohlendorf's affidavit of the 2nd of April, 1947. In this affidavit Ohlendorf has made the following statements: "Since he" -- and this means you -- "was the senior officer in point of service after me, he was entrusted by me with the duties of a deputy during my absence." When Ohlendorf was examined on the witness stand he said the following about this point. This is the transcript of the 9th of October, 1947, Page 577 of the German transcript. I don't know the page in the English transcript. "This means that he was my deputy in the staff of the Einsatzgruppe, "but not the deputy for the entire area of the Einsatzgruppe." Please comment on this. commando leaders Seetzen and Mueller had higher ranks, and two commando leaders had the same rank, As far as my sphere 3 is concerned I represented Ohlendorf in it in the staff of the Einsatzgruppe. That is, for the SD reports and for the liaison with the Army, As far as any executive missions are concerned, I was not competent for them during my time. Page 141 of the German text. I submit to you Exhibit 28, Document NO3055. This is Schubert's affidavit. In this affidavit Schubert states the following: "In October 1941 I was assigned to the Einsatzgruppe D. Ohlendorf was the chief of the Einsatzgruppe and Willy Seibert his deputy."

Are these statements correct? to my position in the staff, which he must have been thinking of when he said this, but this does not include a competence as deputy as far as dealing with the commando leaders was concerned. German. I submit to you Exhibit 4, Document NO. 2716. This is Schubert's affidavit of the 4th of February, 1947. Under No. 8 Schubert said the following: "When Ohlendorf was absent from the staff of the Einsatzgruppe no reports were sent to Berlin. As a rule his deputy Seibert accompanied him on these tours of inspection and I was ordered to look after the house', without, however, being allowed to solve any problems which might occur. I have never been initiated into secret orders and when Ohlendorf and Seibert were absent from the staff, no decisions could be made." Is it correct that no decisions could be made when Ohlendorf and you were absent from the staff? himself when he said this, for if Ohlendorf whom I usually accompanied was absent from the staff of the Einsatzgruppe, then no decisions could actually be made by Schubert in any manner, but this also shows that no current decisions were to be made in the staff, for otherwise the chief of the Einsatzgruppe would have had to appoint an authorized deputy during his absence. D with other agencies in the Army? the senior regimental commander. This regimental commander cannot worry about the usual business transactions in the staff, but in the staff the divisional commander is represented by the senior staff officer for these transactions.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, do you not have in the German Army a vice-divisional commander?

THE WITNESS: No, as far as I know there is no vice-divisional commander.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Dr. Gawlik) From Document Book III-D, Page 34 of the English, Page 60 of the German, I submit to you Exhibit 158, Document NO-2859. This is your affidavit of the 1st of April, 1947. In this affidavit you have said the following; "I never was appointed Ohlendorf's deputy for Einsatzgruppe D." Is this statement correct?

A. Yes, the statement is correct.

Q. In this affidavit you further stated, "However, I regarded myself as his deputy in all matters which Chief 3 had to work cut. As senior officer on the staff of the Einsatzgruppe I took over all tasks within the group whenever Ohlendorf was absent from the group." What do you mean by tasks of the group?

A. Tasks within the group meant within the staff. That was not the usual, customary use of the word, but an inclusion of the commandos would have been a wrong conclusion.

Q. In what matters were you the deputy of Ohlendorf within the staff during his absence?

A. In the staff I was the deputy for my sphere, for the SD reports, and for the liaison with the Army, and during his absence I was deputy for the current transactions of the staff.

Q. Were you also the deputy for my executive missions?

A. No, I have already said that for executive missions I was competent neither when Ohlendorf was present nor when he was absent.

DR. KOESSEL: Dr. Koessel deputising for Dr. Hoffmann for the Defendant Nosske.

The Defendant Nosske is sick and asks that he be excused for a moment.

THE PRESIDENT: The Marshal will take Defendant Nosske out because of his illness.

Q. (By Dr. Gawlik) the staff when Ohlendorf was absent from the group?

A. For this purpose the missions of the staff would have to be described briefly. It was not that current requests of the commandos had to be handled which would have made it necessary to come to immediate decisions.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik; the Defendant Schulz will be excused for a few moments.

A. (continuing) This was especially true of the executive missions. The orders had been given clearly. The additional orders of the 11th Army were known to the commandos. They were announced publicly everywhere, and the directives for carrying out executions had been regulated by the chief of the Einsatzgruppe at the beginning, May I briefly describe a day as it passed, as it went on when Ohlendorf was on leave between March and the second half of April, 1942? I had to collect the reports coming from the commandos. I had to discuss these reports with the agencies, Thus, every day appointments for conferences were made, for there was not only one Army agency but five to six. Visitors from these agencies had to be received. In the meantime the Army had called up and asked for an immediate submission of the result of the partisan reconnaissance mission of the last few days, and may I add that these months were the climax in the partisan warfare in the Crimea. I had to compile these reports too, and to submit them to the Staff for Partisan Warfare of the Eleventh Army. Just in these very weeks it happened that I was ordered to three or four front assignments of the Army, and often I was not with the staff for about two or three days myself.

I can prove these front assignments. After my return reports which had come in in the meantime had to be worked on again.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, these reports which you received, from the commandos, did they cover all activities of the commandos?

THE WITNESS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: That would include executions?

THE WITNESS: I also received reports and passed on reports which included executions, where it was reported that commandos had carried out executions.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Dr. Gawlik) Was during Ohlendorf's absence the group staff active at all in reference to executions?

A. The group staff hardly became active when Ohlendorf was there, and when Ohlendorf was not there any work with executions or any inspections of executions did not take place.

Q. Perhaps you can comment in this connection on this: Were the executions missions of the staff or were they in other fields?

A. The group staff, during my entire presence in Russia., did not have to carry out any executions. Therefore, it never occurs in documents. We did not have to deal with such questions in the staff.

Q. Did you ever during Ohlendorf's absence give any executive orders to the leaders of the special and Einsatz Kommandos?

A. No, I did not.

Q. According to page 236 of the German record, the prosecution has interpreted your affidavit as follows: Seibert says in his affidavit that in certain questions he was the deputy of Ohlendorf. Is this interpretation correct?

A. I agree to this interpretation by the prosecution, for it is not said that I was complete deputy of Ohlendorf but only for certain questions. For certain questions means for those fields which I have already listed in my own affidavit, namely, for the SD reports and for the liaison with the Army.

Q. Did executive questions belong to this list of questions which you had to deal with?

A. No, as I have already said, they did not.

Q. Who was deputy in the place of the group staff when you accompanied Ohlendorf on his trips?

A. At the garrison of the staff there was no authorized deputy in the staff during these official trips for the entire Einsatzgruppe, If Ohlendorf was on official trips I usually accompanied him, and it certainly would, have been senseless to take along his deputy on all these many COURT II CASE IX trips, for just during these periods of absence a deputy in all matters would have had to remain at the garrison or at the headquarters of the staff, especially since these official trips often lasted one week.

Because of the large distances in Russia and becuase of the bad road conditions, may I add here that if it rained we could not proceed for one or two days because 80% of the roads were merely field paths.

Q. Who was Ohlendorf's deputy at the end of April and in May, 1942, when Ohlendorf was in Prague?

A. When Ohlendorf went to Prague, end of April, beginning of May, 1942, I accompanied him. I participated in the conference in Prague which lasted several days. In this time too there was no deputy for all questions with the headquarters of the staff.

Q. According to page 236 of the German record the prosecution has said that you were Ohlendorf's chief of staff for security questions. Is that statement correct?

A. There was never a chief of staff for security questions with Einsatzgruppe D. Therefore, I could never have been it.

Q. Were you ever chief of staff of the Einsatzgruppe D?

A. During my entire presence in Russia there never was a chief of staff or a leader of the staff in the Einsatzgruppe D?

Q. Did you ever handle any security questions in Einsatzgruppe D?

A. I do not know exactly what is meant by security questions. As far as any orders or measures are concerned about the security of the operational area, I did not deal with such. Of course, I worked on reports from the Kommandos which also concerned the security in the entire area.

Q. What do you mean by working on reports?

A. The Kommandos sent the reports to the group, that is, the staff. What I mean by this is that these reports were compiled, by me and were submitted to the chief of the Einsatzgruppe as a draft. As far as they were concerned with summarized activity reports all reports were, as far as I remember, signed by the chief of the Einsatzgruppe and they were then sent on to the RSHA.

Q. Did I understand you correctly that you meant by working on reports that you compiled the reports from the Kommandos and then passed them on to the superior agencies; is that correct?

A. I must distinguish between my own work and the SD reports. Here, whenever reports came in I questioned the Kommandos, I laid down directives, I decided what matter was to be treated in the reports and how it was to be treated. These statements, which also included executions, were included by me in the situation reports in many cases. Otherwise, I had nothing to do with handling this matter,

Q. Is it correct then that your work was only concerned with making out the reports?

A. That is correct, for I would not have been in a position to make any inquiry or to even make decisions about facts in these reports, because I was not trained for this and because there were no other trained officers in the group. The staff did not have one single interrogating officer.

Q. Did your work also include the ordering or carrying out of security measures?

A. No, I heard about these measures afterwards through reports.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, I don't understand your statement. The staff did not have a single interrogating officer.

THE WITNESS: Yes, a director 4 in a staff, as I heard later from other Einsatzgruppe, usually had several executive officers to handle such questions and interrogating officers were included in this.

THE PRESIDENT: My question was whether the table of organization in the German Army includes a designation "interrogating officer".

THE WITNESS: In the Army, certainly not, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, in your organization, Security Police and Security Service?

THE WITNESS: In the Security Police there were officers who carried out interrogations....

THE PRESIDENT: That isn't the question that I put. Certainly there were officers who carried out interrogations. I want to know if there was a certain position, a certain title called interrogating officer?

THE WITNESS: I know of no such title, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, why do you say that the staff did not have a single interrogating officer? Any officer is capable of interrogating, isn't he?

THE WITNESS: No, your Honor. An officer who came from Office 3 to make out reports for the SD was not entitled to carry out an interrogation at all.

THE PRESIDENT: Supposing a Russian prisoner were brought to you and you were the only one there. Could you interrogate him?

THE WITNESS: I certainly could have done.

THE PRESIDENT: Would you interrogate him?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, this never happened....

THE PRESIDENT: If a Russian prisoner were brought to you and you were the only officer around, would you interrogate him?

THE WITNESS: Certainly I would have asked-him where he COURT II CASE IX had come from.

...

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, you would, have Interrogated him. You would have got from him as much information as you could.

THE WITNESS: The information which would, have showed me by which unit he would have to be interrogated further.

THE PRESIDENT: But you would have asked him questions?

THE WITNESS: Yes, of course, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: So that any officer with a little bit of intelligence, and he would have had to have some intelligence in order to become an officer, would certainly be capable of interrogating?

THE WITNESS: In this respect, your Honor, as you express it, certainly. When I was testifying I had in mind that for these interrogations carried on by the Security Police, officers had been specially trained, but in the form in which you put it, your Honor, it was of course true.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Dr. Gawlik.

Q (By dr. Gawlik) Where does the expression "interrogating officer" come from, witness?

A I am no expert. It may be that I have used an entirely wrong expression. I imagine an executive officer.

Q What did you want to say by using the expression "interrogating officer"? What did you mean by it? to carry out executive missions and does and is trained for it. More than an interrogation is necessary for that.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, in order to clarify this matter I would like to say a few words. We have a different procedure than in America and our criminal matters are first handled by the police and there are certain officials with the criminal police, and then from '33 to '45 there were certain officials with the Secret State Police who were specially trained in interrogations, and those were called interrogation officers. They carried out interrogations of defendants with witnesses present. And only then passed matters on to the prosecution authorities. They had been especially trained for this to carry out interrogations.

THE PRESIDENT: But the witness has now just stated that by an interrogating officer he meant one who was competent to carry out executive missions.

DR. GAWLIK: We designated this as an executive mission. This has nothing to do with executions. We designated the whole mission of the police as an executive function.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I wasn't referring to executions when I said executive mission, but an executive mission would certainly go far beyond that of interrogation.

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, of course, there were other tasks concerned with that, but the entire prosecution of a criminal action, the investigation of a criminal action of course there is more to it than interrogation -- but the technique of interrogation this belongs to the executive function.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then, if it is broader than merely interrogating, and the witness would so indicate, I do not understand how so important an organization as an Einsatzgruppe headquaters would not have that type of an officer. Can you explain that to us, witness?

THE WITNESS: I can explain this, your Honor. Ohlendorf, as chief of the Einsatzgruppe, had these executive missions carried out by the Kommandos. No prisoner was ever brought to the staff. No civilian prisoner either during the entire time that I was in Russia, where there would have been a necessity for interrogating him. Only thus can it be understood that no authorized deputy was with staff at certain times. Otherwise it would have been completely impossible.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Dr. Gawlik.

Q (By Dr. Gawlik) Was there ever an expert for executive missions with the staff? of the Russian assignment, Office 1 of RSHA detailed a Chief 4 who immediately after the Russian invasion received a Kommando, after Ohlendorf had conferred with the chief of Office 1; and this man was never replaced.

Q Who was this? From which office did this man come? Mueller, and an official who had been only active in the security police. matters? 1936 until the end of the war, I never was active in any other department, not even in an information service. Therefore, I never received such training. tion has claimed that you were the senior officer within the group. Is that statement correct?

A I was not the senior officer in the Einsatzgruppe. The Kommando leaders, Standartenfuehrers Setzen abd Mueller, had higher ranks. of the German, I submit to you exhibit 159, document NOKW-629. This is a report of the 9th of October, 1941, to the headquaters of the Air Force. This is signed by you as an acting deputy and from document book 3-D, I submit to you, on page 39 of the English and 69 of the German, exhibit 160, document NOKW-628. This is a report of the 16th of April, 1942, This report is also signed by you as a deputy. In the German book this is missing. The letter IV as a deputy are missing, but in the original it is mentioned. I ask you now, was Ohlendorf absent during the time listed? remember that, but I do not want to doubt it for I have seen from the documents that Ohlendorf was on an official trip, but this happened very frequently. Sometimes it was short, sometimes for a lengthy period. In April, that is, in the second document, Ohlendorf was in Berlin on leave.

Q Concerning the first document, I have another question. If Ohlendorf was absent at all, can you comment on whether it was a short absence or a long absence? I said, I don't even remember it, and any kind of question of being his deputy did not even come up. April, 1942, his deputy, that is, Ohlendorf's deputy?

A No, I was not Ohlendorf's deputy.

Q It was first divided. First describe the October '41 situation and then the April situation. for my sphere, the SD reports and the liaison with the Army, and in this capacity I signed this document and this happened also if Ohlendorfwas there.

It was not the reason that he was absent but this happened if he was present too. In the manner in which Ohlendorf worked this is no special in Office 3 one of his department chiefs for his field had the right to sign documents for Ohlendorf as a representative for his particular sphere of work, but he did not become the representative for the entire Office 3. interpreted. In April, 1942 the same facts existed, but at this time I was in the staff as the senior officer and I was Ohlendorf's deputy for the current transactions of the staff. But this has nothing to do with the signature.

Q And who was the actual deputy of Ohlendorf. in 1942? is, from the middle of March to the second half of April, Ohlendorf had ordered that the Kommando leaders were to represent him in their different spheres.

Q Did Ohlendorf have anyone deputy at all; or, to clarify this point how many deputies were there? said, the commando leaders represented him in their spheres because Ohlendorf was of the opinion as he had been during the entire years of his activity that he could only be represented by a man who knows his area well himself. German; this is page 39 of the English, your Honor; this is Exhibit 160, NOKW 628. This is the report of the 16th April, 1942. Here a transfer of sub-commandos is mentioned. Did you order the transfer of these subcommandos?

A No, I did not. They were ordered by the commander to which these sub-commandos belonged. commandos? reports of the commando. commandos?

Q How about when Ohlendorf was absent? subordinated to the commando to which they belonged, Jews, gypsies or communists. BY THE PRESIDENT: for general direction in their activities?

Q To whom did the commando leaders turn for general directions?

Q When Ohlendorf was absent? army corps to which they had been attached; or, if it was a matter of an important general directive, they had to get in touch with Ohlendorf, and this was possible because we had radio communication with Ohlendorf. no matter where he might be, he still commanded the entire Einsatzgruppen? quiries by commando leaders or their request for new directives did not occur during this time at all, but if they had occurred, a decision would have been made by way of this radio communication.

Q Suppose that you were unable to reach him; suppose a commando leader was unable to reach him when he went to Prague; he might be enroute; he might be in a plane; he might be anywhere; that he could not be reached, and a decision had to be made. To whom would the commando leader turn for direction and guidance? responsibility for the security of the area. help this commando leader in reaching a decision? made. to what the other commando leaders were doing. Wouldn't he have to clear through the Einsatzgruppen headquarters? mean? to know what the other commandos were doing; he would naturally turn to the headquarters, the Einsatzgruppen headquarters to find out just what was being done in all the other commandos.

Now, to whom would he turn at the headquarters for direction and guidance? the other commandos in the orderly room in order to see how this commando solved a question. would look at these reports and then advise the commando leader who was making the inquiry. staff...

Q Some one would have to take the authority. Now, who would at the headquarters receive this inquiry from the commando leader in the field and would make the necessary investigation, and then finally transmit a message to the commando leaders? Who would do this at headquarters?

A If the commando commander came to the staff in Ohlendorf's absence, then I certainly would have said in this case: in the orderly room there are the reports of the commandos there; you have the possibility of looking at them and of seeing how the commando worked it out.

Q Let's suppose he didn't come personally, but contacted by radio or sent a message by courier, addressed to Ohlendorf; Ohlendorf isn't there, and it is impossible for Ohlendorf to be reached, and this commando leader must know just what the situation is among the other commando leaders. He is confronted with a problem; he wants to solve it; he needs information; he needs guidance. How, who at headquarters would help him out? these reports to take along to his commando leader.

Q Who would give him the reports to take along? I cannot say off-hand.

Q what rank did the adjutant have?

Q Yes. Then you out-ranked the adjutant. the guidance. to do that.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q May I ask you a question about this, witness. What do you mean by help. Does that mean that you had given the commando leader a decision; that you would have to decide the matter? Or, that you could have been able to give the commando leader advice. decision, and that I could not have given any advice in any field which I did not work on; but it could have been only a matter of giving the commando leader a report from another commando, but how he then decides, whether he depends upon the decision made by the other commando, that was up to hiw own responsibility. if Ohlendorf was absent for a lengthy time? with me, made a large number of trips, when no authorized deputy was with the staff.

Q Witness, you did not understand me. Look at this sketch here. Who was Ohlendorf's deputy when Ohlendorf was absent; if he was absent for a longer period of time, who were the deputies?

the commando leader for his area, that is, for the area of the Special Commando 10-A he was represented by the Commando Leader 10-A, etc. Ohlendorf would have made had he been there? Ohlendorf's representative.

Q And did he therefore have any cause to apply to the Group Staff? deputy would always have had to be present at the staff, and these things did not even happen; these inquiries didn't occur.

Q And why did they not happen, witness? guously; the additional orders from the army were also well known; the executive directives had been regulated, so it can thus be explained that no inquiries had to be made to the Group Staff. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q How many persons were there in the Group Staff? enlisted men -- about thirty or thirty-five men, including guard personnel, signal personnel, kitchen personnel, etc. a group of soldiers and officers together, that some one must command. You know that?

Q Very well. Let us take the illustration of a battalion with four companies; the companies are in the field -- A, B, C, D. The company commander of Company C wants to know what A, B and D are doing because he is confronted with a situation whereby it is important that he know what his brother commanders are doing so that he can coordinate his efforts with their's. Now, he can't go around to see the captains of A, B and D; so, the captain of Company C goes to Battalion Headquarters the major isn't there; the battalion major, the battalion commanding officer isn't there.

He would be the person he would naturally turn to, but he isn't there. Now witness, you know that there would be soma one in the battalion headquarters who would take this company commander and talk over the situation with him.

Q. That would have been necessary, yes. Now, I just want to know who would be that person at the Croup Staff Headquarters when Ohlendorf isn't there, You have thirty-five people there; you have eight officers, and a commando leader comes or sends a courier and he wants to coordinate his efforts with the efforts of all the other leaders. Now, you cannot say, witness, that every situation had been anticipated; that no one would need to make any inquiries, because everything had already been worked out before. In war any situation can develop. When a commando leader is confronted with the necessity of making a decision, and he can't make the decision unless he has information, a little bit of advice, and he goes to the Staff Headquarters and Ohlendorf is not there, with whom would he speak?

A. Your Honor, during my presence he would have spoken with me of course, but may I say in connection that this comparison between the battalion and the Einsatzgruppen is incorrect insofar as a battalion could never have been commanded without a battalion commander; the commander was necessary there every day....

Q. Well, but you have the battalion commander with Ohlendorf -- to use the illustration, use his as the battalion commander in the illustration which I have given.

A. Yes.

Q. Yes, and then the battalion commander, the major isn't there; the major is killed in the illustration I have given. Certainly some one takes over.

A. Then somebody would have been designated to take over this past, Your Honor. And if I may clarify this, I . would not have any doubt that in our case of the Einsatzgruppenif Ohlendorf had been killed, the senior commando leader would have taken over his place. That would have been ordered by radio from Berlin on the same day.

Q. Yes, but before this happens, Ohlendorf isn't there and it isn't known whether he is missing because of casualty or if he is away on an important mission. He is just not there. Certainly if a successor is appointed immediately there is no question. We are in the twilight zone where we don't know what happened to Ohlendorf; he is not there. Somebody has to make a decision. You are in war, and a man arrives at Staff Headquarters; Who does he talk to? He talks to you.

A. Yes, but I could, never have made the decision if it hadn't concerned my sphere.

Q. In other words the commando leader comes to you and he says: The partisans are attacking on a one hundred mile front. I want to know what these other three commando leaders are doing. How shall I meet the situation? would you say we will see; I am going to write you a nice report on this; is that what you would do? You wouldn't give him a report.

A. No case -

Q. (Interposing) Well, of course you would talk over the situation with him; advise him, give him counsel, call for reinforcements. You would do something.

A. In thiscase I would have done something immediately.

THE PRESIDENT: Why of course you would have done something. That is all I wanted to know.

Proceed, Dr. Gawlik. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Witness, what would you have done; what could you have done in this case?

A. In this case which Your Honor has just mentioned, that is if our office had been threatened by partisans, I as the senior officer, I would have done everything in order to fight these partisans.

Q. In what way?

A. In the way I just described.

Q. What units?

A. The units of the staff which would have been attacked in this case. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. No, that isn't what I said, I wasn't speaking of the staff headquarters being attacked. Any one would know what to do if your own headquarters was attacked. I am speaking of this commando leader who comes in and gives a story of trouble in the field, Didn't you understand my question to be that?

A. Your Honor, that the commando leader comes with a message that the area had been threatened by partisans?

Q. Yes, he must know just what all the other commando leaders are doing; he must coordinate his efforts with their's; and he comes to you for a little bit of counsel; and you in a situation like that certainly you would immediately take over and talk with him and issue whatever orders the situation required.

A. Your Honor, in this example the commander would have immediately applied to the army, and the army had in such a case every power of order in the occupied area.

Q. Now, witness, what would the army have done. The army would have to find out what companies A, B and D were doing in the illustration which I have given. They would immediately then contact the battalion headquarters to find out what the situation was. The army wouldn't act blindly. So, it would come back to you again.

A. Your Honor, there was a liaison officer with the army from the Einsatzgruppen who consulted with the chief of staff and the G-2 and informed them about the garrison activity of the commando, that is to say, the army had very close connections.

Q. Well, the liaison officer isn't there, and this commando leader of Company C is demanding immediate action. He can't wait until you find the liaison officer and he can't wait until you find these reports. He wants immediate action. In that situation you would have to take over, wouldn't you?

A. Your Honor, practically speaking, the commander would have got in touch with his neighboring commando leaders and they would have made the decision themselves.

Q. Without any coordination from headquarters?

A. Of course the staff would have been informed about any changes in the situation, but they would never have required a decision.

Q. They would have made a decision?

A. No, Your Honor, due to the fact that it never happened.

Q. All right, suppose you have four commando leaders and they don't agree. Two say we will attack from the east, and two say we will attack from the west. Now, who makes the decision? Do they go off and attack in all directions without any direction, without any control?

A. Your Honor, we did not have these missions at all, but if it is a matter of military operations; then Wehrmacht officers were always used for this by the army. I cannot even compare this.

Q. You were being attacked; the army is one hundred miles away, and you do nothing; you send out reports and sit there; you send out a report and sit there -- is that what you want me to believe?

A. No, Your Honor.

Q. You would do something in the meantime, would't you?

A. your Honor, but the army was in our garrison; it never happened that way; we were there in order to be in their vicinity.

Q. You were always with A.O.H.?

A. The staff was always in the vicinity or in the town itself where the army headquarters was, anyway, the whole time in Russia.

Q. Well then, you really didn't have much use for a headquarters because the army controlled everything.

A. Your Honor, for all the examples which you have listed, the army had all the complete power of command.

Q. Well then, there wasn't much use for Ohlendorf to be there because the army had control; the army did everything; Ohlendorf was merely a figure-head.

A. In these examples which Your Honor has mentioned, the army gave the orders, but we had more missions.

Q. Well, all right. Take the missions which you did have. Ohlendorf was the man who gave the orders; is that right?

A. Ohlendorf, yes.

Q. All right; Ohlendorf isn't there; now who does it?

A. In that case orders would be given by myself in the sphere in which I worked. Furthermore, the commander was the deputy in Ohlendorf's absence, Therefore, in spheres which were not my own, that is for the executive missions, I could not give any orders and did not give them.

Q. So that if a commando leader arrived and said that we are confronted with a certain situation in the field, whether it be partisans, whether it be Jews, security, or counter-intelligence, all you could do would be to sit down and write a report on economics.

A. No, I was able to do more.

Q. What did you do besides sitting down and writing a beautiful, fat report on economics?

What did you do?

A. Myself you mean?

Q. Yes, in this situation I gave. Ohlendorf isn't there and a commando leader comes in and wants some help in the field to which he is assigned, whether it be partisan, Jews, Gypsies or security; no matter what.

A. Your Honor, I could not have made a decision and I did not, but, if such a decision had been necessary -- but it was not necessary, because all orders were known -- if a decision had been necessary,

Q. Well, I have said, you cannot contact Ohlendorf. Ohlendorf is away somewhere. Now who would make the decision?

A. I could not have made it. I, -

Q. And then when Ohlendorf would return, you would say to him, "Herr Ohlendorff, a commando leader came here demanding that I make a decision. A very serious problem arose in the field. He had to know what the other kommando leaders were doing, and I just couldn't help him. All I did was sit down and write a nice report for him on economics." Is that what you would have told Ohlendorf?

A. No, I would not have said that to him. I would have told him that the kommando leader had looked at the reports and the directives which the other kommando leaders had made and he depended on those.

THE PRESIDENT: Thr Tribunal will be in recess 15 minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. RIEDIGER: Riediger for the defendant, Haensch. Your Honor, may I ask that the defendant, Haensch be excused from this afternoon's session in order to prepare his defense, and also to direct that he be brought to Room 57.

PRESIDENT: The defendant, Haensch, will be excused from attendance in court this afternoon and the marshal is directed to see to it that the defendant, Haensch, "will be in Room 57 this afternoon so that he nay confer with his attorney.

DR. ROESSEL: Roessel for the defendant, Ott. I ask that the defendant, Ott, be excused from tomorrow's session in order to prepare the defense.

PRESIDENT: The defendant, Ott, will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow so that me may prepare his defense with his counsel.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, as a representative for Dr. Aschenauer, I ask that the defendant, Ohlendorf, be excused from tomorrow's session in order to prepare the documents.

PRESIDENT: The defendant will be excused from the session tomorrow. You may proceed.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, after the question which Your Honor put to the witness, I have some questions of my own to put to the witness, and may I ask that the witness be permitted to rise and point out on the map where the group staff was and where the commandos were?

PRESIDENT: By all means.

THE WITNESS: The group staff was at that time in Simferopol in the Crimea. The Commando 11B was at the same place and had several of its subcommandos south and west of Simferopol. The Commando 103 was in Feodosia. That is 150 kilometers from Simferopol.

The commando 11A was southwest of Simferopol in the Jaila Mountains, for some time in Bachtschissaraij and in Kokoai. I estimate the distance as far as I remember at more than 100 kilometers. The Commando 10A was in Taganrog, had some subcommandos in Mariupol and as I estimate it, about six to seven hundred kilometers. The Commando 12 was north of the Commando 10A, that is, in the area north of Malitopol-Mariupol. The distance was more than 700 kilometers from Simferopol.

BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Now, I have the following question. If the commando leader at Taganrok needed an immediate decision and he would have come to the group staff, how long would it have taken him?

A. With the best possible conditions, that is, with good driving weather, it would have taken him about two days, but on our trip we often needed more than one week in order to reach that place, for the roads which led there were usually field paths. Usually we got stuck one or two days.

Q. And to whom would the commando leader in Taganrok have turned if he needed an immediate decision?

A. If he could not make it himself, he could only turn to his army corps which was in his area, in his garrison. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. What were the communication facilities between that point and the staff headquarters?

A. Outside of the courier service there were radio communications.

Q. Well, it wouldn't take a radio communication two days to get to staff headquarters, would it?

A. No, No. It would not have taken that long.

Q. It wouldn't have taken practically any time, it would have been almost instantaneous, would it not?

A. Yes. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. And if such a radio message had come, the commando leader in Taganrok would have radioed you, "I need an immediate decision in such and such question", Ohlendorf was not te to reached, what would you have answered him then?

A. I could only have said to him, "You are the representative of Ohlendorf in this area, you must decide by yourself", Of course, I would have given him information if it were possible, and I would have given him good advice if that would have been necessary, but he only could make the decision.

Q. And if all four commando leaders had come together to the group staff and a decision would have had to be made and those four commando leaders could not have agreed, Ohlendorf was not to be reached, who would then have made the decision?

A. Only the senior commando leader could make such decision especially since it was known to air commando leaders that Office I had formally designated him as the deputy.

Q. Who was that?

A. That was Standartenfuehrer Seetzen, the commando leader of 10A. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. What is his name, I didn't catch it, please?

A. The name is Seetzen, S-E-E-T-Z-E-N. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Please look at Document Book IIID, page 69 of the German, page 39 of the English text. This is Document Exhibit 116, Document NOKW 628, on page 71 of the German text under Number 1 it is listed that it is said that the Crimea has been freed of Jews.

This is the second page of the original, your Honor, page 48 of the English text. Did you give any orders to carry out this measure?

A. No. This could only have been done on the basis of the given Fuehrerorder.

Q. Did you participate in these measures in any way?

A. No.

Q. On the basis of which orders were these measures carried out?

A. On the basis of the order given in Pretsch to the Einsatzgruppen chiefs and to the commando leaders.

Q. Could you have prevented the execution of this order?

A. I had no possibility to do that. I did not have the authority to prevent the order of the chief of state in any form from being carried out. I did not have the necessary rank nor the position.

Q. Did you order the shootings of partisans and their accomplices and terror groups?

A. No. I did not. This was not possible because I heard of these facts, rather I was informed about them through the reports of the commandos, that is to say, I only heard about them after the events had happened; therefore, I cannot say who was the individual who carried out these executions.

Q. In this report, the shooting of the Red Army man, Tor, is mentioned and of other people. Have you ordered this shooting?

A. The same thing is true here, what I have said before. I heard of this fact afterwards through a report, and the orders for this can only be traced back to the orders of the 11th army which were posted everywhere.

Q. Furthermore, this report mentions the execution of the NKVD agent, Kotschkelli as well as the execution of other people mentioned on page 72.

Q. Did you order these executions?

A. For all these cases the same is true, as I have said before. I heard about them afterwards through the reports, and I did not give such orders.

Q. On page 73 of the German text the hanging of communists in mentioned especially. This was emphasized especially by the prosecution. What is your comment on this?

A. On page 5 of the original there is a mistake, which changes the sense.

DR. GAWLIK: This is page 42 of the English document book, your Honor.

THE WITNESS: May I repeat that on this page 5 of the original, this is on page 43 of the English, there is a mistake which distorts the sense completely. In the middle of the page behind the word "hanged" there is a colon, and the persons who are listed here as having been hanged are the persons who were listed afterwards. When comparing this with the photostat, that is, with the original, it can be determined that behind the word "hanged" there is no colon but a period, and that the following sentence is omitted. I quote, "Furthermore, the following were arrested:" end of quote. That is, the people who are listed here as having been hanged, In reality.........

PRESIDENT: We don't seem to locate that, Dr. Gawlik, we don't seem to locate that in our copy. Do you have it, Mr. Walton?

DR. WALTON; Well, I am having the same difficulty as the court. I can't locate it.

DR. GAWLIK: It is on page 42 of the English transcript in the center.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then it is page 5 of the original, as you told us?

DR. GAWLIK: I beg your pardon, page 4 of the original, and I see that the English document book is correctly translated. In the German document book the words "further were apprehended" are missing.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, that has made it clear.

THE WITNESS: The hangings then refers to the chief of the NKVD, to the saboteur, and to two partisan leaders who are mentioned before this sentence, but even as far as these hangings are concerned, I had nothing to do as far as giving orders and the carrying out are concerned, but these were announced to me through these reports. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. On the basis of which orders were these measures carried out?

A. On the basis of orders given by the 11th army, or as far as was necessary on the basis of the Fuehrerorder.

Q. Who passed these orders on to the Einsatzkommandos?

A. The Fuehrerorder was known to the Einsatzkommandos and the orders of the 11th Army were posted everywhere, as I have said.

Q. On page 80 of the German text, this is page 8 of the original, the last page, mention is made of the planned further assignment of the subcommandos. This is on page 46 of the English. Did you order this assignment?

A. The order for the assignment of the commandos did not belong to my sphere. Here the commando 11A states that the main commando had been transferred from Bachtschissaraij to Kokosi, The message from this commando was received by me and incorporated into the report.

That is all that I had to do with the transfer of this commando.

Q. Now, I come to another point. Did you make any inspection trips within the area of Einsatzgruppe D?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your job and your mission in these inspection trips?

A. I had to deal with the SD reports, and I had the mission to speak to the Number 3 expert of the commando to give him directives, to make inspections with him, and visit his agencies in the army corps or divisions and, of course, I spoke to the commando leader, too.

Q. Did you make the inspection trips by yourself?

A. Most of the trips I made with the chief of the Einsatzgruppe, but some I made by myself.

Q. Was your job and your activity different in those trips in which you made alone from those activities during the inspection trips which you made with Ohlendorf?

A. No. There was no difference, During the trips with Ohlendorf I used the possibility his vehicle for these large distances and with the short amount of gasoline which we had, the scarce amount of gasoline which we had, this is why I used this possibility of getting transportation, but my mission had nothing to do with this.

Q. During your inspection trips did you ever attend any executions which were carried out on the basis of the Fuehrerorder?

A. No.

Q. From Document Book IIID, page 61 of the German, page 34 of the English, I submit to you Exhibit 158, Document 2859. This is your affidavit of the first of April 1947; under Number 3 in this affidavit, page 2 of the original, you have made statements about inspection trips, and your attendance during two executions.

What is your comment on this?

A. These are not executions of people on the basis of the Fuehrerorder but people who had committed violations against martial law, and they were executed for this reason. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Did you know that before you went to the execution?

A. No, Your Honor, I did not knew that.

Q. When did you find out the purpose of the exeuction?

A. I learned it at the place by conversing with the commando leader and the Einsatzgruppe leader.

Q. Here you refer to, "I became a witness to these executions." How many exeuctions?

A. These two executions, Your Honor.

Q. Well, the reading of the affidavit is not very specific as to how many exeuctions, "I remember that on at least two of these trips executions took place; I became a witness to these executions". These were two trips, but it doesn't say "two executions", it could have been more executions?

A. These were two inspection trips, Your Honor.

Q. Yes, but it says that on at least two of these trips executions took place which leaves the possibility of interpretation that on each trip more than one execution took place.

A. When reading this text this possibility of interpretation exists but, Your Honor, may I say that during my interrogation I clearly testified that these were two executions. I did not formulate this.

Q. All right, now give us the places of these executions.

A. One execution took place during a trip to the Commando 10A, May I point it out on the map?

Q. Please.

A. It was east of Jampol, as far as I remember, it might be the village of Petschanka, but I may be wrong. And when visiting this commando chief of the Einsatzgruppe and I arrived near the headquarters. This was a house which was away from the village. An execution took place there of four or five persons. I witnessed this execution and through the conversation I learned why these people had been executed.

Q. Do you remember the date?

A. I do not know exactly, Your Honor, but as far as I remember it must have been in August--August 1941.

Q. And then where was the second execution which you witnessed?

A. The second execution took place in the area of the Commando 11A near a place east of Kitschinew. I don't know exactly but on either side of this border east of Kitschinew.

Q. And how many were executed this time?

A. As far as I remember, about six people.

Q. And what were they executed for?

A. As the commando leader told us, they were executed because they had looted.

Q. And what were the people at Petschada executed for?

A. I remember that the commando leader told us that these people had set fire to a barn and had hoarded supplies, and had destroyed some sort of agricultural machinery.

Q. You didn't know about either of these cases before you went to the executions?

A. No, Your Honor. This was not the purpose of the trip, it was not known beforehand. We visited these commandos without previous announcement.

Q. Did your official duties require that you attend these executions?

A. No.

Q. Why did you go?

A. I did not go there, Your Honor, I became a witness because this happened at the Commando 10A near the headquarters. I was in the vehicle and by coincidence I became a witness to it.

THE PRESIDENT: How far away from the headquarters did these executions take place?

A. About three to four-hundred meters from a lonely house there.

Q. Well, let's take them individually. Let's take the one at Petschada. How far away from the headquarters did that execution take place;

A. As I just said, several hunder meters, about three to fourhundred meters from this house.

Q. Yes, four-hundred meters, that is about a half of a kilometer, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. So you drove to the place of the execution from the headquarters in your vehicle?

A. Yes.

Q. So, therefore, you went entirely voluntarily to witness this execution?

A. I didn't know anything about the execution, Your Honor.

Q. Why did you go to this place four-hundred meters away if your duties only required you to be at the headquarters?

A. Your Honor, we came to this house on the way, and we passed this place on the road. That is before we had entered the headquarters, and during this time I became a witness to it.

Q. Your didn't go to the headquarters first?

A. When the commando-leader had spoken with the Einsatzgruppe chief, we went into the headquarters.

Q. I still don't understand how you got to this execution without it being the result of your will. Tell us just how it happened. You were in a vehicle, and you were proceeding to what point?

A. I was riding in a vehcile with the chief of the Einsatzgruppe. We reached the town where the Einsatzcommando 10-A was stationed, and on the road which lead to this house -

Q. Which house?

A. Where the headquarters of the Einsatzcommando was located. Befor we arrived there on the road, before the house, about three or four hundred meters before the house we passed the place, and s topped at that place because the Einsatzcommando leader was there, and the road had been blocked off there.

Q. Did this execution take place on the road?

A. No, this was not a main road. This road which we had to take was nearby.

Q. How far from the actual road did the shooting take place?

A. Maybe one-hundred meters.

Q. So you got out of the vehicle and walked one-hundred meters and there witnessed the shooting?

A. That is one-hundred meters, yes.

Q. But you could tell before you walked these one-hundred meters what was about to take place there?

A. Yes, I could. I noticed this by the blocking off and a guard told us.

Q. So of your own free will you went to actually witness this shooting

A. This road or this path was about one-hundred meters from the vehcile, and I walked to accompany the Einsatzgruppe Chief, yes.

Q. All right. Now tell us about the second place?

A. This was a place near Kitschinew.

Q. How far away was that scene of execution from the headquarters of Kommando XI-A?

A. This was not the commando itself, Your Honor, but a subkommando near Kitschinew.

Q. All right.

A. He had visited the commando in Kitschinew, and had spent the night there, and on the next morning we proceeded on the way back to our garrison, and we also visited a subkommando, and at the place where this subkommando was, this execution took place. The people of this subkommando were not in the headquarters. There was merely a non-commissioned officer, or a private, who gave the information that the men were carrying out this execution in a certain direction from here.

This was the road, or the place where we had to pass, and we didn't spend any more time at this subkommando garrison, but we proceeded immediately, and thus I became a witness to an execution which I had mentioned.

Q. How far from the road did this execution take place?

A. It was in the woods. I can not give you an exact distance, but several hundred meters.

Q. So you got out of the vehicle and walked several hundred meters to witness this execution?

A. Yes, I walked that distance.

Q. Yes, now before you actually got to the scene of the execution, yo didn't know for what purposes the victims were to be shot?

A. I can not say that any more today.

Q. But did you or did you not know as you got out of the vehicle and walked to the scene of the execution, in both instances, what the victims were accused of having done, or why they were being shot, did you or did you not know?

A. Your Honor, I can not answer this yes or no, because I simply no longer know whether the non-commissioned officer at the headquarters of the sub-kommando told us what kind of people were to be executed there. I really don't know, or whether I heard it at the place from the officer there.

Q. Then you include the possibility that as you walked to the scene o the execution it was possible that these people were being shot merely because they were Jews?

A. It could have been, yes.

Q. It could have been that you were aware of the fact that they were being shot, or, at least that you were informed that they were being shot because they were Jews. You included that possibility?

Q. Then you include the possibility that as you walked to the scene o the execution it was possible that these people were being shot merely because they were Jews?

A. It could have been, yes.

Q. It could have been that you were aware of the fact that they were being shot, or, at least that you were informed that they were being shot because they were Jews. You included that possibility?

A. Your Honor, I didn't know about this before, and I can no longer say today whether in this second case I was informed previously what these people had done.

Q. Let's take the first case, then. Did you know in the first case, as you got out of your vehicle and walked to the scene of the execution, did you know for what the men were being shot?

A. No.

Q. No. So, therefore, they could have been sentenced for racial reasons so far as you knew?

A. That was entirely possible, Your Honor.

Q. And was that also possible in the second case?

A. The possibility existed, yes.

Q. Yes, so it was only by sheer chance that although you witnessed only two executions insofar as this particular paragraph three is concerned, it was only by chance that although the victims could have been shot only for racial reasons, that it developed that they were not shot for this purpose but because they were sabotuers and looters?

A. Yes, I was informed of this, that these were looters and sabotuers.

Q. It was only by chance that these two executions which you -witness happened to be executions of sabotuers and looters?

A. Yes.

Q. Because you didn't know before you went for what they were being shot?

A. No, I didn't.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Dr. Gawlik. BY DR. GAWLIK.:

Q. During these events were you alone?

A. No, I was in the escort of Einsatzgruppe Chief.

Q. During these trips were you, therefore, independent to make your own decision, or will you please describe the condition. Who gave the order for the trip?

A. Of course, the Chief. The Chief determined the direction of the trip, I travelled with him.

Q. And who gave the order when the car was to stop?

A. Of course, the Chief also.

Q. Who ordered when you were to get out of the vehicle?

A. The same thing, the Chief.

Q. And if the Chief got out, could you remain in the vehicle?

A. This was not customary. Then I would have to get out, too.

Q. Was this the reason why you got out?

A. Because I had to, you mean? Yes, this was the customary way in which I had to act.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, I understood you to say in answer to one of my questions that you went of your own free will from the vehicle to the scenes of these executions. Do I now understand you to say that in effect Ohlendorf ordered you to accompany him is that right?

THE WITNESS: No, Ohlendorf didn't order me to.

Q. Therefore, you went in accordance with your will?

A. I got out of my own free will and accompanied Ohlendorf, but it would not have been customary that I should have remained in the vehicle by myself. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Maybe you can explain to the Tribunal why Ohlendorf didn't give you the order to get out and come along?

THE PRESIDENT: I think we can assume Dr. Gawlik, that if he is travelling with his Chief, and the Chief gets out of the car, that he would naturally get out with him. I think that is a natural thing.

DR. GAWLIK: Well, I just thought in order to clarify this that I'd have to ask this question, whether he got out of this vehicle of his own free will, completely at his own free will.

THE PRESIDENT: The only point that it seems the Tribunal wanted to clear up was the fact he was not directly ordered to nor on the other hand was he denied the possibility of remaining in the vehicle, if he chose to do so.

DR. GAWLIK: May I ask another question about this?

THE PRESIDENT: Certainly.

BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Could you have remained in the vehicle?

A. It would not have occurred to me to remain in it.

THE PRESIDENT: It certainly would not be customary for you to remain in the vehicle when your Chief got out of the car. Let me put this question to you. If for any reasons of your own you didn't want to witness an execution, you could have said to your Chief, "I would prefer to remain in the vehicle." That you could have done, could you not?

THE WITNESS: Yes, Your Honor. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Was the participation in these executions the purpose of these trips?

A. Usually the trips took place without preparation, that is, without previous announcements to the commando. Especially in the case when the Chief was present himself, never the purpose of these trips.

Q. Was it part of your mission and your activity to attend these executions?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any function or activity that you exercised during the executions?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Would you have had the possibility to prevent these executions?

A. I didn't see this possibility. Certainly it would have been made clear to me that this is none of my business.

Q. Now, I come to another point. Did you give any orders for the isolation of Communists in the Russian Prisoner of War Camps?

A. No, I gave no such orders.

Q. Who gave such orders, or on the basis of what orders did those measures rest?

A. These measures were based on an agreement between the Chief of the Security Police and the Supreme Command of the Army, and were made known to the Einsatzgruppen and the Einsatzkommandos, and also were known to the Army Units.

Q. Did you ever pass on such orders?

A. No, I didn't pass on such orders.

Q. Do you know whether such orders were carried out in the area of Einsatzgruppe-D?

A. In the area of Einsatzgruppe-D I know of no such case. I said the in the affidavit when Mr. Wartenberg questioned me.

Q. Please look at this affidavit of 1 April 1947, this is in Document Book III-D, page 36, in the English text, and, page 63, in the German text, which is Exhibit No. 158, Document NO-2859. It is on the bottom of page 3 and on page 4 may I direct your attention to No. 5 of this affidavit. What did you mean to say by this statement under No. 5?

A. I meant to express, and I think I did express that I didn't have the order to seggregate, or to make any seggregation in the prisoner of war camps, and the fact that anything like that happened was only generally known to me.

Q. I now come to another point, on page 239 of the German Record, the Prosecution has stated that your cooperation with Ohlendorf was close and complete in every detail. Please comment on this?

A. The cooperation with the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe Ohlendorf was not any closer and more distant than it was between a military superior and a subordinate in the operational area.

A. Furthermore, the Prosecution has stated that you knew of the most secret details with which the Einsatzgruppe had dealings. This is on page 239 of the German transcript. Are these statements correct?

A. I do not know what is meant by the "Most secret details." I was not present at all conferences, for example, I was never present when the Chief of the Einsatzgruppen spoke to the commander of the 11th Army, or in many cases even with other officers; in many cases with kommando-leaders. Therefore, I do not know that there were conferences, and about the special situations where discussions took place, or which didn't come to my knowledge. I personally didn't handle any secret matters or documents; but all documents and files and orders, that is, the secret orders and secret reports were all in the Orderly Room, and were deposited there.

I personally didn't handle any of them.

Q. On the basis of the knowledge which you obtained through the reports, could you have prevented any measures which Einsatzgruppe-D had carried out?

A. I saw no possibility to do this. For apart from the fact that I heard through reports later on about these events, the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe could not do so himself and I even less so.

Q. Did you give any order for the killing or the mistreatment of Russian citizens?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you pass on any such orders?

A. No.

Q. From Document Book III-D, page 50 of the English text, page 84 of the German, I submit to you Exhibit No. 162, Document NO-2969, which is the recommendation for you promotion. There it says that from the 15 May 1941 to the 15 August you had been transferred to Einsatzgruppe-D, is that correct? That is page 52 of the English.

A. May I have the German page, please?

Q. Page 84. From 15 May 1941 to 15 August, 1942, SS-Sturmbannfuehre Seibert had been transferred to Einsatzgruppe-D.

A. The dates are not correct. I can merely explain this by saying that on 15 May 1941 is the date on which the Einsatzgruppen were generally activated. I personally was called to this staff of Einsatzgruppe the middle of June. The date, 15 august 1942, is also incorrect. During that time I was already in Berlin for six weeks. It may be that through the furlough afterwards, and when I later reported to the RSHA, such date came up. I don't know. It is the same document in which the typographical error can be shown which can be gathered from the comparison of the various pages

Q. Several lines farther down it reads: "That you were especially meritorious in your assignments." Will you please comment on this?

A. I can not judge this very well myself.

Q. This is the fourth sentence after the one which I have just mentioned: "He was very meritorious in his assignments," on page 2 of the original. Will you please comment on this?

A. I have already said that I can not judge this very well, but I might say that it was not the job alone of the Einsatzgruppen or the Einsatzkommandos to execute the Fuehrer Order, for even if there had been no Fuehrer Order, there certainly would have been Einsatz-agencies, as in every occupied area which was occupied by the German Army. The commissions of the Einsatzgruppen outside of executing this Fuehrer Order was quite unambiguous, the ones which exist in every occupied area namely, first of all, the Securit Commission for order, as was quite common in occupied areas, and, secondly, the SD Commission, namely, the report about the morale and the situation in the fields in which I have mentioned, and, thirdly, orders which resulted from the liaison with the Army, and which came from the Army. That is, from the harvest down to the front assignments; so that there were possibilities gain some merit in other fields. Especially, if the fact applied that the individual concerned had distinguished himself in combat, this was always important for such recommendations.

THE PRESIDENT: Shall we take our recess now, Dr. Gawlik. The Tribunal will be in recess until 1:45 P.M.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal will recess until 1345 hours.

(The Tribunal recessed until 1345 house, 18 November 1945) (The Tribunal reconvened at 1345 hours)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q Before the recess we discussed Document No. 2969 in Document Book III-D, page 50 of the English, page 84 of the German, Exhibit 162 - the recommendation for promotion - and you made a statement about the promotion. Please tell the Tribunal why this recommendation for promotion was made during the war, and on what it was based. always depended on whether the person concerned had proved himself well in the assignment at the front.

Q Did this apply to you as well?

A Yes, this applied to me. Repeatedly I had opportunity - ment at the front?

A If I may give an example concerning this: By orders of the Eleventh Army, Major Stephanus -- he was a general staff officer -I took part in the recapture of the locality of Feodosia. It is on the southern coast of the Crimea. The Russian troops had landed there, had recaptured the city, and had advanced towards the road to Simferopol. I was engaged in combat during the recapturing of the city, upon the order of this Major, and also owing to other assignments against partisans, and against troops who had landed - troops constantly landed throughout the entire coast of the Crimea.... owing to all these assignments, but in particular the assignment near Feodosia, the Commander in Chief of the Eleventh Army, General Field Marshal von Mannstein gave me the Iron Cross as a distinction for special merit. For that reason it can be explained that another recommendation for promotion which is also contained in this document may have had a quite different basis

Q I beg your pardon, witness, which document are you referring to?

DR. GAWLIK: It is in Document Book III-D, Your Honor; Exhibit 162, No. 2969, page 50 of the English text. 1941. At that time, after I had already been in Russia for five months it was stated as follows as the foundation for the promotion: "Seibert is permanent deputy of Gruppenleiter III-D, Economics Department in the RSHA, and has proved himsefl worthy in every respect." It is mentioned at the end that I was informed in writing. I also explained it by the fact that all my assignments at the front took plane between January 1942 until about May 1942. special merits are mentioned - were you promoted after that?

A No, I was not promoted. The qualification apparently was not sufficient. I was promoted a year later.

Q I now come to another point. When did you return from Russia? of June 1942.

A Where were you active after that? in the Economics Group. after you returned from Russian until the end of the war? year of the wax, 1944, I became Gruppenleiter Economics myself.

Q Were you deputy of the Office Chief of Office III?

Q Who was the deputy of Office Chief III?

any of the four chiefs deputized for the Chief during his absence. Everyone in his sphere, in his group. reached, who made the decision as deputy to the Office Chief? sphere this question fell.

Q How did you sign your reports?

A Reports which I signed myself, I signed: "Acting For", because in this sphere of the Group Economics I was the deputy to the Office Chief. This did not only apply to me, but it was the same with any other Group leader.

Q This signature, "Acting For" - does it not prove that you were the deputy of the Office Chief? and if the Group Chief signed "Acting For" for his branch, for law and administration, then he was deputy for the Office Chief of his branch, Law and Administration. other group or in any office of the RSHA?

A No. I was never ordered to go there to receive information, not even when I started my work, but I resumed my activity immediately in the Department Economics at the time. return from Russia?

A The work was exactly the same. I had the same position as I had before my assignment in Russia. Now, as ever, I had to observe, and to report, the effects of the decrees and measures by the Ministries of Economics and other agencies on the population and in the economic sphere. It was always the some task.

Q Did you ever deal with any executive measures at all?

81 of the German, Exhibit 161, Document No. 2858. This is your affidavit. Under paragraph 2 you state that in the fall of 1933 you joined the NSDAP. Do you want to add anything to this statement? local group of the Party in Hannover, my old home town, and in April 1933 I was accepted in the Party. In the actual active life of the Party I was never able to take part. I never got to know the local group.

Q Where were you in May 1945? received an order to go to Northern Germany.

Q Were you taken prisoner there? members of the last Doenitz government - I officially reported to the English military authorities. The English liaison officer with the Doenitz government asked me after the capitulation to secure officers, both members of this last government. I was in Hamburg repeatedly... In Luebeck, and Kiel, and other cities - with the approval of the English authorities, with papers which have been transferred to Nuernberg here among my personal files. On 23 May 1945 I was arrested, together with the members of this last government, and came to a prisoner-of-war camp, and I have been in prison ever since.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, thank you. I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Do any of defense counsel wish to cross examine? BY DR. KOESSL (for Defendant Schubert): authority?

A Schubert could not make reports on his own authority. Naturally he did make some reports, as the occasion arose, about personnel, and the personnel situation, and these reports were utilized in the entire reporting service.

in reporting? tive situations, and from time to time he utilized this in a report.

Q Were there independent reports about the personnel situation?

A These items were added to a report, and I made the report. Then Schubert gave me the documents for this, which have been accepted.

Q Do I understand you correctly.... these were contributions to that part of reports which were called, the so-called "Local Reports"? situation?

A Yes. While being questioned by Mr. Wartenberg I explained this to him unambiguously, and Mr. Wartenberg told me that this could be shown from my affidavit, where it says, "from time to time or as the occasion arose" and that was all that concerned Schubert. you described the reports, and as they were not submitted as documents. given to relatives of people who had taken part in the war was part of your task. Can you tell us why Schubert received the Iron Cross, Second Class? who had been wounded, in which I also took part. That was in March and April 1942. Apart from that he had also taken part in anti-partisan fighting; and that was the basis which led to a recommendation for a distinction of merit. This recommendation, of course, did not originate from me. The officer of the Army who was concerned, who was in charge during this combat action, that is, the Battalion Commander of the German Battalion, or in one case it was the Battalion Commander of a Rumanian Battalion.

.. they made the recommendations, and these recommendations were submitted to the Eleventh Army, to the G-1 officer there. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Was the Iron Cross purely a combat decoration?

Q It was never awarded for administrative achievements? If I may add, at the beginning of the war, and during the first World War, the Iron Cross was awarded - first as a distinction for bravery, and secondly to higher troop officers in the staffs, but only from the staff of an army upwards. The operation officer of that army received it without having taken part in the fighting. The second way was prohibited, as far as I remember, in 1941 or 1942, and from that time onwards the Iron Cross was only given for actual bravery in combat. you the Iron Cross? charge of Kommando 10, or rather, I was to look for it.

Q Why were you to look for it? in Feodosia, and that the city had been captured by the Russians, the city where the Kommando had been. And I looked for the Kommando in order to find out whether they got away at all. I found this Kommando in a locality called the Stari Krim, that is on the road from Simferopol and Feodosia, about 20 kilometers to the west of Feodosia. The Russians had already advanced very close to this locality. There I found the Kommando leader and the major in the general staff, Stephanus, of the Eleventh Army, and this major was in charge of the entire Kommando 10-B, and had already joined them under the leadership of his kommando leader.

As soon as I arrived he gave me the order to set up an armed reconnaissance troop, and to see to it that the troops who were withdrawing to the left and the right of the street would be put into a position again, and I arranged that.

Q And for that you got the Iron Cross?

A No, Your Honor, I carried out this task. I brought back reconnaissance reports - how far the Russians had advanced. Secondly, when I had put the German and Rumanian soldiers back into a position, in these positions, I fought with the unit myself, and advanced with this very unit until we recaptured the city of Feodosia.

Q What weapon did you use at the front?

AApart from the infantry arms, there was only anti-aircraft. No other big guns existed. The Russians had already captured them because they were at the coast for advance purposes. The situation was so grave that the commander in chief of the army at that time himself considered the Crimea lost because apart from technical companies, no large units existed any more.

Q Well, then, you had command of a detachment actually in combat?

Q How many men did you have under you?

Q Were they riflemen?

Q. Well now, while you were in charge of this detachment, were you still part of the Einsatzgruppen?

A. Yes, owing to the agreement between the Chief of the Security Police and the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, we always had the right to assign units of the Einsatgruppen and also to give orders to individuals if the military situation required it.

Q. So that while you were with the Einsatzgruppen you did more than merely make up reports?

A. Yes, I did more than just write reports, Your Honor.

Q. I noticed in the personnel record that you received the Sword of Honor. What was the exploit which brought about this decoration?

A. I received the Sword of Honor of the SS already before the war, as far as I remember. It was awarded after a certain period of time of membership with this formation-a measure merely based on time without having to show any special merits.

Q. Was this given to all those who had achieved a certain seniority in SS ranks?

A. Yes, Your Honor, all leaders.

Q. How many years were required to earn the Sword of Honor?

A. I may be mistaken but I estimate two or three years membership in the SS, Your Honor, as leader.

Q. Did you actually get a sword?

A. A sword?

Q. Well, the personnel record calls the decoration a "Sword of Honor." Did they actually give you a sword?

A. As a weapon I received a real officer's sword.

Q. How long was this sword?

A. The sword was rather uncomfortable, Your Honor. I preferred to wear my officer's sword because it was much COURT II CASE IX shorter and it was much easier to carry.

Q. Well, they had to give out a lot of swords then, didn't they?

A. Yes. I, myself, had four swords at home: 2 from the Army, one long sword, and a short one--a dagger--the officer's dagger. I had the same again for the SS: the long sword, and an SS leader's dagger.

Q. Did you ever use these swords to attack anybody?

A. No, never, Your Honor.

Q. Well, I see you also received the Yule Candlesticks. Now what did you do to get the Yule Candlesticks?

A. Your Honor, these Yule Candlesticks were the same gift by the SS for every SS leader at yuletide. If one had become an SS leader, according to his files, he automatically had these candlesticks sent to him, and he received a new candle every year for each candlestick. This all happened according to the files.

Q. Well, between all your swords and all your candles you must have had quite a collection?

A. I only had one candlestick.

Q. All right, you may proceed, please. BY DR. KOESSL:

Q. Witness, Schubert received the Iron Cross for bravery in combat against the armed enemy?

A. Yes.

Q. Who awarded Schubert the Iron Cross?

A. The commander-in-chief of the 11th army personally issued the award and signed it for this distinction for Schubert.

Q. With the permission of the Tribunal, I would like to address a few more questions as deputy for Dr. Hoffmann for the defendant Nosske.

THE PRESIDENT: You may. BY DR. KOESSL:

Q. Witness, under whom was the area of Transnistria? Under whose sovereignty?

A. The territory of Transnistria was to the northwest of Nikolaev and was under the sovereignty, after August of 1941 approximately, of the Rumanians. It was Rumanian sovereign territory.

Q. Which offices of the ethnic German settlement offices were located in Transnistria?

A. At first Commando 12 had to deal with these ethnic German settlements; later on this commando was relieved by a commando of the ethnic German office.

Q. Who made agreements with the Rumanians which were regulated by the conditions of the ethnic German office?

A. The final arrangments were made by the chief Hoffmeier--Oberfuehrer Hoffmeier--for ethnic German office with the Rumanian General.

Q. Did the German army command also take part in these agreements?

A. The Army command also had to take part, yes.

Q. Between the Rumanian and the German army staff, did they make any agreements after the territory of Transnistria had already been declared Rumanian sovereign territory?

A. I don't know that; I cannot give any details about that.

Q. Thank you. I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Any other defense counsel desire to cross examine? You may proceed, Mr. Walton. BY MR. WALTON:

Q. Did you testify on direct examination that you had gone to the officers' training school and had successfully passed your officer's examination?

A. Yes.

Q. This was in the year 1935, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. When you left the army for work in the SD, did you not state on direct examination that you were put on a reserve officer's status?

A. The status of a reserve officer, yes.

Q. Now from the facts which you related yesterday, service in the SD was a voluntary act on your part, was it not?

A. At the time, if I may say that, I had received instructions by the District III--or rather it had been intended that I, as a Lieutenant, was to go to the infantry regiment 46 in Spandau. The Military Command III assigned me to the infantry regiment 46 in Spandau. The Military Command III assigned me to Spandau near Berlin. I did not want to remain this type of officer, but because I could not realize my aims to go into the economic department of the army, I therefore agreed that the SD main office should release me from the Military Command III--and they approved this, yes.

Q. You applied for relief from active duty in Military Command III in order to go into the SD, is that not true?

A. I went voluntarily; whether I personally made an application, I don't remember now.

Q. Then you entered the SD service voluntarily, you say?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I believe you testified further yesterday that when you first came to service in the SD your rating compared COURT II CASE IX with a private first-class, or you were given the rating of Unterscharfuehrer in the SD when you reported?

A. My first rank in the SD was Unterscharfuehrer, yes.

Q. And also you spoke yesterday that you were promised a commensurate rating with the rank that you held in the army if you would come into the SD for service?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, didn't you feel when you left the army as a lieutenant and was given only a low ranking non-commissioned officer's rating in the SS that you were unfairly treated?

A. Yes, I not only believed this but I also expressed this continuously.

Q. Then why did you stay in the SS?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, I did not join the SS but I went into the economic department of the SD as referent for a certain task, and this was the profession which I had chosen.

Q. In other words, you were willing to undertake any task since you had determined to make your career with the SS and the SD, were you not?

A. No, that is quite wrong, Mr. Prosecutor, for I agreed to it for that reason of transfer because here the economic department was being set up, and national economic experts, lawyers, technicians, and so forth, were required. I would never have acepted any other position.

Q. Did you continue your military training as a reserve officer after you went on an inactive status?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, I don't know that an answer has been forthcoming to your question about a willingness to take a non-commissioned officer's status in the SD an against a commissioned officer's status in the Wehrmacht.

MR. WALTON: Sir, I understood the witness to say that COURT II CASE IX this department was being set up; that in effect he wanted to get in the department as it started; and therefore he went in while he acted as a referent or SD referent.

His SD rank was merely Unterscharfuehrer. Now that is what I gather; I don't know whether the Tribunal got that.

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Well, witness, let's get it very specific. In the army you were an officer?

Q When you entered the SD you were a non-commissioned officer? of an officer, but I received the rank as NCO and not as had been promised me as an officer; but several promotions followed, only spaced a few months apart so that this rank should become the same as my position as referent and should be a similar one. to you than a career in the army? too I would work in an economic department because I had always been interested in economics. BY MR. WALTON: officer, is that correct? officer? the document are not quite right here--I was in my home regiment-that is in the infantry regiment No. 33 in Zerbst near Anhalt--and from this battalion I was recalled to Berlin by wire. officer or as a reserve officer in the Wehrmacht?

AAfter I had been recalled? broke out a telegram from Berlin came and recalled you to Berlin.

the SD.

Q Now the next question I ask you: did you, after you had been recalled from your regiment, ever at any time see active service from 1939 to 1945 as a Wehrmacht reserve officer? regular army man, was not called to service because your services were deemed more valuable in the SD, is that correct?

A This was not up to me, Mr. Prosecutor. If it had been up to me I would have remained with the troops right from the start.

Q Let me interrupt you for a minute. Is that your opinion why you did not serve with the Wehrmacht for which you had been trained because you were valuable to the SD?

A No, Mr. Prosecutor, this happened because the mobilization orders provided that in case of war I immediately be put at the disposal of the RSHA I already knew this before the war--and one received a notice about this which stated this suite explicitly. SD and go with your regiment? until I was prohibited from making any further applications. Heydrich already threatened me with punishment if I made any more such applications. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Well, that is after your service in Russia? You say, when you returned to Berlin?

Q Well, you say after you returned to Berlin. Please give us the date.

A From Russia?

Q No. We understood you to say that-tried to join the Wehrmacht and were prohibited from doing so. I am only asking the date that took place. September 1939. BY DR. WALTON: joined the SD but that you did not join the SS, is that true? formation--the SD. which is Document 2858, Prosecution Exhibit 161, which is your own affidavit. Now in Paragraph 2, the second sentence thereof, it states, and I quote: "In the beginning of the year 1936 I joined the SS; my SS number is 272375."

Q Was this a voluntary act on your part?

A That was a voluntary act, yes; only in this formulation there is missing the expression: SD, and that is why it might be misleading; but it was a. voluntary action. September 1939? under orders from the RSHA, did you ever make any attempt to have those orders rescinded and to go on duty with your 33rd infantry regiment?

A Yes, Mr. Prosecutor.

Q How soon after you reached Berlin did you make this effort? commander. General Von Herr would have liked very much to take me along and I, myself, urgently desired to remain with him.

A Mr. Prosecutor, if I had not been at least a captain or a major in 1941--and if I had remained on active duty in the army, I would have dropped in grade but I left the active service and went into the administrative service and owing to that I could not he promoted any further. lieutenant, you still at some time was subject to redraft back in the army at your rank of lieutenant, were you not? continued to rise in rank, didn't you? a regular troop leader--but this major's rank can only he compared with an officer in the army administrative department. reserve, would it not?

A Salary? Pay? Of course. Einsatzgruppe D that you would serve with your old chief, General Ohlendorf?

you not?

A I beg your pardon, I didn't quite understand. I would not say "career," but apart from that I had no regrets, of course.

Q Now, who told you first about the Fuehrer Order?

DR. GAWLIK: I object to that question. The subject was discussed in detail yesterday. The witness replied to the question when he first heard about the Fuehrer decree, and I asked this question myself, and your Honor also addressed this question. I, therefore, consider this question irrelevant. The witness stated the localities where and under what circumstances this happened.

MR. WALTON: I did not ask him where, your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You do not need to argue this point. Dr. Gawlik, this is cross-examination. He can ask him every question you asked if he wants to. In cross-examination he can go over the same field. That is entirely proper. Answer the question.

Q (By Mr. Walton) I will repeat the question, Colonel. Who was the first men who told you about the Fuehrer Order? the Kommando Chief Zapp. Einsatzgruppen headquarters in Pretsch, after he had attended this meeting of group leaders and commando leaders at which this order was given by Streckenbach and Mueller? when this discussion took place in Pretsch, and I already said that I remained in Berlin and every day as required I traveled to Dueben. as well as a very large order? chief topic of conversation, and this order would be in the front of everyone's mind who was a member of the Einsatzgruppe, wouldn't it?

A Mr. Prosecutor, it was like this: A very strong prohibition had been issued not to discuss any matter which concerned somebody else at that moment. In all offices this had been posted in writing.

There was no general discussion about it. Einsatzgruppe, certainly affected you, did it not? nothing to do with my job as Chief 3. to Pretsch or Dueben? for a number of years before the service with the Einsatzgruppe? associate of many years, and deputy for the group commander, certainly for economic questions, and more than likely a personal friend of General Ohlendorf, had to learn of the Fuehrer Order only from the gossip of commando leaders?

A No. Of course, I used the next opportunity to discuss this with Ohlendorf in the garrison in detail, but he did not inform me about this before that, and I am convinced that during these years many things occurred of which Ohlendorf knew and of which I did not know. Fuehrer Order your reaction was that this order was, and I quote the word that you used, "incorrect". Does this mean that you considered this order illegal?

A No, Mr. Prosecutor.

Q Does it mean that you considered this order inhumane? considered it wrong.

Q Did you consider this order, from your inner attitude, inhumane?

A I don't know how one can express such feelings. I mean my feelings revolted against this.

order, did you not?

A I could not look into this, Mr. Prosecutor. I had no opportunity.

Q We were not speaking of your opportunity to overlook it. We are sneaking of the way you felt when you first learned of the Fuehrer Order. Did you consider this order, even though you knew you had to carry it out, to be unjustifiable? for the officer's examination, in your career in the Army and the SD, did you ever learn of the recognized rules and customs of war? Hague Conventions? these Conventions?

Q Also, wasn't it known to you from your studies that the killing of civilians in occupied areas without trial is considered by international law and the laws of recognized warfare to be murder?

A I cannot reply to that, Mr. Prosecutor, because I simply don't know where murder starts and murder ends. It was no war of man against man. There were only exceptions. Tens of thousands of defenseless people were killed in all countries, and by all means. I, therefore, cannot say whether this is murder or whether this is not murder.

Q All right, you read these reports. You saw where reports of Einsatzgruppe D rounded up people, took them out and shot them without trial, did you not?

A I beg your pardon. I did not quite understand that. Einsatzgruppe D collected or rounded up people, and without trial sentenced then and shot them to death, did you not?

Q Did you consider this to be murder? by the commander in chief, the group commando, and by the commander of the Army. to be unjustifiable, namely because it was followed, you had no feeling that it vas murder? but I said that owing to my inner attitude I considered it wrong and improper.

Q All right. Who first accuainted you with your tasks in Einsatzgruppe D? activity in Office 3. I knew about my position very well, that on the first day of marching in I could start reporting. what specific duties you would have in addition to your SD duties in the group headquarters? task of working together with the Army. commando leaders begin to reach your desk?

A You mean to say how long it took, Mr. Prosecutor?

Q No. The march toward Russia started around the 22nd day of June, 1941, did it not?

A Yes, as far as I remember. we left a little later, but about that time, yes. was it not?

A End of June?

A When they started, Mr. Prosecutor? I beg your pardon.

Q I withdraw the question and ask you this question. After leaving Dueben and Pretsch do you remember the approximate date when you reached the Russian border or Russian territory? territory, and one of the staffs and the Kommando 12 namely, remained at Pjatraneamt for sometime. Before that, the Army had left there, rather had withdrawn two advanced kommandos, and had also assigned them before we ever arrived at Pjatraneamt, but I myself, I cannot say the exact time I remained in the Rumanian territory in Pjatraneamt. what month of 1941? D been committed against the enemies of the Reich? engaged in in July of 1941?

A Reports came to the Einsatzgruppe only very late. Of course, the actual connection, the direct connection, between these two kommandos existed with the divisions assigned to them.

Q All right. Again I ask you the question, about what time did you see the first activity and situation report from an Einsatz Kommando?

Q Did these reports show executions? executions by a Kommando of Einsatzgruppe D? was the first one to report about it. I don't remember that. executions by Kommandos? your pardon --may I say this -- which executions were concerned and who carried out such executions. exterminate Jews, Gypsies and Communists? necessary to execute these people in July, 1941?

A Mr. Prosecutor, very often we talked to UnterKommando leaders and to Ohlendorf about this and expressed our objection against this. I did not meet anyone among the leaders of the Einsatzgruppe who agreed to such an order.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, would you mind deferring for fifteen minutes now? The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

(Recess was taken)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. ERICH M. MAYER (Attorney for the Defendant Braune): morrow's session, in order that he may prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Braune will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow so that he may prepare his defense.

DR. ERICH M. MAYER: Thank you very much.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Mr. Walton.

Q. (By Mr. Walton): Colonel, just before the recess, I believe you stated on cross-examination that the Kommando Fuehrer Order, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you said that at some time later you had occasion to discuss this Order with General Ohlendorf. Did you also say that?

A. Yes.

Q. What was said at this discussion with General Ohlendorf?

A. During this conference the refusal, the revulsion, and the objection which everyone had about this order were discussed.

Q. Did you have anything to say at this discussion?

A. That was a conversation in which everyone had his say, yes.

Q. Did you express any regrets that this Order had to be carried out?

A. Yes, I regretted that such an Order, against which I objected, had been given.

Q. You told this to General Ohlendorf?

Q. Did you ask General Ohlendorf to relieve you and send you back to Berlin?

A. I did not do that because I saw no opportunity. As a soldier, it was completely clear to me that without any reason I could not simply be sent to Berlin, and therefore, I saw no possibility for Ohlendorf to do that. I had no personal connections with Streckenbach either. I hardly knew him.

Q. Could you have applied through regular channels for transfer, since you were considered too valuable to serve with the Wehrmacht? Couldn't you have applied through regular channels for transfer back to your job in Berlin?

A. In peacetime this was possible in Germany, but in time of war, I had to do my duty wherever I was ordered.

Q. You considered it your duty to carry out this Fuehrer Order, regardless of your own convictions?

A. I did not carry out this Fuehrer Order.

Q. You didn't know thaw though when you were in Duebin and Pretzsch whether you would have to carry it out or not?

A. No, of course not.

Q. That's where the discussion took place with General Ohlendorf, didn't it?

A. The reason was that in the meantime I had been informed of the Fuehrer Order and the kommando leaders and I discussed this matter with Ohlendorf.

Q. Let us pass on to another point. What was your principal duty when Einsatzgruppe D Headquarters moved into a town?

A. My mission was the same as If we were in a small locality. I immediately had to start making out reports about the attitude of the population and to make up reports about the fields which I have already mentioned.

Q. From what sources did you take samples of the morale of the population?

A. My sources were the reports of the kommandos.

Q. Did you ever negotiate yourself with the Jewish Council of Elders to find out what the morale of the population was?

A. I never negotiated with the Jewish Council of Elders.

A. Did you ever receive the registration lists of the Jewish Council of Elders?

A. No, I had nothing to do with that.

Q. Did you ever see any?

A. No, there was no such list in the staff.

Q. Were lists ever made up of gypsies, Soviet party members and commissars within an area?

A. I do not know. There were no such lists in the staff.

Q. You knew that these people were being given special treatment, because they were a threat to the security of the armed forces, did you not.

A. Yes, I knew that.

Q. As a matter of your own opinion, based on your experience as an army of officer and based on your service with Einsatzgruppe D, would not it have been an adequate security measure, both from a police and a military standpoint to have deprived all Jews and gypsies and Soviet party members who were not partisans of their liberty?

A. I cannot judge this, Mr. Prosecutor. I do not have the possibility of judging this.

Q. You had experience as an army officer, didn't you?

A. Yes, but not about such extensive questions which occur during wars between ideologies. My experience did not fit this situation.

Q. You read activity and situation reports of the kommandos, didn't you?

A. I have read many reports, yes.

Q. And it was then your job to determine what parts of those situation and activity reports should be extracted for transmission to Berlin, wasn't it?

A. The reports in which executions were listed......

Q. That's not what I asked you, Witness. I asked you if it was your job to extract from these reports.....

A. Yes.

Q. .......facts to be transmitted to Berlin. Now, these reports from the Einsatzkommando leaders gave you the situation and activities, didn't they?

A. They didn't describe it to me, but I got them, yes.

Q. Yes, and from your knowledge of the activities you were able to judge whether or not these people should be liquidated from a standpoint of security in your own mind, were you not?

A. N o, I could not judge that.

Q. Could not or would not?

A. I could not, because the facts at the particular place were never known to me.

Q. Did you ever personally conduct an investigation to determine what an individual Jew or gypsy had done in order to deserve to be executed?

A. I never did this during my entire stay in Russia.

Q. Did you ever see a report of investigation made by someone else that such people were guilty of some crime against the German forces?

A. No, I cannot recall........

Q. As a matter of fact, were ever such reports made in individual cases?

A. I cannot say, Mr. Prosecutor. I only saw the summarized reports which the kommandos sent on to the group. No documents were attached to this.

Q. You made inspections to the different kommando headquarters from time to time, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And you inspected the files in each kommando, didn't you?

A. No, I didn't inspect the files, but with my expert III I discussed matters in detail and I gave this man advice and guidance.

Q. When you made an inspection of a kommando alone and General Ohlendorf was not with you, would not your Inspection include all phases of the activity of a kommando?

A. No, they did not. I have already told.....

Q. How did you know then that the reports which they sent to you were true?

A. I could not know. I did not know. I did not know whether the reports were true.

Q. And you sent these reports on to Berlin as a true factual picture of the situation not knowing whether they were true or not?

A. I did not pass them on, but I drafted them and then submitted them to the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe for his signature.

Q. Yes, but you put in there facts which you had gotten from the reports of the kommando leaders?

A. I did not put them in there, but this was merely repeating whatever the kommando report said.

Q. That's right. Now, then, how did you know this to be the truth?

A. To determine that was not my job. In view of these reports, I neither had the right nor the mission to make any inquiries or to make any decisions or to make any inspections.

Q. All right. It was your responsibility to protect the Chief of Einsatzgruppe D in the matter of making report, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And to discharge this responsibility you had to put in these reports facts, did you not?

A. Yes, I had the responsibility.

Q. And in 12 months' time you never questioned a single fact which was submitted to you by a kommando leader?

A. My answer was not complete, Mr. Prosecutor. I had the responsibility that whatever was summarized in the report from the kommando or was added to another situation report that these two would agree. That was my responsibility, but it was never my mission to start investigations whether in this particular field this report was correct.

two reports were alike could have been the same for anyone who could use a typewriter, could it not? could use a typewriter could have performed that job, couldn't he? them to the General for his signature, couldn't he? sturmbannfuehrer while you were with the group part of the time. Do you mean to tell me that it was a responsibility and a job of a Lieutenant Colonel or an Obersturmbannfuehrer to make the reports that a Private could make?

A No. I do not mean to say this. Furthermore, I was not a Lieutenant Colonel during the whole time, was drafted as a major and later after five or six months was promoted. But in the spheres in which I made out the reports, namely my SD reports, I, of course, had to worry about these matters, and I did so. 1941, weren't you?

Q And you didn't leave Einsatzgruppe D until June of 1942? Einsatzgruppe D you were a lieutenant colonel, were you not?

A Yes. I merely said, "not during the entire time".

preparing reports during this time?

A No, it wasn't that simple. I had to do the work which an information man would have to perform. assignments of the Einsatzgruppe come through you? The daily orders or any orders were sent to the commandos from the army by the liaison officer who was with Army for that purpose. officer of Einsatzgruppe D with the army?

A No. This was another major. The difference is the following: With the staff of the 11th Army for the entire period of the assignment there was an SS liaison officer who lived with the staff and who worked with the staff every day mostly in the office of the G-2. In the staff of Einsatzgruppe D it was my job first to make out the reports for the Army, to maintain contact with the agencies who got the reports, to carry on conferences with these agencies, to report results of partisan reconnaissance, and to work on all military decorations for members of the Einsatzgruppe D. discharge of your task? between the chief of staff and the agencies under his command so that it might happen that for example I would frequently visit the G-4 officer more frequently than I would visit any other officer.

chief quarter master, and as such he was ordered to concern himself with our reports because the economic commandos were under his command and the agricultural matters were also under his jurisdiction. gasoline equipment had to be given to the group by him? gruppe D, were you not -- it was part of your task to draw supplies through this officer?

A No. This job of supply was the mission of the administrative officer in Einsatzgruppe D who was in charge of the actual administration.

Q Who was this officer? almost daily contacts with the army you know pretty well what was going on so far as it concerned Einsatzgruppe D in Army Headquarters, did you not?

Q Didn't you know generally what was contemplated in the way of assignments for Einsatzgruppe D through these daily contacts? for the liquidation of hostages through these contacts? hostages?

Q No, an order. Your chief has testified that the order for the execution of hostages came from the 11th Army.

Did you know that they were issuing orders for the execution of hostages? whether it was in July or August 1941, I had dinner in the club of the staff and at this occasion I sat together with other officers and the then chief of the army, General von Schobert came to our table in order to discuss matters with the officer sitting at the table or to ask them something. On this occasion I was introduced to him. He asked me immediately, "Are you from Ohlendorf"; I said, "Yes , I belong to the Einsatzgruppe." Then Schobert told me very agitatedly that he had just again received reports according to which German troops during their advance had been shot at from hedgerows and from houses and he had ordered that this was to be retaliated immediately, he would now have those hostages arrested and if something happened, he would have them shot, "please tell this to Mr. Ohlendorf."

Q Did you carry this message back to General Ohlendorf? of the army to the Einsatzgruppe, didn't you?

A No. This was not an order for the Einsatzgruppe, I merely told him that the general was dissatisfied with the situation in this area, and that he had ordered or he was going to order that he would have hostages arrested, and if something happened that he would have them shot. assignments of Einsatzgruppe D come into Einsatzgruppe D headquarters ?

did these orders and requests come? Officer. Army for the chief of Einsatzgruppe D, which was an assignment or a commitment for the commandos of that group and General Ohlendorf was absent from his headquarters, who opened this communication and read it?

Q. Who had the responsibility of transmitting this to the Einsatzkommando leaders concerned if General Ohlendorf was still gone?

A. Ohlendorf was absent, and it was an order by the army, then I would have passed on the order for the information of the commando concerned as an order of the army.

Q. Did you issue any separate orders for the commando leaders based upon this original order.....

A. No..

Q. .....if General Ohlendorf was not there?

A. No, I could not.

Q. You passed the order on in the oritinal form?

A. I may say that I do not remember such a case, for I was almost always with Ohlendorf when he was away, but of course I would have passed it on to the commandos for their information.

Q. Would you address any communication to accompany that letter; for instance, a cover-letter which right say in effect these words: "For your information and compliance" and signed either representing General Ohlendorf or with your own signature?

A. No, I could have only written, if I would have made a cover letter "for your information."

Q. Did any requests or orders for the execution of the insane come through you as liaison officer?

A. No, I did not hear about them, and I got no such orders.

Q. So far as you know, Einsatzgruppe D never received an order to execute an insane person?

A. I recall that it was attempted by some unit of the army to approach the commando concerned in order to evacuate an insane asylum. I remember exactly that this was refused and was not carried out for the army.

Q. Were copies of all orders to the commandos by the 11th Army sent to your headquarters?

A. No, this was not always the case.

Q. How did you obtain knowledge of usch orders or requests?

A. Either through the commando or through the fact that the liaison officer called us up and told us that the Commando 11-A had just received this or that order.

Q. Then would a copy of the order which had been sent to Commando 11-A come to your office?

A. Yes, certainly.

Q. Your headquarters received orders both from General von Schobert and General von Manstein later and at the same they received orders from the RSHA in Berlin, did they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Suppose General Ohlendorf was again absent and there was a definite conflict in the orders of Heydrich in Berlin and General von Schobert's orders which you had right there on your desk, whose responsibility was it to call on General von Schobert and explain to him the conflict between the two sets of orders which were in the headquarters of the Einsatzgruppe D?

A. First of all there were no such conflicts, but even if there had been one, I am of the opinion that an army order in an operational area would have precedence in every case, for the army, that is the commanding general, had the responsibility for the entire security in the area and could give such orders that at any time would be given precedence.

Q. Now, Colonel, it has been repeatedly testified from this stand that orders regarding the tactical situation were army orders and they, of course, were given precedence, but that all other orders involving security measures came from Berlin and they, since they were a police function entirely were given preference over the army orders.

A. I didn't quite get this, pardon me; now I understand. Now, they were not given preference, but the army would have had the possibility at any time to give precedence to its orders, for it was responsible for the area.

Q. Then you could use as an excuse for not carrying out an order from Berlin -- superior orders from the army is that right?

A. If this order had existed, yes, of course.

Q. Did the army ever order you not to execute any one?

A. No, never.

Q. Colonel, did the Einsatzgruppen or its commandos over sentence any one to death for the crime of looting?

A. The staff of the Einsatzgruppen did not, but the commandos Certainly.

Q. Were each one of these looters given a trial by courtsmartial?

A. I don't know. I was not present at such proceedings, but I merely knew in general that for the area Barbarossa, which is Russia, by a decree of the supreme command of the armed forces the jurisdiction was excluded, but how this was carried out, I don't know.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether any executions were performed without any sentence whatsoever?

A. No, I could not say.

Q. Well, in an interrogation which you had here you stated that Jews, communists, people of that nature, who were captured in groups were shot without sentence. Do you wish to take that statement back now?

A. I don't know what the testimony reads like, but I know, of course, that Jews and communist functionaries were shot without investigations taking place, yes.

Q. So you know that of your own knowledge that people were sentenced to be shot without any investigation or trial.

A. Yes, I had to assume that from the Fuehrer Order.

Q. Yes, now coming back to your sources of information for your Reports. These reports gave from time to time totals of executions performed by the commandos, did they not?

A. These reports did not contain any total figures which came from the commandos, but those statements applied to the period of time concerned for which the report was valid.

Q. Well, in the Prosecution documents here, Einsatzgruppe D is credited with a steadily increasing total of executions. Did you send in those totals of executions to Berlin?

A. No, I did not report them to Berlin.

Q. How did they get in those reports which Berlin issued?

A. I can only imagine that the figures were compiled in Berlin.

Q. You are familiar with the activity and situation reports issued by the RSHA in Berlin, which is a part of the Prosecution's case, are you not?

A. Yes, I know them.

Q. Yes, and they are divided into sections corresponding to the Einsatzgruppen are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. And that section devoted to Einsatzgruppe D contains the fact that people were executed, does it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Then occasionally it gives a total of the number of people executed within a given time, don't they?

A. Yes. That can be seen from the documents.

Q. Now, where did the RSHA in Berlin get the information for these figures?

A. Certainly from the Einsatzgruppen.

Q. And since you had the responsibility of making these reports to Berlin, these figures came from you, didn't they?

A. A part of these figures were passed on with these reports by me.

Q. And whore did you get the figures to send on to Berlin?

A. From the reports of the Einsatzkommado leaders.

Q. Yes, that is right; and then the answer to my question that the Einsatzkommando leaders reported their total executions to you from time to time is correct, is it not?

A. That the commandos reported totals?

Q. The total numbers of executions for a period of time to you.

A. That could have happened; I cannot remember any individual case.

Q. I don't want to dwell on this point too long. We are in agreement that the RSHA got the figures of the number of people executed by Einsatzgruppe D from your reports. We agree on that, do we not?

A. The reports which I made out were submitted and were passed on; that is right.

Q. And you also said that your information for making these reports came from the commando leaders or the commandos themselves, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. So then you would compile the total number of executions for the commandos of Einsatzgruppe D and put it into your regular report to Berlin, would you not?

A. I did not compile them, Mr. Prosecutor. They could only have been compiled in Berlin.

Q. The total number of executions performed by the kommandos of Einsatzgruppe D - who compiled it?

A. There was a man in the orderly room by the name of Fritsch as a signal man and he maintained contact between the orderly room and the signal tower, for these reports were generally sent by radio to Berlin,and this signal man in the orderly room who took care of all the paper work there handed these figures to the signal installations, and they did not appear in the reports.

Q. where did... Was this man Fritsch an officer?

A. No, he was a sergeant. He belonged to the staff as a signal and an orderly.

Q. And as a senior officer in that staff, certainly when the general was away from his headquarters he was under your supervision, was he not?

A. He wasn't subordinated to me in his daily work, but there was an adjutant who was in charge of the orderly room; but, of course, as the highest ranking officer, when Ohlendorf was away, I was in charge of the whole staff.

Q. Did you supply Fritsch with his copy when he sent radio messages to Berlin?

A. Fritsch wrote out those reports.

Q. I thought you said you wrote out the reports that went to Berlin, and now you say an enlisted man wrote them out.

A. No, this is a mistake -- pardon me. He wrote it on the typewriter. Of course, he did not make them out.

Q. Did he submit this copy to you, or to anyone in the Einsatzgruppe staff headquarters, before he transmitted it to Berlin?

A. I do not know how I am to understand this question. Of course, the individual figures were known to me.

Q. And you approved his messages before he sent them on?

A. I had nothing to approve there. It was merely repeating the reports.

Q. How do you know that the kommando leaders did not add their figures, or increase their figures, that you saw from their reports?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, it might have occurred of course that the kommando leaders exaggerated figures. I could not have seen this.

Q. You knew of (General Ohlendorf's orders to his kommando leaders not to increase these figures but to make an actual count, did you not?

A. Yes, I knew.

Q. And it was your responsibility to write reports some time for General Ohlendorf's signature, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was also your responsibility to see that all facts, including totals of executions, were as correct as you could make them, wasn't it?

A. If Ohlendorf gave this order to the kommando leaders, then the kommando leader had the responsibility to see that he would not violate this order.

Q. Now, what steps did you take to see that there was a minimum of this double counting of executed persons?

A. I had no documentary evidence that this happened. and I could not have taken any steps against it.

Q. You could have inspected the files of these kommando leaders when you went out there, couldn't you... didn't you have enough rank and enough authority to do that?

A. No, I did not have the authority. I had the authority for my sphere of work, but not to examine these files or to investigate them.

I would not have been in a position to do so.

Q. You were with the commanding officer of the Gruppe on a great many of these inspection tours, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And if General Ohlendorf had wanted those files inspected, but he didn't want to take time to Inspect them himself, who would have inspected the files?

A. Even if he would have done this -- I don't remember it at the moment -- he could make spot checks, but it never happened that he said, "Look at these documents or investigate them". It was always that I had to use the time in order to discuss matters with my three experts and discuss all that had occurred.

Q. If he had ordered you to inspect those files you could have, though, couldn't you?

A. Yes, of course.

Q. Now, from your familiarity with the reports in Einsatzgruppe D, this meant that you had to have excess to the secret files of Einsatzgruppe D, didn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. You could go even to the top secret files of Einsatzgruppe D, and examine them, couldn't you?

A. Yes, Of course.

Q. So that was available to you in those secret files, or top secret files -- the total number of people executed by Einsatzgruppe D, wasn't it?

A. I didn't see any list of total figures.

Q. Was that information contained in those files?

A. I do not know.

Q. I want to submit to you Document Book II-D.

MR, WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, I don't want to COURT II CASE IX waste the time of the Court, but I now wish to question him on a phase concerning five documents, and in my opinion it is a good place to stop.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, I would think so, especially if you are going to take up a series of documents.

MR. WALTON: Yes, they are all connected and inter-related.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning at nine-thirty.

(The Tribunal recessed until 0930, 19 November 1947) A. Musmanno,presiding.

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II.

Military Tribunal II is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Mr. Walton.

CROSS EXAMINATION (Continued) BY MR. WALTON: record of your testimony for the last day and a half and briefly stated it appears to be the following: That you were deputy to General Ohlendorf for economic questions in the staff of Einsatzgruppe D; that you were liaison officer to the 11th Army in your same sphere of economic questions, and that your chief function outside of your sphere of economic matters was the compilation of activity and situation reports gathered from the Kommandos of Einsatzgruppe D for transmission to the RSHA in Berlin. In detail, your sphere dealt with such questions as economics, agriculture, morale of the population in that area of the occupied territory assigned to Einsatzgruppe D. Is this summary a broad outline of your activities in Einsatzgruppe D?

A It is not quite correctly summarized. May I briefly repeat? I was not the economic expert with General Ohlendorf, but I was Chief III and thus the only information officer for the SD work in the area of Einsatzgruppe D. That does not only comprise economics but also the morale of the population for all fields of domestic life. liaison officer was with the Army who was permanently stationed there and who had his office there. In the staff of Einsatzgruppe D I had the job of collaborating with the Army, that is, all the reports which I have already mentioned for the agencies of the Army end the constant contact with these Army agencies.

Mr. Prosecutor, the third thing you mentioned, the activity reports, this was a part of the SD work, 90% of it. It was that part of the work where reports did not have to be copied, but real problems had to be dealt with. Questions arose as, for example, the food situation in a city where I became active as an advisor for the Army agencies, but this is only one small example, and furthermore, I received reports from the Kommandos which were concerned with executions and I incorporated them into summarized situation reports which were then submitted to the chief and which were passed on. sphere of tasks?

A I cannot say exactly, Mr. Prosecutor, for any servicesin the war area brings up daily questions and daily problems so that it might very well happen that the chief gives me some order to do something quickly.

Q I will inquire further. Did you ever make any agreements with the Army involving the future activities of the Kommandos of Einsatzgruppe D?

AAgreements would not be the right expression. At best I could receive directives and orders from the Army for my information. time Einsatzgruppe D would perform, through its Kommandos, certain specific tasks in certain specific localities?

Q Let's take a specific example. I now direct your attention to Document Book III-D, page 39 of the English, page 69 of the German, which is Document NOKW-628 -

THE PRESIDENT: 3, what, Mr. Walton?

MR. WALTON: 3-D, sir.

BY MR. WALTON, continued:

Q -- Prosecution's Exhibit 160. I hand you herewith, Colonel, a photostatic copy of the original document. This is a report of the activity of Einsatzgruppe D from 1 February 1942 to 16 April 1942 and if you will look at the last page you will see that it is signed by you for the Army High Command of the 11th Army. Did you prepare this report?

Q Now, again this report is signed after the abbreviation "IV" which means "In Vertretung", does it not?

Q And "In Vertretung" means the representative or acting for General Ohlendorf at the time you signed this report, does it not? with in the staff I was the constant deputy of the chief and I signed these papers as such.

Q All right. Now, let's see if all these spheres you dealt with are contained in this report. Now, you have testified that a man named Zietzen was appointed the deputy to Ohlendorf, have you not?

Q What other task did Zietzen have?

Q Now, isn't it true that the headquarters of Einsatzgruppe D was usually in the same locality as 11th Army headquarters?

Q Isn't it further true that Zietzen was usually in the field with his Kommando 10-A often many kilometers distant from the group headquarters?

A Yes, that's correct. was a great distance away from headquarters, could he? which I have pointed out, which is seven hundred kilometers away from Simferopol up to Taganrog.

Q All right. Let's consider this document. In the first paragraph of this report when you speak of the operation detachment 12, you speak of the extended activities of this Kommando and you say that they were carried, out in spite of the handicap of weather, What specific activities did you mean?

A Excuse me, Mr. Prosecutor, is this page 1 or nay I ask where this is?

Q Do you see Roman I paragraph which is headed "Activities since February 1942" on the first page? in effect, that Einsatz Kommando 12 had its headquarters in Fedorowka?

Q All right. And it continued to be handicapped by the severe cold of winter?

Q Now, in the third sentence it says that "The sphere of activities could nevertheless" -- which means in spite of the cold weather - "be extended by transferring Teil Kommandos to certain named places" Now my question was what were these extended activities which you mention were performed by Einsatz Kommando 12? to what the Kommando 12 has reported. I did not have any knowledge of my own about this.

I understand extensive to mean that the Kommando was again in a position to send out sub-kommandos from their garrisons.

Q For what purpose, Colonel? leaders. als, did it not?

Q You have answered my question. Now, continuing on toward the bottom of page 1 of the original, it is shown there that in agreement with the intelligence officer of the staff of the 11th Army, part of Sonderkommando 10-B, was employed for the protection of the railway area. Who made this agreement? the liaison officer. I do not know.

Q By the Kommando, do you mean General Ohlendorf? D? read here myself and what the Kommando had reported. I had no approval to give on this. This is a summarization of the report of the Kommando just as I mentioned under 12, so that I cannot say whether, on the basis of this transfer of the sub-kommandos any execution took place.

Q I didn't ask you whether an execution took plane. I was asking you about an agreement. Now, since General Ohlendorf was the group commander would it not be possible for the Army High Command of the 11th Army to agree with him that a Teilkommando of 10-B would be used for a time to guard a certain railway area which would be of benefit both to the 11th Army and to the Einsatzgroup? Could not General Ohlendorf have made the agreement with the Army?

or the first of April he was absent from the group? as the senior officer present in that staff before they took the matter up with the commanding officer of Kommando 10-B? they could only make an agreement with that Kommando leader who in this case represented Ohlendorf in his area. Suppose that you informed the Army High Command that it was not feasible or practical to use this portion of Sonderkommando 10-B. Could you have objected to their use of the Kommando for these duties? and could have given this information, so that during the negotiations with the Kommando Leader this was known. that you had discussed the employment of his forces to guard a railway area and advised him to grant the Army's request? Kommando was active, with what missions, that is, whether it was in combat or what the situation was. Only the Kommando leader himself could take this, because only he could say, "I have this mission to perform at the moment and the Army must take this job away from me if it wants to assign the other mission."

Q All right. Let's continue on down to two-third of the way down page 2 of the original which, Your Honors, is the last paragraph on page 40, and you use a term there, "The Crimea is freed of Jews", which is a quotation. What did you mean by that sentence when you wrote it?

THE PRESIDENT: Mr.Walton, you say "which is a quotation." It doesn't appear as a quotation in our book. It is a statement by him.

MR. WALTON: It is a statement by him which I meant to say I quoted from the document to him to call his attention to those words.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh yes, very well.

Q. Colonel, what did you mean by the words the Crimea is freed of Jews?

A. With this I repeated what the commando had reported, and I can only understand by this that no Jews were left on the Crimea.

Q. Is that the conclusion which you, yourself, reached when you had carefully analyzed the reports of the commandos; or, did each commando report definitely and specifically that his area was completely free of Jews?

A. The commando reported that the commando area is free of Jews, and I did not make any analysis or I did not make any countings, or did not draw any of my own conclusions, because they could have been completely wrong.

Q. Didn't you make any check to see that this statement was, could be true before you put it in your report?

A. That was not my task; I did not make any spotchecks, but may I say one thing: If the chief had ordered me to make spot-checks, that is to look through the files of the commando, then I would not nave found any more than the copy of the report which the commando actually sent to the staff of the Einsatzgruppe. It would have been completely impossible to investigate any further, so that the chief had to depend that his commando leaders would carry out orders which they received.

Q. It seems to me that this whole report, after reading it carefully, makes the group show up in a very favorable light. Now, it follows that your reports generally showed the group favorably. Would you pad it with facts which you did not know to be true or false?

A. I could not have put in any facts which I did not see in the reports, or which I did not take from the reports.

Q. But you accepted them as a complete truth, and put them in the report.

A. The responsibility that the facts in the commando reports were correct lay with the commando leader.

Q. Answer my question, Colonel. You accepted them as a truth and put them in a report?

A. Yes, of course.

Q. Thank you.

A. Because I had no possibility to investigate further, and it was not my job.

Q. Now, as a matter of policy, did you while General Ohlendorf was absent, during this period, authorize any rewards or grant any special privileges to those Crimeans who denounced Jews to the Einsatzkommandos?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether any rewards were given to denunciators by the commando leaders?

A. This is completely new to me.

Q. You don't know then, in other words; is that your answer?

A. I cannot know this because the manner in which the commandos did its work in its execution missions was not known to me.

Q. Let's go on to the paragraph relating the facts about the burgomaster of Kutschka-Eli and a communist woman president of the town council; that is the last sentence on page 41, Your Honors. Now, your report follows: Five main communists who were rendered harmless. Does this mean that they were killed?

A. Pardon me, Mr. Prosecutor, are these the five communists headed by the name Ibraimow?

Q. Yes, together with the burgomaster, and the communist woman president of the town council. Were these people all rendered harmless and, if so, what does the term rendered harmless mean to you?

A. Pardon me; I don't find the place where the word harmless is mentioned.

Q. Towards the latter half, latter third of page 3 of the original; just before the names, the five names given.

A. Page 3 of the original is missing here. It says page 1, page 4, page 6, etc.

Q. All right. You see the name Ibraimow, do you not, for it says on page 6 -

A. Yes, on page 6.

Q. Well, what does the sentence just prior to that list of names read?

A. There it says of leading communists the following were rendered harmless.

Q. Yes, now I want to know what that term means to you.

A. In this case the matter is completely clear, because on the top of page 7 the sentence had been added and shows that these people were publicly hanged.

Q. Who ordered their deaths?

A. I do not know. As far as I know, through the reports, I cannot say, but if it is a matter of a public hanging, it could have never happened without the town commandant of the army for the town in which this happened having ordered the commando to do it.

Q. Is there any proof?

A. But I do not know.

Q. Was any proof offered to you that these five in fact did hold a position that you gave in your report?

A. No, in this form I merely incorporated the reports of this commando report in the report.

Q. Why was the execution of these five individuals so important that you felt you had to give their names and their position in your report?

A. It was not neither my job to investigate not could I see this.

Q. Did you usually give the names of all the executed persons in your reports?

A. No.

Q. All right, Colonel, let's go to page 6 of the original. This has to do with the punitive action against the village of Laki, which is on page 45 -- your Honors -just before the middle of the page. Have you found the place where on the 23rd of March, in collaboration with the Wehrmacht, the punitive action was carried out against the village of Laki; on page 6 of the original report.

A. Yes, I found the place.

Q. Who ordered this action?

A. There are two possibilities according to what I read, here, for I do not know any more than that. First of all it could have been ordered by the leader of the army unit there; secondly, it could have been ordered by the Kommando Leader 11-A, which was in Bachtschissaraij.

Q. Who reported this fact to you?

A. This report came from the Kommando 11-A.

Q. Now, your report states that fifteen persons were involved in the giving of aid to partisans and were shot; and the rest of the population evacuated and the village burned to the ground. Were other homes or places of shelter provided for these people whose homes were completely destroyed?

A. I do not know, and I cannot know, Mr. Prosecutor, because I wasn't in this place at all where this happened. I don't know the town Laik at all.

Q. Did the reports state any provision for the people who were evacuated from their homes before they were burned?

A. I cannot say; I do not know.

Q. Did the reports state how many people from the village of Laki were made homeless by this action?

A. I cannot assume it because otherwise it would say so.

Q. Did the fifteen persons executed have any kind of trial before a court prior to their execution?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, to all these questions I can only repeat one answer. I do not know these events from my own knowledge. I did not have the job to investigate them. Therefore, I cannot know whether a trial was given here by the Kommando leader.

Q. All right; let's pass on to page 8 of the original, the paragraph headed Roman II, which is on page 46 -- Your Honors. Now then, this paragraph is headed planned further assignments of kommando detachments. Way would this go into the reports unless you in the absence of General Ohlendorf had the right or the power to order the kommandos to carry out these assignments?

A. This was put in here because this decision was up to the army alone.

Q. Well, if the decision was up to the army alone, they knew what they were going to do with the kommandos. Why would it be necessary for you to cite in your report the future assignments of the five sub-units of Einsatzgruppe D?

A. Because the kommandos mentioned in their reports, for example, the Special Kommando 11-A had reported that it would now transfer its headquarters from Bachtschissaraij to to Kokosi, and this was mentioned in these reports.

Q. Did they have to receive approval from the headquarters of the Einsatzgruppe D before they could make this transfer?

A. As a rule it was done with the approval of the chief of the Einsatzgruppe.

Q. Yes, but during the period 16th of April, and for some time after that, General Ohlendorf was absent, either on leave or on business in Berlin when you wrote this report on the middle of April. Now, who had to make the approval?

A. His Kommando leaders were his representatives, there was no condition without any order; if the army had not been agreeable, then via the liaison officer it would have called up the Kommando 11-A and said that the Kommando was to stay at that one place.

it was well known to the army and well known to the Kommando leaders and the staff had nothing to do with it? Why was it necessary for you to put it in the report?

A That was customary; it was done this way at all times in all reports; it could have been omitted just as well.

Q So it served no purpose for you to put this in the report? Did it serve a purpose of any kind for you to put it in the report? Kommando was in case the army officer did not yet have this information. of them. We will leave that. The next thing I want you to do is to point out for the Tribunal in this report any statement made by you which concerned your field of domestic questions of economy, or of agriculture, or the morale of the population. Point out one statement in that report which was definitely in the field you have stated was yours.

A The spheres which you have just mentioned, Mr. Prosecutor, is my sphere as Chief III for the SD reports; as my second sphere, of all the summarizing of these reports; secondly, the partisan reconnaissance; and thirdly, the working on the military decorations.

THE PRESIDENT: You didn't answer Mr. Walton's question, or rather, you did not do what he asked you to do. economics or of the field which I mentioned as Chief III as far as I can see. BY MR. WALTON: Einsatzkommandos of Einsatzgruppe D, were you not?

of them, were you not? important or secret matters if the kommando leaders reported to the chief personally -- which happened very frequently.

Q You didn't know of important or secret matters; is that correct?

A I did not mean to say that. Of course I knew about secret matters, but I cannot say that I heard about all secret or top secret matters, for I have already mentioned that during conferences with the commanding general of the army, between him and Ohlendorf, I was never present during these conferences. the English, page 1 of the German, document Book III-D, Sir, I am sorry, Document Book III-D, page 1 of the English, page 1 of the German, which is Document No. NO-2856, Prosecution's Exhibit 148; specifically to paragraph 2, the sentence there which reads at the end of page 1 of the original. Seibert had full access to all secret files, including those which were designated as top secret. I am sorry, Colonel, I thought you had it in your hands.

Let me repeat: In paragraph 2, toward the end of page 1 of the original, the sentence reads, and I quote: "Seibert had full access to all secret files, including those which were designated as top secret." Now, does not this sentence mean that you knew, as well as General Ohlendorf, all matters which concerned Einsatzgruppe D, or, certainly all official matters which concerned Einsatzgruppe D? far as the matters are concerned which are designated as secret, that I had access to them, but outside of secret documents there are matters which have not been laid down in the reports or orders, or there can be such things, so thus this does not exclude that I did not hear about those.

Q All right: let's go a little further down on page 2 of the original where General Ohlendorf says that Seibert was acquainted with all the duties and problems within the framework of Einsatzgruppe D. Only two people -- I am still reading from the affidavit -- could have complete knowledge of the number of executions which took place; namely, Seibert and myself.

Well, Colonel, was not the number of executions the most carefully guarded top secret of the affairs of the Einsatzgruppe D? I know.

Q All right; let's inquire into some of the reports from Berlin. Document Book II-D, please; II-D, page 8 of the German. Colonel, let me call your attention to Document Book II-D, page 8 of the German, page 9 of the English, which is Document No. NO-3159, and Prosecution's Exhibit 85. Now, this is a rather lengthy document, and on page 18 of the English copy -- I don't know exactly what page in the German, but it is on page 13 of the original, where the section of this RSHA report is devoted to the activities of Einsatzgruppe D. Will you kindly indicate when you have found this section of that document?

A Einsatzgruppe D begins on page 14 of the original; is that right in the German text? description. Right under the paragraph marked Einsatzgruppe D, it gives a location as being in Nikolajew. executions of 31,767. Did you report this figure to Berlin? were sent to Berlin. The situation and activity reports which were sent to Berlin contained at the end always the same sentence; during the time of the report so and so many people were executed. The number had been omitted in the report, and in this report which the signal man Fritsch made out, of course as a result of a dictation by me, or, by Ohlendorf, in this report he went into the signal room and from the reports of the Einsatzkommandos during the period that the report was covering, he took out the numbers and he added them for this period of the report, and this figure then was coded by him personally in the signal room, and did not appear in the written reports for reasons of secrecy; this had been ordered by Ohlendorf.

room and were at the disposal there every day for his work. everything in the report, except the total number of executions? matter to get the total number and figure them up from the reports of the 5 kommandos and it was his sole responsibility to determine what these totals were and his sole responsibility to transmit this information to B erlin? signal man, Fritsch, just as any signal man who gets such a report for transmission. executions during your whole service with Einsatzgruppe D? have been done by Fritsch.

THE PRESIDENT: That wasn't the question which was put to you. Tour answer was an argument and not a response. Mr. Walton asked you if throughout your entire service you ever gave Fritsch the number of the executions.

THE WITNESS: No, he did not get a total figure from me.

THE PRESIDENT: At no time?

THE WITNESS: At no time, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you yourself know what number he then transmitted?

THE WITNESS: I knew the figure in the reports, Your Honor. Q (By Mr. Walton): Then I ask you a question on Document 3159, which is now before you.

Is that total of 31,767 the correct total for the date of the report? compiled in Berlin and many mistakes could have happened. You said that you knew the total figures in the report. All right, we'll see if we can refresh your memory further. Will you turn in the same Document Book II-D to page 25 of the German, page 20 of the English, to Document NO-2825, to a report from Einsatzgruppe D, as published by the RSHA in Berlin, which shows that by the 12th of December, 1941, the total executions performed by Einsatzgruppe D, are 54,696 persons. Is this a reasonably correct figure for that time?

A I cannot say, Mr. Prosecutor. Berlin figured that out.

Q All right. The first five documents in this document book -

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, I would like to know whether he is familiar with the sentence which preceded the sum total of executions.

MR. WALTON: Very good, Sir, I will inquire into that. Q (By Mr. Walton): Under the paragraph marked "Shootings" it says that 2,910 Jews, plus 19 Communist officials were shot. Where did Berlin get this fact? These figures could have been sent on to Berlin by the Einsatzgruppe, but whether these are the figures I cannot say. I mean to say by this that here mistakes might have cropped up, but these figures were sent by the Einsatzgruppe to Berlin. I merely cannot say whether these are the very figures.

also sent to Berlin?

Q How do you know it was not?

A Because this was never done. Fritsch had the job to add up the figures for all the kommandos for the period covered by the report, and a place would be left open for this figure on the report, but otherwise no figure was provided for. sent to Berlin, is that what you say? or a month period was sent to Berlin, were they not? 1941 to June 1942, how many people were executed by Einsatzgruppe D? reported figures correspond with those which were actually executed.

Q Forget the reports. From your general knowledge, you know that some people were executed by Einsatzgruppe D, do you not? an approximate figure from you as to how many people in your best estimate Einsatzgruppe D executed?

AAny figure I would mention would be incorrect. I didn't see all reports for I had a chief who worked himself and who often made out reports himself.

Therefore this would give a completely wrong picture, since I did not know any list where the figures were compiled. says in his same affidavit, which I have already called to your attention in Document Book III-D, page 1 of the German, page 1 of the English Document NO-2856, and Prosecution Exhibit 148. Let's go back to paragraph 2. "In rare cases only," says General Ohlendorf, "if very important reports had to be written, I dictated them myself and later informed Seibert of the contents as a routine matter." Is this statement true?

DR. GAWLIK (Attorney for the Defendant Seibert) Your Honor I would like to point out a translation mistake. In the German document it says "customarily". "I later informed Seibert customarily of the contents," and, as far as I have just heard, the word, "customarily" which is very important and gives the sentence an entirely different sense was not contained in the English.

MR. HORLICK HOCHWALD: If your Honor please, "as a routine matter" covers the word "ueblicherweise". I do think it is there in the translation.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, whatever was said, the affidavit which we have before us reads "and later informed Seibert of the contents as a routine matter." Now, "as a routine matter" is different from "customarily".

DR. GAWLICK: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: "Customarily" would mean "generally". "As a routine matter" -- it would mean"without exception".

DR. GAWLICK: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

DR. GAWLICK: I ask then that this be corrected, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think that the discussion, as it has now taken place, up to this moment, will all appear in the transcript and therefore it will be clear just what was meant.

Q (By Mr. Walton): I ask you, Colonel, if this statement is correct that General Ohlendorf made?

A The statement is correct, Mr. Prosecutor, for you must know that many reports were made out daily, that is to say, within a period of two or four weeks, a great number of reports were made out and these rare cases where actually secret matters were reported they concerned those reports which happened once or twice a month and it wasn't that I merely passed on these two reports to the Army which have been submitted here. There was a very large number of reports which I made out, almost all of which concerned themselves with my work as Chief III, but they do not appear here.

Q All right. We will return to my other question. From the information which you gained and which you were able to gather while you served with Einsatzgruppe D, according to your best recollection and belief, how many people were executed by Einsatzgruppe D from June 1941 to June 1942? or belief, because my figure could be incorrect. by Einsatzgruppe D? what I should say. Of course, I know that executions took place and I saw the figures in the various reports, but to give you a total figure, I cannot do it.

Q All right, I'll ask you this: Do not the total number of executions present a fairly accurate picture of the number performed by Einsatzgruppe D during the time that you were with the unit? kommando.

Q You mean that you won't say.

A No, Mr. Prosecutor, I am aware of the fact that my figure could be wrong and therefore I cannot mention any and I did not perform any service with a kommando and therefore I have no way of knowing the answer to the questions which you put to me.

an inspection trip? before this Tribunal make the statement that you had the authority to stop bad conditions of an execution? That's found on the transcript of the record, English text, page 730. You still insist that you did not have this authority to stop improper or bad conditions of an execution?

A I know of no such authority, Mr. Prosecutor.

Q All right, Let's go on to another subject. Is it true that the deeper into Russian territory that EinsatzGroup D proceeded the more difficult became the communications with Berlin? territory the difficulties of communications between the Kommandos increased did it not?

A Here I must make a difference. We were in radio communication with the Kommandos and we had radio communications with Berlin. These communications did exist but otherwise it was very difficult. For example, the Crimea in the first months of 1942 was always cut off and the Army had ordered that only ammunition could be brought to the Crimea. Otherwise no traffic took place. virtually a free hand in carrying out their missions in the area assigned to them?

A Mr. Prosecutor, this is a matter of interpretation. The Kommando leader was able to get in touch with Ohlendorf, by radio any day.

variance with the statement you made on 11 March this year. In that interrogation you stated they had virtually a free hand in the areas assigned to them. Now which one do you stand on, the one in the interrogation or the one you just made?

A I see no difference in that, Mr. Prosecutor. Of course, the Kommando leaders, after they had received an order, had the possibility to carry out an order the way it was appropriate in their area and as it was suitable to their division, etc. But, this does not exclude that in questions which the Kommando leader thought he could not decide himself he could apply to the chief by radio. I see no contradiction in this. the Kommando leader acted on his own initiative, did he not? gas van? parked in the courtyard at the headquarters in Simferopol?

A There was a gas van there. I saw a gas van but it was not there all the time. I do not know this exactly and by inquiring from the driver I found out it was the so-called gas van. van when they needed it?

that they might have turned to the chief. I do not know.

Q Did you ever dispatch the gas van to a Kommando?

A No. I never did that. was not there of dispatching this gas van? April. That's when I was on the staff by myself. Simferopol?

A I cannot give you the date. I could even be wrong in giving the month. leave the courtyard at Simferopol and then it would come back later? does not exclude that the gas van had been requisitioned and brought to the Kommando but in no case was it a continuous traffic during the periods which I was present. van in the courtyard at Simferopol, haven't you? later, was it not? in Simferopol?

Q It could have been there, you just don't remember?

A I do not know. I saw it one single time. It could have been there. There was a very large garage in the courtyard where all vehicles were kept.

that they had used the gas van?

A No, I did not see such a report. It never mentioned that - whether they were executed by the gas van or whether they were shot. The expression shot was used but I do not know that the gas van was mentioned.

Q Well, are you familiar with Himmler's order that women and children should be executed by gas rather than shooting which was published to your group in the early spring of 1942?

A I do not remember such an order as Himmler's order in this form.

Q Whose order was it? have described. the first place? but I did not see any express Himmler order to this effect.

Q Did you ever see anybody's order to that effect?

A Saw the order? Pardon me, I don't understand the question. women and children by the use of gas vans?

Q Well, didn't it excite your curiosity as to why the gas van should be there and didn't you seek to find out the reason for its presence in the courtyard in Einsatzgruppe D?

A I didn't bother about these things, Mr. Prosecutor. I know, of course, that people were to be executed by gas vans or I could unfortunately imagine it but I did not investigate the matter because it was none of my business.

saw situations which needed improvement didn't you offer suggestions for dealing with these situations to the Kommando leader?

A Prdon me, what conditions do you mean, Mr. Prosecutor?

Q All right. Suppose that the Kommando leader when you arrived at his headquarters said, "Colonel Seibert, I have a problem here which concerns the morale of my men. I should like your advice and counsel on it." Would you discuss such a matter with a Kommando leader? comradely fashion and would have given him personal advice but if I visited a Kommando leader it wasn't that he said, "Colonel, may I ask you this?" but the relationship was much more friendly, so that one was able to discuss it. getting worried about the fact that his execution squads seemed to enjoy their duties as an execution squad and asked for your advice about replacements, what advice would you give him?

A I didn't get the question. The Kommando was to enjoy the execution you mean? That is completely impossible. so many executions until it was the impression of the Kommando leader that these men enjoyed their duties. Now General Ohlendorf has testified here that he always saw that men who reached this frame of mind were shipped out of the group. Suppose this Kommando leader told you that this situation existed in his Kommando and asked your advice about getting replacements for these men. What advice would you give him?

DR. GAWLICK: Your Honor, I object to this question. First of all the question is so long I must say I didn't even understand it myself and there is great danger the witness may give an answer that may be wrongly understood because of the translation. First of all, I ask about a definite rule about hypothetical questions. According to German procedure hypothetical questions are inadmissable and I would like to refer myself here to rulings in criminal procedure - even in American criminal procedure hypothetical questions are inadmissable. What the witness should testify is what he did, what he said, what he saw, and only facts but he cannot imagine himself what he would have done if a, b, c, d, e, or f had happened. This is impossiple for one to demand of the witness and, therefore, I ask of the Tribunal that the Tribunal make a basic ruling about hypothetical questions.

THE PRESIDENT: Gawlik, have you ever read any standard work on evidence as presented in Anglo-American Criminal procedure?

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, "Wharton's Evidence in Criminal Cases".

THE PRESIDENT: Now, can you point out to the Tribunal any section in "Warton's Criminal Evidence" which states that hypothetical questions are not permitted?

DR. GAWLIK: Yes, I could do this if the book is put at my disposal.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, where did you see this book?

DR. GAWLIK: The book is here in the library but it is difficult for me to get hold of it, when I go to the library on Saturday and Sunday maybe.

THE PRESIDENT: All right, Mr. Walton will have that book available for you to persue during the recess, and when we reconvene I want you to read to the Tribunal the section you refer to where it says that hypothetical questions are not permitted.

( A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

THE PRESIDENT: Professor Gawlik, are you ready now to give us the law?

DR. GAWLIK: I am sorry, Your Honor, there are three fat volumes, and I shall have to look at these fat volumes first. At the moment I have no objection to the actual questions until I find it. I only would like the last question to be put so that it is understandable to me; otherwise, I don't want to hold up proceedings for the time being.

THE PRESIDENT: Rephrase the question, Mr. Walton, and put it very briefly.

CROSS EXAMINATION (Continued) BY MR. WALTON:

Q. Colonel, if a commando leader felt that his members of an execution squad were no longer of any furhter use to him and he wished to have them replaced, would he informally discuss his replacements with you on one of your inspection trips?

A. That is quite possible, Mr. Prosecutor, that the commando leader would have informed me about it and would have talked to me about it. Yes, that is possible.

Q. And you would have discussed the matter with him, is that correct?

A. I certainly would have talked to him.

Q. And you would have given him that advice as to how to proceed?

A. If personally I had been in the position to do so and to give him some comradely advice I would have done so.

Q. Would you have also discussed the tactical situation, confronting the commando leader with him while you made a visit to his commando headquarters?

A. You mean the tactical situation, the military tactical situation, is that what you mean --Yes, we talked about it.

Q. Well, would the security tactical situation also be discussed?

A. It obviously happened when I talked to commando leaders that, of course, they informed me about the situation.

Q. Did you give them advice and counsel toward the solution of their immediate problems?

A. He did not expect me to do so because he was certain that such advice concerning security I could not tell him more than he knew himself because I wasn't an expert as far as that goes.

Q Who was the acting Commander when Ohlendorf was away?

A What absence are you referring to, Mr. Prosecutor? Commander? mentioned before, which sometimes lasted a week -- there was no deputy for him. When he was absent for a longer time, like the absence which was mentioned, he, as I have said, appointed as his deputy for their areas the respective commando-leaders. which is page 737, and which is in the English transcript of the Record at page 727. This is the cross examination of General Ohlendorf, and I ask you to look at the portion which is marked, and the question that was asked General Ohlendorf: "Who was the acting Commander of your group while you were away?" Do you see that?

A Yes, in the German transcript it says, "Who was during your absence your deputy in the Einsatzgruppe?" Yes,

Q All right, what was the answer?

A "The deputy in the staff of my group was the co-defendant Seibert." words? he was gone,does it not? statement unless it was true?

A I beg your pardon -- I didn't understand that question.

Q That is a true statement, is it not?

A The statement that during Ohlendorf's absence I was his deputy on the staff is correct, yes.

Q Isn't it a fact that due to yourposition or rank, you were well acquainted with all the duties and problems of Einsatzgruppe-D? because I held this particular rank, but they were just know to all the members of the Einsatzgruppe.

Q All the duties and all the problems?

A Excuse me. All the problems is a bit too far, Mr. Prosecutor. I have already stated that I could never say that I was acquainted with all problems, or all matters concerning Einsatzgruppe, for as I said, I wasnot present in a number of discussions which Ohlendorf had. Book III-D, page 1 of the English, page 1 of the German, which is Document NO-2856, and is Prosecutor's Exhibit No, 148; the same being Ohlendorf's affidavit. Let's look at page 2 of the original, which is the second complete sentence on page 2 of the original, and it says, and I quote: "Seibert wasacquainted with all the duties and problems within the framework of Einsatzgruppe-D." Is that statement true? the fact that one question might have cropped up that I didn't find out and I didn't learn about in some form or other, because it is quite impossible during a period of one year to say all questions and all problems have been made know to me. We would have again to discuss the term "problems."

THE PRESIDENT: I am sorry.

MR. GAWLIK: Mr. President, I think I found it. In the following words which are found in the volume of Wharton's, volume 3, it is page 1301, about cross examination. It says here: "Irrelevant, collateral, improper, or repetitious testimony," and it says the following, I shall translate it and I shall give it to the translators in case I make a mistake in the translation. "The cross examination should be confined to the question of factual questions, and should exclude questions concerning expressions of opinion, or speculative questions, or all argumentative questions, especially questions of an argumentative nature which call for an opinion or conclusions, or of some assumed knowledge of facts improper.

"And an exception so far as I know has only been made within scope of an expert when one can, of course, ask speculative questions of an expert, hypothetical questions based on facts. This is expressed here. It says here, it is maintained that a hypothetical question to an expert witness can be put in the cross examination, and it must be based on the basis of material which is offered in this particular case, and this is not the case here because he is not an expert witness. I shall not passit unto the interpreter, or to Mr. President, if you would like it, I shall show it then to the President.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Professor Gawlik, what you have read is, of course, the law, and your interpretation is absolutely correct, and the best evidence on that is that the witness replied to the question which is now a matter of record, namely, the question put to him was of a factual nature. Mr. Walton asked the witness, what happened when he called on the commando leaders, what wasthe relation between then, and the witness stated, it was a very friendly one, and that they discussed what occurred. Then Mr. Walton askedhim, if the commando leader sought your advice in the matter of replacements, what would you have said to him. You see, it is purely factual, and it is entirely relevant. If Mr. Walton had said to the witness, now witness, suppose while you were in the wilds of Crimea, you were attacked by ten tigers, and you did not have a pistol, what would you do? Now that would not be permissible, because up to this point we have not heard anything about tigers in the Crimea. So long asit is based on facts in the case, a question such as Mr. Walton put is entirely proper.

Dr. GAWLIK: Yes, but it follows, Your Honor, that repeatedly the following happened. The witness said these things had not happened, and then he was asked if it had happened what would have happened, and I believe.......

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, oh ---

DR. GAWLIK: And I think in this case the question is inadmissible. I would like Your Honor to tell me whether I am right in this?

THE PRESIDENTS Yes, again, Dr. Gawlik, we go back to whether it is factual, if it is based upon what has actually been testified to, and it is entirely relevant, and the mere form of the question does not make it inadmissible, because in cross examination that is the only way you can arrive at the truth, because if you allow a witness to say that didn't happen, and you stop there, then you cannot delve into it any further, and there is no use having a cross examination; so long as it stay within the realm of the subject of discussion, questions of the nature which were put by Mr. Walton, which you call hypothetical questions, which are not really hypothetical questions, are entirely in order. However, I do not exclude to you, Dr. Gawlik, the right to object any time you feel that the question is improper.

DR. GAWLIK: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: You are welcome.

MR. WALTON: If it please the Tribunal, may I confer with the court stenographer to find what was the last question. I don't think the answer was complete.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Gallagher, will you please read that last question.

(Whereupon the last question was read before the Tribunal as follows)

"Allright, I can only call your attention again to Document Book Document No. 2868, and is Prosecutor's Exhibit No. 148; the same being Ohlendorf's affidavit.

Let's look at page 2 of the original, and it says, and I quote:

"Seibert was acquainted with all the duties and problems within the framework of Einsatzgruppe-D." Is that statement true?"

) BY MR. WALTON: before you?

Q Is that sentence quoted true?

A The sentence as quoted here is correct. I have already added to it that it did not exclude -- that it never could exclude that discussions took place, the contents of which I was not informed about, and, secondly, I do not know how far the concept a "problem" can be defined. Ohlendorf was away?

A I cannot answer this. It is quite possible that orders came, but I don't know. a commando? the order, that order would be given to the Commando itself. If, however, I had received it, I would, have passedit on to the authorities of the Commando. headquarters were located, there was one or more commandos nearby? your headquarters was there?

A In Simferopol itself there was Kommando-XI-B. The other units were according to my present estimate, the nearest commandos were at a distance of about eighty to one-hundred kilometers to the south, and to the east and to the west.

one near your headquarters. There was just one commando, was there not?

Q And you answered, this was XI-B? in the town?

while they were in Simferopol, and while they were in Nikolaev? one of these commandos while General Ohlendorf was away from his headquarters? were summoned to the executions were collected, have you not?

A What order are you referring to? To what order may I ask? were summoned to execution was collected before the execution, have you not? but generally I think I did know about it. money, or valuables turned over to Einsatzgruppe-D by the commando performing the execution? administrative leader. D Headquarters?

A I would assume so. He might have been absent sometimes, but so far as I remember he was always there.

Q Well, now, isn't this clothing collected for a specific purpose? use of.

Q Don't you know as a matter of fact, this clothing was turned over to the National Socialist Welfare Organization for redistribution?

A I don't know that this did happen in all cases, but I remember now that it did happen.

to clothe Ethnic Germans?

A No, in this case we misunderstand each other. My economic question I dealt with as an intelligence officer, I had to deal with the problems in occupied territories of that nature, but not the economic questions of supply. All those questions an administrative officer or economic officer had to deal with, and that is something entirely different.

Q Well, now, Colonel, if these men didn't have enough food in the occupied territories, or these people didn't have enough food in the occupied territories, you would report such fact to Berlin, would you not?

Q And if they didn't have enough clothes for the winter, would you report that?

A Yes, I would have reported that, too. Excuse me, not men of Einsatzgruppe, but the population. We must understand each other here. It is the population. cluded the ethnic Germans who were being settled in this occupied territory, didn't it?

Q Now if these people didn't have enough clothing, enough coal, or enough furnishings, that would be a question which you would deal in with as Chief of Leiter III. Germans. your office as to the distribution of these clothes collected from people who were shot, wouldn't you?

ethnic Germans, and, if I now assume, that they had not enough clothes, as to how this situation was being dealt with, that was not for me to decide, it was never a matter for the SD official. I only had to report about it. point I am making is, that you have reported to Berlin that the Ethnic German Settlers who were part of the population didn't have enough clothing; later, did you ever make an inspection to see if this lack of clothing situation was relieved?

A I cannot remember that. Obviously I visited the ethnic Germans' territory, but not to inspect them concerning these questions, but in order to inform myself generally about the position.

Q All right. Now the information that if you had made a report to Berlin that they lacked essential clothing, would you not consider it a matter of information to later on see if your report about this lack of clothing had been acted upon? after each report. But many of these reports were only meant for information, and whether these matters were being dealt with was something for the SD, the competent authority to deal with which received these reports. the fact that the matter was attended to later on? had sufficient clothing, now in that case, yes, of course, I would have reported about it. of clothing from all sources whatsoever, weren't you?

A What do you mean by interested, Mr. Prosecutor? I reported about these matters, and if they changed I reported again.

Q All right, you had enough interest that they didn't have clothing, and to report that fact. Now didn't you have enough interest to report possible sources of clothing for these people who lacked it?

You had enough interest to report the fact that they lacked clothing. Didn't you have enough interest to go one step farther in your report, and report to the proper authorities the sources of the clothing so these people could have their needs relieved? included in the reports. it was remote?

A That is not of remote interest. I did this according to the reports, and if I found out the source I just reported about the source, and if the fact that the shortage was over, then, of course, I reported about that fact.

Q Let's go back to these people who were executed. Was that clothing kept for any length of time in Einsatzgruppe-D Headquarters?

Q I didn't ask you about a camp. was read to you, in which you stated the valuables and clothing were collected by an inspector from AMT-I. They were registered, and sent to Germany, and the money and valuables were either deposited in a local bank or sent to Germany, and that this inspector was responsible to Ohlendorf?

A That is correct, Mr. Prosecutor, this administrative officer had to deal with such tasks; the money and valuables, as I said, were sent to the group, but no clothing was taken to the group, but this administrative officer just took care of it. In the Commando he was the competent authority. That was within his competence.

Q Took care of what?

Q In the headquarters of Einsatzgruppe D?

A Yes. It did not mean, however, that a transport of all these things to the Einsatzgruppe took place. or valuables in Einsatzgruppe D... there was no store for these items.

A I don't know whether that was translated differently. I said the same just now. I said, Mr. Prosecutor, that that does not mean a transport of clothing from the kommandos to the Einsatzgruppe. stored in Einzatzgruppe D for a day, or a week, or a month?

Q I didn't ask you whether you ever saw it; I asked you whether it was there.

A I do not know, Mr. Prosecutor.

Q It could have been there, then?

AA large store would have struck me... I would have seen it.

Q All right. What was the name of this inspector or administrative officer to whom these items were entrusted for transmission to Berlin?

Q Was he on the staff of Einsatzgruppe D?

A Yes. He was a member of the staff. headquarters of Einsatzgruppe D?

Q Did you know what his duties were? were eight different sections which were under a staff officer who dealt with the section pertaining to his work. Of course, what became generally known, became also known to me.

Q Yes. And he reported his disposition of these items, did he not?

Q Well wasn't that a matter to be included in the reports to Berlin?

A I don't remember any report in which there was anything to this effect. There could have been individual memoranda or letters from this administrative officer. not go through the general report which you made out? entirely different department.

Q I am not speaking of your reports as Chief of Office III; I am speaking of the general reports which you drew up for the whole Gruppe. Were his activities ever included in those reports?

A He made out his own reports. And a listing of these reports within the general situation reports, I cannot remember. Berlin besides the general situation reports?

A Many of the departments, yes. For instance, the motor pool expert reported about the Office II, about conditions in the field of transport; the medical officer had to report continually to the medical office in the RSHA. The interpreter, of course, did not make any reports. The departments had been given deadlines from the offices in Berlin. lected by the kommandos, had been sent in to Einsatzgruppe D headquarters, were they not?

A No, I have already said they were not sent there. If they had, I would have seen larger stores. concerning watches and rubels - which is contained in Document Book III-D?

Q Now, where did these watches come from...and these rubels? the administrative officer of the Einsatzgruppe. The administrative officer knew about this.

Q From where did they come - from the kommandos?

Q Now, the Einsatzgruppe did not keep these items, did they...of money and watches? says, to the Wehrmacht - didn't they?

Q Did they take receipts for deliveries to other authorities?

A Not personally. I personally didn't get a receipt. But I am sure that the administrative officer had these receipts. He had to have them. shipments of clothing and watches and valuables from Einsatzgruppe D? Einsatzgruppe.

Q All right. Valuables, watches, fountain pens, eye-glass frames, jewels, rubels... how many times do you estimate that shipments were made to higher authority from Einsatzgruppe D? was there. It is possible that this happened in the army a third time.

Q Then of all the executions performed by Einsatzgruppe D... only twice or three times valuables were sent in to the headquarters?

A They were not sent to headquarters. That was so in this one case... that is mentioned in this letter. were selected for executions, didn't you?

A Yes, I learned about that... but whether they were items which were generally confiscated I could see that, of course - I did not know any details. They may have been of other people who had to give up their valuables for other reasons. That I don't know.

Q All right. Wasn't it the responsibility of every man in that headquarter to see that no Einsatzgruppe personnel enriched himself by keeping such items for his own use? once, and of course I also was informed about it.

Q Well, isn't it a fact that these shipments were made regularly, from time to time, out of Einsatzgruppe D headquarters?

A I really can't say that. It is quite possible that I made a mistake when I said twice, and that it might have happened more often, but that there could have been a shipment weekly or fortnightly, I don't know. I think it quite impossible. General Ohlendorf's adjutant, have you not?

Q How well did you and Schubert know each other? Office I of the RSHA. Before the assignment I must have talked with him on one or two occasions in Berlin, but I did not know him better than that. I only met him again in the assignment. they not? contact with Lt. Schubert, didn't you? other daily; but I have already said that I was often away with Ohlendorf, or by myself; but otherwise, of course, I saw him daily when he was there and I was there. from his headquarters? that I did not order Schubert because he was a personnel acquaintance of mine, but I just told him to do something.

Q Yes. Did Schubert know your functions and duties in the Gruppe?

Q Now, if Schubert made the statement that, and I quote: "In matters where one did not want to bother the chief, one turned to Seibert" - would that be a true statement? or for some reason or other was away, he came to see me because I held the highest rank... that is quite correct in that form. which you have stated? Would you render a decision in these matters? called to my attention. If it was pertaining to my own sphere, certainly would have been able to make a decision. Otherwise, I could only have given advice, and I could have said who the expert was for this particular shpere. gave any directives or orders? the special situation in the Crimea, I can never say generally that this was absolutely excluded as a possibility; but I do not remember any directives which have anything to do with spheres that I have mentioned.

Q But it could have happened, even though you don't remember?

A I don't know.

Q It is possible, isn't it? in there, and their duties - if Schubert considered you the full deputy of Ohlendorf he had a basis for this assumption didn't he?

A Hour he had it personally, I do not know. I can only imagine, as I already said, that he was aware of my position within the staff, yes.

Q All right. Let me call your attention to his affidavit of 24 February 1947, which is contained in Document Book I, page 108 of the English, 141 of the German, and which is his affidavit 3055, Prosecution Exhibit 28. Let me call your particular attention to paragraph 2, the second sentence thereof, which reads, and I quote: "In October 1941 I was assigned to Einsatzgruppe D. Otto Ohlendorf was the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe, and Willy Seibert was his deputy." Do you find that sentence?

A Yes, I've got it, Mr. Prosecutor.

Q That is a true statement, isn't it?

A I have already given my opinion on that. Schubert was detailed to the staff and he found me there -- as the highest ranking officer and as the deputy for the Staff, and this is the only way I can regard this statement.

Q Do you know Karl Jonas, J-o-n-a-s?

A Jonas? I seem to remember the name, surely.

Q Well, I'll tell you. He was second in command to Hans Gabel, the chief of the order police company attached to Einsatzgruppe D.

Q Do you remember the name now? gruppe D? I saw Jonas very rarely - that means not very often; I am just thinking over to what kommando he was assigned. I cannot remember exactly.

A Yes. Yes. That is correct. I don't know at the moment in what kommando he served.

Q. Now, if he considered you as General Ohlendorft's deputy, would he have some basis for that statement?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, this basis can only result from the picture that he found when he arrived at the staff, and the reason was that.........I was the senior officer on the staff.

Q. All right. Let us go a little further. Let us consider your own affidavit which is contained in Document Book III-D, page 34 of the English, page 60 of the German, which is Document 2859, and is Prosecution's Exhibit 158. What does the last sentence in the first paragraph read?

A. As senior officer of the staff of the Einsatzgruppe I took over all tasks within the Gruppe whenever Ohlendorf was absent from the Gruppe.

Q. Isn't this a normal function of a deputy when the chief is absent......to take over all the tasks?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, then I could not have already stated, one or two sentences, before, and I quote, "I was never appointed the deputy of Ohlendorf for the Einsatzgruppe D." I would not have made this statement and then said the contrary two sentences afterwards; but this only applies to "within the Gruppe".......the staff itself, and I think I have made that quite clear. But that does not mean that I had any authority over the kommando leaders.

Q. Well, did Ohlendorf when he was present, issue orders to kommandos?

A. Certainly.

Q. And this was one of his tasks, as Chief of the Einsatzgruppe D?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when he was absent did you take over this task, too?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, there were no daily tasks or orders. Otherwise, Ohlendorf could not have been on the road for weeks at a stretch without authorizing and appointing a deputy within the staff. But basic orders had been given before. And when Ohlendorf was absent in April he could, of course, not have passed on any orders to the kommando, but that does not include the fact that at this time I could have given the orders, but the kommando leaders were his deputies for their own departments.

Q. You stated you could have given orders during the time in April and May 1942 when Ohlendorf was absent?

A. No. Not in that form.

Q. You just stated that you could have, while Ohlendorf was absent on the road, give orders.

A. I must have expressed it wrongly somehow. The opportunity could have been given for my giving orders, but I could only have given orders in those matters for which I held the authority, namely, for my sphere of tasks in Department III.

Q. Well, then, in effect you state that the sentence which you have just read to the Tribunal isn't true.

A. No, I did not state that. This sentence is true.

Q. Well, which is correct? You say now that you could only give orders for your own spere, and in your affidavit, you could take over all tasks and give orders.

A. Tasks which were dealt with within the staff, yes.

Q. Then you stated that Ohlendorf gave orders to Einsatzkommandos when he was there.

A. Yes.

Q. That was the normal task of a Chief of a Gruppe? That order was given in the staff for transmission to the kommandos?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, could you take over this same task when Ohlendorf was not there?

A. No. It says, at the beginning of the page, "Chief of the Einsatzgruppe."

Q. Let me interrupt you a minute. Let us go back to this sentence. This sentence as you wrote it in you affidavit and signed it, is not correct, is it?

A. What sentence, Mr. Prosecutor?

Q. The last sentence in paragraph one of your own affidavit. That should be on page 60 of the German copy.

A. The sentence is correct. I have stated that within the Gruppe........that is the term which we used......and that actually means the staff only......and insofar this sentence is correct.

Q. All right. What does the word "all" mean? "For all tasks"?

A. You mean where it says "all"...... Those were the tasks which happened, which came up during my time.

Q. That's right. And if they involved giving orders to kommandos in the field that was part of your tasks when General Ohlendorf was absent, wasn't it?

A. No, that could not have been my task because I was not the deputy of Ohlendorf for the kommando leaders.

Q. Well, then, this sentence does not mean "all" tasks, then?

A. It means, as it says here, all tasks within the Gruppe, which means within the staff.

Q. Perhaps the German says that, but the English certainly doesn't.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, let's get the German, then. Don't let's stop there. Let's find out what the German says. If the German is as he says, then the English should be corrected.

BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Witness, do you distinguish between the staff as such and all the kommandos which go to make up the Einsatzgruppe?

A. Yes.

Q. Then explain, if you will, why.......in this statement you say, "as senior officer on the staff of the Einsatzgruppe".........there we have the distinction......."staff of the Einsatzgruppe", you say, "I took over all tasks within the Group" - not within the staff, but within the Group. Now please explain that .

A. There it says within the Group. That can only mean within the staff, your Honor.

Q. But why can it only mean that, when in the very previous clause you go to the trouble of saying "staff of the Einsatzgruppe"?

A. Because it is the usual term, the terminology which says.......

Q. Why would you not have said, if the meaning is what you now tell us, "As senior officer on the staff of the Einsatzgruppe I took over all tasks within the staff"? Why didn't you use "staff" there, instead of Group?

A. Your Honor, if I had formulated this affidavit myself I would have written "staff".....but I, in this case, understood this to be staff, and therefore I made no correction.

Q. Well, why did you understand it to be staff when it said Group, especially when you now tell us that had you written it out in your own hand you would have used the word staff and not Group?

A. Because the expression can be misunderstood, as actually is happening at the moment. For me it was clean...

Q. Yes, and that is the very reason why, when you had the affidavit before you, and you saw that a misunderstanding could arise, why didn't you correct it then?

A. I could not assume that, your Honor, after I had affirmed a few minutes before that I had not been deputy chief of the Einsatzgruppe. That's on the same page.

Q. Did you read this over carefully before you signed it?

A. I read through it, and then Mr. Wartenberg told me that if I had any corrections or changes to make I had to announce it before each change, and then I had to discuss it with Mr. Wartenberg for quite some time, in what shape or form I could change it, and in eight or ten cases this was done.

Q. Yes, well, then, why didn't you change this particular statement?

A. First of all, because two sentences before I stated that I was not the deputy chief; and secondly, this distinction did not strike me because that was the terminology we used within the assignment. We just meant by Group, the staff.

Q. But in the sentences before you are merely pointing out that you were his deputy in all matters under Department III. Then you go on to another subject. What happens when Ohlendorf is absent? And you point out that when he is absent that you took over all tasks within the Group. Not within the staff. But within the Group. Now, do you want to tell us that this is a mistake?

A. An interpretation to the effect that by Group the whole Einsatzgruppe would be meant, would be wrong, your Honor. Within the Group can only mean within the staff, as was actually the case. I was not the chief of the higher ranking kommando leaders.

Q. Well, do you then say that anyone unfamiliar with what happened there, reading this statement, and concluding from the statement that you took over all tasks within the Group......anyone so concluding would not read the statement correctly?

A. No, your Honor. If it would say here, in the absence of the commander-in-chief of the army I took over all tasks........this would never mean either the task concerning the divisions because it says here when the commander-in-chief was absent from the army, that means from his H. Q., of the army, and not from the divisions.

Q. Well, we didn't get your answer. Now let me put the question very specifically. Someone who does not know you, and has not heard you testify, picks up this document and wants to know what you did when Ohlendorf was not there, and he reads, "As senior officer on the staff of the Einsatzgruppe I took over all tasks within the Group whenever Ohlendorf was absent from the Group." Now, please keep in mind what I have said. This individual does not know you, and does not know anything about the case. He only has this paper before him. After he has read the paper he says, "My understanding of this document is that when Ohlendorf was not in charge because of his absence, that Seibert took over all tasks within the Einsatzgruppe, that he had control over everything within the Einsatzgruppe"......... would such a person coming to such a conclusion be justified in the conclusion?

A. A person, your Honor, who does not know anything about this matter could come to such a wrong final conclusion, yes.

Q. Then, wasn't it incumbent upon you, when you read this statement, and not knowing who might read it, to correct it if you thought that it was capable of that wrong interpretation?

A. Your Honor, if I had had the peace and the time and also the concentration, of course I would have read the document word for word so that such a thing could not have happened. But if shortly before, and through discussions I had with Mr. Wartenberg, I had told him quite clearly that I was not deputy as far as the kammando leaders were concerned, I could not assume that Mr. Wartenberg, or generally here, these people who deal with these matters here, would come to another final conclusion than the one that is actually correct and which I testified to here.

THE PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until one-fifty.

(The Tribunal recessed until 1350 hours.)

(The hearing reconvened at 1350 hours, 19 Nov. '47)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. VON STEIN (Counsel for defendant Sandberger): Your Honor, I ask that, my client Sandberger be excused from this afternoon's and tomorrow's afternoon session to prepare the document book.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Sandberger will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow so that he may confer with his attorney in connection with a document book.

DR. VON STEIN: Thank you.

DR. FRITZ (Counsel for defendant Fendler): I ask that the defendant Fendler be excused from tomorrow's (Thursday's) session in order to prerare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Fendler will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow in accordance with the request of his counsel.

DR. LEIZ (Counsel for defendant Klingelhoefer): Your Honor, I ask that the defendant Klingelhoefer be excused from tomorrow's session, Thursday, and Friday in order to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Klingelhoefer will be excused from attendance in court tomorrow, Thursday, and the following day, Friday.

DR. LEIZ: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. von Stein, did you want to see your client this afternoon?

DR. VON STEIN: Yes, this afternoon too, please.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I didn't understand you to have requested that he be excused this afternoon also.

DR. VON STEIN: Your Honor, I requested for this afternoon and for tomorrow afternoon.

THE PRESIDENT: For this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon?

DR. VON STEIN: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Not tomorrow morning?

DR. VON STEIN: Not tomorrow morning - no, not tomorrow morning: just the afternoon

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. The defendant Sandberger will be excused this afternoon and will be accompanied by the Provost Marshal and he will be excused also tomorrow afternoon to confer with his counsel.

DR. VON STEIN: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, please.

CROSS-EXAMINATION (Continued) Col.

seibert - Resumed BY MR. WALTON: the initials "I.V.", did you not?

Q And these initials stand for the term "representing" or "in place of" the Chief of the Einsatzgruppe, does it not? gruppe D headquarters a full-time, regular deputy to the chief. If he made out a report over his own signature, would he use the initials "I.V." or not? A I did not get it exactly, you mean above his own signature?

DR. GAWLIK (Counsel for defendant Seibert): Your Honor, I believe this is a hypothetical question.

THE PRESIDENT: The question perhaps was not too clear. Suppose we have it repeated, and then we will see..... BY MR. WALTON: duty in the headquarters of Einsatzgruppe D, how would he sign a report, if he had made it out?

A He would sign "Acting For".

Q Under the initials "I.V.", is that not so?

tion in Document Book III-D, page 34, and Document NO-2859, Prosecution Exhibit 148 -

THE PRESIDENT: It is 158.

MR. WALTON: I am sorry: 158. The last sentence in paragraph 2 of our affidavit reads as follows, does it not, and I quote? "The reports which I signed in the capacity of his deputy were signed with 'I.V.". Does your affidavit state that?

WITNESS: Yes; because in your previous example it was an assumption which never existed in the Einsatzgruppe, and here the facts are given as they really were, namely, that I signed "Acting for....." in my sphere, as it had been done according to Ohlendorf's order during his six to eight years' activities. BY MR. WALTON: same Document Book III-D, page 39, which is Document NOKW-628, you admitted that none of these topics were in your sphere, but did you not sign that report under the initials "I.V."?

A May I see the document, Mr. Prosecutor? Without the document I cannot understand the question.

Q Do you have Document Book III D before you?

(Document book presented to witness)

Q And you signed that report after the initials "I.V.", did you not? report was specifically in your sphere as chief of Department III. but my reports to the Army which was my second sphere and what is concerned here.

Q So you signed this as Ohlendorf's deputy?

Q Even though nothing in your sphere is contained in this report? was my sphere, in addition to my sphere as Chief III.

Q Well, don't you think the making-out and signing of reports about all activities is the normal duty of a deputy of an organization like Einsatzgruppe D?

A No; I do not think so because every department chief made out reports, and if the chief was absent and I represented him for this sphere - then I signed them.

Q. All right. Let's go back to your affidavit which we were discussing and which yesterday you testified at great length concerning two executions which you witnessed. This is in III-D, Page 34 of the English, Page 60 of the German, and is Document NO-2859, Prosecution's Exhibit 158. Will you explain to the Tribunal why when you wrote this affidavit or signed this affidavit you did not give any details about the two executions you witnessed?

A. I do not even know whether I was questioned about it, Mr. Prosecutor.

Q. You mean that you were not asked a question while you were discussing the material to go into this affidavit whether or not you had participated or seen or had anything to do with the execution of Russian nationals?

A. I do not remember any details.

Q. Well, yesterday when the President of the Tribunal asked you, you remembered great details about these executions, didn't you?

A. As to whether I remembered the details about the day when it happened --no, I did not remember the details; I merely remember what I described yesterday.

Q. Well, why didn't you put these details in this report or in this affidavit?

A. Mr. Prosecutor, I do not know whether I was questioned about it.

Q. All right, let's go to the final paragraph. Right above your signature you say that you have read the above statement which consists of four pages in the German language and that you declare this to be the whole truth. Isn't that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, it's not the whole truth because you testified at length concerngING two executions.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, if the witness states that he was not interrogated on that subject then he cannot be blamed because it is not in the affidavit; because after all it was not he who controlled the interrogation but the interrogator.

Now if you have some evidence that he did talk about this in the interrogation, then you can question him on it, but he cannot be blamed for the omission of anything from the affidavit because that was the matter of the interrogator.

MR. WALTON: I realize that, Your Honor, and in no way mean to argue with the court, but this is supposed to by an affidavit of his activities with the Einsatzgruppen -- the entire affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, it's very obvious that an affidavit, no matter how long, could not contain every detail of 12 month's work; something would necessarily have to be omitted.

MR. WALTON: That is true, but the two executions which he testified about were of such clarity in his mind yesterday, certainly I am at a loss to understand why he didn't insist that these were included in this affidavit.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, it wasn't for him to insist. Mr. Wartenberg was questioning him and he replied. Then his replies were put into an affidavit and he signed the affidavit. There was no duty on his part to tell Mr. Wartenberg, "How you didn't question me about this; you didn't question me about that."

MR. WALTON: Very well, sir. BY MR. WALTON:

Q. Colonel Seibert, will you turn in Document Book III-D, to Page 65 of the German, Page 36 of the English, to Document NOKW* 629, which is Prosecution's Exhibit 159. I have here in court a photostat copy of the original of that report which I will submit to you.

(Copy submitted to the witness) ished will you so indicate to me?

A. Yes.

(Witness reads the report.)

Q. You signed this report also, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And you signed it under the initials "I.V." is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Or as deputy of General Ohlendorf?

A. For my sphere, yes.

Q. Are there any economic questions or domestic questions discussed in this report?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you point out to the Tribunal what they are?

A. On Page 1 it says, in the second paragraph, about the middle of the page, and I quote: "As regards the activity in the areas of settlement of ethnic Germans, I beg to be permitted to refer to the special report which was submitted for your knowledge sometime ago." But the special report is not here.

Q. All right, and it refers to SS-Oberfuehrer Hoffmeyer -HOFFMEYER --head of the liaison office for racial Germans. Did you have any dealings with him?

A. With Hoffmeyer I had no personal dealings no, pardon me, he took over the jobs in the ethnic German territory in which the commando 12 was stationed.

Q. All right. Let's go on to the latter part of this report, and it says, "The following suggestions are submitted for the future activity and assignment of forces that have become available in the meantime." Then it follows that these assignments and locations are given. Is this your work?

A. The designation of the garrisons and assignments was not my job.

Q. Even though you put it in the report?

A. Yes, it says so in the report.

Q. Whose orders was it that the commandos occupied the stated garrisons?

A. It was on the basis of the army order.

Q. All right, then, now let's go to the last paragraph just above your signature. That paragraph states that General Ohlendorf was away from the group, does it not?

A. Yes.

you could give an oral report on the 11th of October? says here.

Q What conference, with whom? the Chief of Staff. Chief of Staff at this conference?

A Well, Mr. Prosecutor, it is completely impossible for me to tell you what was discussed on this particular conference in detail. I had several discussions with the Chief of Staff. Almost daily or almost every other day I spoke with other officers of the Army, so that in detail I could not say. Of course, I spoke about the general situation during those conferences as it could be gathered from the reports, and I reported to him about the situation. assignments? about this; I do not know that any more. the officer who was the Chief of Staff of the Eleventh Army, isn't that a normal function of a deputy when the commanding officer is away from his command?

A No, this is not at all the case. As an information officer for the entire SD reports, I had to report to these offices continually, no matter whether Ohlendorf was present or not.

Q Isn't it one of the functions of a deputy commander to propose future commitments of his group when a commander is not there to give his judgment in the matter?

gruppe he would, of course, have made the suggestion.

Q Well, weren't you acting as deputy for the entire group during this specific time?

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, Mr. Walton has called your attention to that sentence which reads: "The following suggestions are submitted," etc. Now, by whom were those suggestions submitted.

THE WITNESS: They were submitted by the commandos, your Honor, and they were incorporated into the report and summarized.

THE PRESIDENT: Didn't you submit them as the acting commander?

THE WITNESS: I did not, your Honor, but this was summarized by me from the suggestions from the commandos which appeared in the report, and I summarized it in this report.

THE PRESIDENT: If there was any discussion to be made about the suggestions, would the Chief of Staff have conferred with you on them or would he have called in each Einsatzkommando chief?

THE WITNESS: If he would have had any discussions he would have certainly informed me about them, and I would have had the duty to inform the commandos concerning the opinion of the Army. BY MR. WALTON: General Ohlendorf didn't return you could commit these commandos to tactical security questions, could you not?

questions.

Q All right. Let's go back to your affidavit on Page 34 of the English of the same document book, III, which you have, and on Page 60 of the German, your own affidavit, and specifically Paragraph 5 of your affidavit. In Paragraph 5 of this affidavit you stated that it was known to you that members of the Security Police and SD received the order to interrogate camp inmates in the Russian prisoner of war camps and to carry out execution measures. What was the source of your information?

THE PRESIDENT: It was "executive measures". You read it "execution".

MR. WALTON: I am sorry, executive measures. Q (By Mr. Walton): What was the source of your information about screening these prisoners of war in these camps? order which concerned this, but it may also be that I heard it later in Berlin, somehow. It told Mr. Wartenberg at the time clearly that I cannot give any detail, and I do not know at the moment whether this general knowledge was based on an order which I read or whether I heard it through a conversation. I do not know exactly. gruppen or Einsatzkommando personnel? screening team, and from the reports which are now in the documents I read that the orders say that special kommandos are to be formed which are subordinate directly to the chief of the Security Police and that they are to report to him.

personnel of the Einsatzgruppe D? such team in Einsatzgruppe D. which included the execution of prisoners of war?

Q All right. Let's look at Document Book I, Page 54 of the English, Page 62 of the German. This is Document 3414 and is prosecution's Exhibit 14. Look this over and tell the Court whether you have seen this order or a copy of it before.

A I have looked it over, Mr. Prosecutor. As I said, the fact, which is evident from the order, is known to me, but the names mentioned here I do not recall at all, but I cannot say whether I read about it six years ago or not. received a copy of this order? the distribution list that this order was sent to the commandos and to Einsatzgruppe D for their information, but not for their execution of it. copy of this order then, is it not? files of the headquarters of Einsatzgruppe D, woult it not? to this order - midway of Page 55, your Honors, this same document - where it says, "I request that the chiefs of the Einsatzgruppen try to execute the purge of the transit camps with their own forces, as far as possible." A Mr. Prosecutor, these were conv ersations among officers, or comrades, which usually brought various opinions about various problems. To give any details about these is very difficult.

had read reports from members of the SD in Russia which told about the kidnapping of labor for Germany, do you remember that incident?

A Yes, I said that. This was generally known to me by reports, that is correct.

Q From whence came these reports? of the Security Police in the East. Einsatzgruppe D? in the operational area, during the time I was in Russia, I did not see anything of transports of workers. Therefore, no reports could be made about them. This was chronologically later. Only every agency named a different movie. I do not mean to say by this that this did not happen. It might very well have happened, and I told this to Mr. Wartenberg, but a case from the area during the time I was present is not known to me, not as having happened. either remotely or directly, to do with an execution?

A Yes, I understand now. During my inspection trips I inspected the Tartar companies which the Eleventh Army had put at the disposal and which had been distributed and stationed in platoons in the endangered villages in the Jaila Mountains, that is to say, in those villages which were continually attacked by partisans, and I visited these units during my inspection trips; not every time, but it did happen. their daily tasks? the men who carried out the training. that were not partisans?

A No. I never learned about that, and this was not their mission, for the Army itself had ordered that these subunits be stationed in the villages for the protection of their villages and not for any kind of other mission. properly armed?

A No, the Army supplied their arms. These were rifles and hand grenades. They did not have any automatic weapons. inspection of these companies?

Q Did you ever report to Berlin about these companies? mentioned. inspection, that they were adequately trained for the task at hand?

A They were never sufficiently trained, Mr. Prosecutor, for these were volunteer Tartars who volunteered on the basis of call by the Eleventh Army, and who were currently trained. That is, actually they were trained in their daily combat with partisans. Of course, their unit leaders trained them in the localities where they were stationed. before they were ever committed against the partisans? so that they could be committed? training was relatively brief, and in no unit was it ever completed while I was in the Crimea.

A No, I did not do that either. They were immediately committed in the villages,.and it might certainly have happened that on the next day, as far as they were in a position to do so, they had to fight if the village was attacked. interested in the efficiency, training efficiency which they had achieved, shouldn't you? look after the condition of the training during my inspections and to speak with the unit officers. in an action? company in three or four cases.

Q Did your outfit ever take any prisoners? all German Army units were committed. In the case in which I participated with one batallion, Rumanians were committed and Tartar Home Guard units were committed. These Tartars were not employed to start the frontal attack but to secure a large area. At the flanks they were to secure the left or right flank because better trained soldiers were available. Tartar companies under your command went into an area to search out all of the enemy who left there when a line moved forward, didn't they?

A No, the combat took place differently, Mr.Prosecutor. The German battalion had attacked the fortified areas, and the tactics of the partisans was as follows:

Either when they thought they were strong enough to defend themselves to do so or to see that they could flee as quickly as possible and to retreat, and this was to be prevented and stopped by the security belt at the rear and at the front and on the flanks. Otherwise the partisan camps could never be attacked. They would have immediately retreated to the next forest.

Q. All right. Well come back to my original question. Did -at any time you lead a fighting force -- did the unit under your command ever take any prisoners?

A. That happened, yes.

Q. That happened to them?

A. The prisoners were -- if they were soldiers -- among them were Russian troops and Partisans as armed civilians, then the soldiers were turned over to the army as prisoners of war, and the rest were either turned over to the secret field police or they were handed over to the unit which was committed there.

Q. That included your unit that was committed there?

A. Well, Mr. Prosecutor, not in the form that the Tarter companies would have taken prisoners along.

Q. Isn't it a matter of fact, Colonel, that under the Hitler Order, that where any Partisan was found with arms in his hand, he was immediately liquidated, you and your Tartar defense companies immediately liquidated all Partisans you captured?

A. This did not correspond to the Fuehrer Order, but this was an army order which had been posted in all places, which had been disseminated by leaflets, according to which armed civiliang and any people who aided armed civilians would be punished by death.

Q. All right. Did you and your Tartar defense companies ever execute people who had aupplied food or ammunition or medical supplies to the Partisans?

A. I never experienced it, Mr. Prosecutor, But in the combats I took part in ---

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Mr. Walton, I don't know whether you got an answer to your first question, what happened to prisoners.

MR. WALTON: As I understood it, sir, he said if it was a Russian army man.....

THE PRESIDENT: Well, now but then you made it more specific. You spoke of armed Partisans being captured. Now, what happened to them?

Did you liquidate them at once? That's the question you put and I don't recall hearing an answer.

THE WITNESS: I didn't experience that they were immediately liquidated at the place, but I am convinced that they were shot.

MR. WALTON: Were they shot by members of the unit under your command?

THE WITNESS: Now by these Tartars companies. They never carried out an execution as far as I know. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Why not get it more specific? Now, you led a detachment into action against Partisans, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. You captured some armed Partisans? Right?

A. I personally did not capture any.

Q. Well, you lead a detachment which captured armed Partisans?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you order these Partisans shot?

A. No, I could not have ordered that because ---

Q. Why not?

A. Your Honor, because I did not have the total order about this action. I led one of the four or five committed units.

Q. Who then ordered them shot?

A. The order could only have been given by the officer who had the command over this action?

Q. You said that you led a detachment into action against Partisans. You said that this detachment captured Partisans. You said that these Partisans were then shot. Who ordered them shot?

A. Your Honor, I said I am convinced that these prisoners were shot.

Q. Well, who ordered them shot?

A. Only the officer who had the command over this operation. I was merely commanding officer of one unit of four or five which participated.

In this way I was only a subordinate officer.

Q. Well, very well. Who was the officer that ordered them shot?

A. That was the battalion commander of this German battalion.

Q. And what was his name?

A. Once it was Lieutenant Colonel Meyer. Another time it was the battalion commander of the Roumanian battalion.

Q. Well, he was the one who ordered them shot? These two that you have mentioned?

A. Yes. BY MR. WALTON:

Q. Did he ever order you to execute any of the Partisans which were captured?

A. No, he never gave me that order.

Q. Did you ever order men under your command to execute Partisans that were captured?

A. No. The auxiliary units were not used for this purpose, but regular units.

MR. WALTON: The Prosecution has no further questions at this time.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, any redirect examination?

DR. GAWLIK: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

Perhaps Dr. Gawlik, we would gain time if we would recess now and then you may begin immediately after the recess. The Tribunal will recess for fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. STUEBINGER (Attorney for the Defendant Braune): Your Honor, I ask that the Defendant Braune be excused from tomorrow's attendance in court in order to be able to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Braune will be excused from attendence in court tomorrow.

DR. STUEBINGER: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Dr. Gawlik: BY DR. GAWLIK (Attorney for the Defendant Seibert):

Q. First now, let us come to the last point your assignment as leader of a Tartar Company. In order to clarify the situation, I have four questions to ask you, concerning your activity in the Tartar Company. Did you, as the leader of the Tartar Company, did you ever shoot a prisoner?

A. NO.

Q. Did you ever give an order for the shooting of one?

A. No, I never gave such an order.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, do you see anything wrong about shooting a partisan?

THE WITNESS: No, Your Honor, because this man had forfeited his life after the Army had ordered clearly that armed civilians should be shot.

THE PRESIDENT: But the only reason that you didn't order any partisan to be shot is that it just did not happen to fall within your activity at that time.

THE WITNESS: Yes, I could say that, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. For what reasons are you of the opinion that a partisan deserves death?

A. The Army order had proclaimed that persons who offend against the security of the German Armed Forces, to this category belonged armed civilians for thus the term "partisans" has to be understood in the Russian campaign.

It is therefore not a matter of regular soldiers and these people had been warned beforehand by these orders and they knew that if they armed themselves and fought the German Armed Forces that thus they would lose their lives.

Q. Perhaps you could tell us quite clearly what you mean by a partisan.

A. By a partisan I mean a civilian who is armed, therefore, carries arms and therefore is not a regular soldier.

Q. Is it known who, according to International Law, is entitled to be treated as a prisoner-of-war?

A. It is generally known to me that such persons are concerned who wear a uniform or some uniform badge, who carry their arms openly.

Q. If you had caught a partisan, what would you have done?

A. That depends on the situation.

Q. I mean, as a prisoner, how would you have treated him?

A. A partisan, as I am now describing him, would have been shot by myself.

Q. Did you receive any knowledge about the fact that members of the unit under you shot prisoners?

A. No, I never knew anything about it.

Q. I now come to another point. In the cross-examination, your joining the SD was discussed and you were asked why you remained in the service of the SD, although you received a lower rank than you had held in the Wehrmacht. Was the rank of decisive value to you, or was it something else that moved you to remain with the SD?

A. I should first like to answer the question of rank. I joined the SD and I became a department chief, a referent. This corresponded to a position which I held in the Wehrmacht before. As such I was paid. Therefore, I still received the same pay that I had received before from the army. The rank

"Underscharfuehrer" of the SS formation SD is only a rank which was given to me as a member of this SS formation SD, but I was not paid according to it and that did not correspond to my activity, either.

Q. What was therefore decisive for you?

A. Decisive for me was the work. During my studies and also later practially before I became a soldier, I concerned myself with economy only and from the very beginning my aim was -- even after I had become a soldier -- to become an officer in order to be able to take part in an economic unit of the Army. I succeeded in getting one thing, but I could not find a position in an economic unit and therefore I joined the SD, Department of Economy, in order to carry on my profession.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, the Defendant has gone very thoroughly into this same material which he is giving at the present time on his direct examination; about his aims and his training and his reasons for taking a position with the SD. My own opinion is that since this ground has been covered and covered thoroughly, that it serves no point at this particular time. It is in the record it's for consideration of all parties concerned in this case and to go over it at this time merely wastes the time of the court and of the rest of us here.

DR. GAWLIK: May I say something, Your Honor? The witness does not want to repeat anything that has already been stated, but he is supposed to clarify the following point: In the cross-examination he was asked, that it was unusual to be transferred to the SD with a lower rank than he held before and I want to clarify that it was not at all unusual.

That, as far as I remember, was at the end of the cross-examination, the question was, "Wasn't there something unusual." The prosecutor therefore regards it as something unusual that the witness, as a lieutenant in the Wehrmacht, should become a noncommission officer, an untersharfuehrer, in the SD and therefore I want to clarify the reasons why he had himself transferred to the SD. It is only a supplement of the cross-examination and I think that is is admissible in the redirect examination.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, the clarification is entirely in order, but he has already given us that clarification. The very thing which you have just now mentioned was explained by him in detail. The Tribunal itself asked that very question which you have put and the witness replied in great detail. Now it isn't required of him to repeat an explanation, just because in cross-examination it is referred to again.

DR. GAWLIK: May I then put the following question, Your Honor?

Q. (By Dr. Gawlik): Was your rank decisive for the transfer into the SD or was it something else?

A. Decisive was the work and my job as a Department Chief, as an expert for economic questions. I only received the rank later on, although as far as the date goes, the retroactive date is shown as November, but I entered the service as a referent for economic questions. That was decisive.

Q. During the cross-examination it was further discussed -- I am now coming to another point -- whether you remained voluntarily in the SD. I ask you now, after the year 1939, would there have been a possibility for you to leave the SD?

A. No, leaving from the SD was impossible. I never succeeded even, although I applied in applications which I made out immediately after the war, to rejoin my own troop.

Q. Was your membership in the SD therefore after 1 September 1939 voluntary or not?

A. No, it was not voluntary.

Q. Furthermore, in the cross examination it was mentioned that you joined the Einsatzgruppe, and on another occasion the prosecutor asked you concerning your relationship with Ohlendorf, and he stated that you put yourself at the disposal of the Einsatzgruppe. I now ask you: Did you join the Einsatzgruppe or did you put yourself at the disposal of the Einsatzgruppe ?

A. It was a very unequivocal order of command to become chief 3 of an Einsatzgruppe.

Q. In detail mention has been made in the cross examination concerning your work of reporting and you were asked, or it was put to you that you sent reports to Berlin although you did not know whether these reports were true, and there were no further questions put in this connection. I now want to examine you redirectly concerning this question and ask you; in how far could you take a responsibility for the correctness of the reports?

A. In so far as I had to take over the reports from the commandos-

MR. WALTON: This line of questioning is in the nature of a cross examination on a cross examination. Now, if I understand the rules of evidence, the counsel for the defendant can touch on what he wishes to on what came out in direct examination, but to cross examine him on the cross examination is going too far. I want to object to this line of questioning.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I don't think Dr. Gawlik intends to cross examine his own witness. He is of the impression that this matter which was brought out by you in cross examination is not entirely cleared up, and he is permitted to ask some brief questions for a further clarification, but, of course, he may not go into the matter entirely since the witness has already given his explanation. If the witness in any particular instance desires to modify an answer which he has given, to change it, of course, he is privileged to do so, but there is no point in having him repeat what he has already stated.

DR. GAWLIK: In order to clarify this point, Your Honor, I am of the opinion -

THE PRESIDENT: I think it is simpler if you put the question instead of telling me why you are going to put it. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. In how far can you take a guarantee for the correctness of your reports?

A. These reports which are being discussed here, I can take the responsibility for the correct transmission of the reports of the commandos to Berlin, but not for the actual facts which are contained in these reports, or, the facts on which they are based.

Q. Was it your task, and was it your duty to find out and examine the correctness of these facts?

A. It was not my task and I did not regard it as my duty.

Q. If a matter is mentioned in your reports -- does it then become evident that you are responsible for the facts?

A. No, that does not become evident from it. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Let us suppose, Witness, that the report contains a palpable error, something very obviously wrong, would you send it on just the same only because it was reported to you?

A. If it was so obvious, Your Honor, then I would have noticed it while compiling my report. I would not have transmitted it.

Q. And to that extent you would correct the report which was sent on to you by a commando?

A. I could not have done so on my own accord, Your Honor, only the commando leader could have done so. He was to point it out to me.

Q. You would have contacted the commando leader and you would have said to him, "Now, you have reported this, which to me doesn't seem to be in accordance with the facts, now would you please tell me, whether this is right or not", would you do that?

A. I would have done so, Your Honor, if it had happened.

Q. Yes, so that nothing was sent to you which did not appear to be absolutely correct?

A. Well, according to my memory nothing struck me to be particularly out of the usual way that I would have had to clarify it.

Q. To that extent, therefore, you placed your approval on the correctness of the reports sent to you by the commandos?

A. No, Your Honor. I only took the responsibility for the correct incorporation of commando reports into the situation reports.

Q. Now, we are starting to go around a circle. You get a report from a commando, and there is something in this report which doesn't seem to satisfy you as being correct; what do you do, do you send that on to Berlin without inquiry, or do you inquire?

A. I said already that if it had been such a striking instance -

Q. Don't tell me what you said, tell me now, answer that question. You have a report from a commando, it contains something which doesn't seem right, what do you do, do you turn it over to Fritsche, the radio operator, and it goes out, or do you call up the commando leader and discuss it with him?

A. That would certainly have been discussed, Your Honor.

Q. Yes, and then you would have got the real facts?

A. In that case I would have got a correction or an explanation of the commando-leader.

Q. Yes. So, therefore, the reports which you sent in were satisfactory to you insofar as correctness was concerned?

A. In as far as they could satisfy me in my own H.Q., because I did not know the local conditions and local events. If nothing particular struck me.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to call a commando leader and ask him whether a certain item was correct or not?

A. I did not call a commando leader, Your Honor, but it is quite possible that I discussed it with commando leaders in general discussions which we had.

Q. Well, when I said "call in", I meant, did you communicate with him in any way to correct anything which appeared in a report?

A. Yes, providing the case which I have just mentioned, that something extraordinary happened.

Q. Yes, and then after the discussion you got the facts straight and that is what you put into the report?

A. The fact was corrected by the commando leader and then I put it in my report.

Q. So that, therefore, the number of executions reported by you corresponded with the facts?

A. I cannot say that, Your Honor.

Q. Well, then they never struck you as being wrong?

A. No, that never struck me, and it could not strike me, either.

Q. So that regardless of the number which you received, you were satisfied that that number was correct?

A. I had to assume that the figure mentioned by the commando leader was correct, Your Honor.

Q. Well, now, how many executions in all did you actually witness?

A. I only saw those two executions which I mentioned, Your Honor.

Q. In your affidavit you speak of having witnessed two executions while you were with Ohlendorf, but then in the following sentence of that affidavit you said that occasionally you would make inspection trips alone, the same kind of inspection trips which you made with Ohlendorf. On these inspection trips which you made alone did you witness any executions?

A. No, Your Honor. These inspection trips were of the same kind because during those inspections trips which I did with Ohlendorf I did not have to deal with my own work with the commando and, of course, in the last six months there was also the inspection of Tarter companies.

Q. Although I am now going to violate a rule which I imposed a little while ago, I would like to have you tell me now just where were these executions which you witnessed and which you told us about yesterday.

A. The first execution took place in the town, as far as I remember, Petschanka, Your Honor.

Q. Yes, and how many were executed?

A. As far as I remember, four or five people were executed.

Q. And what had they been accused of doing?

A. According to statements of commando fuehrer to the chief of the Einsatzgruppe they were guilty of sabotage.

Q. What was the nature of the sabotage?

A. They had acquired supplies. They had obtained supplies illegally, and they also burned a barn. That is what I remember, Your Honor.

Q. And in the second case how many were executed?

A. Again five or six cases.

Q. You are sure that is the number?

A. Well, anyway there couldn't have been more than six, Your Honor.

Q. What did you tell us yesterday how many were executed?

A. Again I can only have said the number five or six, Your Honor.

Q. And what did they do -- the victims?

A. They were looters who for that reason were shot.

Q. That was the nationality of these victims?

A. I am not able to say, Your Honor.

Q. Did you not make any inquiry?

A. No.

Q. How long were you in the Crimea with Einsatzgruppe D?

A. In the Crimea, Your Honor?

Q. Well, how long were you with the Einsatzgruppe?

A. If I don't count the interruptions when I was in Berlin, it was about 10 months.

Q. When did you join the Einsatzgruppe?

A. Approximately in the middle of June 1941 I was detailed, so I was with it from the very beginning.

Q. Yes. When did you go to Berlin?

A. Approximately the middle of November 1941, and I returned on Christmas Eve, on the 24th of December 1941. I was able to join a Christmas celebration. I can remember this exactly because I could give some members the mail from their families.

Q. You know that Schubert made an affidavit in which he said that you ordered him to conduct some executions, about this time?

A. I know this affidavit, yes.

Q. Do you have any explanation of how he could have made this mistake?

A. I can find no explanation, Your Honor, because I never gave him such an order, and this particular one I couldn't have given him at all, because I was not then in Russia.

Q. You mean you weren't in Russia at that time?

A. Yes, Your Honor.

Q. Now, when you first began to testify you said from 1936 to the end of the war you were not active in any other department but Department 3, is that correct?

A. That is correct, Your Honor.

Q. Well, you have been telling us how you organized motor units, how you trained infantrymen, how you participated in a combat action which won for you the Iron Cross, how you led a detachment in partisan warfare -- does that all come under Department 3 of Economics?

A. No, that is not part of the Department 3, Your Honor.

Q. Well then how do you reconcile all these activities with the scholastic preparation of reports on economics?

A. I can justify it by the fact that the chief of the Einsatzgruppe entrusted me with this particular department in addition, and secondly my assignments and my work with the Tartar companies were done on direct order of the 11th Army.

Q. Well, then your statement that you were active only in Department 3 is incorrect?

A. No, Your Honor, I was active in Department 3 from 1936 until the middle of June 1941, and after return from my assignment in Russia until the end of the war.

Q. Then the transcript must be wrong or my recollection must be wrong because I distinctly wrote in my notes that you said from 1936 to the end of the war you were not active in any other department but Department 3, At any rate, you say that is incorrect?

A. No, your Honor, according to my recollection I said, "apart from the Russian assignment, I was from 1936 to the end of the war that I was active in Office 3."

Q. Then, while you were in Russia you were active in other departments, above Department 3?

A. I received the additional assignments which I carried out, yes, Your Honor.

Q. Yes, so when you wrote up your reports, you were writing on matters other than Department 3, is that right?

A. Yes, yes, that happened.

Q. Yes, so that when in your report of October 9 you begin a paragraph with the phrase, "Apart from the settlement of the Jewish problem, searches for and the apprehension of partisans played a considerable role," which contained a reference to the settlement of the Jewish problem?

A. Yes, that was known to me, Your Honor.

Q. You know that Jews were being executed?

A. Yes, Your Honor.

Q. And when you signed that report you signed it with the full knowledge of the implications in those statement?

A. I beg your pardon, I don't quite understand the question, Your Honor.

Q. When you signed the report which contained a reference to the settlement of the Jewish problem, you were aware that the settlement of the Jewish problem meant the execution of Jews?

A. That did not have to be the case, Your Honor, because in the country Jews were not executed, or at least during the first time; they were assigned to labor, and then they were collected for such purpose, and, of course, Jews were also executed.

Q. Eventually they were executed?

A. Yes, that is probably the case, Your Honor.

Q. And when you signed the report which contained the phrase, "The Crimea is freed of Jews," you knew what had happened to the Jews?

A. Yes, I knew that.

Q. And when you signed the report which contained the statement, "In the southwestern part of the Crimea, a number of villages known as the very strongholds of the Communists were cleaned," you knew that that meant liquidation?

A. "The strongholds were cleaned", that did not necessarily mean that that meant liquidation, Your Honor, because I could only see what actually was mentioned in the reports which had been given to me by the Commando.

Q. You made one statement which requires a little clarification. In cross examination a question was put which elicited from you the statement that you could not say where murder began and murder ended. Do you recall having made that statement?

A. Yes, in connection with the ideological war events, as it showed as a climax during the last World War.

Q. Well, do you intend to have the Tribunal understand that you were unable to distinguish between murder and lawful killing?

A. I am aware of the difference, Your Honor, but I was asked for the expression "murder"; and I wanted to explain that I really was at a loss how I am to begin. It was a question which I couldn't answer, at the moment, Your Honor,

Q. Well, let us put the question very simply. Suppose an individual is arrested, no charge of crime is brought against him, and he is taken out and shot. Not a word of evidence is introduced to show that this person was deserving a death because of the commission of a crime. Would you call that murder?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes, now, let us suppose that a person is arrested, and the only thing that is said about him is that he is a Jew, and he is killed. Would you call that murder?

A. If the order is non-existent, that the Jews were to be killed for some reason, in that case it is murder.

Q. Would you kindly repeat that answer, Mr. Interpreter, I didn't quite catch it.

A. If the order is not in existence that for some reason or other the Jew was to be killed, giving a certain reason, in that case it is murder.

Q. Then, if there is an order that this man must be executed only because he is a Jew, then it is not murder, is that what you tell us?

A. I am not a lawyer, I understand this to be "killing by order", Your Honor.

Q. If someone in Berlin, several thousand miles away, says that every Jew found must be exterminated, and that is done, do you call that murder or not?

A. If it is being said by a man who does not hold the competence to give an unambiguous order, in that case it is murder.

Q. Well, let us say that this man is a Fuehrer, let us say he happens to be Adolf Hitler, and he issues an order, that every Jew must be killed.

You are in the Crimea, thousands of miles away, and you see a half dozen SS-men grab a child, and they say, "This child is a Jew." Let's say a boy 12 years of age, and it is proved he is a Jew, and they shoot this child down. Is that or is that not murder according to you?

A. That is "killing by order," Your Honor.

Q. Then it is not murder?

A. I may add again, I am not a lawyer. According to my knowledge, I consider it killing on express orders.

Q. If you had to give an answer, you would say under those circumstances it is not murder?

A. Well, if this order is in existence, in my opinion it is not murder.

Q. Very well, then, you do know where murder begins and murder ends, at least, you have a code.

A. This general conception, of course, I have but I don't know whether it is legally absolutely well defined or whether it is exactly correct.

Q. Are you familiar with the German law that one is not excused if he executes an order which he knows to be criminal? Are you familiar with that law?

A. I beg your pardon, may I have the question repeated, Your Honor, I did not quite understand it.

Q. Are you familiar with that section of the German Military Code which says that anyone who executes an order, knowing it to be criminal, will not be absolved, from blame?

A. Yes, I know that.

Q. So therefore you stake everything on your answer that anyone executing the Fuehrer order does it because it is a superior order and because in his conscience it is not a crime?

A. I say that if he carries it out he carries it out because this order exists....perhaps in spite of his inner attitude against it.

Q. Then he is absolved from blame, is that what you intend to tell us?

A. In my opinion he cannot be blamed if an authorized man as a head of a state gives an unambiguous order....then the man who gives the order can be made responsible because only he had the knowledge and the basic material which led him to give such an order.

Q. And in your estimation the one who executes the order is entirely freed of blame?

A. I can only say yes, Your Honor.

Q. And you are aware that that is in conflict with the German Military Code?

A. No, that I cannot say, for I could not tell you the wording, Your Honor.

Q. All right then---

A. I could never state actually the wording because I am not --I don't know the German Penal codes very well.

Q. Well, I'll read it to you:

"If the execution of a military order in the course of duty violates the criminal law, then the superior officer giving the order will bear the sole responsibility therefor. However, the obeying subordinates will share the punishment of the participant (1) if he has exceeded the order given to him, or (2) it was within his knowledge that the order of his superior officer concerned an act by which it was intended to commit a civil or military crime or transgression."

A. Your Honor, if the man is unable to recognize that such a civilian or military offense or crime is not being committed, then it does not refer to him - according to my view.

Q. You think that five men about to kill a twelve-year-old Jewish boy would not know that this, in civil law, is a crime?

A. If there is an order by the head of the state in existence, that for reasons of security such a shooting has to be carried out, then I cannot say it to be murder, but I must modify here...I am not a lawyer...it may be I am quite unable to answer the question as it is beyond my legal knowledge.

A. Then you are entirely satisfied that since the order was issued by the head of the state and he declared it was for security reasons, then you were satisfied that it was entirely proper to execute the order?

A. No, Your Honor, I did not think it proper.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, you may carry on. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Witness, in the decree mentioned by the president, paragraph 47 of the Military Penal Code, it says, "Superior Officer". Was Hitler a "superior officer?"

A. Yes, Hitler was the supreme commander of the Wehrmacht.

Q. Was he an officer in this particular sense?

A. Of course, he was never actually connected directly with the events - and of course he was not the officer who is meant in this particular case.

Q. Well, what case is meant by paragraph 47 of the Military Penal Code? Do you know the provision at all, or do you not know it?

A. Well, of course I don't know it so well that I could explain it here. Anyway, I cannot remember it now....I am sure I used to know it.

Q. Can you tell the Tribunal what legal significance an order of Hitler had?

A. In my point of view an order by Hitler as the head of the state was law; it was corresponding to a law.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Hildesheimer, you said Himmler....You meant Hitler?

INTERPRETER: I am sorry. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. And according to that, witness, regardless of what Hitler said, it was a law?

A. No, not that. But orders widen were given by him unambiguously I as a layman, of course, consider them to be law.

Q. Regardless of what the subject, an order issued by Hitler would be law?

A. The order of the head of State, Hitler, is equivalent to a law, in my opinion, as I have said.

Q. Well, let us suppose you received an order directly from Hitler....it came down the line of command.....that you were to execute the chief of the Einsatzgruppe. Would you execute that order?

A. No. I would have been open for punishment.

Q. You would have been open for punishment. If you executed it?

A. No, I would not have carried it out. No, I would have put myself at the disposal for punishment.

Q. You would not have carried it out?

A. (No answer.)

Q. Well, then suppose you received an order to shoot a 12-yearold Jew. Would you shoot him?

A. Your Honor, I cannot possibly answer to such an isolated example I cannot say, what my psychological reaction would have been, because on the one hand there is the inexorability of an order, and on the other hand there is the pity for the child...which I think I feel also as a decent human being, so that I could never have carried it out.

Q. You had not trouble in answering that you would have refused to shoot Ohlendorf, but you do have some hesitancy in saying whether you would have refused to shoot a Jewish boy of twelve. And the answer, would you say, is that Ohlendorf means something to you, but a 12-year-old Jewish lad means nothing - except the abstract inhumanity of wiping out an innocent child?

A. No, this is not what I want to say, Your Honor. It is quite possible that my psychological reaction was such that I would not have been able to carry it out.

Q. In your affidavit, which is NO-2859, I find this statement: "During the time that Ohlendorf was on trips, officially or otherwise, I signed all reports." That is correct, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. "The reports which I signed in the capacity of his deputy were signed with 'I.V."---"By Order".....is that correct?

A. Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: All right. Proceed, Dr. Gawlik. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Witness, do you remember a maxim of a German Kaiser concerning the execution of orders by soldiers?

A. I don't know whether it was William the First or William the Second, but any how one Kaiser, Emperor, used the expression "If the military situation or the entire situation makes it necessary, a soldier has to execute an order even if he would have to shoot at his own parents." BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. And you subscribe to that? You believe that?

A. That is a question I cannot answer.

Q. Well, your attorney certainly put it to you for the purpose of obtaining an approval, or otherwise he would not have put it. What is the purpose of putting this if you don't intend to put it into effect?

Now this unknown William declared that if the situation called for it, that you would shoot your own parents. Now, does Willian Seibert agree to that?

A. I understand the question, and also my answer to the effect, Your Honor, that perhaps from that it becomes evident what an order : meant in Germany, and, of course, especially in the Wehrmacht --what tremendous significance it held. It has not to be regarded literally, or at least not in my opinion, and it is a state of affairs which, according to my own opinion ----Q. Q. Do you agree with it, or not? Do you agree with that statement which Dr. Gawlik asked you to quote? Do you agree with it or not?

A. Your Honor, I cannot answer this in so isolated a manner. If the military situation requires it, or some special situation ---it can come to that.

Q. Then you agree with the Willian who issued that statement?

A. I don't want to say that. I only understand it to the effect, Your Honor, that if regarded by a foreigner - the exaggerated importance of an order is conveyed to him.

Q. Well, this emperor was a German, wasn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. William the First, or William the Second?

A. Yes.

Q. And he made this statement?

A. According to my memory, yes.

Q. Yes. Well, is anyone authorized to assume that he was telling the truth, and that he meant it?

A. Your Honor, it cannot have been meant that somebody would have found himself in the situation to shoot his parents at some time in the near future.

A. Your Honor, It cannot have been meant that somebody will have to shoot his parents in the near future.

Q. Then the first William or the second did not mean this when he said it?

A. I cannot say personally what he meant exactly, but in my opinion...

Q. Now you tell me what you mean by it. Do you accept it or not?

A. I, myself, regard this declaration merely for expressing to the soldiers what significance an order has the troops and that obedience and discipline are the main ties of a fighting unit, and if this tie is loosened then the unit is no longer of value.

Q. Then you tell us that this statement was not supposed to be obeyed, if the situation called for it?

A. I can only understand it so as I have just said it now, Your Honor.

Q. Well now you have given us a lot of words but you haven't answered the question. Of your own volition you quoted this. The Court didn't quote it; it wasn't in the testimony. Now if you quote something you will either have to stand by it or repudiate it. Now the question is very specific. This statement which you have quoted is to the effect that in the German army it is understood that if the military or situation--whatever nature--calls for it, that a soldier must shoot his own parents if he is ordered to do so. Now do you accept that or not? You have had enough time to give us the explanation. Now give us the answer. Do you accept this or you do not accept it as a fact? If it is meaningless, if it's just a lot of words thrown together without any intention of impressing anyone with its veracity, then say so; but if it's intended to be obeyed, then say so.

Then we will get a clarification of this.

A. In my opinion this declaration was a made in order to create an impression.

Q. But not to be obeyed literally?

A. That depends on the circumstances.

Q. Well, let us suppose a situation where your superior officer tells you that the situation is such that the only way we can get out of it is for you to shoot your parents. Now that's an order. All right, now, are you going to live up to William the first or William the second, or not?

A. In this situation it would have to be obeyed, Your Honor.

Q. You would shoot your own parents if the situation required it?

A. In so far I would have my psychological reaction, and I do not know whether based on this psychological reaction I carry out the order which has to be obeyed or whether I subject myself to punishment.

Q. Now you must answer the question. If the military situation is such that the only way you can be saved according to what your officer tells you is to shoot your parents, will you shoot them or not?

A. I cannot answer such a question, Your Honor, in such a short time. That is a psychological struggle that I am not in a position to say yes or no.

Q. Would you be ready to answer it tomorrow morning?

A. I don't know, Your Honor.

Q. Well, we will give him until tomorrow morning to think it over. at nine-thirty.

(The Tribunal adjourned until 20 November 1947 at 0930 hours.)

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal No.II Military Tribunal No. II is now in session. God save the United States of America and this Honorable Tribunal.

DR. HOFFMANN (Attorney for the defendant Nosske): Your Honor, I should like the defendant Nosske to be excused this afternoon and during the whole day tomorrow in order to be able to prepare his defense.

THE PRESIDENT: The Defendant Nosske will be excused from attendance in court this afternoon and all day tomorrow, in order that he may confer with his counsel.

Dr. Gawlik, yesterday afternoon, just before the adjournment, the witness was being examined on a matter which was mentioned by you and by him and we will refer to that examination. BY THE PRESIDENT:

"Q Witness, I am now reading from the transcript of yesterday's session, on page 5 of Take 23 appears the following: "By Dr. Gawlik:

"Q Witness, do you remember a proverb said by a German Kaiser concerning the carrying out of orders by soldiers?

"A I do not know whether it was William I or William II, but certainly one Kaiser-Emperor used the expression, 'If the military situation or the entire situation makes it necessary, a soldier has to carry out an order, even if he has to shoot his own parents'". Now, Witness, you are a German soldier, are you not, or, were?

of the German Empire at the time, the military situation made it necessary for you, after receiving an order to that effect from a superior officer, to shoot your own parents, would you do so?

A Mr. President, I would not do so. which may be disobeyed? State but as a symbolic example towards the whole soldiery how far obedience had to go, but never actually asking a son to shoot his own parents. I imagine it only as follows, Your Honor; if I am an artillery officer in the war and I have to fire at a very important sector, which is decisive for the whole military situation and I receive the order to fire at a certain village and I know that in this village my parents are living, then I would have to shoot at this village. This is the only way in which I can imagine this order, but never -- it is inhuman -- to ask a son to shoot his parents. the line, you would disincline to obey it. You would not obey it. someone else, let us say, a Jew and his wife, and in your view you see the children of these parents. Now, it is established beyond any doubt that this Jewish father and Jewish mother have not committed any crime, absolutely guiltless,blemishless. The only thing that is established is that they are Jews and you have this order coming down the line to shoot these parents. The children are standing by and they implore you not to shoot their parents. Would you shoot the parents? Jews indiscriminately did not have to be obeyed by the German soldiers in your estimation?

war, in the combat against Bolshevism, in which two countries fight each other and try to destroy each other and disregard all customs of war and all laws of war - and they were disobeyed on both sides in the totality of this event it was a matter of life and death, which was said quite clearly on both sides;

now, in the totality of this event an order by the Supreme Commander is given; in that case it must be carried out by the soldiers, Your Honor, but I would never have carried out an order if the order had been given to me to shoot these parents, just because they were Jews.

Q Yes, now you had a certain rank in the German Armed Forced. You were a Lt. Colonel, was it? rank in the SS was Lt. Colonel?

Q You were a full colonel, is that right? A full colonel is a very high rank in the Armed Forces. It is next to General. a colonel as an official and a colonal as an active officer. I had never had the training nor the ability, for that matter, to be an active colonel and I was never promoted to such or, at least, comparable to one in the active Wehrmacht.

Q But you had the training as a German officer? that is an order were submitted to you, coming down the line militarily to execute two innocent parents only because they were Jews, you would refuse to obey that order?

A Your Honor, I answered your example affirmatively. I said, "Yes, I could not have obeyed."

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, you may proceed, Dr. Gawlik.

BY DR. GAWLIK: in the cross-examination. I want to confirm this quite clearly for the record. Did you have to pass on any order from General Schober to Ohlendorf? he was arresting hostages in order to shoot them under the slightest pretext.

Q That is enough. That will suffice for your answer. By whom were these hostages to be arrested?

A He did not say that. He said, "I shall have hostages arrested."

Q I now come to another point. To whom was the order given, Ohlendorf's order, that the figures were not to be exaggerated? could only be directed to the kommando leaders in whose kommandos orders had to be obeyed.

DR. GAWLIK: I am sorry, Your Honor, it is from Document Book III-D, page 72 of the German, Document NOKW-628.

Q (C ontinued* That, as I say, was mentioned again and I have a few questions to put in connection with it. May I just have the document handed to you? the G-2, which you were asked about in the cross -examination.

DR. GAWLIK: It is page 1 of the original, Your Honor.

Q (Continued): Was it necessary that you give your approval to the agreement between the Special Kommando 10-B and the G-2? report that the Crimea was actually cleared of Jews was correct?

Q What was your task? have them passed on to the offices to which they went. Communists. Was it your task to check up for what reasons these Communists were made harmless? showed that in Luki the inhabitants were being taken, care of, was it your task to take care of the accommodation of the inhabitants of the village of Luki? action to be carried out. housing of these inhabitants?

A I would have only found out about it after weeks. I would not have had the possibility before. of the original, II, the report about the further assignments which were planned. Was it your task to order the further assignments of the kommandos?

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, the prosecution desires to object to the form of the questions. He is putting the answer in the witness mouth. While this was gone over and I know he has the right to recover it in redirect examination, to ask a question, "Was it your task to make future assignments with the Einsatzgruppe", to me it seems the proper form of the question would be. "What was your task with regard to the future assignments".

DR. GAWLIK: May I now say something, Your Honor? As far as I am informed, a question that can be answered with yes or no is not a leading question.

I must here guide the witness, If I put the questions as it is suggested by the prosecutor, "What was your task", in that case, of course, it will take the witness a half an hour to answer it, and it is only in the way of completing the story and a matter of saving time. Otherwise there would be no possibility to guide the witness.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Gawlik, you are laboring under a very serious misimpression if you think that the test of a leading question is whether it can be answered yes or No. That is not the test, and I will give you an illustration. Suppose I say to you, "Dr. Gawlik, are you a smart and brilliant lawyer?" I would naturally suggest the answer which would undoubtedly be correct and would be yes. It is not the test if it can be answered yes or no. The test is whether the question in itself suggests the answer, and, if you say to your client here that "Was it your duty to make assignments for these kommandos", in view of what has already been stated with regard to this defendant, it is very obvious what the answer should be, so far as you are concerned. You must not suggest to the witness the answer. Gawlik. You covered that in your direct examination. The witness had an opportunity to explain further in cross-examination. Now nothing is served in going over it again. If, in the cross-examination, some doubts have arisen which need to be clarified, then you may direct your question to those doubts. Figure 2 had not been accepted?

A You mean, not accepted by the Army?

cerning your own activity in this report. Do you have anything to add to your answer which you gave during your cross-examination.

A May I just ask for one moment, I haven't the report in front of me.

Q I shall put the question a different way: In what reports did you report about your activity? my activity as the Director of Department III.

Q To what authorities?

Q I now come to the point of gas vans. Did you ask for the gas van?

Who had asked for the gas van?

A I do not know. I did not ask for it.

Q Who was responsible for the upkeep of the gas van? responsible.

Q Was that one of your tasks? Did you ever give any orders for the distribution of the clothing? Who was responsible for any difficulties which might crop up, economic difficulties, that is of the Ethnic Germans? that is, in which these Ethnic German settlements were situated. obtain clothing for Ethnic Germans? because that was not within the field of activities of an intelligence officer.

Q. I now come to the point: Valuables. Did you ever take part in collecting watches and valuables?

A. No. I never took part in it.

Q. Did you ever make any decisions in their distributions?

A. No. I never did. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q? Witness, did you know about the watches that Ohlendorf had at headquarters, taken from executed people?

A. Yes, I heard about that.

Q. And you know what distribution was made of these watches?

A. I know that these watches were asked for by the army. They were requested in a letter, and I must assume that they were delivered to the Army, Your Honor. If and when they actually arrived, or whether the administrative officer had to report that they had been deposited at a bank - that I don't know. BY DR. GAWLIK:

Q. Now I come to the point which has been mentioned in the cross examination, which you mentioned: "Acting For", I submit to you Seibert Document 1. of the Department Chief of III-A?

A. He signed "Acting For" -- "I.V."

Q. Was he thus the representative for the whole office?

A. No, he was only the representative for his own field of activity, III-A.

Q. What was the significance of your own signature when you signed "Acting For" -- "I.V." - for the Einsatzgruppe?

A. It had the same significance which I have just now mentioned.

Q. Now I come to document NO-3414 in Document Book I, page 62, To whom is this decree immediately addressed? Please give a general answer. Not the individual agencies.

A. The decree was directed to the commanders of the Security Police and to a few state police agencies, names that are mentioned here.

Q. What does that show concerning this decree?

A. That the assignments had to be carried out by those agencies which are mentioned here.

Q. How was the decree addressed to the Einsatzgruppen?

A. To the Einxatzgruppen it went for their information.

Q. Please explain to the Tribunal what "information" means in this respect.

A. The difference wasoften made when orders were concerned; in the distribution list, it said first to this and this agency that meant for compliance; secondly, it went for information - that meant for the information of all concerned.

DR. GAWLIK: Thank you, Your Honor, I have no further questions.

THE PRESIDENT: ...Oh, pardon me. Yes, Dr. Hoffmann?

DR. HOFFMANN: Your Honor, may I now ask my questions of the witness, or shall I do so after you have asked your questions?

THE PRESIDENT: No. The Tribunal has no further questions. You may ask.

DR. HOFFMANN: Witness, the Prosecutor in the corss-examination yesterday asked you about a report which had gone to AOK II from February to March, and in which the activities of the Einsatzkommando 12 are mentioned, Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. In this report it says that because of bad conditions due to snow, AOK 12 could not go into action, but that its activities would be resumed very shortly. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, I remember.

Q. You then pointed out that in this report, no executions are mentioned.

I now ask you, according to your own experiences.... if, in a report, no executions are mentioned concerning the period of time of the report, does that mean that no executions had taken place, or were they just not reported?

A. I can only say that from the picture I get from this report, I think it must be that they did not take place. I don't know whether this is due to an oversight or whether they were not reported for some reason, but to me it would mean that none took place.

Q. Did every Einsatzkommando leader have to report his executions, or didn't he have to do so?

A. Obviously he had to report them, not only his own executions, but he also had to report all happenings in the entire sector.

Q. In that case the leader of Kommando 12 would have acted against orders if he had not reported executions which had taken place there?

A. If in this report no executions were mentioned, and they had been carried out, in that case he would have acted against orders.

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, with this I have for the time being, completed my presentation of evidence in the case of Seibert. I would like to reserve the right to submit documents later.

THE PRESIDENT: That right will be reserved.

MR. WALTON: May it please the Tribunal, I should like to put a very few questions to the defendant.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, Proceed. BY MR. WALTON:

Q. Colonel, I should appreciate it if you would turn to Document Book I, page 93 of the German, page 71 in the English, your Honors -- to Document NO-3422, which is Prosecution Exhibit 19. Will you indicate, please, Colonel, when you have found the place?

A. Page 93, Mr. Prosecutor, German text?

Q. 93.

A. Yes, I have found that page.

DR. GAWLIK: I object to this question, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: He hasn't put a question yet. What question are you objecting to?

DR. GAWLIK: I object to any question that might refer to this document, because the re-cross examination-

THE PRESIDENT: You say you object to any question he might put regarding this document. Suppose the question which he will put shows that your client is innocent? Would you object to that?

DR GAWLIK: All right, I shall wait. I shall wait for that.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Mr. Walton. BY MR. WALTON:

Q. This document is an Operations order which had a subsequent date than the one you have just testified was distributed to the Einsatzgruppen for information....is it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Also, this is a directive for the purging of prisoner of war camps and the transit camps containing Soviet prisoners of war -- the same subject as the other documents.....is that not true?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, right at the bottom of page one of the original it says that the Einsatzgruppen will immediately detail Sonderkommandos in appropriate strength under the command of an SS-officer....that is said in the document, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, down at the distribution list....is this distribution made for information to the Einsatzgruppen, according to the face of the document?

A. No, Mr. Prosecutor. This is just the opposite example. The distribution list says first to the Einsatzgruppen, and the Einsatz kommandos; and secondly for information, to the higher SS and police leader.

Q. All right. Now, then, it is reasonable to suppose from the face of this document that this Operation order was sent to these named Einsatzgruppen for compliance, or for execution....is it not?

A. It becomes ecident from the distribution list that this order went to the Einsatzgruppen and the Einsatzkommandos.

Q. Did you ever see a copy of this order?

A. I have already said that I cannot ever say whether I read this particular order or not.

Q. Do you remember whether or not you ever took any action in connection with this order?

DR. GAWLIK: Your Honor, I object to this type of questioning. The questions, in my opinion, may only refer to the document which was mentioned by myself, because the re-cross examination can only refer to my re-direct examination. Only in this connection could questions be put in the re-cross examination, but these questions exceed that limit.

THE PRESIDENT: Mr. Walton, was this document referred to by Dr. Gawlik in the re-direct examination?

MR. WALTON: No, Your Honor, but this is part of the same story. It would be like referring to one paragraph in a story, and not getting the complete story.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you have the opportunity to cross-examine him on this when you had the defendant for cross-examination?

MR. WALTON: I didn't intend to go further than the question which I just asked and which he has answered. I am through at the present time.

THE PRESIDENT: Your objection is sustained, Dr. Gawlik. The witness, Willy Seibert, will be returned to the defendants' box; and the witness Biberstein will be taken to the witness box.

follows:

JUDGE SPAIGHT: Defendant, please raise your right hand and repeat after me: speak the pure truth and will withhold and add nothing.

(The witness repeated the oath.)

JUDGE SPAIGHT: You may be seated.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honors, before I begin with the direct examination of the defendant Biberstein I would like to submit my Document Book. It only contains three numbers. English , has not been received by him. It has been turned ever to me, in the English, and I was told that it had been submitted to the Tribunal and, to the prosecution, and I assumed that I could rely on this.

MR. HORLIK- HOCHWALD: The Prosecution hasnot received the Document Book yet. However, if Dr. Bergold is in a position to hand the English copy to me, which possibly he has, for a short examination, I will have no objection to his presenting this Document Book now.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, the Tribunal has your Document Book, so there is no reason why you can't immediately proceed. Mr. Hochwald can be scrutinizing it as we go along.

MR. HORLIK-HOCHWALD I have just received a copy.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Yes You proceed, Dr. Bergold.

DR. BERGOLD: I submit from my Document Book, Document No. 1, Exhibit No. 1. This is an excerpt from the Defense Exhibit 52 in Case II against Erhard Milch, and concerns the examination of Mr. Neurath. Your Honor will remember that since he was present at the examination.

As Exhibit No. 2, Document No. 2, I now submit an excerpt from the German General Lexikon, that is the Encyclopedia, and waspublished in 1926, by Meyer. It concerns the types of executions which are customary in the more important states of the world. In my final plea I shall come back to that.

And as the last, No. 3, I submit Document No. 3, Exhibit 3, the affidavit of the defendant Biberstein which he gave in Eselheide. This is an excerpt which I received from the Prosecution itself. Your Honor will remember that I asked for it at the time. BY DR. BERGOLD:

Q. Witness, what is your name; when and where you you born?

A. My name is Ernst Emil Heinrich Biberstein. I was born on the 15th of February 1899 in Hilchenbach, that is in the District Siegen, in Westphalia.

Q. Did you always carry the name Biberstein?

A. No, I used to have another name. My name used to be ... I now spell it: S-z-y-m-a-n-o-w-s-k-i- , Szymanowski.

Q. Why did you change your name?

A. When I just mentioned my former name now, I spelled it in order to go the safe way. I always had to do that because otherwise this name as always misspelled. Apart from that, A German could never pronounce the name properly. I always had quite a bit of trouble with it. My family was originally German, and I knew an old German name which goes back to 938. What is more understandable than having the express wish of adopting this old family name? In 1939 there was an order issued by the Party that all foreign-sounding names should be changed into German names. This decree was not actually carried out because of the outbreak of the war. In 1941 I used a very favorable opportunity to apply for a change of name, under the pretext that I had received an order to do so. Thus it came about that my name was changed on the 9th of June 1941 by a decree of the Police President of Berlin.

Q. Were there any other reasons why you changed your name?

A. No, there were no other reasons.

Q. Who were your parents?

A. My father was a railway official. At the last he was Reichbahnrat, that means, Reich Railway Counsel, and came from an old artisan family. My mother is nee Giesler, and comes from a family of officials and farmers.

Q. Do you have any brothers or sisters?

A. Yes, I had a younger brother who was an artist by profession. As he was lame, he never became a soldier. On Christmas Eve 1943 when he tried to save victims of the bombs in Berlin, he was killed in an air attack on Berlin.

Q. What special impressions did your parents give you?

A. I was educated in a Prussian family of officials. I learned to know and to esteem all the virtues which once made Prussia one of the most orderly, and best states in Germany. I learned respect for God, obedience and faithfulness towards the State leadership, decency and honesty and conscientiousness in my profession and in my life. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Why do you say, witness, that Prussia was one of the best states in Germany?

A. I said best organized, your Honor.

Q. Oh -

A. I must attach particular value to the order in public life and in the life of the population.

Q. Well, her was it better organized then Bavaria, for instance?

A. Well, it is well-known that the Prussian state was very painstaking in keeping order and organizing matters, in a manner which was not usual -- or at least not to that extent in other states.

Q. You mean it was well known in Prussia?

A. No, no.

Q. You think a Bavarian would admit that Prussia was better organized?

A. I don't know that. That is a kind of local patriotism which, of course, would not admit that this was so.

DR. BERGOLD: If I may say something, your Honor ... we Bavarians -- we were convinced that Prussia was better organized. We Bavarians are of the conviction that we lead a more cozy and freer life. That has always been our conviction.

THE PRESIDENT: In view of the admission by the Senator from Bavaria, the statement will stand uncontradicted.

DR. BERGOLD: I now return to my question, your Honor.

Q. Witness, I would advise you to put on your earphones, because suddenly a question comes from the Tribunal and you are not ready.

What schools did you go to?

A. After going to elementary shcool from 1905 to 1908 I graduated from the Humanistic Gymnasium in Muehlheim-Holstein, which is a secondary school. In 1917 I graduated, as the best in my class.

Q. What profession did you take up?

A. I intended to study Protestant Theology.

Q. What were the reasons for this?

A. From the time that I went to school I intended to do so; it had been decided by my parents that I should become a clergyman. It was the quiet wish of my mother, although It was hardly ever discussed in the family; and I respected this profession, although I was awed by it. In the secondary school I learned the Hebrew language.

Q. What did you do in spring 1917?

A. I matriculated at the University of Kiel as a student of theology, and I applied for my first semester; but on the 16th of June 1917 I was drafted into the Army and I took part in the defensive fights as an Infantryman until the end of the first World War.

Q. What effect did the war experience have on you, especially in the choice of your professional training?

A. The fact that I would have to take part in the war made me -especially during the last years of school -- conscious of establishing a particularly intimate relation to God. I remember extremely well my experiences and my feelings at that time, because they became basic for my whole life.

of mind I took part in the war; these war experiences fortified my belief in God especially, and also, therefore, my decision to continue with my theological studies.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't quite follow that, Witness. You say that your experiences in the war fortified your vows to the Supreme Being. That is not quite clear to me.

THE WITNESS: Yes, the experiences I had as a soldier have fortified me in my relationship to God, my personal experiences.

THE PRESIDENT: Your experiences in the war made you all the more religious, is that what you are telling us?

THE WITNESS: No, all I wanted to sap is that my own personal experiences as far as guidance and protection go, fortified me in my belief in God.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, did you believe in God before you went into the war?

THE WITNESS: As I said, I did. I already said the thought of my having to take part in the war made me look for and find a relationship to God which I found at that time became even fortified through the fact that I was saved in the war. It was fortified through this very fact.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Dr. Bergold) Did you want to become a pastor, a clergyman, or did you have other plans?

A. When in 1919 I resumed my theological studies in Kiel I intended to become a clergyman, but the meeting with the professor of theological studies of the Old Testament,Dr. Salinawakened other wishes in me. His simple manner, his activity and his teaching fascinated me so much that I specialized more and more in the Old Testament. In a successful work on an academical paper, in which I dealt with the influence of Egyptian religion on the Jewish race, I drew professor Salin's attention to my work.

I became his pupil, and I studied Assyrian and Babylonic history, their life and their writing, and Arabic. As an aim I had a lectureship for ancient Oriental languages, history and history of religion. Inflation put an end to this plan. Apart from that the salary as a private lecturer was so small that it made marraige impossible, or at least for the time being. Thus I was forced to lock for another job in order to find a firm basis for my existence.

Q. Will you now tell us of your life from university days until you were first ordained?

A. I shall be brief. After six semesters (terms) of theological studies, on the 29th of April, 1922, I graduated in Kiel, and I passed my first theological examination. Then I got some practical training which consisted of attending classes at the theological preachers seminary, in Pretsch in Holstein, which lasted for six months, and in the so-called training vicarage with the dean in Neumunster in Holstein. After this period of practical training I passed on the 23rd of October, 1923, the second practical theological examination. As this profession was very much filled up, I was without a job for one year. On the 9th of November 1924, I was ordained as a pastor in Kiel, and after that I became alocal vicar, as a deputy of the regular pastor who had become ill, and I was sent to Angeln near Flensburg, On the 24th of September, 1925, I was elected the pastor of the small community Kasing, near Tonning at the Eider River, which is at the west coast of SchleswigHolstein. This was my first permanent job. I married in January, 19241925, and I have three children.

Q. Did you give up your scientific plans?

A. First I was, of course, taken in completely by my duties of the vicarage. Then I again became interested in the ancient Orient and in the Old Testament, and especially when in 1926 in Berlin, I accidentally met Professor Salin - in front of the university, who had been called to Berlin in 1922. He asked me to take up my habilitation, and I asked for my literature thesis in Kiel entitled, "The language of the Book of Hiob."

But I had no intellectual stimulus living in the country. Apart from that, I went through a psychological change under the influence of the NSDAP. Those questions and problems of many kinds which were my field of interest, cropping up in the ancient Orient, I recognized more and more that we Germans, apart from the scientific interest in other parts of the world, we neglected and forgot our own little piece of the world. I turned my interests to the German home history, and the European pre-history, especially the old Germanic religious history in myth, saga and fairy tale, It took all my attention. And in this frame there was also genealogy, which also had taken my interest when I was a student. Thus it came about that I lost interest in my scientific works dealing with the Orient, and I became more and more interested in the subjects which I have just mentioned, the subjects concerning the German man in history and the present.

Q. When did you join the NSDAP?

A. On the 19th of July, 1926.

Q. Will you make a small interruption, Witness, so that the interpreter has the chance to translate the sentences? How did it come about that you joined the NSDAP?

A. My very religious mother, who had died who had never cared very much about politics formerly, asked me at the beginning of the 20's to subscribe to the Voelkischer Beobachter, which was then a weekly. It was my first contact with National Socialism. My father was at that time a leading member of the Social Democrat Party in Neumuenster, and he tried to win me over into this party. Through my mother, in contact with the Voelkischer Beobachter, it came about that my father, as well as myself, got very interested in this young party. My father joined the party in 1925. The following ideological thoughts made me join in 1926: collapse of the Reich in 1919. Therefore, for me as a soldier it was the duty of conscience to do everything in order to have rescinded the Versailles Treaty, which I regarded as very humiliating.

I imagined that this could be done by an agreement. I regarded the Versailles Treaty as so humiliating because every one-sided agreement is always a chain.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, when you joined the NSDAP, you were already an ordained minister?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Just as a matter of information, did ministers generally join the NSDAP in Germany?

THE WITNESS: Yes, a large number.

THE PRESIDENT: Had you read "Mein Kampf" before you joined the National Socialist Party?

THE WITNESS: No, I had not.

THE PRESIDENT: Were you familiar with Hitler's views on religion generally before you joined tha Party?

THE WITNESS: I only knew what was generally known at the time.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you regard Hitler as a God-fearing man?

THE WITNESS: At the time, yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you ever have occasion to change your views?

THE WITNESS: Personally, yes.

THE PRESIDENT: When?

THE WITNESS: I was asked whether I had ever had the opportunity to change my opinions.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, did you ever change your views about Hitler being a God-fearing man?

THE WITNESS: After what I heard, after 1945, a number of things now appear in a different light to me.

THE PRESIDENT: You did not change your views about Hitler's religious attitude until after 1945?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you know about the persecution of the Jews in Germany?

THE WITNESS: It depends , your Honor, what you mean by the persecution of the Jews .......

THE PRESIDENT: Did you know that Jews were deprived of their citizenship rights?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you know they were deprived of their property?

THE WITNESS: No, I did not know that their property was taken away from them.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, I shall deal more explicitly with this set of questions in the course of my direct examination, if you will permit me to mention this, within the frame of the whole thing.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, Dr. Bergold, proceed.

THE WITNESS: I spoke of the Versaille Treaty which I regarded, as it meant a chain, as most humiliating. I hope that this mistake - this one-sided treaty - that in fact a mistake of that kind, will be avoided by the American Government so that no animosity of any kind will be brought up again. then nationalist parties did not seem capable, because they worked on too small a base. In this young National Socialist Party, a simple man of the working population who had begun as a simple soldier and had helped bear the whole hardship of a war, became the expression of the people' s will, and he became the expression of a strong national will whom one could not resist as a German man. Equally strong in me was the war experiences. I had lived in very close community with workingmen during the war, and I had experienced the comradeship which is unforgettable. Added to this is the fact that I, as a clergyman, regard the human responsibility especially towards those who are socially inferior, as an order of God. The solution of this social question, the urgent necessity to include the worker in the human system, of human society, was a necessity for me. I experienced in the NSDAP, a workman's party, which wanted to materialize this aim, and which was led by a man who knew and who had the same experience at the front during the war and who had shared the hard lot of the working man. A national and social element worked hand in hand with each other in the National Socialist Party, and promised to fight all destructive elements, and to create a people's community which wanted to equalize all classes of the population.

That was an ideal which none of all the other parties had, because they were to a larger or lesser extent only communities of interests of part groups of the population. The one man was the leader of this party who had a power of will and a power of reaching his aim which made the materialization of these aims -

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, it seems to the Prosecution the witness by no means gives his own impression. He gives a general lecture about National Socialism and about Hitler. I do not think that his lecture is relevant in this place, and I further think that the Tribunal is very well informed about what Hitler and the National Socialist Party were and what they did. I do not think that it is necessary for the witness to expound on this point further.

DR. BERGOLD: I must contradict the honorable representative of the Prosecution. The witness speaks merely about his own impression here of the party. It is correct, it sounds like a National Socialist speech, but it was just his own world of ideology and thought, which, of course, one must understand.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: I had the impression that it was by no means understandable from the lecture of the witness that this was his personal view. He stated these things as established facts, never saying that, "I had the impression that it was that". He said Hitler was that; the National Socialist Party was that. He gave all these impressions entirely as established facts. He never said, "I had the impression, it seems to me for that and that reason," etc. He just lectured to us for about twenty-five minutes now what a wonderful thing National Socialism was.

DR. BERGOLD: I have to contradict the representative of the Prosecution again. Before the witness began he said the following sentence: "The following ideological thoughts were responsible for my decision to join the Party," and then he gave these thoughts as they struck him at that time as facts.

THE PRESIDENT: We will allow the witness to continue.

THE WITNESS: For my decision to enter the party was also responsible the very clear program of the NSDAP against materialistic Marxism and Communism. Q (By Dr. Bergold) Could you be a little more brief? thought, we want to destroy all culture, the thought of a class struggle, and a campaign against any religion, as it was called "opium for the people", through the creation of a larger extended Atheist community, as the Communist idea was in fact materialized in Russia, employing bloody means and catastrophical famines. Especially as a religious person I was confronted with the alternative, on the one hand, Bolshevism, that means the decline of the Occident with its religion and its culture, or Anti-Bolshevism, as I could only find in National Socialism at the time. I was under no doubt at the time that the churches will have to subscribe against Bolshevism, and the most shaking, the most overwhelming thing for me today is, that everything has come different, that National Socialism had to -

THE PRESIDENT: Now, are you talking about today or when you joined the National Socialist Party?

THE WITNESS: No, I just said something about today. My last sentence is an expression of what I feel today. Only the last sentence, your Honor. The other, the remainder of what I said was all the ideology, my thoughts which made me join the NSDAP.

I have just said that at the time I was of the clear conviction that the churches would -

THE PRESIDENT: We heard you. You don't need to repeat it. Continue.

THE WITNESS: What shakes me now is that the development became so different and that the Pope can still speak about Bolshevism in the same way as National Socialism used to at the time.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, do you think that that is relevant, what he just said now?

DR. BERGOLD: That is his attitude today. I think it is of superior importance here, but I think he has now exhausted this subject. Q (By DR. Bergold) Witness, did any personal interest take any part in this decision to join the Party?

A No, never. I had my own profession which secured me a safe existence. I did not think of myself when I joined the party. I only thought of my people and this attitude I never changed. My life was spent in the service of the people and serving God. service to the church? Was there no conflict? service and my service in the party. The Evangelical the Protestant Lutheran Church had always been national until 1918. The head of the State was also the head of the church. Also the Protestant Lutheran Church always attached great value to sacrificing the highest percentage of blood when waging war. The solution of the social question is the nucleus of the existence, existence of the church, and the highest order of God are the words of Jesus:

"you must love your neighbor as you love yourself." Also Point 24 contains recognition of the positive Christianity.

Q What do you call Point 24?

Q What about the racial question? His Honor, the President, has directed your attention to the racial question.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, suppose we take that up after the recess? The Tribunal will be in recess fifteen minutes.

(A recess was taken).

THE MARSHAL: Take your seats, please. The Tribunal is again in session.

DR. RIEDIGER: Your Honor, may I ask that the defendant Haensch be excused this afternoon from session, so that he will be able to prepare himself for his appearance on the witness stand, and, I also ask you to instruct for him to be brought to Room 57.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant will be excused from session in the court this afternoon, and arrangements will be made with the Marshal to see to it that he is taken to Room 57, so he may there consult with his attorney.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, I have been asked to request that the defendant Ohlendorf be excused from attending session this afternoon because the Prosecution in Case 8 wants to interrogate him, and the fact that he would like to do some work of his own in his cell.

THE PRESIDENT: In accordance with the statement just made, the defendant Ohlendorf will be excused from attendance in court this afternoon. First, he will be taken to Room 57, then after the business there is completed, he will be allowed to confer with his attorney in connection with his own case.

BY DR. BERGOLD:

Q. Witness, the last discussion just before recess was on the Party Program, and I now ask you what is your opinion concerning the racisl question, and what was your opinion at the time to what was contained in the party Program?

A. I wish to comment on this in the following, firstly, the Racial question, in particular the Jewish Program is not a religious question, but a biological question and a question of communal like; secondly, the question of various races is a fact which exist by the will of God, therefore, has to be respected.

Q. That is your opinion?

A. Yes, that is the opinion which I had at the time, which even in my theological capacity was not in contradiction with my opinion concerning the Party Program; thirdly, that the relation of various races among themselves be brought to a satisfactory solution, is, in my opinion is no crime against the Will of God, but rather a fulfillment of His Will; fourthly, violation of races results from race throry in my opinion is wrong.

Apart from that, the NSDAP was not the first Party to think about the racial problem, but in their early beginning they made an orderly and just solution of this problem a point of their program; that many things were changed later on no one could know; and I could not know if either, and no one intended this at the time.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, just when was that you formulated the idea that the program of the National Socialist Party coincided and harmonized with your views on religion?

THE WITNESS: At the time when I joined the Party, I would like to point out that all views at that time were quite different from those things which became known to the public later on, ------------------

THE PRESIDENT: Then from 1926 until what thime did you still entertain the conviction which you have just expressed, namely, that the program of the NSDAP insofar as it pertained to racial questions harmonized with your views on religion?

THE WITNESS: Until the very end.

THE PRESIDENT: And you Lave told us that you were a student on the Old Testament?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: And you were able to reconcile the National Socialist Party program insofar as it pertained to the Jewish question with the teachings of the Old Testament?

THE WITNESS: I hardly think, Your Honor, that the teachings of the Old Testament have anything to do with the later events in Germany, because, as I already said it was not a religious matter which was concerned, but merely a biological matter.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, then, let's put it this way, that there was nothing in the Party Program which conflicted with the Old Testament insofar as it pertained to Jews?

THE WITNESS: No, I don't see any contradiction there.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

THE WITNESS: I only want to say particularly that according to known at the time of what the NSDAP intended to do.

THE PRESIDENT: You say "What you could have known." Did you know?

THE WITNESS: What I knew at the time. I mean to say, that this formulation of these facts refer to all that the NSDAP had shown to the public about these questions at the time.

THE PRESIDENT: You make a distinction between what the program said, and what actually happened insofar as your knowledge is concerned?

THE WITNESS: I witnessed this personally, but later on things occurred which had nothing to do with the program, and that all we old National Socialists in particular felt very bitter about this.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Dr. Bergold.

Q. (By Dr. Bergold) Witness, As for the racial question, did it not include the theory that a master race existed which was superior to the other races?

A. No, considering the racial question as such, it does not express the thought that a master race or inferior races existed. This idea is a distortion of the subsequent propaganda. I always considered all races equal before God, but in the fact that various races exist I saw the will of God that these should continue to exist separately.

THE PRESIDENT: DR. Bergold, I am sorry that I interrupt you, but I think it is best that we clear up a point while it is fresh in the minds of everybody. Now, the witness referred to Point 24 of the Party program and he told the Tribunal that in this Point 24 he saw a guarantee of religion. Now, we would like to read that paragraph, that Point 24, and have the witness tell us how he reconciles this point with the religion which he studied in the Old Testament and of which he has now told us a great deal. I will read it:

"Point 24: We demand freedom of religion for all religious denominations within the State so long as they do not endanger its existence or oppose the moral senses of the Germanic race. The Party, as such, advocates the standpoint of a positive Christinaity without binding itself confessionally to any one denomination. It combats the Jewish materialistic spirit within and around us and is convinced that a lasting recovery of our nation can only succeed from within on the framework - common utility precedes individual utility." in this Point 24 which you yourself referred to, that the COURT II CASE IX Party combats the Jewish spirit, how do you reconcile that with your teachings gleaned from the Old Testament?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I am not a student of the Old Testament in the sense that for me the Old Testament is my basic book of religion. But I worked on the Old Testament as a Scholar within the Protestant Lutheran Church, so that it was a purely scholarly interest, and the teachings of the Old Testament were not binding for me, because for a Protestant the personality of Jesus stands above everything, and therefore, in referring to the Old Testament in this connection I cannot consider that correct.

THE PRESIDENT: Then, do you reconcile that Point 24 with the New Testament and its teachings?

THE WITNESS: I did not understand why the teachings -may I have the question repeated please?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. You have told us that you did not accept the Old Testament as your Bible, that for you the Old Testament was merely a subject of scientific study, and that you were not bound by the teachings of the Old Testament. I understood you correctly there, didn't I?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, I ask you whether the Point 24 which you referred to can be reconciled with the teachings in the New Testament?

THE WITNESS: It says expressly that the Party believes in a positive Christianity. This word, contained in the Party program was decisive for a great number of Christians and religious people when joining the Party.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, you would say that it does reconcile itself with the teachings in the New Testament?

THE WITNESS: What do you mean, your Honor? What cannot be reconciled?

THE PRESIDENT: Do you believe in the New Testament?

TEE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Can you believe in the New Testament and also believe in Point 24 of the Nazi program?

THE WITNESS: Yes, why not?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, Now, that Point 24 advocates the combating a certain Jewish spirit within Germany and in that combat you know that synagogues were destroyed. You know that, do you?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I know it, but I never approved of it. As a religious person I was very much disgusted that this happened.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, but you saw that in the Point it says "We combat a Jewish materialistic spirit"?

THE WITNESS: The materialistic Jewish spirit.

THE PRESIDENT: And that was interpreted by certain groups in Germany to countenance the destruction of Jewish property, including synagogues?

THE WITNESS: Never had anything to do with this. The other is a spiritual argument.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, you did not approve of any action against the Jewish synagogues?

THE WITNESS: Never.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, at the time it was explained to me, and I can only say what I heard at the time and what calmed me very much in 1938. That was the news that the Fuehrer was supposed to have had a fit of rage about it. I say what I heard.

THE PRESIDENT: You must understand, witness, and I think Dr. Bergold understands it, that these questions are put only for the purpose of securing information, to find COURT II CASE IX out what you thought and what you did,

THE WITNESS: Yes, of course, I understand.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

Q. (By Dr. Bergold) Witness, as a member of the Party what did you do until 1933?

A. When I joined the Party I pointed out my special profession. They respected this and the Gauleiter especially certified and said that I would not have to take part in any political activity, because I did not intend to be particularly active politically or to become a politician even. I never had that idea, and I have never been a politician. At the time, when joining the Party, I was still an individual member because in 1926, in Schleswig-Holstein there was hardly a local group in the country. Later on, after 1929, I conducted field services for the SA, flag dedications and services for the dead and Christmas services. I was always asked for this expreslly. When dedicating flags, I had discussions with Church authorities. I justified my activity by pointing out that these men, when making propaganda, constantly had to expect to be shot or beaten from ambush. At their express request I considered it my duty to give them the consolation of the faith.

Q. You did not have any political office before 1933?

A. No, before 1933 I did not have any kind of political office.

Q. What was your political activity until 1933?

A. From December, 1924 until 1927 I was pastor of a small congregation on the West Coast of Schleswig-Holstein, and from November, 1927 onwards until November, 1933, I was pastor of the large rural congregation, Kaltenkirchen, District of Segeberg.

Q. Witness, what is your attitude to the Church dogma?

Your Honor, I have to discuss this question because later on it will be shown that the defendant left the Church. That is why I have to show his religious development.

A. As I have already mentioned at the beginning, when I was a young man at school I already felt a close contact with God which became stronger owing to the war and my experiences there. This relationship to God was not at all connected with Jesus of Nazareth as Christ, that is, as the second person in the picture of the Trinity. In my theological studies, moreover, I particularly took an interest in studying the old Orient.

nucleus question more and more: what is your attitude towards Jesus of Nazareth as Christ? The dogma says that Christ is God Himself Who, as the Son of God, redeemed humanity by dying on the cross and relieved them of their sins. About this central problem I was never able to find a positive answer in myself. I did not know any belief in Jesus as Christ, but I firmly believed in one God alone as Jesus himself talked about in his speeches.......

THE PRESIDENT: Is this what you were preaching in your church?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I realized this more and ore clearly and also preached about it....

THE PRESIDENT: Then you say that you believed in the New Testament?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: You believed in the New Testament and yet you expressed in Church what you have just now told the Tribunal?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well.

A (Cont'd) I consider Jesus a brother like myself and anyone who believes in God and is a child of God. This, attitude, was nothing exceptional or anything in particular. In the Protestant Church there were all kinds of views on religious questions, from the orthodox people down to the pantheism, out already at that time I perceived the idea: whether it could be combined with truth whether with this, my attitude, I could remain in church office.

THE PRESIDENT: You said that views ran the entire gamut from orthodox views to pantheism. Was pantheism taught in some of the Christian churches?

THE WITNESS: Yes, there were a great number in the Protestant Church. The idea of God as such on the one hand was considered in a very strict manner according to the dogma and very orthodox, and on the other hand, it was vaguely dissolved in pantheism.

Q (By Dr. Bergold) Did you belong to any particular group within the Church?

THE PRESIDENT: What was the name of your church?

THE WITNESS: The Protestant Lutheran Church of the Province Schleswig-Holstein. That's a State church.

THE PRESIDENT: And is this what is taught in all Protestant Lutheran churches, what you have just told us?

THE WITNESS: No, that depends on the clergyman. One clergyman had orthodox views and another had pantheistic views, and every one of them preached in his own way. The Protestant church existed in this tension.

Q (By Dr. Bergold) Now let us go back to this religious group. group at the time. I was an individualist and have remained one. However, in that time, like in many other clergymen who had joined the NSDAP before 1933, the wish in me arose to discuss matters. The formation of the National-Socialism Clergymen's Association was not permitted. As an answer, in order to form an orthodox group, the movement, so-called the German Christians was formed which I joined in 1932.

THE PRESIDENT: Did the German Christians believe in Christ as being divine?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you believe in Christ as being divine?

THE WITNESS: No, as I already said....

THE PRESIDENT: Could you preach just what you pleased in your church?

THE WITNESS: Yes, provided it was part of the New Testament. I mean, the person of Christ is always in the center of all these sermons and all these thoughts, but not Christ as a God, as a Christ, as a Messiah, but Christ as a human being, as brother, as leader towards God.

THE PRESIDENT: And do we understand that it is your interpretation of the New Testament that Christ is not considered a divine being?

THE WITNESS: Yes, not only I do this, but a great number of university professors have the same view.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, I am saying the New Testament. You read the New Testament and you conclude from what is contained in the Testament that Christ was not divine?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

Q (By Dr. Bergold) Witness, talking about an orthodox group, what do you mean by that? With the starting and growing of the NSDAP and with the joining of a great number of clergymen in this Party orthodox religious circles, started to worry whether they would be able to keep up their dogma. In the year 1931 when the SA marched through the streets of Altona the Communists attacked them with weapons and many SA men died. The following Sunday church circles called for a special religious service because of this event. The SA men and Party members followed enthusiastically and joined the church service. They were disappointed in one thing. They were described as partly guilty because, owing to the march, they had asked for this attack. In a solemn manifesto the Clergymen laid down certain directives, the so-called Altona confession. From this, resulted the emergency assocation of clergymen, and finally the so-called confession front. dogma, this organization finally became a fighting front of the religious sphere; ad this organization started to object to National Socialism more and more. This confessional front was opposed by the German Christians.

Q You were a member of the German Christians. What were the aims of these German Christians? The beginning was promising. As the name implies, it was a confessional movement.

Belief had created an interest because of the dogma, that is, the modern problems were to become one with the old traditions, with the aim to make faith alive again among the people.

Q That was the program? German Christians. Unfortunately, all this led people astray because some people were ambitious who were not concerned with belief but with the power position within the church. In 1933 church elections were proclaimed: the Party was misused. The old church governments collapsed and the leading positions were taken by leading German Christians. The election of the Reich Bishop belongs to this. According to the report of a participant it was a power act. After the executive positions had been occupied the interest in the movement of the German Christians was no longer so great. The group disintegrated and was divided into several subunits, such as the Thuringia German Christians, who had serious beliefs, or another group, the Mecklenburg German Christians and many other parts which were of no imporatnce. were concerned with real belief? the Thuringia German Christians, which seems ridiculous to me, I could not join. It consisted of the idea to make Jesus into an Aryan. I consisdered this childish. In Jesus I always saw and still see a human being who, being closely connected with God, the sovereignty and dignity of the human being is considered the will of God. Racial standards do not apply to Him at all. He was a human being who had the Power of God like nobody else. That He was a Jew does not change the truth of His message.

That he was a Jew does not change the truth of his message. from 1933 to 1935? appointed me commissary church dean in Muenster, and later I became dean in Segeberg. As I heard later, my choice for church leader at Segeberg was made at the request of the area leader of the party at Segeberg. On the Tuesday of the following week in 1934 I was called up from Luebeck asking me to come to Luebeck immediately, because of the occupation of the senior position of the bishopric which had become vacant. I travelled to Luebeck by car and in the city house the mayor and a number of senators received me who asked me to become bishop. I accepted the offer. After about six months had passed I was again called to Luebeck by phone where the mayor told me that for my appointment as bishop, according to the regulations of the German Protestant Church I still had to get a certificate, namely, the approval of the party. The Gauleiter had refused this. I was asked to discuss this with him in order to get his approval. I travelled to Kiel to the Gauleiter and he told me that the Kreisleiter, the area leader of the party had refused his approval because I had not asked the Kreisleiter for permission previously to take this office. I had no discipline, and he had to continue refusing. The Gauleiter approved of the Kreisleiter's opinion and, therefore, I could not become bishop of Luebeck. politics because of this?

A Yes. This event moved me very deeply because I could not understand why the political circles would make such difficulties for me.

I was disgusted about the selfish way of acting of the district treatment since I was an old party member and still he treated me like a stupid boy. But in the meantime I had already learned that there often were great differences between the ideas of the party and some of the persons who represented the party. I considered this due to human incompetences of individuals in the NSDAP without however have any misgivings about the Party itself. But it did leave a painful memory. years 1933 until 1935? I was made honorary district training chief in the district of Segeberg. I want to point out that this was a year before this disappointment, I gave lectures to various local groups in the district Segeberg. The peculiarity of my profession showed in my lectures. The ideas of the social people's community were mostly the contents of my lectures, namely, that the farmers and the working people should be one union within the union of the entire people, that the classes be at peace, that work was a noble art, the task of the women among the people and similar practical questions of the organizational setup among the people. active in your profession, this political activity?

A Yes. In the manner in which I carried out this political activity, I already pointed out that the peculiarity of my work as politician destined my work in this. Even if I spoke as a political chief, the people considered me a dean and I was always addressed as "Dean", and, therefore, it was quite natural that the lectures before the local groups of the smallest hamlets were more like a solemn hour than a normal political gathering.

This activity I liked because that way I could visit the villages of my district as dean where I would not have come to merely as a church official. Through this political activity, the basis of my position as a church official became more established. the church, did you not -- why did you want to do this? and for this I had three reasons. When I talked about my attitude toward the dogma I pointed out that I was bothered about the Question whether it could be combined with inner truth and sincerity to remain active in the church service.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, I think it would be clearer if he gave us the three reasons, then if he wishes to amplify any particular reason you can determine that, but for clarification purposes, let him give us 1, 2, 3, the reasons.

A First, there were reasons of belief; secondly, church political reasons; and thirdly, political reasons. Explaining the belief, I was just explaining the question of belief.

and reconcile it with the continuance of work in the church. Beyond that, I realized more fully how strong the religious attitude of the greatest part of the people in the Schleswig-Holstein Church differed from the actual dogma. If truth were set aside here, in my opinion, the greatest part of the Schleswig-Holstein Church people had to separate from the Protestant Lutheran Church and set up a new church organization. But whether the time had come for this already then, I doubt. In any case, in order to clarify all these questions of belief I needed time and perpective. Now, the church political reasons. The general church political differences between the confessional front and the German Christians had shown so many unpleasant events that I was ashamed of being a clergyman. Both groups, were, in their measures, not suitable for church offices. I was deeply disappointed about the power political attempts and the religious sterility of the German Christians. In 1934 I left this group. Among the clergymen of both movements a degrading difference arose, which impedimented their dignity and one could not think that any real belief existed here. I began to doubt the meaning of the message to the people and needed sitance to think about this , the political reasons.

Q. Please be brief.

A. The attitude of the political public to me as a clergyman was good because they esteemed me as a human being but unfortunately the clergymen behaved so stupidly in respect to the party. I am fully convinced that if all clergymen had been fully aware of the responsibility concerning the tasks of the time the party would never have started a conflict with the church and that, secondly, through the influence of the church in the party they might have stopped them from taking the wrong road, so that Germany and Europe wouldhave been saved a great deal of misfortune, perhaps Bolchevism which threatens the world now would not exist any more. Through stupid contradiction in un important things at the wrong time, as in 1933 , the new relations which were formed again in 1939 between the party and the church became looser again.

The party was prejudiced against the church and the church finally rejected them as an organization which conspired against the state. Owing to my personal experience, I cannot say that the church is free of this historical guilt. As a clergyman, I watched this development and liter on in Berlin I realized that to its full extent. I had had to think of this bed development. The attitude of rejection of the party towards the church made itself felt as well, I stood between the church and party who in my opinion both had the wrong attitude. This finally brought me to the decision to leave the church service. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. You said you stood between the church and the party and between those two you chose the party?

A. Yes, I was still in the party, and I was also still in the church, but the official measures I could not approve of in this connection.

Q. Well, did you leave the church?

A. No, not at that time. Only laid down my office.

Q. When did you leave the church?

A. Only in 1933. I shall talk about that later. Owing to my experiences in Berlin in my decision to leave the church service, the tyrannical attitude of the local leader also played a part, who kept me in his district and I tried to get away from him. But later on my existence was threatened by this again. These were three reasons of belief, church political reasons and political reasons which forced me to lay down my office in order to get away from this mixup and the confusion and to be able to understand my own feelings. The decision was very hard for me because during my activity of 10 years I had learned to love my profession. In my opinion there is no more noble profession than to look after the souls and to assist people in need and in happiness.

Q. How did you imagine your future work?

A. I wanted to become a state official and work in the educational department of the state.

a request to the Reich Minister of Education to employ in the above mentioned office. I never received a reply. In July 1935 owing to difficulties, with the German Christian government in Kiel, I had a discussion with the gauleiter. On that occasion I informed him that I intended to become a civil servant. Then I pointed out a notice in the newspaper that Hitler had commissioned Kerrl to deal with church questions we agreed that this would be suitable work for me. The gauleiter promised to talk to Kerrl about my employment in his field, of which the church could only approve. Therefore, in August 1935 I was called into the Reich Ministry for Church Affairs.

Q How long were you in this Reich Ministry for Church Affairs? 1940. negatively against your aims and interfered. Was that in this connection?

A Yes. That is connected with my transfer into state service. It wason 20 April 1936. Reich Minister Kerrl told me that day that he had received a letter from Kiel which included a letter by my former district leadernot to transferme into the state service because I had not shown sufficient discipline towards the NSDAF. The cause for this letter was a religious service which conducted on a Sunday in March 1936 in the church at Segeberg. A great number of people had taken part, even party members. The church and also the district leaders had been informed about this previously. After all, at the time I was still dean of Segeberg, because I hadnot yet finally bean transferred to the state service, I could not understand why the district leader should have written this letter. The ministery informed me that in spite of this he wanted to appoint me Oberregierungsrat, the same rank as a dean in the church, but I had to promise him not to carry out any church actions in the future.

This request was unusual because I retained the rights of the church which could only have been taken away from me in a special legal procedure by the church against me. I gave the promise which he asked for and 20 May 1936 I was appointed Oberregierungsrat in the state service. being a country pastor to an official in the Reich Ministry for Church Affairs? go to the capital and to go to the Reich Ministry in particular as I was to meet men here who were old national-socialists and who held high positions in the Reich and, therefore represented National Socialism. I arrived in Berlin with great expectations. I was disappointed very soon. Here I got to know a kind of people who were not known in the country and who only existed in state offices and ministries. I got to know the painful difference between national socialists and Hitlerites. I shall explain their expressions. National socialists are people who had approved of the national socialist idea as idealists as the supreme basis of their political actions, and who were ambitious to follow unselfishly the ideals and to realize them in their own lives. To the old national socialists it is a matter of course that all party members including Hitler come under this idea. Even if any of them, including Hitler, should violate any of the laws, they should have to leave the party. That is the attitude of the old national socialists which Hitler himself had expressed repeatedly. We as free citizens, were following one idea, namely, the ideal of Reich where all classes were equal and all citizens were free and one man, namely. Hitler only, should guarantee this idea but never as a human being who abused the idea for dictatorship in order to make slaves out of free citizens. This attitude I passed on to my sons because it wasof basic importance to me in the necessary defense against the so-called Hitlerites. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Now, he has told us what a national socialist is. Let him tell us what a Hitlerite is.

A That is coming up now, Your Honor. The Hitlerites are such party members who conducted a personal cult with Hitler, who approved of him and anything he did, whether it was right or wrong, who flattered him in order to be noticed by him and to be awarded by him. The more powerful Hitler became they thought they would be able to get greater power, too, for themselves as his followers. They did not care much about the idea of national socialism any more. Most of them were opportunists, who had joined the party in 1933, opposed to the plans of Hitler. included all those who believed in the principles of the national socialist party and that included Hitler. Now, you have given us the description -phrase included all those who believed in the program of the national socialist party and that included Hitler?

Q Now, you were describing to us the Hitlerites. Now, please tell us whether Hitler himself belonged to the first group or the second group? Did he believe in following himself or did he believe in following the national socialist party?

A That still had to be decided in the following time; according to the experiences I had at the time I could not realize this....... socialists or did he belong to the Hitler group?

Q Hitler belonged to the Hitler group? socialist group?

the national socialist idea for me in its full purity.

Q At one time then Hitler was not a Hitlerite? Hitlerite. In that case he would have to consider himself a god and I do not know in how far he did this.

Q Did you ever consider that?

PRESIDENT: The Tribunal will be in recess until 1:45 (A recess was taken until 1345 hours.

(The hearing reconvened at 1345 hours.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session.

MR. GLANCY: May it please the Tribunal, I would like at this time to introduce formally two exhibits which were used in the cross-examination of Defendant Nauman. They were given the identification number of 175, which consists of three documents, namely, NO-5444, 5445, and 5446. I wish at this time to formally introduce these three as Prosecution Exhibit 175. If the Tribunal deems it proper, we can introduce it as "a", "b", "c" to maintain the continuity.

THE PRESIDENT: I think it would be well, if you did do that.

MR. GLANCY: Yes, sir. Then I offer Document NO-5444as Eshibit 175, Document No. NO-5445, as Prosecution Exhibit 175a, and Document NO-5446, as Prosecution Exhibit 175b. is a note written by the Defendant Nauman to the Defendant Kilingelhofer, which was introduced in the record at page 884. The Document is NO-5450.

THE PRESIDENT: The record will indicate that these exhibits have been introduced.

MR. GLANCY: Thank you, Sir.

THE PRESIDENT: You may proceed, Dr. Bergold. BY DR. BERGOLD (ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENDANT BIBERSTEIN):

Q. Witness, what was the assignment of the newly created Reich Ministry for Church Matters?

A. The task of the Ministry was to eliminate the disquiet which had arisen through the fight between the COURT II CASE IX churches by just decisions.

This unrest in matters of church, which prevented building up a social community of the people, tasks which so far had been dealt with partly by the Reich Education Ministry and partly, of course, by the Reich Ministry of Interior. Affairs were to be combined in one hand in order to prevent the working against one another of various Reich agencies. With the creation of this ministry, the Department for Cultural Peace was dissolved in the Staff of the Fuehrer, because also for these matters the Ministry was now competent. The task of the Ministry therefore was a task of creating order. It was, in fact, to confirm the competincies of state and church, which more or less, in spite of a certain independence, were still churches of the State, and to watch that the peace between these departments was not disturbed.

Q. You spoke about the fight between the churches. What do you mean by that, and what were the causes?

A. I shall shortly explain these matters. The fight between the churches is merely a Protestant matter and only confines itself to the Protestant State Churches. There is a brother war between the so-called Confessional Front, the Bekenninis Church, and the German Christians. It has to be stated here that the Confession was a front of belief, but in their origins in the Altona confession they had already held a political attitude against National Socialism. Therefore it was not purely a religious matter, but it had a political attitude. The German Christians came from the side of the National Socialism and wanted to create newly all religious problems and both had heavy encounters. The German Christians made an inexcusable mistake by abusing the Party in 1933, when they waged a church poltical war within the German Protestant Churches.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, as Mr. Hochwald pointed out this morning, insofar as this history applies to the Defendant himself, it is relevant, hut when he merely recites what is happening generally and in which he has not a participant, we do not need to have it in so much detail. It seems to me that with a sentence or two, he can dispose of a certain development.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, it is relevant, because only in this way will you be able to understand what task he was entrusted with within this church struggle. In the Ministry he had to deal with it.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed.

DR. BERGOLD (To the witness) Please be a, little more brief.

Q. (By Dr. Bergold) Witness, what you have already said, you could put in a little more concise form.

A. The German Christians were entrusted with the leadership of the German people under the Reich Bishop Mueller and a number of other leading positions. The Confessional Front did not want to put up with this terror and objected against the German Church Movement, the movement which no longer was given any power whatsoever. As a consequence, a great confusion was created in the individual churches of the country. These churches were no longer in the position now to create order and quiet among their own people.

Q. Witness, that is sufficient. What was your field of activities then in the Reich Ministry for Church matters?

A. Reich Minister Korl appointed me a liaison officer at the Secret State Police Office in Berlin.

Q. What was your activity as this liaison officer, as it were? What connection did you have with the Gestapo?

had to carry out a number of police measures against institutions and individuals of the Protestant and Catholic Church in order to enforce their State authority. In my opinion, this was the solution of the conflict. One had to succeed to gain some influence in the Gestapo activity. It was clear to me that the Minister, in order to be able to deal with his task, must have the power to give directives to the State Police in church matters. For this purpose, I drafted a decree which appointed the State Ministers the highest authority in police measures with regard to church matters, Kerl agreed. He signed it and in a chief discussion, he got Frick to counter-sign as the Chief of Police, and with this Kerl had the complete power. The Gestapo, of course, was angry that they had not been asked before. It was my task now to take up all the reports and suggestions which were made in church matters and to report about these matters immediately to the Minister in order to get a decision. Unfortunately, it turned out that Kerl could neither revoke nor could he order any measures. Thus he did not have the courage to impose an amnesty, which was so necessary and to revoke all measures against the church which had beenimposed so far and thus to have shown the readiness of the state through a generous deed. Obviously, Kerl did not feel himself strong enough. He hesitated with his decisions until the Gestapo office eventually proceded to more and more make their decisions over the head of the hesitating Minister.

Q Witness, did you come into difficulties as a result of this? always expressed his anger towards me. That with this attitude no progress in the church affairs was achieved was not surprising, Kerl evidently did not know what he wanted. He protested every now and then, but nothing actually happened. Conditions in the country became worse and worse and thus peace was not created. The Confession Front became a sort of collective basin of a political resistance composed of members from the parties which had been dissolved by the new government from the Nationals to the Communists and the State authority was more and more based on Gestapo measures.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, this discussion is becoming entirely too academic. Now, I know it isn't your fault. The Defendant apparently has prepared this lecture and he is going to give it to us just like, I presume, he preached to his parish when he was a pastor. Why don't you try just to give him questions? He already has his material and I am sure he is alert enough so that he can draw from the material and give you the answers which are pertinent to the issue.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, I may remind you that in my opening speech, I spoke about this case as being particularly difficult for the defense for the reason that there is no document in evidence against the Defendant apart from his own affidavit. You will remember that in my opening speech I protested very strongly against the actual making out of this affidavit and you can only judge this man and his case if you know his whole profession and life. Only then can you judge from these statements which he is making about this one incriminating document that it is not correct whether what he says is correct or not. If I only refer to the prosecution documents, then, of course, the case can be dealt with in ten minutes, but in that case you have no possibility of judging this man. Therefore, this case is so different from all the other cases. I may remind the Tribunal that I have represented more than one client, from Milch to Klein. This is certainly a difficult case and you can only judge it if you have a complete knowledge of this man. That is my reason -

THE PRESIDENT: Well, it won't help us to decide the case nor will it help you in the defense of the case if he gives a long dissertation on something which is entirely irrelevant. He might be giving us a dissertation on the life of the kangaroo in Australia. That wouldn't help us any.

DR. BERGOLD: No, but he is describing his activities in Berlin.

THE PRESIDENT: He is telling about the fight on the Confessional Front, on the Baptismal Front, and on the Gestapo Front and all these fronts which have nothing to do with the issue here. Now, we certainly will allow you every latitude, Dr. Bergold, and it is the policy of the Tribunal to talk on anything at all, except, perhaps, the social life of the penguins in the Antartic Zone. Now, we will draw the line there.

DR. BERGOLD: Certainly, I am of the opinion, Your Honor, that you will not be able to judge this man. His activity, for instance, only in 1942, October 1942 he arrived in Russia. He was there for three months. From this activity of three months you cannot judge him. You can only judge him from his complete activity, if you have a complete picture of it, because with other men who were active in the East for months it is very much easier than here where there is just nothing against him. That is not his own fault; this accusation which is based only on one own affidavit is very strange and I must say it is very strange in this proceedings, especially in a Military Tribunal. He said he wanted to be the originator of the peace -- that he did not succeed.

THE PRESIDENT: You said something is very strange. What do you mean, "very strange"?

DR. BERGOLD: These accusations, the charge which only is supported by his own affidavit and which has no proof, and this affidavit was made under circumstances against which I must protest and I shall prove....

THE PRESIDENT: But, Dr. Bergold, that -

DR. BERGOLD: I think this affidavit was not brought about in a proper way.

MR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If Your Honors please, this is the third time that Dr. Bergold starts to make objections against the way the prosecu tion acts in this case.

The prosecution has, on the 7th of November, of 1947, brought a memorandum to the knowledge of the Tribunal pointing out the first two cases. The first case was during the opening speech of Dr. Bergold. The second case was in a written application which Dr. Bergold made on the 15th of October and which was handed to the Prosecution for information. In its memorandum of 7 November 1947, the Prosecution has respectfully requested that Dr. Bergold might be informed that the Prosecution under no circumstances will tolerate such remarks which Dr. Bergold makes end that either he may withdraw these remarks or be prepared to support them. We respectfully request at this time that Dr. Bergold with no delay may either prove his accusations against the Prosecution or may withdraw them and that all these three statements, the statement today, the statement on the 15th of October and the statement in his opening statement may be stricken from the record and the Tribunal take such steps which it considers necessary in the case. I do not think it is necessary to point out that the prosecution has, as a matter of course, done everything which was possible to make a fair trial of the defendants here possible. I do think that we have been doing at least as much as it is usual in other cases and I do think that if Dr. Bergold makes such statements repeatedly, he should be called upon to prove the correctness of his statements.

DR. BERGOLD: I may say that this letter of the 7th of November of the prosecution is not known to me until this very day.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: I can only say that certainly the Tribunal has knowledge of this.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Bergold should have knowledge himself and must not be called upon here to respond to a statement of which he is ignorant. The prosecution will see to it that Dr. Bergold gets a copy of the letter referred to.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: If the Tribunal please, in order that the thing may be completely clear and as the accusation made by Dr. Bergold is at least partly in the record of this trial, we would prefer to read at this time the memorandum into the record.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think first It will be letter if Dr. Bergold gets a copy of the letter so that he will be informed as to what the prosecution is saying. It would not he fair to call upon him to make any statement in answer to a memorandum which is only brought to his attention this moment.

DR. HORLICK-HOCHWALD: Very well, Your Honor.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, Dr. Bergold, what we were saying is simply this, that certainly the Tribunal will allow you every latitude in the presentation of your case, but with your experience and your knowledge and your alertness you of course comprehend that what the defendant talks about must be mere or less relevant to the issue involved and the only thin; that we wanted to call to your attention was that on these collateral matters the defendant was going into too much detail. Now that is all.

DR. BERGOLD: I have expressed my opinion why, your Honor, why I took up this particular way of procedure. It was a reason which I thought about a lot.

THE PRESIDENT: I think, Dr. Bergold, we will allow you to present your case in your way. You may proceed. we will not allow the Prosecution to interrupt you. So you may proceed with your case. You will present everything you have in this case and there will be no limitation, and you can even talk about the life of the penguins in the Artic Zone, if you believe that is relevant.

DR. BERGOLD: No, I do not intend to do so. But I shall try to keep my client a little more brief.

BY DR. BERGOLD:

Q. Witness, as to these difficulties with the Minister did you remain in office or were you dismissed from it?

A. No, I was dismissed, and the Minister also revoked the decree which he had made at that time and I was put in charge of another department. That was in autumn 1936.

Q. Was that the only reason for the change of your Department?

A. No, there was another reason.

Q. Be more concise. Give us the gist of it. I think you will succeed in being a little briefer.

A. On the occasion of the drafting of a letter which was submitted to me by the minister for my taking over a new department, I took the liberty, as an old National Socialist, to express a basic attitude to the policy of the Ministry. I refused unambiguously the romantic intentions of the Minister concerning his church reformation plans. I could not agree with this way of dealing with these matters, because it was merely the task of church circles or of a religious personality, but not the task of a Reich Minister.

He, the Reich Minister was only to create order in the church and to give the church the possibility of settling their own matters.

Q. That will suffice. What was Kerl's attitude when you suggested these matters to him?

A. He was rather hurt, and he drew my attention to the fact that he did not need my directives. He was the Reich Minister, and I had nothing to do but carry out his orders. He told me that he would have me expelled from the Party, and if I did not ask to be released from the Ministry he would throw me out.

Q. What consequen ce did this dispute have for you? Were you actually thrown out?

A. No, I was not thrown out; but in January 1937 I received a reprimand by the Minister.

Q. Did you do anything about this reprimand?

A. In my emergency situation I applied to Dr. Best of the Gestapo office.......I knew him as a liaison man, in whom I had some confidence; otherwise I knew of nobody in Berlin who could have given me advice. Dr. Best listened to my report about all that happened; he took note of it, and offered me a job as Ministerial Counsel in the Gestapo office. As I had no inclination toward police activity, however, I refused, thanking him.....but I was assured that I could always trust him and could always count on his help. That, he assured me.

Q. What were your assignments in the new department? Were they also of a political nature?

A. No, they were only church matters. The department itself was called "church life". Only, of course, the Pro testant department. In this department I had to deal with all questions concerning practical religious life.

...as, for instance, church service, church office, institutions, mission, interior and exterior, military church service, and religious services in prison.

Q. That will suffice, these examples. I have to deal with another question, and I have to ask for patience on the part of the Tribunal. You were a religious man. The whole world seems to think that National socialism was an enemy of the church. Did that not worry you, the so-called animosity of National socialism against the church? Please be very brief in answering this question, witness.

A. I object definitely against the contention that the national socialist state was an enemy of the church or religion. All difficulties or conflicts between church and state, or party, are rooted in the state church - that means the still existing connection of church, and state which has not changed, as far as they were not free churches, of course. It is very significant that the free churches had no difficulties whatsoever. In the Ministry, on various occasions I talked with representatives of the Methodist and the Baptist churches, and I asked them whether they had encountered any difficulties - to which they always gave me a negative answer - and this is the decisive point. Because the religious activity in Germany was never limited in Germany, as a representative of a complete religious tolerance, as no representative of Orthodox, Protestant or Catholic religion, I should have found out about it. Limitations came about only ........ BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q. Did this include the Jewish religion. You say there was complete religious freedom and tolerance. Did this include the Jewish religion?

A. Yes. I don't know that the carrying out of the Mosaic, that is the Jewish cult, was forbidden in Germany. I know nothing about it.

Q. Do you tell us that the Jews were permitted to worship in their synagogues untrammeled and entirely free?

A. Yes, that is what I assume; in the Reich Ministry these matters were not being dealt with. Modifications were only enforced which did not concern religious belief, but only the authority of the state. Measures were only taken and issued against people who left their religious sphere and disturbed the state with their political remarks or actions.

Q. Witness, do you know of what you said before, that the Jews were allowed to worship in their synagogues freely?

A. I said that I am not sure, because these matters were not dealt with in the Reich Ministry of Church Matters. I never heard anything about it that this was not the case.

Q. Is a synagogue regarded as a church? was it regarded as a church in your Ministry of Churches?

A. By the Ministry of Churches or by myself?

Q. By your Ministry, in your work, was the......

A. I said I only had to deal with the Protestant department, and the work of the Ministry extended only to Christian churches and their formations, or similar churches; b ut only Christian churches.

Q. Well, but you made the statement that there was complete religious tolerance in Germany. Now, did you make that statement, and if so, do you still affirm it? I ask you.......was there religious tolerance in Germany during the regime of the National Socialist Party?

A. Yes, as far as I know......yes.

Q. Very well. All right. Now you have affirmed what you said before.

Now I ask you.......were the Jews given religious freedom? Were they allowed to worship in their own church?

A. I don't know from my own knowledge, but I have no reason to doubt it.

Q. Well, then, you would say that so far as you knew, Jews were allowed to worship in the synagogues?

A. Yes, that is what I assume, as long as there was synagogues to worship in.

Q. There Weren't very many after November 10, 1938, were there?

A. I don't know whether they were all destroyed. I don't know.

Q. You do know that many were destroyed, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes. And does that coincide with religious tolerance, to burn down the churches.....

A. No, I have already pointed out.....

Q. Well, then, why do you say that there was complete religious tolerance?

A. That was not a measure of the National Socialist state.....the burning of the synagogues.

Q. The destruction of the synagogues in November 1938, you now say, was not the result of Party action?

A. Of the state, I said. I said....of the National socialist State. I was in the Reich Ministry.

Q. Well, wasn't the State and the dirty one?

A. On paper. But not in reality.

Q. Was Hitler the State or the Party?

A. Hitler was both.

Q. He was both. All right. What was Himmler. Was he the State or the Party?

A. Well, he used to be only a Party official, but then lie became an official of the State as Chief of the German Police.

Q. Yes. And what was Goering? was he the State or the Party?

A. He was, as far as I can remember, only State. Yes, yes. Only State. I don't know whether he was part of any Party office. As far as I know he was only State. A State official.

Q. So then you tell us that after 1933 up until 1945 there was a definite cleavage between the State and the Party, they were not amalgamated?

A. I did not say cleavage. I only talked about disputes between these two authorities.

Q. Well, let us get back to the original question. You said that there was religious tolerance and you said that the Jews were allowed to worship in the synagogues; and then we call your attention that in November 10th synagogues were destroyed, or a great many of them were.....and then you said that that was not an action of the State, but an action of the Party. Is that correct?

A. Yes. As far as I know.

Q. Well, do you know.... or don't you know?

A. Well, I only know that it was not an action of the State.

Q. So that so far as the State was concerned the Jews were allowed to worship as they chose?

A. I said I cannot know this from my own knowledge because these matters were not being dealt with by the Reich Ministry for Church Matters. An opposite opinion or fact I have never heard.

Q. I don't understand what you mean by an opposite opinion.

A. I mean an order, or a measure whatsoever, which forbids the Jews to worship.

Q. You don't know of any order which forbade Jews to worship in their synagogues?

A. The synagogues, of course, were collecting points, or in private houses.

DR. BERGOLD: May I now tell the Tribunal that at least until the year 1938 the actual worship, the carrying out of worship, was allowed... there were regulations concerning this. At least until the year 1938. I don't remember for certain as from then, as there were so many who emigrated. BY THE PRESIDENT: accordance with their conscience - after 1938?

A (by the witness) I have already said I don't know, but I assume so. Because I never heard that it was forbidden. I cannot remember, I cannot imagine such a prohibition.

Q You can't imagine that there was any prohibition against the Jews with regard to the expression of their religion?

A No. That one could forbid people to carry out their worship -

Q They were allowed complete religious freedom?

AAs for as I know.... I don't knew of all the regulations, but that was the impression that I had.

Q Very well. Was it also your impression that they were allowed complete freedom of movement?

Q Well, if they were limited how could they go to the synagogue? If they were not allowed freedom of movement, how could they travel?

A Freedom of movement.... of course they could go out. There was no law that they could not go out. Freedom of movement - I mean, not only the actual movement in the street, but I mean living conditions.

Q You knew that they were sent to concentration camps, didn't you

A No, I didn't know.

Q You did not know that Jews were sent to concentration camps?

A No, I didn't know.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Dr. Bergold. BY DR. BERGOLD:

Q I think we have exhausted this question, witness. I think the other points are only marginal notes. Did your had relations with the Ministry continue, or was a personal cooperation brought about?

Q Did you feel all right under these circumstances?

Q But you tried to improve the situation?

A Yes. As I knew that the Minister would only be pleased if I left the Ministry I asked the Reich Ministry of the Interior via the Minister to give me the position of county counsellor, "Landrat". This application was refused with the remark that I was not a lawyer. That was in the beginning of 1938.

Q Did you indulge in any Party political activities in Berlin?

Q You were a member of the SS. How did it come about that you joined the SS? the Gestapo from 1935 to 1936 I met a number of SS leaders. One day it was put to me whether I did not want to become an honorary leader in the SS. I considered this offer. And the following thoughts made me decide to accept this offer: Firstly the SS was known at that time as the most ideal, and the most unselfish expression of National Socialism, and was highly respected by the population.

THE PRESIDENT: For my own notes, what year was that, please?

DR. BERGOLD: 1936.

A (witness continuing) Secondly, the detachment from my homo, and being the only theologian under all those lawyers coming from the province this position as honorary leader in the SS appealed to me, and it contributed a certain prestige which I would have among my colleagues. Thirdly a position of honorary leader for civilian officers was then general practice, and did not oblige to anything, as no tasks were connected with it.

With the approval of the Minister, on the 13th of September 1936, I was admitted to the SS with the rank of an Untersturmfuehrer. When did you actually leave the church? ber 1938.

Q Why? political and church reasons.... did not have the same significance to me, but became more and more important. Therefore, it was only an act of sincerity and of belief, that in 1938 - after three years of inner struggle for the truth in the Christmas week - I applied for my release from the Protestant State Church. National Socialism?

A Never. It was not in agreement with my principles of religious tolerance which I claimed for myself as well.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, we got it..... "Did you ask anybody else to Join"? Is that what your question was?

DR. BERGOLD: Is leave the church.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, to leave the church. Very well.

Q (By the President) Well, then, witness, we understand that you definitely covered all connections with the church on December 28, 1933?

Q Yes. Have you ever regretted having left the church?

A No, never. Concerning this leaving the church, which I discussed with other people, I can say, when somebody came to me and asked me whether I deemed it right that the man who asked this question should leave the church or not, I always talked to him about his personal attitude and about his belief, and told him that he could only follow his Court No. II, Case No. IX.

own religious vocation. Utilitarian ideas would be a crime in this particular case. that you gave up contact or connection with the belief in God you talked about? You said your relationship with God was very close. Did you lose this belief?

A Never. On the contrary, my leaving the church only meant that I would remain faithful to my own conviction which I had formed from childhood. As I pointed out on one occasion, in my opinion a large part of the Protestant population described themselves unjustly as members of the Protestant church, that these people were not actually believing in Christ, but that they believed in God. I realized that here a new organization of religious life had to be created. Such an organization of people who believe in God was in my own conviction not to have a dogma. No priests, and no cult actions, as, for instance, sacraments. Their religious activities would have to consist firstly of constant realizing of one's Connection with God by praying, and through silent contemplation of Jesus by common worship. Secondly, through love in daily life to your fellow beings similar as it was realized in the organization of Quakers.

PRESIDENT: Does a Quaker church exist in Germany? This is a matter of information.

A Yes, but only in a very small form. I believe Piermont is the place where their center is.

Q You approve of the Quaker religion, do you? cause you didn't like the Protestant church, why didn't you join the Quaker church.

A. One does not join and embrace a confession quite as fast as that. It must grow on one. I had my own -

Q. When did you feel that you had fully grown and you liked the Quaker religion?

A. It is not a matter of my actually liking the religion of the Quakers, but I imagined a new development similar to the lines of the Quaker movement.

Q. But now you have told us of your own volition that you liked the way the Quakers conducted themselves, that you approved of their church. Now, do you stand on that?

A. I like them and I sympathize with them. I didn't say I agreed. I sympathized with them .

Q. Oh, you do not approve of their church either?

A. Well, I mean I have no close relations. I did not maintain any close relations with them. I only know that they are a religious congregation and they create a religious community on, their own lines.

Q. You left your church in 1938, and you had seven years to join another church. At that time did you know of the Quaker church?

A. No, I did not consider any of the existing religions, but my plans were different. I wanted to create a new organization.

Q. You wanted to create your own church?

A. Yes, if you want to express it thus. I would never call it church though.

Q. What would you call it?

A. I shall come back to this question.

A. No, no, tell me now. You are going to start a new church, what is the name of this new church?

Q. Community of People of Believers in God.

Q. I will write that down. Community

A. Community of Believers in God. I shall take the liberty togive some further explanation concerning this.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, there are some translation difficulties. There is a special word in German, "Gottglaeubig", which cannot be translated. It has a certain philosophical meaning, and the witness coined this word, "Gottglaeubig". It did not exist so far in the German language. This word only existed in the German language since 1936 and he coined it.

Q. (By the President) You created this word in 1936?

A. Yes.

Q. You were thinking about another church while you were already a part of the Lutheran church, because you didn't leave the Lutheran church until 1938?

A. Yes.

Q. You were sort of a heretic in your own church, weren't you?

A. Yes, I have already stated that. I put this question of sincerity to myself before, and therefore I left my office in 1935.

Q. Yes. Now, what have you done toward the establishment of this new church?

A. In order to prepare its organization, that is a difficulty which I shall now come to. I was not permitted to do so by the National Socialist State, to collect all those believers in God and to unite them in one big congregation. Only now after the collapse I have found out, as far as that is possible being interned, that circles of Thuringian Christians and those believers in God, with the permission of the British and American Military Government, formed their own religious groups in the way I have already said, and I myself spoke to representatives, and I am expecting thow that this congregation will mean a rebirth of religion in Germany, as I do not expect it of the existing churches any longer, because they always complain that so little living belief exists today in a population. BY DR. BERGOLD:

Q. Witness, I think you can leave this sphere now. You have already given us an idea that you coined this word, "Gottglaeubig," believing in God, and I don't think that we have to deal with any details now. You say the word, believing in God, "Gottglaeubig," does not mean being an atheist.

A. No, for me this word, "Gottglaeubig," is the strongest emphasis of a belief in God, not that a man says generally, "Well, there probably is a God." Believing in God in the true sense of the wordmeans to seriously reckon with God in all matters of daily life.

Q. Thank you, witness, that will suffice. Did you join the Army when war broke out?

A. No, not immediately. From autumn 1939 to autumn 1940 I remained in the Church ministry, and on the 10th of March, 1940, I joined the Wehrmacht, the Army.

Q. How long were you in the Wehrmacht?

A. From the 10th of March until the 22nd of October 1940.

Q. What rank did you hold?

A. I was private;in July 1940 I became a PFC and on the 6th of October, 1940 I became a non-commissioned officer.

Q. What were you employed for as a soldier?

A. I was a member of an infantry battalion, a home guard battalion which was attached to a Field Kommandature, for guard duty and reconnaissance duty in Mastricht, Arras and Rouen. After the Armistice with France I detached from the Army in order to join the military government. In this connection I made out an application to the Field Kommandature so that I should be taken over into the Military Administration Service. I was to be taken over and according to my rank become senior military administrative councillor.

Q. What was the end of your membership in the Wehrmacht?

A. One day I was ordered to see my battalion commander who told me that I was requested for special service, and that I would have to leave the Wehrmacht.

Q. Did you initiate that by a wish of your own?

A. No, that was a surprise to me. No, it was a surprise to me. On the contrary, I had expressed the wish to remain in the Wehrmacht for the duration of the war, and to be used in the Military Administrative Service. The detail for special service was not what I had wanted.

Q. When were you released?

A. On the 22nd of October, 1940.

Q. What happened after that?

A. A short while later I was told that I had to put myself at the disposal of the Chief of the Security Police and the SD for the duration of the war. This order was an order of the Wehrmacht in which it was said where I was to go for war service.

Q. Through this order then you went to see the Chief of the Security Service and the SD, without your wish?

A. Yes, against my wish.

Q. When did you report to the Reich Security Main Office?

A. That was about the end of October, but I first went on a recreation leave, in order to put myself at their disposal at the end of November for further use.

Q. What assignment were you entrusted with in the RSHA?

A. Nobody in the RSHA knew anything about my situation nor what was going to happen to me. First of all it was ordered that I should for general instruction, go through all the offices, that is through the Offices I to V.

Q.What impression did this create, this information tour?

A. The information I received only gave me a general impression which was, however, strong, but as between my actual professional work and this new sphere, there was no connection of any kind, all these impressions had no basis and vanished only too soon. Only a very few remained.

Q. What was it that remained?

A. Especially what I saw in the Jewish department concerning the solution of the Jewish problem, that is the very department which was competent to deal with these questions. According to this, nothing less had been planned than to give the Jews of Europe a new home which was on the island of Madagasgar. Negotiations with the French government had been started, to buy in an exchange for other objects, Madagasgar from France for this very purpose. Innummerable plans and charts, pictures, statistics on tables, on walls, showed how everything was to be carried out. Favorable climatic conditions, in connection with the fertility for the Jews, as it will not be possible in the case of Palestine, for instance. Here I got for the first time a concrete idea of a practical solution of the Jewish problem. The memory of this information which I received on that occasion remained with me.

Q. That is enough, Witness. Did you thus get the impression that in this information tour that you received a definite idea of what was happening in the RSHA?

A. No, never, because the information was so general that concerning the individual departments it was only very superficial. I had the impression that I was only shown the very best of everything. Secret matters, for instance, were not mentioned. One did not know, however, and I myself couldn't say what I was to do.

Q. Well, what happened after you received this information, this general information?

A. Shortly before this information tour was over I got a telephone call which said Heydrich had decided that I should not get a job with the state police, because I had refused to take over such a job.

Q. What did you do when you heard this?

A. I was very much surprised. I could find no explanation for this telephone message. I went to the then Personnel Chief, Streckenbach, in order to ask him what this telephone call meant.

I learned that the then Office Chief II, Lockermann, a man whom I did not know and a man I had never seen , had submitted a report to Heydrich concerning my own person on the basis of which Heydrich, in anger, decided against me in this manner. That was the first attack against me in this new office.

Q. What did you say to Streckenbach?

A. I told him unambiguously that I had never said anything of the kind, that I had never spoken to Lockermann; any taking over of a State Police job had never been mentioned.

Q. What advice did Streckenbach give you thereupon?

A. He advised me to revoke the letter of Lockermann and ask Heydrich for an interview. I did so, and Streckenbach promised me to bring about an interview. In order to clarify this event, I should like to add now, that it was, of course, true, that on the occasion of this information tour I very often touched the question whether a non-lawyer could ever take over a State Police office. I had the impression that this would not be possible, and I only wanted to hear the opinion of lawyers, who, of course, confirmed this, my opinion. Thereupon, maliciously, a refusal had been constructed, Heydrich had been informed of it , and therefore had been influenced against me.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, would you mind deferring now for fifteen minutes?

(A recess was taken.)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. BERGOLD: advised to do something against Heydrich's order that you were not to get that office in the State Police. Why did you not let the matter go, if it was your own opinion that you were not able to do this, no being a lawyer?

A I considered it very seriously at the time. I thought that Heydrich was offended by my rashness. Since I was in his power completely. I could not know what kind of task would be given by him. I was only interested not to spoil my relations with him through false reports by third parties; what I had to say I wanted to tell him myself, because I was convinced that he would understand me. That is why I believed to have acted in the right manner.

Q Did this discussion with Heydrich come about?

AAt first it didn't come off. I applied again and again until on 5 May 1941 I was ordered to Heydrich.

Q What happened during this discussion? What did you agree on with him? expressed his approval of me, because of my attitude and my character, which he considered decent. He asked me whether I would not like to be put into the Einsatz assignment, although I could not quite imagine what this meant. I only knew that it was some kind of police activity abroad. I asked him not to put me into such a position. I pointed out that I had been in the First World War, in combat, and only just now returned from the Western campaign. Heydrich agreed to this, and said that actually he had intended me as a Police Director or Police President, but owing to my knowledge of the church, and church politics, he considered it suitable to employ me in his office.

Q What did he suggest in this connection? Police Office. I explained to him how far removed the world of my spiritual profession was from the activity of the police; that I had no training and knowledge of police duties, and moreover, also that I was not even an officer, and, therefore, I was not certain whether I could carry out this task to his satisfaction. considerations? of character, which he thought I had, and he suggested to me that I should be given a State Police Office assignment for one year on a test. If he was satisfied with me, and I liked this work, he wanted to take me into the Security Police permanently, and at the same time promote me to Regierungsdirektor. If, however, he should not be satisfied with me, he wanted to assist me to be transferred into the inner administration, and also to be promoted to a government direktor. This promotion had already been due, since I had been a Regierungsrat since 20 May 1936. After considering this for a short time I accepted this offer. Police Office? would have done then, I do not know. It seems to me that I had achieved a good deal , and that it would be dangerous to risk this. I had the assurance not to be sent to the Einsatz assignment. I had his assurance to be allowed to leave after one year.

I had his assurance of a position in the inner administration, which was suitable for me. Finally, he wanted to support me to be promoted as a civil servant to become a government director, which had been omitted owing to my conflict with Kerrl at the time. This seemed more to me than I had over expected. he had intended you?

A No, he didn't tell me at the time. State Police Office, Oppeln, and when did this happen?

A Yes, about the middle of June, 1941. I was appointed, dated 1 June.

Q When did you start in the office?

Q What was your task in the State Police Office? departments. One dealt with the personnel department of the administration, and was lead by a Police Counsellor, and the other dealt with the actual police tasks, and was in the charge of a criminal counsellor. The actual police task was again subdivided into sub-departments, which were conducted by criminal commissars, under whose charge the criminal officials worked. The task of the Police Department was to make investigations of such persons who had been arrested because of political crimes. There were several possibilities of dealing with individual cases, and finding the person concerned not guilty, after being interrogated he was released; and, in minor matters the person was warned in writing or verbally, and also released. If serious matters had occurred, the procedure was started and handed over to the prosecution in order to bring it up in court, or to the Reich Security Main Office, Department IV for further decision.

Q Did the State Police Office have any other tasks? matters in public life. experience?

A Yes. It was basically prohibited without instructions from the Reich Security Main Office to take any measures for the State Police concerning the charge. One day it was reported to me that in several villages there had been trouble because a mob had gathered because the kreisleiter (district leader), and the landrat, had ordered between them that when the school vacation started, the crucifixes were to be taken out of the school buildings. When this had been carried out there was unrest. Through my officials I ordered that the crucifixes be brought back into the schools, because the action of the district leader and the local leader was illegal; and order was then restored. thousand voluntarily Bulgarian workers were working under certain conditions which they had been promised. One day a report was given by the supervising officer of the plant district that the Bulgarians intended to return home. The plant asked for the protection of the State Police. I immediately sent a criminal commissar, asking him to settle the matter. He called for a meeting of the one thousand Bulgarians and talked to them, reminding them of the duties which they had promised to carry out. The Bulgarian speaker informed me that the plant had not fulfilled the promises which they had made concerning the work, clothing and shoes, and also about transferring of their salaries to their home country.

their work again immediately. The official, then asked for the executive staff of the works and issued the police order to fulfill the justified requests of the Bulgarian workers. This proved that the executive staff had intended to do this but they themselves had difficulties sometimes, but here we could interfere and thus we managed to eliminate all difficulties. or a large one? and compared them to the other state police offices in the Reich, I could see from the statistics that this was one of the smallest and the quietest state police offices in the Reich. From 1944 it did not exist any longer as an independent state office. during your time was anybody sent to a concentration camp?

A If anybody was sent there it was done by the RSHA. During my time, as far as I remember, within the area of the state police office at Oppeln nobody was sent to a concentration camp, but I remember just one case when somebody was released from a concentration camp. concentration camp? man, did not know them all.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, you say this so far as you remember. As you remember no one was sent to a concentration camp from your office in Oppeln. Can't you tell us a little more definitely whether someone was sent or not? Certainly you would remember, wouldn't you, if you had consigned someone to a concentration camp?

THE WITNESS: These directives were not given by me, if any such existed; but the whole procedure was worked on by the department chief and through the criminal counselor who was the chief of the actual state Court No. II, Case No. IX.

police offices, who examined the matter carefully....

THE PRESIDENT: Did you recommend anyone for consignment to a concentration camp?

THE WITNESS: I do not remember that.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, would you say definitely that you did not?

THE WITNESS: As far as I know, I never did that. I would have remembered now.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, you put it in a negative fashion. You say you don't remember. That includes the possibility that you did send someone.

THE WITNESS: I want to exclude that possibility.

THE PRESIDENT: You say now that you definitely remember that you did not send anyone?

THE WITNESS: Of course, this is a very difficult matter. I have to think about this and it takes time to think it over, and I have thought about it, and I cannot remember any case. Therefore, nobody would have been sent.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, do you say definitely you did not send anyone to a concentration camp or recommend that anyone be sent to a concentration camp?

THE WITNESS: Well, I say I do not know of any case.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, that means then you did not send anyone?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Why didn't you say that at the very beginning instead of putting us to all this trouble of questioning you to finally get that answer? Why did you first say you didn't remember?

THE WITNESS: I had no reason. I just wanted to be careful.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, aren't you careful now?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I think I am.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, tell us very definitely, did you or did you not, during the whole year that you were in charge of the state police, recommend that anyone be sent to a concentration camp?

THE WITNESS: As far as I know, no.

THE PRESIDENT: Now, we: are back to where we started from. Go ahead, Dr. Bergold. BY DR. BERGOLD: directives about sending people to concentration camps. Were you up to your tasks at all? Was it your impression that you could manage such a task?

A I had nad no training. When I started my work I intended to work myself into the matter, but I found such a great number of regulations and orders that I soon gave up my intention. Since it proved everywhere that even the simplest ideas were not known to me which one needed to understand the regulations legally and from a police point of view, I did not even have the most preliminary knowledge which any police official, however minor, did know about. Therefore, I depended entirely on my officials. Of course, they were all well established officials whom I could trust, but I could not act as a leader in order not to make myself ridiculous.

THE PRESIDENT: You knew nothing about police matters?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE PRESIDENT: And you remained there a year and knew nothing about police matters?

THE WITNESS: There was nothing else for me to do. I had to stay there for this test year.

THE PRESIDENT: And Heydrich sent you there himself and you knew nothing about police matters?

THE WITNESS: Yes, I pointed this out to him.

THE PRESIDENT: And in the whole year's time you never learned what the procedure was to send someone to a concentration camp?

THE WITNESS: No, a whole professional training one cannot acquire in such a short time, particularly if one comes from an entirely different sphere of life like somebody who has had a spiritual profession.

THE PRESIDENT: Suppose that you learned that in the town of Oppeln there was, let us say, a Hans Smith, who made a declaration to the effect that he hoped that Germany would lose the war because it was an unjust war that she was waging.

That would you do?

THE WITNESS: I would have asked the man to come to me and would have told him to hold onto his own views and keep them to himself and just would have warned him; that is, I wouldn't even have done it because the matter would not even have come to me, but the officials would have settled it.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, suppose that you -

THE WITNESS: I never worked with individuals. I never carried out an interrogation.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, suppose it came to your attention that this man was talking against Germany? What would you do?

THE WITNESS: Well, I personally would not have done anything. The man would have been interrogated by the officials.....

THE PRESIDENT: No, you find out about this. You are on your way home one evening from the office and someone comes up to you and tells you that he overheard Hans Smith inveigh against the German Army, the German Government, Hitler and the whole National Socialist regime. He tells you. What do you do?

THE WITNESS: Nobody would have done this, I don't think.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, let us suppose someone did. Peculiar things happen.

THE WITNESS: I would have told him, "Don't talk about it. Keep it to yourself, keep it quiet."

THE PRESIDENT: And you are the man that Heydrich thought was worthwhile having as a man in charge of the state police?

THE WITNESS: Well, I told him that I could not do this but he said, "You have common sense and good character; you will manage. We will try it."

THE PRESIDENT: Well, let's go a little further. This man who stops you on your way home, says "By the way, I just found out that there is a plot on here to kill Hitler.

I heard the men talking about this; I know the house in which they gather; I saw some bombs being taken into the house and I want you to know about this, Herr Biberstein." What would you do?

THE WITNESS: I would have told him, "Go to Official So and So and report it to him."

THE PRESIDENT: And you would have done nothing?

THE WITNESS: Why, what could I have done? I didn't know what to do. I had no police directives.

THE PRESIDENT: That's all. Proceed, Dr. Bergold. BY DR. BERGOLD: that year? time I came to the conclusion to talk to Heydrich at the end of the year and to leave my office then. I only hoped and wished that nothing might happen for which they might make me responsible.

THE PRESIDENT: Just how did you out in your time during this whole year, beside avoiding people who told you about plots? Just how did you put in your time? You didn't read the directives; you didn't investigate; you didn't interrogate; you sent no one to the concentratin camps; you had a hard time putting in the whole year. Now, tell us just what you did.

THE WITNESS: Yes, that's quite true. At the same time I was political referent with the government president and I helped the deputy of the government president, I worked on files with him and I got detailed information about the tasks of the inner administration. Of course, I signed and sent reports to the RSHA but on the whole I always had to keep quiet because I didn't know all those matters. It would have made nonsense. I saw the things as they actually are and were.

THE PRESIDENT: So your big job was to keep quiet, keep invisible, and avoid people telling you about plots against Hitler.

That's the way you put in the whole year?

THE WITNESS: Yes, about this plot against Hitler I don't ouite understand. I said if anything like that came up I would have told this man who told me, to report this to the police official. He would be interested in this.

THE PRESIDENT: You would not be interested?

THE WITNESS: No, when I say, "Go to him", that is, then I had done everything that was necessary in my opinion because I can't arrest the people.

THE PRESIDENT: And you would go home feeling fine and entirely content that you had done your duty to your Fuehrer?

THE WITNESS: Yes, the official would then deal with it. I wouldn't know what to do concerning police matters.

THE PRESIDENT: Well then, on the following day suppose you found out that nothing had been reported to the official in charge of investigations? Would you just lie low and do nothing?

THE WITNESS: In that case I would have told some official, "Go and see that man. He told me some story yesterday and examine the case." That would have been my duty as it is the duty of any citizen.

THE PRESIDENT: But not because you were the chief of the State police?

THE WITNESS: In that position I was a strange figure, I know that. I felt this very deeply, your Honor, because in Germany there was hardly any man of my kind to hold such office.

THE PRESIDENT: But in the meantime how can you tell this official to go find this man. You had not taken his address. You brushed him off by telling him, "Go see the police official. I just happen to be the chief. Don't bother me with this. I have to go home to go to sleep." You didn't even take his address. Now, how would this investigator know the next day whom to go see?

THE WITNESS: Probably I would have known the man if he had talked to me. I would have asked him, "Who are you?"

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, you would have asked him, "Who are you?"

THE WITNESS: Yes, I would have asked him, to be sure....

THE PRESIDENT: And would you have written down his name and address?

THE WITNESS: I did not have a notebook with me.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, I see.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, may I say something?

THE PRESIDENT: Certainly, Dr. Bergold, surely.

DR. BERGOLD: I think this is a hypothetical question. The misfortune is, and that is what I wanted to show with my question, here a man came out of a purely religious life and was suddenly ordered to take part in this office and he behaved like a surprised outsider and withdrew and did nothing.

THE PRESIDENT: But even a preacher would carry a notebook, wouldn't he?

DR. BERGOLD: True but this is only hypothetical. This case never arose.

THE PRESIDENT: Proceed, Dr. Bergold.

Q (By Dr. Bergold) Witness, how did it come about that you were transferred to Russia?

A In May 1942 Heydrich died. While I was still considering how I would have to act under these changed circumstances, after the end of the test year and how I should be able to be relieved from the duty with the security police at the end of that year. Unexpectedly in the second half of July I received a letter from the RSHA which drafted me to Russia as Chief of Einsatzkommando 6 of Einsatzgruppe C.

Q What did you do in view of that order? by Heydrich completely. Heydrich was dead, and I did not know to whom I could talk about this. Therefor, I could do nothing except obey the order which was given to me as a war time measure. I did not imagine what kind of tasks I would have to do but I thought it would be something similar to the job in the stae police office. I made the preparations which were prescribed, namely, I had amedical examination and I was inoculated. I was in no hurry because I still hoped for the possibility that this order would be rescinded, During the examination by the official physician it was found that owing to a chronic gall bladder ailment, I was only able to do service to a certain extent. This certificate I immediately sent, not without hope, to Berlin. After that I received a teletype message instructing me to report to Berlin before going to Russia and to report to the RSHA there.

Q What was the result of this discussion in Berlin?

A In Berlin I was sent to Obersturmbannfuehrer Trautmann. He wanted to talk to me about my state of health.

During that discussion I heard that allegedly I had applied for a job as a commander in Russia. I was horrified about this lie and strongly denied ever having talked to anyone about an assignment in Russia, nor to have applied for a position as commander. On the contrary on that occasion I pointed out that Heydrich had expressly assured me and promised me that I would not be used in an Esternt assignment. I requested that my supposed application be given to me to see. Trautmann could not give me such a report to see because it did not exist. I understood from his words that somebody had made a wrong report again. I could not find out who had done this. An assumption on my part was denied and the name was refused to be mentioned to me. Trautmann then asked me what I intended to do. I pointed out that I had no choice as long as the order existed, but that I intended, by describing all that had happened, to ask that this order concerning the security police be revoked immediately and that I would not only not be sent to Russia. Trautmann advised me to go to Russia for the time being and to make application from there concerning this because that would make a better impression. order revoked from Russia? remain in Russia. I asked for my rights because, first of all, I had been promised by Heydrich not to be sent on Einsatz assignment; secondly, I did not want to be sent to Russia because of a false report; thridly, according to the discussion with Heydrich at the end of the test year, at last I wanted to be released from my duty in the secuirty police; fourthly, the entire work in the security police did not agree with me at all because of my personal manner of living as a theologian, without giving an estimation of the work as such; and fifthly, I could not belong and did not want to belong to any organization where I constantly met false reports as it happened in the security police and SD, according to the experiences which I had had.

I was tired of this terror, but still I had to go about it carefully. I thought I could not trust in anyone anymore.

Q What did you do as a result of that discussion? message and sent it to berlin.

Q How did Berlin react to your teletype message? message, not to leave for the time being that I regained some hope. After a week a teletype message arrived with the laconic information that nothing could be done about my transfer.

Q When did you receive the order of transfer to Russia? received on 16 or 17 July 1942.

Q When did you go to Russia?

Q There was a long period between that. Why did this take so long? of my offices to my successor. He was still in Riga at the time. After his return, before taking over the offices in Oppeln, he took leave for two weeks. Therefore, the transfer took place about the middle of August. A week later I had my discussion in Berlin and again a wekk later I received the teletype message that nothing could be done about my transfer. That is why I left for Russia at the beginning of September.

Q Where did you go to first in Russia? Chief Dr. Thomas, and he told me about the headquarters of the EK 6 which I did not yet know before I left because not even Berlin knew it.

Q How did your report go to Dr. Thomas, how did it take place?

could even report. Dr. Thomas made an inspection tour by plane over the Bent area. Then I was ordered to report on a certain date. I traveled with Dr. Thomas' adjutant to the Birkenhof, a small home near Kiev, where Dr. Thomas used to stay. Having arrived there a lady met us who was introduced by the adjutant to me as Dr. Thomas's wife.

Q. Did you talk to this lady then, and what did you find out?

A. Since there still was time, she talked to me on about SchleswigHolstein. She said she had a daughter there who had married a kreisleiter. I thought I had heard something there. I asked for the name and the location of the kreisleiter, (the district leader), and I found that her daughter had in her first marriage been the wife of kreisleiter Stier from Segeberg whom I had married in 1935 at the Segeberg. Thus my official reports gained rather a private character.

Q. Witness, did you utilize this private connection with Dr. Thomas to start some closer relations and to state your wishes?

A. The cause for this was not given by me because was not the adjutant doctor-- who announced me to Dr. Thomas but his wife simply took me to him in order to tell him about the strange meeting. That is why I came into a familiar discussion, and that caused me to express myself freely and to tell the doctor of medicine, Thomas - he was a nerve specialist to the security police up to the assignment in Russia.

Q. What did Thomas say in reply to this?

A. Thomas took very great interest in this and he told me that he had made it his task that all promises which Heydrich had made before he died be fulfilled in some way, in the way Heydrich meant them to be fulfilled.

Q. Why did he want to do it in the way Heydrich meant it -- who had ordered this?

A. At that time there was talk that he believed that he would become heydrich's successor, and for me this was just what I needed. He agreed to my intention to make application to leave, but before that he instructed me to travel to Rostov and to take over the commando officially Then for the meeting which was to take place at the beginning of October I was to return to Kiev and after looking into conditions and the task of the commandos to discuss further matters with him.

Q. Therefore, if I understand you rightly, already in this report you told your commander that you wanted to report to leave?

A. Yes. I told the Einsatzgruppe chief, Dr. Thomas, expressly that I intended to make this application according to my discussion with Trautmann in Berlin.

Q. And Thomas approved this?

A. Yes. He did not try to change my mind at all.

Q. What did Thomas tell you about the assignment in the EK 6?

A. He did not explain anything about it to me but merely told me in view of the meeting at the beginning of October 1942 would I describe to him my personal impression, after looking at the conditions and tasks of the commando on the spot.

Q. On that occasion, did Thomas tell you about the extermination orders concerning Jews?

A. No. No, he did not make this order known to me.

Q. How did you come to the EK 6 then and when?

A. As far as I remember, it was on 18 September 1942 when I arrived in Rostov with the EK 6.

Q. Did your predecessor then hand over the commando to you in Rostov?

A. No. My predecessor, SS Sturmbannfuehrer and Government Counsellor Moor had already left; before I had travelled to Rostov I had met him in Kiev during a luncheon and talked to him for a short while. He had to be in the Reich on a certain date. Heinformed me briefly about a few persons in the commando and apart from that told me to turn to Chief 4 in the staff. He, Moor, could say that the commando in its setup was in every way clean and conscientious is its work. He attached importance to it, that the officials as a whole carefully worked out their written interrogations, as they did in the Reich. Apart from that, the commando was already permanently stationed. He also told me that it was important always to see to it that the men of the commando carried out the written regulations carefully and cleanly. Apart from that, he had put everything in order.

This calmed me, because Moor, in contrast to me, was a trained lawyer and because he was an expert on procedure and so forth.

Q. Did Moor inform you about the extermination order of Jews?

A. No. Moor never as much as mentioned this.

Q. Please describe what you found in the EK 6.

A. The Einsatzkommando 6, when I arrived at the end of September '42 was no longer advancing but had been stationed already for some time. As I heard at the time, in winter of '41-'42 they had been in Stalino and there already they had started to adopt the same manner of working as the civilian office. When they received the order in the summer of 1942 to go to Rostov, this whole territory had already been worked on by other einsatzkommandos when advancing. The transfer to Rostov, therefore, was not an actual advance but transfer of locality of the commando which had already become stationary. Einsatzkommando 6 with its outer offices, had those headquarters which had been intended as fixed offices for the transfer which had been intended to be carried out very soon; the change within the Einsatzkommando to a commando office, on the occasion of the transfer to the civilian administration. The headquarters were in Rostov, permanent subcommandos were in Taganrog, Novo, Tscherrask and Schachty. Einsatzkommando 6 with its subcommandos was a permanent part of the setup of the army commando. The staff at the time was under the command of the army territory Don, the newly established army group Don with the commander Antonescu, the then government chief of Roumania. When starting my service I reported according to my duty to the commander of the army territory, a General Rothkirch. He gave me the order to look after the security of the army territory Don as before, and to safeguard it against civilian saboteurs, terrorists, and so forth. All military offices had been instructed in all cases which might occur to use the Einsatzkommando to assist them. The subcommandos were subordinate to the local commanders of the army, to the field commandos, or the local commandos, concerning their work. All these military offices and agencies had created a Russian criminal police consisting of indigenous personnel who worked under Wehrmacht supervision.

These detected crimes, investigated and worked on them and submitted them to the army office who handed this on to the Einsatzkommando or dealt with it themselves as the case may be. To the Einsatzkommando all those cases were given which were part of the task of the Einsatzkommando, namely, security of the army territory. All other cases were dealt with by the army on their own authority.

THE PRESIDENT: I think this may be a good point to adjourn, Dr. Bergold. The Tribunal will be in recess until tomorrow morning at 9:30.

(The Tribunal in recess until 0930 hours, 21 November 1947.)

THE MARSHAL: The Honorable, the Judges of Military Tribunal II. Military Tribunal II is now in session. God save the United States of America and this honorable Tribunal.

DR. von STEIN for Sandberger: Your Honor, I would like to ask that my client, Sandberger, be excused from attendance in Court all day today in order to complete his document book.

THE PRESIDENT: Will you want to see him in room 57?

DR. von STEIN: Yes, your honor.

THE PRESIDENT: The defendant Sandberger will be excused from attendance in Court today all day and he will now be taken by the Marshal to room 57 so he may confer with his attorney.

You may proceed, Dr. Bergold. BY DR. BERGOLD: the Einsatskommando 6 and you also talked about orders, about facts. What did you find out about the orders and activities on which this Kommando was based? between the high command of the Army and the chief of the Security Police and the SD which I did not see in writing but the basic ideas were told to me by the men of the Kommando and from conversations with the Army I found them confirmed. According to these the Einsatzkommando had to report all events which concerned the security of Army territory and which were threatened by non-military circles and had to deal with them under its own authority. The special order for Kommando 6 was an order by the Commander of the Army territory Don who put up notices in the houses everywhere in two languages.

In Rostov, for example the announcement was made by radio messages to the civilian population. This order especially mentioned that a death sentence would be imposed on the following cases: looting, owning weapons, attacks on military establishments, and information, attacks on military persons, espionge, sabotage, terror, and similar things. With these Army orders the Einsatzkommando 6 was therefore given the task to deal in an orderly police procedure similar to the State Police in the Reich, to deal with individual cases through their qualified criminal officials, and pass judgment in a written judgment, and finally to carry out the punishments. By carrying out these three things the sub-offices had to deal with details under charge of executive criminal officials, police officers. BY THE PRESIDENT: the province of the State Police. We ask that question because yesterday you said that you were entirely ignorant of State Police procedure when you were in Oppeln for a year?

A Yes. I said what was the task of the Kommando; about my personal position with the Kommando I have not yet talked but I shall make detailed statements about this yet. made that your Einsatzkommando was given the task to deal in the ordinary police procedure similar to that policy in the Reich to deal in such cases. Now yesterday you told us that you were not competent to pass upon State Police procedure because you were ignorant of this procedure. Now we ask you if you felt yourself competent in Russia to do what you told us yesterday you were unable to do in Germany.

Q You still didn't feel competent to handle State Police procedure?

Q well, let's make certain now about your answer. You were not competent to handle State Police matters?

Q In Russia?

Q And while we are on the subject, and it's important that we know as we go along - otherwise we can't follow the testimony comprehensively, before you left Germany did you know of the Fuehrer-order to kill Jews? did you know of the order to liquidate Jews?

Q When did you first learn of this Fuehrer-order? arrived in Nurnberg?

Q On what day did you learn about it in Nurnberg?

Q What day was that?

A It was the beginning of July. I don't know - 7 July - I am not quite sure that is correct.

Q Well, July 1947? that Jews were to be liquidated?

Q Even after your arrest didn't you speak; with your follow prisoners and in the conversation didn't it develop some time that there had been such a Fuehrer order?

A No, I never talked with men of the Security Police and SD. I myself was not known. The men at the camp hardly knew me.

Q Didn't you read in any of the periodicals about this order?

A I beg your pardon, your Honor, I hardly read any newspapers. All that happened after 1945 and the impressions I had after that were so tremendous that I could not quite digest it all, and therefore I kept away from all those things.

I hardly read a German newspaper. said about executing Jews? shooting of Jews I must answer in the affirmative. I did once hear about it-that was during the second half of June 1943 when I was in Kiev on my way to the Reich. At that time in Kiev I was told that many Jews had been shot in Kiev but in that connection I also heard that this is supposed to have happened because of burnings and dynamitings in the City of Kiev following the invesion by the German troops. I had the impression that this was retaliation measure against the people who had committed crimes.

Q What we are inquiring is whether you knew of the Fuehrer-order?

Q You don't know what I am going to ask you - whether you knew of the Fuehrer-order that Jews, Gypsies and asocial elements were to be liquidated?

Q Who was the leader of the Einsatzgruppe? Jews were to be killed?

A No. My conversations always dealt with certain subjects.

explained.

Q And your brother Kommando leaders - they never talked about Jews?

A Well, we never had say reason to do this. I only met other Kommando leaders who were leaders in Perpapetrowsla and in Stalino where I spent the night on my way from Kiev to Rostov. killing Jews? because I was inexperienced in that and I did not like to show any inexperience constantly.

Q And they never mentioned Jews? statement on the record let me repeat - you tell the Tribunal that the first time you learned - -

Q Now, what am I going to ask you? Tell me what question I am going to put to you? first time that a Fuehrer-order existed. Fuehrer-order for the first time and what the Fuhrer-order was? trials.

Q Well, when? testimony made here in this trial. the Fuehrer-order? ants .

the Fuehrer-order was when you received the Indictment. Is this correct?

Q Now, please answer this question. The first time you learned of the Fuehrer-order was when you got the Indictment, is that correct? mentioned in the Indictment. Fuehrer-order is when you got the Indictment- that is what you told us, isn't it.

Q No. You said to us that the first time you learned of the Fuehrer order was when you got the Indictment on July 7. Did you say that?

Q All right. Now do you stand on that? could I see what I was charged with and what the Prosecution charged me with. the Fuehrer-order was when you got the Indictment?

A Well, I don't know whether the word Fuehrer-order is contained in the Indictment and whether the contents of the Fuehrer-order is contained in the Indictment. first time you learned of the Fuehrer-order was when you read the Indictment? Do you stand on that statement? Do you confirm it? You made it a few moments ago.

Q Just a moment please. I ask if you stand on it. If you don't say "No, I didn't mean that" or "Yes, I did mean it." Now, did you mean it when you said the first time you learned of the Fuehrer-order was when you got the Indictment?

Did you mean it or did you not?

Q You did not mean it. All right, well, that's clear. When did you learn of the Fuehrer-order for the first time? during discussions with my co-defendants. I am not certain of that. It happened here in Nurnberg and I am not sure whether I talked to my codefendants or heard it from the trial.

Q Was it after you got the Indictment? co-defendants. place, the first time you learned of the Fuehrer-order was subsequent to July 7, 1947?

Q Which defendant told you about the Fuehrer-order?

A I don't know that, your Honor. I believe as far as I remember somebody asked me whether I knew the Fuehrer order and I said that I didn't know what you are talking about. But who asked me I don't remember.

Q When you said you didn't know what he was talking about then did this defendant tell you what the Fuehrer-order was? question was discussed here in the trial or whether it was before this. I don't quite remember, your Honor.

Q Witness, when you learned of this Fuehrer-order did it shock you? learned here in Nurnberg.

Q Well, we are talking about the Fuehrer-order. When you first heard of it you were shocked?

Q Now from whom did you learn of it?

A This shock I remember quite distinctly. This happened here in Court.

Q Yes. Then you did not get it from your co-defendants, you got it here in Court? in this Courtroom? after you had received the Indictment? here in this Courtroom? Court, is that what you are telling us or isn't it what you are telling us? you were shocked, Now where was this and when was it? of their race, that is what I mean. This....

Q All right. That's what the Tribunal is talking about. Now, when did you first find out that Jews were to be shot merely because of their race, merely because they were Jews, when did you first find that out?

Q And who was it that said it?

room when Ohlendorf was sitting where you are now?

A Yes. Of course, I read that Jews were shot but I did not know -that I saw in the Indictment but I did not know that the Fuehrer-order to that effect was the basis of this.

Nov.21-M-IL-3-1-Hoxsie (Int. Juelich) in the other large courtroom? opening statement? published.

Q Well, but you heard it being read in court, didn't you?

A It was read out in the Tribunal here, I don't know whether it is contained in this. was made to the Fuehrer Order?

A I don't know.

Q well then, it isn't true that the first time you heard it is when Hr. Ohlendorf mentioned it from this witness stand, is that right

A I don't know. deal, and when one is shocked one remembers later on when the shock took place. Now, tell us when you first learned of the Fuehrer Order which calls for the execution of Jews and gypsies just merely because they were Jews and gypsies, absolutely innocent, but they had to be liquidated. When did you first find that out, that such a Fuehrer Order had been made way back in 1941? When did you first find that out? the Prosecution, I remember it again. I didn't think of it at the moment.

Q Do you recall now the Prosecution's statement?

Q And was it mentioned in the Prosecution's statement? quite certain. I was particularly impressed by what Ohlendorf said here. This had made a stronger impression on me than the entire indictment and also the opening statement of the Prosecution. Fuehrer Order was when you heard Ohlendorf describe it and talk about it from the witness stand where you are now sitting? it was made by one of my comrades who spoke of his own experience about these things. subject, when did you first learn of the Fuehrer Order which decreed that Jews had to be killed because of their race? When did you first hear of that Fuehrer Order? trials. when you first learned it? indictment or in the opening statement by the Prosecution, then I must have heard it there already, but what I remember, and what impressed me, was that one of my comrades explained these things so clearly here, and that is what shocked me so. Fuehrer Order was when Ohlendorf described it here in this courtroom?

learned of the Fuehrer Order you would say that it was in October, 1947?

A It must have been about then, yes. I cannot remember now when Ohlendorf spoke. I cannot remember the month.

Q Well, it was last month, wasn't it, in October 1947?

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, may I add something to this discussion. I know about the other defendants, that my client always kept away from all the others, and in this aim he was also supported by me, because I wanted to have my client to myself. That is an old method of mine.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, when did you first see your client, Dr. Bergold?

DR. BERGOLD: I saw him in July, 1947, shortly after he was brought to Nuernberg. He was only brought to Nuernberg a few days before the indictment was served.

THE PRESIDENT: Of course, you didn't know him before he became your client here?

DR. BERGOLD: No, never.

THE PRESIDENT: So you wouldn't know what he had done prior to that of your own knowledge?

DR. BERGOLD: No. I only say that I know of the defendant that he was always very retiring and reserved. His colleagues told me that, and I know from his own talk that he always kept away from his comrades, and I supported him in that attitude and advised him to keep on his own.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Dr. Bergold, you had many conversations with him before he actually came into court, didn't you?

DR. BERGOLD: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Didn't you yourself ever tell him what he was charged with?

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, even I only heard about the Fuehrer Order when the case in chief was presented. I did not see sufficient from the indictment either.

THE PRESIDENT: So you didn't mention the fuehrer Order before he came here into the courtroom either?

DR. BERGOLD: No, no.

THE PRESIDENT: I don't mean to question you, Dr. Bergold, but we are just trying to get at the truth here.

DR. BERGOLD: I understand.

THE PRESIDENT: And do I understand that you didn't know about the Fuehrer Order until you got here in the courtroom?

DR. BERGOLD: Mr. President -

THE PRESIDENT: You don't need to answer that, Dr. Bergold. The only reason is you volunteered it, and when a person volunteers he has to stand a little bit of questioning on it.

DR. BERGOLD: Of course, your Honor, of course. I don't know whether I heard about this Fuehrer Order in the IMT trials, I cannot exclude such a possibility, but I confess-

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, just a moment. Let me tell you, Dr. Bergold, you are an attorney at the bar, and the Tribunal has admiration for you, and I would advise you to say nothing further about this because the whole IMT trial certainly discussed this Fuehrer Order, and I don't want you to be placed in any embarrassing position. Now, you may have not talked about it with your client, but please don't tell us that you did not know about the Fuehrer Order until you came into the courtroom, because we have the decision right here, the IMT decision, which talks about the Fuehrer Order.

DR. BERGOLD: That is right, your Honor, but I am telling you, don't forget one thing. I don't work only here. I am in charge of a lot of cases, and when one case is finished, I usually forget it immediately or else I cannot follow all my duties. I said it might have been in the IMT trials, but at that moment I did not remember it any more, and therefore, I did not talk to him about it, and that is a true statement.

THE PRESIDENT: We take your statement as being the truth, but we did want to, in a friendly way, suggest not to talk about it too much, because you only embarrass yourself, because the decision of the International Military Tribunal certainly makes a reference to this very sad event of the killing of the Jews because of the Fuehrer Order, that they had to be killed because they were Jews.

DR. BERGOLD: That is right. I told you I forgot it. I didn't think of it. One can forget the most terrible things.

THE PRESIDENT: Right.

DR. BERGOLD: The wisdom of life, which I learned from Goethe, his wisdom consisted of the fact that he forgot all terrible things immediately, and may I perhaps remind the Tribunal that when his own son died nobody was to remind him of this because he tried to forget it so that he could continue to live on his high level. Since Goethe has always been my ideal, I have always followed him, to forget terrible things.

THE PRESIDENT: I can assure you that although Goethe was very heroic in his resolve to forget this sadness which entered his life, once it was written on his heart, he never forgot it.

You don't forget deaths like that, Dr. Bergold. All right, let's proceed. BY DR. BERGOLD: tell us what did you hear about this written procedure? Police who investigated all the criminals and witnesses in writing, and if a crime had been committed, and if somebody had participated in a crime, the arrested person and his files were sent to the subkommando. The prisoners were sent to a prison and all objects were taken from them, which they had with them, as it is the custom in all prisons in legal procedure, in Germany. The objects were kept. Then the investigation started by the men of the kommando, and the judgment was passed, and every now and then, according to the death sentences, the executions were carried out. I want to mention that also prison terms were conferred. After the death sentences had been carried out, the personal property of the person concerned was confiscated by the German state inasfar as it existed, as this is done with usual death penalties based on such crimes.

Q Did you know the Hague Convention of land warfare?

A No. Owing to my entirely different training I never heard about it. I did not even know when I was interned that the Hague Convention of land warfare existed. During my presence here my defense counsel asked me about it, and he found that at first I misunderstood him. I thought he said Court "procedure" and he laughed at me and found that in fact I did not know about this.

legal procedure with judges and a Tribunal and witnesses took place? thought about it. In particular as I found everything In that condition, I was not a lawyer, and it was my opinion that all those things had been organized in such a manner as they should be in order to insure proper procedure. My predecessor who had organized this and instituted it was a trained lawyer, and also expressed himself to me to the effect that everything was proper. I had to rely on that. carried out?

executions, one by shooting, and another manner of execution, in particular by the office in Rostov, by means of gas vans. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Witness, you say you heard of. Didn't you know as a matter of personal knowledge?

A Yes. I shall talk about that presently. I only made a general statement that two kinds of executions existed, and I will now give details about these. The shooting was done in a military manner by single shots, by a machine rifle or by a rifle. In Rostov itself they used the gas van. In order to be Informed about this, I had the action of the gas van described to me on the occasion of an execution, and I asked the chief of the detachment in Rostov to show it to me. This seemed to me a procedure which tried to conduct the execution in a manner which made it easier for both, the victim and the executioner. Like the electric chair, the procedure has been invented for humanitarian reasons. I know that in a few states of the United States of America already many years ago executions through gas had been carried out. by gas van was easier on the victim and easier on the executionor, is that what I understood you to say?

Q More pleasant for both parties?

Q The victim and the executioner?

Q That is that?

Q Did you hear Mr. Ohlendorf describe that men of the kommando objected to the use of gas vans because of the impression it made upon them? because my experiences had been to the contrary. is less difficult?

A It is not so difficult by means of gas? No. I can say that I saw the bodies, all of whom made a very calm and peaceful impression. I also know that, through carbon dioxide, people who are in a closed garage and work on a car where the motor is running, without noticing it, are suddenly surprised by death. I was of the impression that death in that manner approaches the person in a very gentle manner. Ohlendorf's observations. You have a disagreement on that?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. BERGOLD:

Q Witness, did you order the manner of execution? accepted them and thought everything was all right.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, did you order the execution yourself?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE PRESIDENT: Who did order the execution?

THE WITNESS: Those were the subkommando leaders: Q (By Dr. Bergold) What impression did the activity of Einsatzkommando VI have on you, which you described? thought it highly unpleasant but I thought I could not be expected to do this, that under my charge death sentences were passed and expected to be carried out.

After all,I was not brought up for that kind of task. A pastor has the task to help souls but never to judge. BY THE PRESIDENT:

Q Did you ever order an execution?

Q Did you witness an execution? prior to the execution?

Q Well, I am asking you if you did or not. Did you? before the execution?

A I never saw the persons and didn't talk to them.

Q You didn't see the executees?

A Yes, if I witnessed the execution I did. Otherwise I did not. attempt to comfort those who were executed; did you talk to them along religious lines since you were trained to do a function of that kind?

Q Well, didn't you, out of the bigness of your heart, out of your religious training and inclination, feel disposed to comfort these individuals who were now to take that long last walk into eternity? if I, as representative of the komnando who passed judgment and who carried out the sentence, at the same time approached the people with religious consolation.

I think the people would never have understood that. One could hardly do this at the sane time. The serious necessity of war, and then one tries to console people, in my opinion this is tasteless. a word or two of comfort to these individuals on the verge of coming before their supreme Creator. You thought you might be criticised if you did that? was done, when an execution was carried out by a gas van. I have only described my impression so far.

Q I perhaps didn't make my question very clear. I said that had you offered a word of solace and comfort to these individuals who in a few moments would be standing before their Supreme Creator, had you done that, you feared that you would be criticised for having done this? not know who I was. They did not know I was a clergyman. hey didn't know that, and possibly they would have considered this irony if I, as a representative of the kommando, would have said such words then. at any time to talk about God?

Q Well now, here is a man who is going to be shot; he is going to be killed.

Q He is going to pass out of existence. You are the pastor, or were a pastor. You are religiously trained. It didn't occur to you to say a word to this individual that was starting on this long journey?

It didn't occur to you to do that?

A I had no, opportunity to do this. If I describe this to you you may understand it, Your Honor. You were the kommando leader. Why didn't you have the opportunity to talk to these individuals, just give them a word or two of comfort? Why didn't you have that opportunity?

Q Yes, well, why didn't you do it? rejected him, but to force myself on somebody, that is not my way. who is about to be executed, to tell him that he would soon be standing before his God, and to have strength in this final moment? Would it have been so difficult to do that? Bolshevist views, had fought against the German troops illegally. It is known that the Bolshevist ideology advocate the movement of the Atheists. There is a word which sounds very harsh, in particular if I say it in this connection. This word is, "One should not throw pearls before swine". I say that is a parable. When using the word of God one should not use it in situations where it does not fit in, in particular if one is innerly convinced that the ground is not prepared for such a message. If I had gained the conviction that in these people there would have been a longing for God, if 1 had heard this somehow from some men who had to do with them - had been fighting Germany that they did not have souls?

Q You did believe they had souls then, didn't you? have expressed, you did not think it was worthwhile to try to save those souls? are people who do not believe in God, who have turned away from God, and if I tell such a man a word of God, I run the danger that the person will become ironic. be any worse than the fact that he was going to be killed rather soon, Suppose he did become ironic, how did that harm anyone? them in such situations.

Q You were a pastor, and wasn't it your duty to try to convert these lost souls? lot of tolerance. I do not think it is my duty to convert people. It is my duty to help men if they approach me with wishes and questions, but I always have to know whether the person has an open mind for these things. I do not go to any Atheist and tell him, "You must believe in God", but if he comes to me and says, "I cannot believe in God, what might be the reason, can you help me?" I then would, of course. to be executed whether he believed in God?

Q Then, how did you know that he didn't believe in God?

the Bolshevist ideology who stubbornly followed the orders of their Communist leaders, and therefore attacked us. Their acts were not honest acts, but crimes, of which they themselves were convinced, and about which they knew that death sentence was the punishment for it, and after all, they were unusual cases. Apart from that I don't know whether the people who believed in orthodox religion in Russia shared my opinion, which after all arose from a German heart, whether they could understand it in that form.

THE PRESIDENT: Then because they had committed a crime, you believed they were not worthy of absolution, or of a word of comfort?

THE WITNESS: No, Your Honor, not like that, but -

THE PRESIDENT: Just a minute, let's truncate this discussion. Did you or did you not, being a man of God, and having been a Pastor, and having devoted much of your life to studying religion, and to preaching religion, did you at any time in any of these executions after any religious comfort to any of the executees. Now answer that question yes or no?

THE WITNESS? No.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. Now yesterday you told us that you had established a new religion, and one of the tenets of that new religion was "Love of fellowmen"?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you think that you demonstrated that "Love of fellowmen" by letting these people go to their deaths without a word of comfort along religious lines, considering that you were a Pastor? Did you demonstrate there a "Love of fellowmen"? Answer that question yes or no?

THE WITNESS: I didn't sin against the Commandment of Love, Your Honor.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, if I may intervene in this long discussion and say: Your Honor, the victims did not know that this man was a Pastor, seeing he was wearing an SS or SD uniform, that, therefore, he was an exponent of that authority who condemned them to death and I really believe the defendant that the executees would have considered it strange and would have considered it foul and unworthy if such a man had suddenly come to them, who was the chief of such a commando, and tried to console them In a religious manner. They didn't even know he was a clergyman. I must say I cannot quite understand the discussion because one is to imagine oneself back into that time and imagine the appearance of this man as he approached victims.

THE PRESIDENT: Dr. Bergold, ordinarily, a discussion of this kind would be entirely irrelevant, but yesterday when we tried to confine the issue to the charges in the Indictment, you said we had to allow your client to give his full discussion on religion, because only in that way could we decide whether he was telling the truth, or not.

Now because of these circumstances it is entirely in order to ascertain whether a man with the religious training, with the religious background, in a situation so solumn as an execution, could not have advanced towards the executees, those about to be killed, and say to them, "You see me in uniform of the SS, but I am a man of God. I was a Pastor", and then to comfort them in any way that he could. How, he said he didn't do that. All right, that ends the discussion, let's proceed.

DR. BERGOLD: I have one more question to put to the defendant. BY DR. BBRGOLD:

Q Tell me, can you speak Russian?

Q How could you have talked to these victims about religion?

Q Was an interpreter present during the execution?

DR. BERGOLD: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Was an interpreter present when the men were investigated for the purpose of determining whether they were guilty or not?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes. You could have taken -

THE PRESIDENT: You could have taken an interpreter to the execution if you desired, could you not?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, but you did not?

THE PRESIDENT: Very well. BY DR. BERGOLD: How many executions did you witness?

Q Which territory was under the charge of Einsatzcommando VI? three-hundred kilometers long, that is, about 60,000 square kilometers. saw Thomas again?

Q What was the subject, the main subject of this meeting? tory around Kiev, which had become the most important part in the war against Russia, and the entire interest of Thomas was concentrated on this subject.

Q What was the result of the second discussion with Thomas?

A My second discussion with Dr. Thomas during the meeting was only brief. I described him my impression as I have described it before, that is, I told him what I had seen there, and told him that owi owing to my theological training, I could not have been expected to have to pass judgments and to have executions under my change. At the same time I explained to him that I was now convinced and determined, as I had already told him before, to apply immediately to be released from my duties, not only from Russia but also from the Security Police all together. Dr. Thomas listen to all of this very calmly and without a word of criticism he said that he would support my application, and that he would send a Sturmbannfuehrer to me who was to share the responsibility for the Einsatzcommando VI with me, and that he was to supervise the work of Department IV while I who had the same function for the Departments I to III, I was in charge of the entire Einsatzcommando, and from that I realized that he fully recognized my personal misgivings and I was very grateful to him for understanding me so well.

Q Please describe to us the tasks of Departments I to IV?

A The tasks of the individual departments were as fellows: Department I and II were joined in Russia, and, handled personnel and administrative questions; Department III was the information service dealing with the domestic spheres in the occupied, territory in which the Einsatzcommando was working; and, Department IV dealt with actual security tasks. statement that the decision of Dr. Thomas to send you a Sturmbahnfuehrer to help you, the purposes of this was to have this man handle the security tasks?

A Yes. Dr. Thomas intended to save me from actually touching these subjects.

Q Please tell me if Dr. Thomas was so obliging, could you have got a better job from him, which you would have liked better, which would have suited, you better? appointed no Chief of Einsatzcommando VI. This order could not be rescinded by Thomas or amended but this could only be done by Berlin. Bridging the tension, as Thomas did by giving me a Sturmbannfuehrer to assist me, seemed to me the only solution, owing to difficulties in my special position.

Q When did you return to Rostov from Kiev?

Q Did you travel back to Rostov on your own - by yourself? of the Civil Administration in Rostov, who was an SS and Police Leader, a general of the police who had been intended for that job, Paul Hennicke. He was about to make all the preparations for taking over his office, and, later on I met him quite frequently.

In fact, I spent a great deal of my time with him.

DR. BERGOLD: If the Tribunal will permit me to comment here; I wanted to bring this man. Paul Heinnecke, here as a witness, but unfortunately he was so seriously ill with diabetics that the prison administration told me that they could not guarantee for his life unless I released him immediately. Of course, for humane reasons I released the witness immediately, or else I would have introduced the witness here. That is just comment.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, he can come later if you can obtain him. We will permit him to come in any time at all before the termination of the trial, and, then if his health still will not permit his attendance, then perhaps you can obtain an affidavit from him.

DR. BERGOLD: I have tried that already, but he was just before his coma, and you know people who suffer from diabetics are not able to make a very clear statement, and I don't went to give the Tribunal a statement of a man of whom I did not have the impression that his mind was quite clear.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, you adjust yourself according to the circumstances, and if you can get any coherent statement from him, the Tribunal will be very happy to have it.

DR. BERGOLD: Very well. BY DR. BERGOLD: come to you?

AAt the end of October this Sturmbannfuehrer arrived. His name was Joachim Noshing. He was a lawyer, and his main job was SSleader, and until then he had been a deputy commander in Kiev. Apart from that he was a son of a Protestant eclesiastical counsel, had been brought up in a strict Protestant manner, and very interested in religion, these were conditions which assured that work would be conducted in a proper and clean manner.

the channels of commands were? staff, and four staff sub-commanders and four district officess, similar to the commander offices, namely, Rostov, Taganrog, Novotscherkaskh, and Schafhty. The staff consisted of the commandoleader, and the deputy, under them were the Chiefs I and II, Chief III an and Chief IV. The sub-division in the commando-leadership resulted in the fact that the Chiefs I and II and III were subordinate to me, and Nehring was in charge of Department IV. The sub-commandos or local offices were supervised by police officers who were Ober- or Hauptsturmfuehrer, and who did this on their authority. That is, they carried out the tasks of the commandos concerning the security of the Army territory for their sub-territory, and they were competent on their own to do this, and they were responsible for this themselves, concerning the passing of judgments, investigations and carrying out of executions. There is to be mentioned that the subcommando leader of Rost v and Chief IV in the staff was the same man. In this activity the sub-commando leaders were directed in an expert manner by the Chiefs I and II, III and IV, and supervised by me or Nehring.

Q Did you pass death sentences yourself?

A I never did that, I already said that I explained to Dr. Thomas that they could not expect me to do this kind, of thing; apart from that it was the task of the sub-commando leaders. In cases of doubt, it was up to Chief IV of the staff or of my deputy, Nehring, according to special instructions of Thomas.

THE PRESIDENT: Witness, up to the point that you said that you didn't want to pass any death sentence yourself, because of your background and training we can understand it, but when you say that it was now up to a commando leader to pass a death sentence, we can not understand, it. Now, tell us whether commando leaders were permitted to pass death sentences?

THE PRESIDENT: Now, just a moment please. If you will try to answer the question, we will save a great deal of tine. I ask you now, if commando-leaders were authorized to pass death sentences? BY DR. BERGOLD:

Q Witness, we already discussed the fact that you don't give any order for an execution?

A No. And I didn't witness any executions.

Q Did your commando shoot any hostages?

TEE PRESIDENT: Just a moment, Dr. Bergold. A little while ago you said that he didn't witness any executions,

DR. BERGOLD: I didn't say that.

THE PRESIDENT: I am sorry, that is what we got - that is the way we got it. BY DR. BERGOLD: any reason?

A No, no hostages were shot by Einsatzcommando VI. Taking of hostages was generally up to the Army.

Q Did your commando carry out any mass-executions without a procedure? individual shootings nor mass executions were carried out.

Q Did your commando shoot Jews? procedure because of crimes, or participation in crimes according to a special order by the Army, who had done some kind of action for which death sentence had been announced, among those persons there night have been Jews sometimes. Apart from that no Jews were shot specifically.

Q You never did this just because they were Jews?

THE PRESIDENT: Now, witness, you say that no Jew was shot just because he was a Jew, or that Einsatzcommando VI didn't do that?

THE WITNESS: Never during my time.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

THE WITNESS: There was no reason for that.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, how many people in all were executed by your Commando for the reasons which you have given us, namely, they had committed a crime. How many executions in all, how many people in all were killed by Einsatzcomnando VI while you were there?

THE BERGOLD: Your Honor, before the defendant speaks I have a request. This question, how many people he executed....

THE PRESIDENT: No, I didn't say that. I didn't say that, I said, how many people were executed by his commando while he was in charge of that commando.

DR. BERGOLD: That is what I meant to say, Your Honor. I have a request that this particular question, which the President asked, may be answered in a different context; it is connected with his own affidavit where he refers to this figure, and, I, therefore, ask that the question of the President be not asked in this connection, but be grateful.

THE PRESIDENT: Very well, certainly. BY DR. BERGOLD:

Q Witness, in your territory were there any Jews at all?

A I never noticed any Jews. In Rostov there were a great number of Armenians whom I thought to be Jews at first. When I happened to see one in my office one day, I thought he was a Jew, this person told me in German, and I was very much surprised at this, he told me that he was not a Jew, but a Karain.

He was at the office in order to hand in a report about the Karains. He showed me a written report, about his tribe. I asked him to give me this leaflet he had, and after that he made a report to Berlin about the Karains in Russia. The man himself, of course, was not harmed. Then I remember that at the end of May, or the beginning of June, 1943, at the office in Taganrog I happened to hear something about the fact that Jews lived in Taganrog who were only registered, and according to this, if I think about it now, Jews might have been in that territory then, and that the circumstances didn't become obvious to me at the time, or I didn't notice it, must be owing to the fact that I had no reason at the time for this observation.

DR. BERGOLD: Your Honor, I now come to a different complex of questions, and I would like to ask if the Tribunal would like to have a recess now.

THE PRESIDENT: A good idea to have a recess now. The Tribunal will be in recess for fifteen minutes.

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is in recess fifteen minutes.

(recess)

THE MARSHAL: The Tribunal is again in session. BY DR. BERGOLD: heard about the Fuehrer Order to kill Jews here in this trial. If you had known it in Russia at the time, would you have approved of it at all? question. No, I would not have approved of it and I cannot approve of it today in any form, since it does not only violate morality, but also an obviously divine law, just as the bombardment of Large cities by large fleets of airplanes or by atom bombs is disapproved by me as immoral and undivine. BY THE PRESIDENT: took place?

A No, may I say why?

Q No, that's enough. You said you disapprove of the bombardment of cities but you did not disapprove of the bombardment of London. All right, that is your opinion. why, why I once approved it and once disapproved of it.

Q Did you approve of it or not?

Q Then you do approve of the bombardment of cities in war? and I meant by this the bombardment of certain areas of a city and blanketing it with bombs, not the attack of military objectives or armament factories.

Q You said you did not approve of the bombardment of cities. Did you say that or did you not?

of London? to us expressly. with large fleets of planes. Now London is certainly a large city and it certainly was bombed by large fleets of planes. Now, do you approve of that or not?

Q Do you know that St. Paul's Cathedral was damaged in one of those raids?

Q You never heard of that?

A No, I don't recall. which I remember. BY DR. BERGOLD: have carried it out or not? it and I say, if my predecessor had given the order to me for my information, I would not have accepted it. As far as such an oral information was concerned, I would have never had people executed on such an oral passing on of an order. At least, this order would have had to be given to me expressly as an order by my superior, but even then I would not have carried it out. I would have pointed to my spiritual profession and thus I would have asked that no such order be given to me.

A That is correct. I was obligated to obey by oath, but obedience has a limit for no at that moment, when the order so obviously violates the will of God, as this killing order does. Thus, I was not obligated to obey all orders without any consideration. There are moments in our life, when, for a human being who really believes in God and who really knows that he is tied to God, the obedience towards the will of God is higher than obedience to an anti-divine order. order? What would you have done about these difficulties?

A. I already said that I would have pointed to my particular profession and that thus the acceptance and the carrying out of such an order could not he asked of me. I believe that after what I have experienced, namely, when I had the conference with Heydrich on the 5th of May, 1941, and during the conferences with Thomas, that in this case, one would have left me well enough alone, in other words, that one would have had consideration for me. If matters had been different, then, for a man who not only by name but really in his heart believes in God, there is only one thing left. He must obey God more than any human beings. I would have had to take the consequences.

Q. But you must explain one thing to us. Your comrades partly knew about the killing order and received it. How do you explain and can you explain it at all that you did not receive the extermination order?
